LEYLAND LINER TORPEDOED

Submarine Outrage off Cornish Coast

MORE AMERICAN CITIZENS DROWNED

29 Victims of Murder by German Pirates

WASHINGTON, JUNE 30.

THE UNITED STATES CONSUL AT BRISTOL HAS REPORTED TO THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE THAT ON MONDAY LAST THE GERMAN SUBMARINE U 38 TORPEDOED AND SANK THE DOMINION LINER ARMENIAN, 20 MILES NORTHWEST OF TREVOSE HEAD, ON THE CORNISH COAST.

TWENTY-NINE OF THOSE ON BOARD, OF WHOM TEN WERE AMERICANS, LOST THEIR LIVES.

LLOYD'S REGISTER SHOWS THAT THE ARMENIAN WAS A VESSEL OF 8825 TONS GROSS AND BELONGED TO LEYLAND AND Co.

THE LOST ARMENIAN

Attacked at Breakfast Time

CARGO PARTLY CONTRABAND

Washington, June 30.

The steamer Armenian, torpedoed last Monday off the Cornish coast, was owned by the American Corporation of the International Mercantile Marine. She was attacked at 8 minutes past 8 on Monday morning, when a torpedo was fired at her hull. The vessel was flying the British flag. She sailed from Newport News on June 17 for Avonmouth under Captain Trickey.

The New York branch office says that it does not know exactly what cargo she was carrying. It is presumed that part of it was contraband and the rest miscellaneous supplies.

COMMANDEERING

NOT THE IMMEDIATE INTENTION OF BRITISH GOVERNMENT.

London, June 30.

In the House of Commons the spokesman for the Board of Trade, in reply to a question, declared that the Government had not the intention of commandeering the supplies of copper and zinc, unless it were impossible to obtain sufficient quantities by any other means. Otherwise the Government would do what might be necessary to obtain it.

SUNK BY THE SEA HUNS

LOSS OF A NORWEGIAN STEAMER

London, June 30.

The Norwegian ship Cambus Kenneth which left Portland, Oregon, on February 9 for Liverpool or Manchester was sunk to-day by submarine U 39. Thirteen of her crew have landed, the other eight, being German subjects, were taken aboard the submarine.

The Norwegian ship Gjese has also been sunk by a submarine to-day, the crew landing at North Shields.

NORWEGIAN CREW MURDERED.

London, June 30.

The Norwegian barque Kotka has been torpedoed and sunk to-day off the coast of west Cork. Only one of the crew being saved.

CZECH PAPER SUPPRESSED

AUSTRIA'S PROHIBITION OF PEACE TALK.

New York, June 30.

Despatches from Prague state that the police have suppressed the publication of the newspaper "Narodni Listy," the organ of the Young Czech party.

For some time the paper has been frequently issuing reports of disaffection among the Czech element of Hungary, and of the peace propaganda conducted by that party.

THE DOWNWARD COURSE

STAGNATION ON 'CHANGE.

London, June 30.

The condition of the money market to-day was about the same. The rate of private discount was inclined to harden. The Stock Exchange continued its downward course. There was less business done to-day in old war loan stocks. Home railways gave signs of improvement, and the tone of Argentine was again heavy. Oils were weak.

SIR EDWARD GREY

RETURNS TO LONDON.

London, June 30.

Sir Edward Grey has returned after several weeks holiday, to rest his eyesight. It is announced that he will resume the charge of the Foreign Office shortly.

QUEENSLAND SUGAR

GOVERNMENT PURCHASES ENTIRE OUTPUT.

London, June 30.

The Queensland Government is buying up the whole output of sugar this season at the price of £18 per ton. The intention is to make it available for the whole of Australia at a reasonable price.

AEROPLANES FOR SPAIN

ORDERS PLACED WITH A TORONTO FIRM.

London, June 30.

Orders have been placed by the Spanish Government with a Toronto firm for a large number of aeroplanes.

VON FALKENHAYE HONOURED

MADE HONORARY COLONEL OF 8TH INFANTRY REGIMENT.

New York, June 30.

A telegram from Berlin announces that the German Chief of Staff, General von Falkenhaye, has been made honorary Colonel of the 8th regiment of Austrian infantry in recognition of the services he has rendered in Galicia.

DETENTION OF THE WILHELMINA

BRITAIN PAYS COMPENSATION TO HER OWNERS.

London, June 30.

It is officially announced that the British Government will pay £20,000 to the owners of the American steamer Wilhelmina in compensation for losses suffered through the detention of the ship.

SWEDEN'S COTTON IMPORTS

10,000 BALES MONTHLY.

London, June 30.

The British Government has consented to allow Sweden to import 10,000 bales of cotton monthly, this being double the usual amount consumed by the factories of Sweden.

POISON GAS FACTORY?

REPORTED DISCOVERY IN THE STATES

New York, June 29.

A telegram from Hartford, Connecticut, reports that the authorities there are investigating a rumour that a man named Herrick, proprietor of a mysterious factory at Chester, is making projectiles containing asphyxiating gases.

Suspicious were aroused in the first instance by the strange smells noticeable in the vicinity of the factory, the great quantity of acids being used, and the fact that almost all the workmen are foreigners.

Charles Armstrong, local superintendent of the works, when questioned on the subject, gave evasive replies. He denied that the men were employed in making asphyxiating gas bombs, and explained that the secrecy observed in the establishment was due to the fact that they were making aniline dyes.

The interior of the building has turned a yellowish tint, and the faces, beards and hair of the workmen all ore of a yellow colour.

URUGUAYAN STEAMER DETAINED

BRITISH GOVERNMENT TO REMOVE EMBARGO.

The Uruguayan Government is informed by their Minister in London that, representations to the British Government have induced the latter to permit the Uruguayan s.s. Maldonado, to pursue her voyage uninterruptedly to Amsterdam, she having been held as a military measure owing to the supposed class of her cargo. The British Government has been satisfied that the ship is laden with nothing more contraband than linseed and general produce.

THE LOST COLONIES

BRITAIN SUPREME IN AFRICA.

London, June 29.

With the occupation of Bukoba, which, as stated in yesterday's despatches, was captured by the British forces operating in Nyassaland, the campaign against Germany in Africa may be considered as practically ended, the whole of her colonies having now been wrested from her.

At Bukoba the British took a large quantity of war material and a number of prisoners, including the principal German civil and military leaders.

HAND-TO-HAND STRUGGLE IN FRANCE

Germans' Desperate Efforts to Combat French Advance

LOST GROUND RECOVERED IN THE VOSGES

Holland Prepares to Increase her Army

Paris, June 30.

Official despatches published to-day announce violent cannonading last night to the north of Arras and north and south of Souchez.

To the north of Neuville an infantry engagement enabled the French to make further progress along the Angres-Ablain road. South of the Cabinet Rouge an attack by the Germans was repulsed.

In the Vosges region the Germans attacked and succeeded in temporarily driving the French advance guard from the slopes east of Metzeral; but an immediate counter-attack resulted in the French regaining part of the lost ground that afternoon, the rest being retaken in the morning.

Elsewhere along the front there have only been artillery actions.

FRENCH ADVANCE AFTER DESPERATE FIGHTING.

Paris, June 30.

The struggle at Bagatelle between the Germans and the advancing French is continuing with undiminished violence, hand grenades, aerial torpedoes, explosive missiles, mines and bayonets constituting the principal weapons used. The combatants strive to come to close quarters, disdaining rifle fire, and grapple with each other as soon as they can get the opportunity.

The situation is much the same in the Vosges region, the opponents attacking each other with incarnate fury, attack being swiftly succeeded by counter-attack, and trenches being constantly taken and retaken. Everywhere the French are gaining ground, and as they proceed they consolidate the positions they capture.

GERMAN "NEWS" FABRICATIONS

Paris, June 30.

An official communiqué announces that the Germans attacked the French positions at Calonne using poisonous gases, but were repulsed.

A denial is published to the German official announcement that the French attacked along a front of two kilometres, and were repulsed, also to the statement that the Germans had been successful at Les Eparges. The whole of the latter position is in the hands of the French.

ANSWERING THE ALLIES CALL

MONTENEGRINS FOR CANADIAN ARMY.

Montreal, June 30.

Five hundred Montenegrin reservists from San Francisco, New York, Pittsburg, Cleveland and other places in the United States have assembled here to obtain military instruction under the Canadian officers at Three Rivers camp in Quebec province.

PEACE TALK

ASQUITH DECLINES TO ANSWER QUERIES IN THE COMMONS.

London, June 30.

In reply to a question asked to-day in the House of Commons by Mr. D. Mason, Liberal member for Coventry, as to whether the Government would state the terms upon which peace would be made possible, the Prime Minister said that it would not be in the public interest to add anything to what he had already said upon the subject.

THE WASTE OF WAR

COTTON FOR EXPLOSIVES.

New York, June 30.

It is reported from Berlin that the military commandant of the province of Brandenburg has issued an order, to become effective on August 1, prohibiting the manufacture of cotton for all ordinary purposes such as articles of clothing, bed sheets, slips, table cloths, etc.

It is presumed that the German Government requires all the cotton for the making of explosives.

BRITAIN'S NAVAL ESTIMATES

PASSED BY THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

London, June 30.

The Naval estimates providing for an increase of 50,000 men in the personnel have been passed by the House of Commons.

THE ZEPPELIN PERIL

AROUSES BRITAIN TO ACTION.

London, June 30.

It is announced that the British War Office is taking important steps towards the reorganisation of the aerial flotilla so as to be able to oppose probable attacks on the cities and towns by Zeppelins.

RUSSIA'S NEW WAR MINISTER

APPOINTMENT OF GENERAL POLIVANOFF.

Petrograd, June 29.

According to an Imperial ukase just published, the vacancy left by the retirement of General Sukhomlinoff from his appointment as Minister of War has been filled by the nomination of General A. A. Polivanoff, member of the Imperial Council.

DEADLOCK?

Little Change in the Great War

FRUITLESS FIGHTING IN FRANCE

London, June 29

The Russian centre in Galicia is rapidly reforming behind the Gnialpa before Von Linsingen makes his drive across the Dniester; but this retreat, in the opinion of the military critics of London, has been almost entirely due to the battle in the Lemberg region, where the positions held by the Russians made a retirement inevitable.

These movements strengthened the Austro-German line and consolidated the Teutons' hold upon the Galician capital.

"Fruitless fighting" sums up operations along the western front, where even the artillery duels lack vigour, except on the line between Arras and the sea, where the bombardment of the German positions is almost continuous.

The expected detachments of German troops from the East front for operations in the west have evidently not yet arrived. This is probably due to the stubborn Russian retreat and the increasing pressure of the Italian advance.

The Italian advance has been very slow, but if it is to be entirely stopped more Austrian troops must in all probability be transferred from the Galician lines, unless Austria is willing to surrender Trieste. However, the first important milestone on the road to Vienna will no doubt be defended to the last gasp.

The Anglo-French troops on the Gallipoli peninsula are heavily bombarding the Turkish right wing—without result, according to a Turkish official report; but the other side has not yet announced the conclusion of the operation.

HOLLAND READY FOR WAR

PROBABLE INCREASE IN THE ARMY.

London, June 30.

A telegram from the Hague says that, in view of the turn things are taking it is very likely that the Netherlands Government will decide on increasing the effective strength of the army. There will doubtless be opposition from certain directions; but the Government is firmly determined that the military power of Holland shall be equal to any emergency.

DUM DUM BULLETS

GERMAN ALLEGATIONS AGAINST THE RUSSIANS.

Paris, June 30.

It is reported from Petrograd that the commander of the German forces in the east has issued orders that any Russians taken with dum-dum cartridges in their possession are to be shot.

The Germans are evidently following their usual practice of laying on others the blame for the breaches of international law that they themselves are committing or are about to commit, and are also seeking an excuse for the barbarities committed upon the wounded Russians.

As a matter of fact the Russians do not use dum-dum bullets, except possibly when they capture rifles and ammunition from the Austro-German troops and use their own weapons against them.

On the other hand when German or Austrian munitions of war have been captured it has been discovered that they habitually use explosive missiles with their machine guns, a thing that the Russians have never done.

PROMOTION FOR PIRATES

MEDALS FOR THE CREW

New York, June 24.

A telegram from Norfolk, Mass., reports that the sailors of the German auxiliary cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm are wearing medals which they have received from Berlin. They say that their captain has received a despatch from the Kaiser congratulating him for his exploits.

They also say that the crew of the Prinz Eitel have received no medals, but that the captain has been promoted several degrees in rank.

RUSSIA'S MUNITIONS SHORTAGE

SPECIAL COMMISSION APPOINTED.

Paris, June 30.

Telegrams from Petrograd state that the Tsar has appointed a commission composed of members of Parliament and employers of industry, whose duty it will be to systematise and infuse more energy into the output of munitions.

The message also announces that a decree has been issued authorising the raising of a short-dated loan for 50 million roubles.

ENTHUSIASM IN RUSSIA.

Petrograd, June 30.

The Imperial Ukase appointing a commission to superintend the munition factories in Russia expresses invincible faith in the future triumph of the Russian arms, and in the prosperity of the country in general.

His Majesty announces that the contest will continue until the enemy has been crushed, otherwise peace will be an impossibility.

An appeal is made to the industrial and administrative institutions, and to all the faithful sons of Russia, to work together to meet the requirements of the great army which is to ensure the safety of the Empire.

The newspapers say that the appeal is bound to produce immense enthusiasm throughout the country. Hundreds of telegrams have been received from all the principal cities declaring that the Russian nation is ready to assist the Government heart and soul.

DYNAMITE OUTRAGE?

STICKS DISCOVERED NEAR CANADIAN AMMUNITION WORKS.

Quebec, June 29.

The Canadian Militia Department is investigating a discovery of fifty sticks of dynamite which were found last night near the machinery shops in Shaw Park, Levis. The dynamite was found buried in the grounds close to the plant.

It is understood that the shops were to receive a contract for ammunition from the British Government.

FALL OF SCUTARI

ALBANIAN CAPITAL ENTERED BY THE MONTENEGRINS.

New York, June 29.

A telegram from Rome announces that the Montenegrins have entered Scutari after a feeble resistance from the Albanian troops in occupation. The victors are engaged in reinforcing all the outer forts of the place.

The Montenegrin troops are overjoyed at the final realisation of their ambition and that of their King.

In Cetinje there has been a great popular demonstration of joy on hearing the news, the crowd assembling before the royal residence at Konak and cheering enthusiastically.

AUSTRIAN COUNCIL OF WAR

Decides to Call on Germany to Arrest Italian Invasion

APPALLING LOSSES IN GALICIAN BATTLES

760,000 Men Sacrificed in Operations around Lemberg

New York, June 30.

Telegrams have been received from various sources reporting that a council of war, at which the Crown Prince of Austria-Hungary was present, has been held at Innsbruck to discuss at length the progress of the operations on the Italian frontier.

It was recognised that the Italian advance must be arrested, for which purpose it would be necessary to dispatch all the troops possible with an ample provision of heavy and medium calibre artillery.

It was resolved that the participation of Germany on this front to a larger extent than is at present the case was indispensable, the force of Bavarian troops sent being insufficient.

The council was unanimously of opinion that the prompt action taken by the Italian General Staff had resulted in rendering impossible the invasion of Italy, and the plans prepared to that effect some time since by the Austrian military authorities would therefore have to be revised.

AUSTRIAN ATTACKS REPULSED.

New York, June 30.

Telegrams from the frontiers of Switzerland and Italy announce that last night and in the early morning, the Austrians, after a violent bombardment of the positions conquered by the Italians recently on Monte Cimarrone, proceeded to attack with their full force.

The assault was delivered with great valour and obstinacy; but the Italian trenches were strongly fortified, and well supported by the artillery, and the enemy had to retire leaving many dead and wounded on the field.

The invading forces are preparing for a further advance, and are constantly harassing the Austrian positions by night attacks.

GERMAN REINFORCEMENTS FOR AUSTRIA.

New York, June 30.

It is reported from Basle that, in accordance with the request of Austria, another German corps will be sent to reinforce the troops now operating against the Italians.

The total strength of the new contingent will be about 50,000 infantry, supported by four mountain batteries and some machine gun sections, and will proceed to the Trentine region.

BOY SCOUTS FOR THE FRONT

ITALY'S FUTURE SOLDIERS.

Rome, June 30.

A company of boy-scouts, fully equipped, set out this morning for the front in high spirits.

The boys will be employed in the second line of operations to carry messages and distribute correspondence among the soldiers.

At the railway station a large crowd gathered to see them off and cheer the future soldiers of Italy.

HERO-COLONEL'S DEATH

DRAMATIC INCIDENT IN ITALIAN FIGHTING.

Rome, June 30.

The following dramatic incident is related in connection with the capture by the Italians of the Corso heights to the northeast of Monfalcone.

The attack was delivered by the 1st regiment of Grenadiers, who took the trenches at the point of the bayonet. The enemy turned a withering fire of shot and shell on the trenches, and the Italians found it impossible to remain in possession and came into the open. The Austrian infantry, believing that the Italians were retreating, advanced to re-occupy the trenches, and the Grenadiers were showing signs of hesitation, when Colonel Manfredi, a man of gigantic stature, snatched the flag from the standard-bearer and waved it aloft, shouting:—"Grenadiers: Remember that the Regiment has never retreated!"

Instantly the men rallied, and, despite a storm of mitraille, charged the enemy with the bayonet and once more put them to flight.

At the moment of victory, a shrapnel shell swept off one of Colonel Manfredi's legs, the valiant leader dying soon after.

NAVAL BATTLE IN THE ADRIATIC

AUSTRIA'S RUMOURED INTENTIONS.

New York, June 30.

A telegram from Amsterdam announces that the Austrian navy is preparing to attack the Italian fleet in the Adriatic with its full force and destroy it in one decisive battle.

RAID ON CATTARO

ITALIAN AIRMAN SPREADS PANIC IN THE HARBOUR.

Rome, June 29.

A telegram from Antivari to the "Giornale d'Italia" says that the Montenegrins are greatly pleased by the effects of a raid by an Italian aeroplane on Cattaro.

As soon as the aircraft appeared the whole port was thrown into confusion. The shipping in the harbour commenced to move about in order to avoid the missiles from the enemy.

The bombs dropped did much damage to the arsenal and the petrol deposits; but the aviator carefully avoided doing any harm to the civilian part of the town, and it is believed that no lives were lost. However all the enemy's batteries kept up a furious, if harmless, fire upon the aeroplane, even long after it had departed in the north-westerly direction and was far out of range.

760,000 VICTIMS

Appalling Losses in Galicia

RUSSIANS CONTINUE TO RETREAT

London, June 30.

Although the pressure of the Austro-German armies on the retreating Russians is somewhat relaxed, the latter continue to fall back in perfect fighting order as they go. On the banks of the Galilipa there was a momentary halt, and an important engagement was fought wherein the Russians took many prisoners; but the probability is that they will not cease to retreat until reaching the Zlotalipa river, in Russian territory.

It is observed that of late the enemy has been less vigorous in pursuit as they draw nearer to the frontier.

AUSTRO-GERMAN LOSSES IN GALICIA.

Paris, June 30.

It has been ascertained that in the fighting round Lemberg since the 23rd of this month the Austro-German forces have lost 40,000 men in killed alone. In the capture of Halicz their losses were over 4,000.

HEAVY COST OF GALICIAN FIGHTING.

London, June 30.

The military critic of the "Times," in reviewing the results of Teuton advance in Galicia during the last few weeks, says that the general opinion of military men is that the taking of Lemberg and other successes obtained by the enemy has not brought the end of the campaign any nearer.

The losses of the victors were enormous, those of the Germans amounting to 380,000, while those of their allies were probably about the same; but the advantages gained are not in proportion to the sacrifice, as they are still opposed by an army almost as strong as ever and ready to go on fighting for years if need be. The Germans, to maintain their positions, will have to bring up fresh troops; but if they withdraw any from the other frontiers they will upset the plans for the defence of Austria.

The plan of the Russians is probably to keep advancing and receding for an indefinite time, and the loss of a few towns will have no moral effect upon them. Meantime the enemy is growing weaker. He cannot carry out successfully his customary plan of overwhelming the enemy by massed attacks, and he is loth to have to resort to a warfare of trenches wherein his superiority no longer exists, but to which he will be compelled to have recourse.

BOSNIA INVADED

PROGRESS BY MONTENEGRIN ARMY.

Rome, June 30.

Telegrams from Cetinje announce that the Montenegrin forces are invading Bosnia. They have occupied Voutchevo and are advancing in a northerly direction, acting in combination with the Serbian army.

EMBASSY GUARDS

TURKEY'S PROTEST AGAINST BRITISH ACTION.

Amsterdam, June 29.

A despatch from Constantinople says that, by way of reprisal for the expulsion of the Turkish functionaries who were guarding in London the archives of the embassy, the Ottoman Government has decided to expel all the diplomatic personnel of foreign countries attached to the United States or Italian embassies. Some of them have left already.

2,500,000 MEN MARCHING ON WARSAW

London, June 29.

Further despatches from Petrograd say that it seems beyond doubt that the Teuton plan is to resume a vigorous offensive against the fortress of Warsaw, probably attacking from the north, centre and south of Poland. The troops will be under the command of Marshal Hindenburg and will be the largest and most seasoned army that the Austro-Germans can get together.

TWO AND A HALF MILLION MEN.

New York, June 29.

A wireless from Berlin says that it is admitted in military circles that the Austro-German army marching on Warsaw is 2,500,000 men strong. There is a rumour that the Kaiser will conduct the campaign in person, with Generals Hindenburg, von Francois and Eichhorn as his Adjutants.

RUSSIANS READY FOR BATTLE IN GALICIA.

London, June 29.

Despatches from Petrograd report that three Teuton armies are hastening to meet the Russians to prevent them from concentrating in positions of strategic strength; but they will arrive too late, as the Russian armies which had been operating separately have already united on the Galilipa river with their southern flank dominating the crossing places of the Dniester.

It is expected that General Mackensen's army will offer battle at Cholm, where the Russians are preparing to encounter him.

STEADY RUSSIAN RETIREMENT IN GALICIA

Petrograd, June 29.

Along a front of 100 miles Grand Duke Nicholas is slowly withdrawing his armies eastward upon a strongly fortified line which was prepared before the evacuation of Lemberg. The retirement continues from the Russian border north of the region of Stanislaw to the south.

It is generally believed here that the next great battle will be fought along a front of thirty miles east or north-east of Lemberg.

It is officially admitted to-day that the Russians have fallen back to within a few miles of Busk; but War Office despatches indicate that the Grand Duke is preparing to make a stand on the west bank of the Bug southeast of Lemberg.

The Austro-Germans are attempting to force a general engagement along the Galilipa river, because of the character of the country, owing to which the advancing enemy forces would have a tremendous advantage. For this reason General Ivanoff has steadily withdrawn eastward since the capture of Halicz and Zaravno by the enemy, straightening his line and effecting a closer junction with the armies from Bukovina and the northern armies around Lemberg.

War Office despatches again have reported only minor skirmishes in the southeast of Galicia. In Poland several attacks by the enemy have been repulsed.

RIDICULED IN ROME

FRANZ JOSEF'S PROMISE TO THE POPE.

Rome, June 29.

The Democratic Press, commenting on the report that Emperor Francis Joseph had written to the Pope promising that the Austrian aerial fleet should not bombard Rome, says that the promise is easily kept, as the aerial bombardment of Rome would be a difficult, if not impossible feat to accomplish. A dirigible or aeroplane from the coast of Dalmatia would have to cross the lofty Apennine ranges in which violent and dangerous currents abound.

TURKS SEVERELY DEFEATED

Allies' Great Success on Gallipoli Peninsula

COMBINED ATTACK BY LAND AND SEA

Three Trenches Taken from the Turks

London, June 30.

The result of the attack by the Allies on the Turkish positions on Gallipoli peninsula was that the former occupied three lines of the enemy's trenches. The losses of the Ottoman troops were very heavy.

ALLIES' SIGNAL SUCCESS.

London, June 30.

Official despatches received at the Admiralty from Tenedos island report that the forts, batteries and trenches of the Turks on Gallipoli peninsula have again been subjected to a terrific bombardment by the combined Anglo-French fleet, causing heavy losses, conflagrations and explosions in the magazines.

At the same time the artillery and infantry of the land forces attacked and completely dislodged the Turks from their positions.

The bulletin issued by the British Admiralty describes the operation as representing a great success on the part of the Allies.

TURKS LOSE 6,000 MEN.

Athens, June 30.

In the recent attack on the Turkish lines by the Allies, 6,000 dead Turks were found afterwards in the trenches occupied by the victors. It is expected that the operation will soon be followed by an assault upon the enemy's positions at Krithia.

The French troops commanded by General Courand specially distinguished themselves by their bravery in attack.

TURKISH TRENCHES TAKEN

London, June 30.

It is officially announced that in the recent attack on the Turkish positions on Gallipoli peninsula two lines of trenches were captured to the east of Saghir Dere, and three lines taken by storm to the west of that place.

THE TURKISH VERSION

New York, June 30.

An official despatch from Constantinople transmits the following version of recent operations in the Dardanelles:

"On June 28, the Anglo-French forces thrice attacked the Turkish left wing at Aviburnu and the Turkish right wing at Seddul Bahr, but were repulsed on both occasions with heavy losses.

"The Turkish centre, in the course of several counter-attacks, captured two lines of the Allies' trenches, inflicting great losses upon them.

"The Allies' batteries at Cape Tepeh were silenced."

TURKISH OIL STORES BOMBARDED.

New York June 30.

The "New York Journal" publishes a despatch from Athens stating that one of the Allies' cruisers last Monday bombarded the Turkish stores of oil at Lidia, and completely destroyed it. The vessel then entered the Gulf of Chesmeh, bombarded the lighthouse and sunk fourteen ships in the gulf. She also shelled the Turkish trenches on those shores.

GREECE AND THE TURKS

ALLEGED VIOLATION OF NEUTRALITY.

Athens, June 30.

Owing to the representations of Great Britain that the Turks are being supplied by Greek sailing vessels an inquiry is being made in order to ascertain the companies responsible for the breach of the country's neutrality and deal with them according to law.

It is believed that only isolated cases of the kind have occurred, and that the Greek merchant shipping in general has faithfully adhered to the regulations in this respect.

TREATMENT OF PRISONERS

GERMANY'S WARNING TO RUSSIA.

New York, June 30.

A telegram from Berlin says that the German Government has intimated to that of Russia through the United States Embassy in Petrograd that unless the treatment of German prisoners in Siberia improves reprisals will be taken.

At present, both in Germany and in Austria the Russians are well fed, clothed and housed, and sent to places where the climate is mild; but all this will have to be altered if the condition of the German prisoners does not materially improve.

RUMANIA'S IDEALS

POLICY MUST BE IN ACCORD WITH THAT OF TRIPLE ENTENTE.

Paris, June 29.

A telegram from Bucharest states that the Conservative and Democratic parties held a joint meeting to discuss the situation as regards the foreign policy of Rumania. The result has been the issue of a proclamation declaring that there can be no difference between the policy of Rumania and that of the Triple Entente if the national ideals of the country are to be realised.

"RUMANIA WILL REMAIN NEUTRAL."

New York, June 29.

It is reported from Berlin that Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg and Foreign Secretary Von Jagow have returned from Vienna. They declare that Rumania will remain neutral, and that the efforts of the Allies to rouse the Balkan States to action against the Central Empires have been frustrated.

It is believed that Austria-Hungary has offered Bessarabia to Rumania as soon as that Russian province is conquered.

SWISS NEUTRALITY

VIOLATED BY GERMANY.

New York, June 30.

Telegrams from Geneva say that the newspapers of that city are complaining of acts on the part of Germany which may lead to the termination of the neutrality of Switzerland.

Whether they are isolated cases, or whether the troops are acting in accordance with instructions is not known; but it is a fact that Swiss subjects provided with passports all in order have, on crossing the frontier, been arrested and thrown into prison for no reason whatever. The frontier is being vigilantly guarded by detachments of German troops, who frequently molest the peaceful inhabitants; while German aeroplanes are constantly violating Swiss neutrality by coming on to Swiss territory.

The matter will probably be made the subject of a note of protest to the Berlin Foreign Office.

NO LIBERTY IN HUNLAND

SOCIALISTS' DEMANDS REFUSED.

Paris, June 30.

It is reported from Berne that the German Government has refused to accede to the demand of the Socialists of that empire who claim liberty of the Press and the right to hold public meetings.

TURKEY DESIRES PEACE

RUMOURED OVERTURES TO ITALY.

Rome, June 30.

The greatest interest is being taken in the visit of the Prime Minister, Signor Salandra, to the army headquarters for a conference with the King. According to rumour, Turkey has made representations to the Italian Government asking her to use her good services in securing an early peace. In view of the counter reports that Italy is ready to take the field against Turkey, this rumour is not generally credited.

STRAINED TURCO-ITALIAN RELATIONS

New York, June 29.

A telegram from Milan announces that the Italian Government has instructed its Ambassador at Constantinople to apply for his passports and return to Rome.

This means war between Italy and the Ottoman Empire, whether declared or not, and gives colour to the rumour of Italian participation in the attack upon the Dardanelles.

There can be no doubt that the action of Italy has been largely brought about by the action of Turkey in attempting to stir up the tribes of Tripolitania to rebellion against the Italian régime.

TURKISH TRANSPORTS HARASSED BY SUBMARINES.

London, June 29.

According to despatches from Athens, the British submarines in the Dardanelles are increasing their activity in the Sea of Marmora. The moment a Turkish transport shows herself she is attacked and sunk.

A LONG CAMPAIGN.

Desultory fighting is still going on in the Gallipoli peninsula and on the other side of the Straits. It is evident that the campaign will be longer than was anticipated, but in the end the Allies will force the Straits and proceed against Constantinople.

The Turks fight resolutely, but without the enthusiasm they displayed at first.

UNDERSEA WARFARE SUBMARINE'S FIGHT WITH A BATTLESHIP

THRILLING STORY OF THE BALTIC

Paris, June 26.

An account has been received from Petrograd of the recent encounter in the Baltic Sea between a German squadron and a Russian submarine flotilla, in which the adventures of one of the submarines are related.

On the evening of the day in question the submarine observed smoke on the horizon and at once steered towards it. Before long it was possible to make out that the smoke was from a German squadron of ten battleships and a large convoy of torpedo boats.

At a convenient distance the submarine submerged until only a few inches of the periscope remained above the water. In order to further guard against the risk of detection the submarine took up a position so that she was on the same side of her prey as the sinking sun whose rays would naturally dazzle an observer.

Diving beneath the escort of torpedo boats which were provided with dragnets and special explosives with which to fight submarines, the Russian approached the leading battleship. At a depth of fifty feet the wash of the propellers was distinctly audible to the crew of the submarine. On coming again to the surface the object of attack was at once seen only sixty yards distant. The order was given to submerge and fire a torpedo. At the moment the latter order was obeyed it was felt that the submarine was hit by the keel of the battleship.

The submarine heeled over to such an extent that those on board were thrown off their legs; but the engines continued working regularly, and when at a depth of 75 feet she had regained her equilibrium.

At this moment there was a terrific explosion which shook the boat from stem to stern. All the electric lights exploded and things were flung from one side of the submarine to the other. Presently it was observed that water was trickling in from a point near the periscope, where a leak had been started, doubtless by contact with the keel of the large ship and further opened up by the explosion of the torpedo.

Under these circumstances the commander ordered one of the tanks to be emptied; and towards midnight, favoured by the darkness, the boat came cautiously to the surface and made as fast as she could for the coast, having been submerged from 7.29 to 11.30 p.m. Owing to the damage to the periscope it had been impossible to ascertain the effect of the attack, but it was subsequently known that the German warship was with difficulty saved and towed to harbour.

CORRUPTION IN JAPAN

MEMBERS OF IMPERIAL DIET ARRESTED.

New York, June 30.

A telegram from Tokio reports that two members of the Imperial Diet have been arrested on a charge of political corruption. The case is to be tried in the law courts.

BRIBED TO SUPPORT THE GOVERNMENT.

Tokio, June 30.

The arrest of the two members of the Japanese Diet for political corruption has caused a sensation in the city.

The papers say that the accused are suspected of having received bribes to desert the Sei-Yukai party and vote for the Government Bill for increasing the army by two divisions.

BLOCKADE OF GERMANY

BRITAIN'S REPLY TO AMERICA

Washington, June 25.

The United States Ambassador in London has transmitted by wire to the Department of State a reply in the form of a memorandum from the British Government to a Note from the United States containing certain observations regarding the blockade of Germany proclaimed by Britain.

The memorandum enunciates the principles in accordance with which American traffic is carried on and is dealt with by the British. Each case brought before the Prize Courts wherein American interests have been involved is explained in detail separately.

In answer to the complaint that American shipping companies have suffered through the delay in the Prize Court proceedings, it is stated that in the majority of cases any delay that occurred was due to the American companies themselves having asked for a postponement of the hearing of the case, or to their having failed to present their claims in due course. The delay cannot be attributed to the dilatory proceedings of the British Government.

Regarding the seizure of articles which do not appear in the list of contraband of war, consigned by the United States to Germany via neutral ports, the British Government explains that as Germany is surrounded by neutral countries it is a geographical impossibility to make the blockade effective without proceeding to the seizure of the articles mentioned.

The memorandum goes at length into a description of the measures taken by Britain in order to reduce to the lowest possible point the inconveniences caused to neutrals by the decree relative to trade with Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey.

It is maintained that the United States have no just cause of complaint. Britain will always endeavour to accelerate as much as possible the examination of the cargoes and to give close attention to claims arising from each particular case.

COST OF THE WAR

FRANCE PAYS £2,600,000 DAILY.

Paris, June 28.

To-morrow the request of the Government for a vote of 5,605 million francs to cover the war expenditure for the next three months will be considered by the Senate.

It is estimated that the average daily expenditure on the war is about 65 million francs, or £2,600,000.

The newspapers, in discussing the matter, say that in view of the necessities of the nation the Senate will doubtless approve the vote unanimously, and point to the very flourishing state of the finances notwithstanding the war.

FROZEN MEAT FOR FRANCE

SHIPMENT OF BULLOCKS FROM CANADA.

Paris, June 28.

A shipment of 1020 bullocks from Canada has reached Saint Nazaire. The animals average 600 kilogrammes in weight.

This marks the commencement of a series of such shipments from Canada and the French colonies of livestock and frozen or chilled beef for the troops and civilian population.

"ON TO PARIS!"

BERLIN'S DELIGHT AT FALL OF LEMBERG

New York, June 24.

The enthusiasm over the capture of Lemberg by the Teuton armies is described in a despatch from Berlin as tremendous. "On to Paris!" is the cry heard throughout the city. Popular sentiment is unanimously in favour of the abandonment of the offensive in Galicia and the execution of a gigantic drive against the western front. In streets and shops the talk of the people gathered in them is of nothing else but the great victory.

Obviously no hint has come from the Berlin War Office regarding what will follow the fall of Lemberg; but well informed military men doubt whether General Mackensen's armies will be seen in action along the French or Flemish lines in the near future.

The general belief is that Germany will send reinforcements to the troops in the Russian provinces on the Baltic and renew the drive from Riga.

In official circles it was declared that the importance of the Austro-German victories in Galicia cannot be over-estimated. They have practically cleared Galicia of enemy troops and have recovered a territory which is rich in copper, zinc and oil. Miners are already en route to Galicia to re-open the abandoned copper mines.

VICTOR OF LEMBERG

RAISED TO RANK OF FIELD MARSHAL.

Paris, June 25.

A report has been received from Berlin that the Kaiser has raised

FIELD MARSHAL VON MACKENSEN.

General von Mackensen to the rank of Field Marshal.

HARI - KARI

JAPANESE OFFICERS PREFER DEATH TO DISHONOUR.

Tokio, June 26.

It is reported from Petrograd that the Japanese officers Major Nakajima and Captain Hashimoto, who were fighting in the ranks of the Russian army at Lemberg, committed hari-kari when the city fell rather than suffer what they considered the dishonour of being made prisoners.

MURDERED BY THE KAISER

85 WOMEN AND CHILDREN VICTIMS OF GERMAN AIR RAIDS.

London, June 24.

The official figures of the victims of the German raids show fourteen attacks to date, over a wide area, chiefly of undefended towns, villages and country districts. The total casualties were: killed, 24 men (all civilians), 21 women and 11 children; wounded, 86 men, 36 women and 17 children.

TELL THE NATION THE TRUTH!

STRIKING DEMAND BY "THE TIMES"

London, June 25.

In the leading article of to-day the "Times" demands that the nation be told the truth about the war. The paper declares that there is no immediate prospect of our being able to compel the Germans to withdraw within their own frontiers; and it will take months to provide the British troops with the big guns, high explosives and machine guns necessary for the purpose. The article proceeds:—

"The country has got to set its teeth and disregard confusing bulletins, in the face of the probability of a prolonged and unprogressive campaign in the west; while General Mackensen's successful march in the east has probably postponed the resumption of the Russian offensive for several months until they also are provided with guns and shells.

"To put it briefly, the Allies on both fronts are being held, and there is no prospect of an early change. Moreover, the outlook in the Dardanelles, of which the less said the better, long ago ceased to offer prospects of a swift and easy diversion in the Middle East."

BAN ON TIN EXPORTATION

BRITISH GOVERNMENT PROHIBITION.

London, June 24.

The British Government has forbidden the exportation of tin plate to Denmark, Holland, Sweden and Norway; also of cotton yarn and thread to any part of Europe with the exception of the allied nations, Spain and Portugal.

INSULTED THE KAISER!

PUNISHMENT FOR DUTCH JOURNALISTS.

Rotterdam, June 26.

The editor-in-chief of the local paper the "Messenger" has been condemned to twelve days imprisonment as a punishment for having insulted the Kaiser, the sovereign of a friendly country.

The paper accuses the Kaiser of being double-faced and declares that he was the instigator of the war.

LARGE AMMUNITION DEPOT DESTROYED

SUCCESSFUL RAID BY BRITISH AIRMEN.

London, June 26.

Despatches from the British front in Flanders report that, information having been received as to the exact position of a large ammunition depot belonging to the Germans at Roulers, a squadron of British airmen made an excursion to the spot.

Upon arrival the aeroplanes proceeded to drop bomb after bomb on the building and succeeded in blowing it up, besides killing about fifty German soldiers.

The depot was used as a base from which to supply the German lines between Dixmude and Ypres.

LOADING AN AMMUNITION TRAIN.

London, June 26.

The Central News Agency reports the receipt of a telegram from Rotterdam announcing the exploit of the British squadron of airmen in raiding Roulers. The fifty German soldiers were killed while loading a train with ammunition.

HUMANE GAS

GERMANY'S DEFENCE OF POISON

New York, June 26.

A telegram from Berlin states that an official statement defending the use of asphyxiating gas bombs was issued in that city to-day.

The statement argues that the French and British used gas shells many months before. The Germans declare that the object of using the gas was simply to drive the enemy from his trenches, and that the slow approach of the gas cloud made it possible for the enemy's troops to flee.

In this connection it is pointed out that the Allies flooded the German trenches in Flanders, driving the Germans out; and it is held that there is no difference between using water or a cloud of gas for the purpose. The statement continues:—

"If our enemies attempt to arouse feeling in America against the use of such gases, it should suffice to point out that the American delegates to La Hagne in 1890 voted against prohibiting the use of gases. Captain Mahan, before the sub-committee, declared that gas bombs are as humane as high explosives, which inflict terrible wounds."

EXECUTED IN THE TOWER

END OF A GERMAN SPY.

London, June 23.

A brief announcement has been published regarding the naturalised British subject Muller, who, with Kuepfeler and Hahn, had been arrested for communicating information of military value to Germany, and Rosenthal, who had been despatched by the German Admiralty with an American passport to obtain information about the movements of the British Navy.

The announcement states that Muller was executed yesterday morning in the Tower of London, and that Rosenthal is under detention awaiting his trial by court-martial.

SUBMERGED IN AIR-TIGHT BOX

INVENTOR'S DEMONSTRATION WITH AIR PURIFIER.

New York, June 24.

It is reported from Wilmington, Delaware, that a local chemist named William Bond, has invented an air purifier which has been successfully tested. The inventor allowed himself to be submerged in an air-tight box which was placed in a tank, remaining in it for several hours.

The invention was tested in the presence of several naval officers, who consider it to be admirably adapted to submarines, enabling them to remain submerged for an indefinite period.

UNBELIEVABLE HUMANITY

BERLIN JOURNAL OBJECTS TO CIVILISED TEACHINGS.

New York, June 25.

A Berlin telegram says that a long article appears to-day in the "Kreuz Zeitung" attacking the "Lokal Correspondenz Agency" because the latter questioned whether it would be politically wise to grant the request of the United States in regard to submarine warfare and abstain from attacking vessels conveying American passengers.

The "Kreuz Zeitung" says that when it read the offensive paragraph it could hardly believe that such a question could have been asked. To give any such guarantee would be simply to allow the shipment of more munitions of war under the cover of the vessel carrying a few passengers.

SUNK BY THE PIRATES

SEVEN FISHING VESSELS LOST OFF SCOTTISH COAST.

London, June 24.
Seven fishing boats, colloquially known as "drifters," have been sunk by a German submarine off the coast of Scotland. The crews were saved.

Christiania, June 25.
A despatch from Stavanger says that the captain and three men of the crew of the Norwegian steamer Sveinjarl, which was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine on June 9 in the North Sea, have arrived at that port. The rest of the crew perished.

STEAMER TORPEDOED AND BURNED.

London, June 25.
A despatch from Copenhagen reports that the steamer Nova has landed at that port the crew of the Norwegian steamer Truma, torpedoed and burned last Wednesday off the Shetland Isles.

LOSS OF THE LINER INDRANI.

London, June 28.
The Indra liner, Indrani, of Liverpool, 4994 tons gross, is reported to have been sunk by a German submarine off the Tuskar Bank, near the coast of Wexford, Ireland.

INDRANI'S CREW SAVED.

London, June 28.
The crew of the British steamer Indrani, sunk by a torpedo off the Tuskar Bank, have all been saved. The steamer Lucina, sunk off Ballycotton Bay, Cork, was conveying a cargo of coal from Liverpool to London.

SUNK BY A BOMB

RUSSIAN SUBMARINE'S UNIQUE FATE.

New York, June 25.
A wireless from Berlin states that on May 31 a German aeroplane dropped a bomb on a Russian submarine in the Baltic Sea. To-day the War Office has received positive advices from Petrograd that the submarine was sunk. This is the only case known of a submarine having been sunk by an aeroplane.

HEROIC CROSSING-SWEEPER

AWARDED THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE MEDAL.

London, June 24.
Lord Chylesmore stated at the Westminster City Council to-day that a crossing sweeper named Hayman has won the Distinguished Service Medal for gallantry at the front.

DERNBURG'S VESSEL

TAKEN TO KIRKWALL BY BRITISH CRUISER.

London, June 24.
The Norwegian steamer Bergensfjord, from the United States, which was taken to Kirkwall by a British cruiser several days ago, was released this evening by the British authorities.

Herr Dernburg, who was a passenger by the vessel and had a United States safe-conduct, was not molested; but it was understood that the British had reason to believe that several German army officers were aboard under assumed names.

WOMEN "RAILWAYMEN"

TO BE ADMITTED TO NATIONAL UNION.

London, June 24.
The National Union of Railwaymen has decided to admit to membership the women who are working on the railways.

WAR IN THE AIR

BRITISH AEROPLANE'S THRILLING ADVENTURE.

London, June 28.
Despatches from the British front in western Flanders give a dramatic description of a duel near Poelcappele, between Dixmude and Ypres, in which a British aeroplane, while reconnoitring at a height of 3000 feet, met and engaged a large German biplane which had double engines and propellers.

The German machine at first circled round ours at the same time firing its machine gun, but, so far as is known, without inflicting any damage. The Englishman then fired fifty rounds at a range of less than 200 yards. The hostile biplane was seen to waver; then, after firing some more shots, its engines stopped, and the aeroplane dived to a level of 2000 feet, where it again flattened out its course, flying slowly and erratically under a heavy fire from the British anti-aircraft guns below.

The British pilot then turned towards the German line to complete his reconnaissance, but his aeroplane was hit and he therefore decided to make for home. His petrol tank however had been pierced, and as the aeroplane glided downwards on a slant the petrol was set alight by the exhaust and ran blazing down to the front.

The machine travelled on to the accompaniment of a rattle of musketry from the enemy, while the heat exploded the unused rounds for the machine gun, and even the cartridges in the pilot's revolver.

The pilot, however, did not lose his control of the aeroplane, but proceeded steadily on his downward course. Before he reached the ground a large part of the framework was destroyed, and even the hardwood blades of the propeller were so burned that the propeller ceased to revolve.

When the machine finally landed back in the British lines both the officers had been severely burned. The pilot, in climbing out, tripped over a wire stay and sprained his ankle. What few serviceable portions of the aeroplane remained were collected and removed under the shrapnel fire of the German guns.

NO BOMBS ON ROME

FRANZ JOSEF'S CONCESSION TO THE POPE.

Paris, June 28.
A despatch from Rome states that the Pope has received a letter from Emperor Francis Joseph promising that the Austrian aviators should not drop bombs on Rome.

The letter is stated to be a reply to one from his Holiness saying that Rome ought to be respected as she is the world's great depository of Church treasure and the sovereign capital of Christianity.

EDITOR OF "DAILY MIRROR" DEAD

FAMOUS JOURNALIST PASSES AWAY AT AGE OF FIFTY-ONE.

London, June 26.
The death is announced, at the age of 51, of Mr. Alexander Kenealy, editor of the "Daily Mirror."

Mr. Kennedy's life was devoted to journalism, his career commencing in New York. He was correspondent for the "New York Herald" on Peary's first Arctic expedition, and was correspondent for the "New York World" with the American fleet in the war with Spain. He became news editor to the "Daily Express" of London in 1901 and joined the "Daily Mirror" in 1904. He has been the author of several works.

THE CRY OF BELGIUM

TERRIBLE PLIGHT OF DEFENCELESS KINGDOM.

Paris, June 29.
Communication with the interior of Belgium is becoming increasingly difficult; but the few reports that do come through show that disease and starvation is making ravages among the inhabitants of the towns and villages occupied by the Germans. The unfortunate Belgians do not know where to turn for help, and all their resources are exhausted. It is stated that the news of the afflictions of his people is greatly troubling King Albert's iron self-possession.

"HOUSE FULL"

LLOYD GEORGE'S CALL MEETS WITH READY RESPONSE.

London, June 29.
The British Government's call for volunteers for the making of munitions has yielded results which exceeded expectation. The Government had intended to keep the office open for applications until July 4; but the number of volunteers has already been greater than were required. The names and addresses of all further applicants are being taken in case their services should be ultimately needed.

ENTHUSIASTIC POTSDAM

STUDENTS CHEER QUEEN OF SWEDEN.

New York, June 28.
It is reported from Berlin that great crowds of students and citizens gathered at Potsdam to-day to cheer the Queen of Sweden on her departure to Stockholm after a visit to her mother at Baden.

The Empress Victoria met the Queen of Sweden in Berlin and accompanied her to Potsdam while the multitude sang the Swedish and German national anthems.

WAR FREIGHTS

RATES FROM ARGENTINA QUADRUPLED.

London, June 28.
The steamer Warlydale arrived to-day at Swansea with 21,000 quarters of wheat and maize from Argentina. The freightage on the cargo totalled £13,670, as against £3,000 for a similar cargo in 1914.

BANKRUPTCY OF TURKEY

NO MONEY TO PROVIDE FOOD FOR TROOPS.

London, June 26.
It is reported from Sofia that the financial situation of Turkey is desperate. There is no money to provide the troops with rations, and it is some weeks since the Germans received any remittances. The commanding officers have the greatest difficulty in maintaining discipline in the Ottoman army. Apparently the Central Empires are not in a position to afford Turkey any financial assistance, and the situation is becoming daily more critical. In Asia Minor the taxes have been increased, but the people have no funds to pay them.

OUT WITH THE HUNS!

Paris, June 25.
The Academy of Medicine has struck off the list of foreign members the names of the German professors Behring, Roentgen, Fischer and Ehrlich.

PREPARING FOR THE WINTER

GERMANY'S HEAVY ORDERS FOR ARMY STORES.

Zurich, June 28.
The "Zuricher Post" announces that Germany is making preparations for the winter campaign, and has given orders for the making of half a million cloaks, nailed boots, and special stoves for the trenches.

A SUNKEN PIRATE

GERMAN SUBMARINE LOST IN THE NORTH SEA.

London, June 28.
A Reuter's Agency telegram from Amsterdam announces that a German submarine which sailed from Emden for the North Sea had an explosion on board when off the island of Borkum last Tuesday and sank. Only the commander and two of the crew are believed to have saved themselves. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

TOOK THE ENEMY'S FLAG

ITALIAN SOLDIER TO BE DECORATED BY KING EMMANUEL.

Geneva, June 25.
The Italian infantryman who was the first to capture an Austrian standard since the beginning of the war will be decorated by King Victor Emmanuel.

In the fierce fighting round Plava this infantryman engaged an Austrian standard bearer in an encounter. He was stabbed in the hand, but finally succeeded in killing his adversary and returned to the Italian lines with the enemy's flag as a trophy.

APPALLING TURKISH LOSSES

143,000 CASUALTIES ON GALLIPOLI PENINSULA.

Athens, June 25.
The total losses sustained by the Turkish troops defending the peninsula of Gallipoli are estimated at 143,000 men. A despatch from Mitylene says that in three days of fighting on the peninsula the Allies captured several of the enemy's trenches. The second French division is bearing the brunt of the attack.

GERMANY'S NEW ARMY

720,000 MEN TO BE PLACED IN THE FIELD.

London, June 26.
Reports proceeding from military sources at Zurich say that Germany will put eighteen army corps more into the field shortly, numbering approximately 720,000 men. These are composed chiefly of the second category of the Landsturm, and comprise those who have never performed military service but are non-training; also the inland reserves which have been resting in the interior of Germany.

IN THE MEDITERRANEAN

SEVEN GERMAN SUBMARINES ARRIVE TO PREY ON SHIPPING.

Tokio, June 26.
Official information having been received from Rome that seven German submarines had succeeded in entering the Mediterranean, the Japanese companies have insured against the risks of war all their ships which pass through those waters.

NEUTRAL EUROPEANS IN BUENOS AIRES

The Trend of Their Sympathies

Outside the great cities of the United States it would be difficult to find a more generally representative collection of residents belonging to the neutral states of Europe than is to be met with in Argentina's capital. Swiss, Scandinavians, Hollanders, Danes, all the northern countries are well to the fore, whilst Spaniards and Portuguese appear for the Latin neutrals, and the Balkans have each their own group of citizens keenly interested in the course of events. Hence it may be reasonably held that without leaving Buenos Aires one may gather a fairly reliable impression of the course of neutral feeling, and the trend of neutral sympathies in the present war, and as a matter of fact such is actually the case. The Argentine press has indeed done much to prosecute this form of enquiry, and the broad results thereof may be said to embody the opinion that whilst self-interest stands first and foremost, there is a general feeling that it will not be well for the future of Europe if the Central Empires come out of the conflict in a manner satisfactory to themselves.

Taking the least important groups first it is safe to assert that with the single exception of Greece, the conversation of residents of the Balkan states leads one to believe that these powers are only looking out for profit to themselves, caring little or nothing for the moral issue. They certainly wish to see the Turk driven across the Golden Horn, and the Bulgarians hope for at least a portion of his sadly diminished territories. But this feeling against the Turk is more or less hereditary, and for the rest Bulgaria, Roumania, and Greece, are so jealous of each other, and of Serbia, that they have apparently no grasp of the broad problems that will have to be solved at the end of the war. Also they are bitterly jealous of the glory and honour won by Serbia, recognising that in all likelihood her claims to the consideration of the Allies—should they win—will far outweigh any claim that they may put forward, either collectively or individually. In Portugal there are no two opinions. The old Lusitanian kingdom is heart and soul with England, and if good wishes count for anything, then the Allies already have all the support that Portugal can give. As most people are aware, this is only too literally true, men and money being both somewhat scarce in that country just now. Across the border the position is somewhat different. Neutrality has been well kept by the Spaniards, and the more sensible members of the community, the traders, who abhor politics, support this attitude unreservedly. What little contraband trading there was with Germany at the beginning of the war has ceased owing to the closure of Genoa as a port of shipment for the Central Empires, and although the Clerical party, especially the Ultramontanes, are still doing all they can to favour the cause of the Hapsburgs, their results are not commensurate with their efforts. Intervention by Spain is in the highest degree improbable, being but a stalking horse for internal politicians, and on the whole it may be said that Spain is to-day one of the countries that has the greatest claim to be considered a true neutral alike in sympathies and in deeds.

It is when one comes to consider the northern nations that one finds an attitude difficult of comprehension by the average Englishman, and still more enigmatic to the French and Italian allies. Broadly speaking the justice of the Allies cause is admitted, the horrors of Belgium and Northern France are regretted, the submarine campaign is tacitly acknowledged for the piracy that it really is. Yet with all this there is an undercurrent of admiration for German methods, German thought, and German persistence, that is irritating to a degree. It is this attitude that calls for a word of explanation, something that may perhaps show how it has arisen. Whilst at the same time it enables us to provide arms, intellectually speaking, wherewith to meet it.

In the first place the German "kultur" that to us bears on its face its own condemnation, has for the Scandinavian and Dutch peoples a very real value. The question of language, coupled with the usual course of study pursued in these countries, is, one believes, at the root of the evil. German is not only the lingua franca of the professional classes, but has for over half a century been the dominant tongue of the text books and the professorial lecture rooms. The Scandinavian, Dutch, and Swiss educationalists have latterly looked almost exclusively to Germany for their models. They have finished their careers in the majority of cases by a course at a German university, whilst their artists in music, painting, and sculpture, have gone to Munich, Leipzig, Dresden, or Bayreuth for their highest technique. Germany has been fortunate in the fact that its apostles, the professorial classes, have been unsparing in their labour. It is indisputable that the teaching courses in that country are more strenuous and more methodical than those of Great Britain or France. The fact that in the majority of cases the work accomplished is mediocre, and hidebound in its adherence to German tradition, is a fact that few of the smaller northern nations have appreciated.

Here and there a more far sighted individual has arisen decrying the almost mechanical method of imbibing knowledge that is Germany's special system, but such men have been few and far between. The method suits the continent. It brings practical results in the shape of employment either in their own country or in Germany to the students who follow it up to the end, and the natural result is that the doctor, chemist, lawyer, dentist, who has studied in the German schools is a strong partisan of German systematization in every branch of life. So far is this carried that individualism appears almost absent in Sweden, Holland and Denmark, there being in both countries a large body of opinion which is not averse to inclusion with the Central Empires on the basis of autonomous government within the German Zollverein. It is for their benefit that the policy of "frightfulness" has been applied in all its fury. From the German point of view they have all to gain by being subservient to Germany, and everything to lose by going counter to her wishes. Both Denmark and Holland know full well that active intervention on behalf of the Allies would mean that the present generation of Danes or Hollanders would never see their countries in the flourishing state that they occupy to-day, even given a sweeping victory by the former. This belief, even though to Englishmen it may appear somewhat exaggerated, colours all their views on the war, and overbalances the glorious possibilities of a future freed from the ever-present menace of Prussian militarism. The family question, with its ties of marriage and kindred, also plays very large part. Intermarriage between Germans and the northern nations has been very considerable since 1870, and that factor is being made the very most of by German politicians at the present time, especially in Holland and Denmark. If you will not fight for us, then at least maintain a strict neutrality, is in effect what Germany says to these nations, unofficially backing up her demand by veiled threats that gather all the more force from the knowledge of what has happened in those lands where the German army has passed.

It is a grave fault on the part of most Britishers when they profess to ignore all these multiple factors that militate against an effective coalition against the enemy of modern civilization. We, as a nation, are too

Poison Gas

LETTER FROM DR. J. J. INGOUVILLE

Mr. F. Ingouville, of Buenos Aires, has handed to "The Herald" the following letter from his brother, Dr. J. J. Ingouville, who is attached to No. 5 Infantry Base Depot at the front:—

"As you see, I have changed my headquarters and am now at the No. 5 Infantry Base Depot, quite close to where I was before. Our Staff consists of four permanent men: the colonel, the adjutant, the quartermaster and myself. I am very comfortably lodged, being the only medical man here. My servant is a soldier of the Devon Regt., temporarily disabled, having been wounded. I have a small hut to myself, the roof of which I can raise when the weather is too hot. Our mess is very variable, as sometimes we have as many as forty officers and other times as few as ten. The colonel, Colonel Richardson, is an Irishman, an awfully decent man with no side or nonsense about him. The rest of the mess varies very much and we get all kinds of officers passing through. I have met a lot of nice fellows amongst them and have made many friends.

"They are all so plucky that it makes one feel quite proud to be serving in the same army with them. Two young fellows, one a lieutenant and the other a second lieutenant, who came through here from the hospital, came up to me and entreated me to let them go to the front again as they were perfectly fit. I examined them and found them all right. One was called Thackeray and the other Cheetham. I heard since that poor Thackeray was killed and Cheetham was wounded through the lungs; I am glad, however, to say that he is doing well.

"One fellow said goodbye to me the other day saying, 'I hope I shall see you again, but I don't believe I proud to plead our cause, and far too many individuals follow the same policy. Granted that France, Italy, and England must in the long run decide the conflict, is that a good reason for not attempting to win over the affection and esteem of nations whose active good will might go far to shorten the war. Germany is unconquerable, despite the fact that she is ringed with powerful adversaries, they make no headway, whilst on the East she has scored decisive successes and driven her most numerous enemy back. The gallantry and unceasing attack of the Anglo-Franco-Belgian armies in Flanders has but served to give them a precarious foothold against the Teutonic Goliath. Why then should not the war be stopped, and the subsequent decision as to responsibilities and reconstruction be left to a conference of the nations? That is a brief synopsis of the average neutral's opinion here in Buenos Aires, and it is our duty to make it very plain that apart from material advantages, which might or might not be attained, our honour and that of our Allies would be tainted for ever did we accept this easy way out of an apparently impenetrable impasse. The whole question of right and wrong is at stake, and were the British nation to accept any terms at the present moment she would be dishonouring not only her glorious past, but would at one and the same time be putting an affront on the thousands of brave fellows who have fought and died for an idea. Here is no question of territorial aggrandisement, no matter of increased trade or affronted dignity. Like a thief in the night, abusing our hospitality, betraying all that men have hitherto held nearest and dearest in the social code, the German nation has advanced to the attack. Hence we prefer to perish rather than to yield, and it is for this that we count the German, anathema, a thing of loathing rather than of hate, wherever the British tongue is spoken.

shall." Poor fellow, he was blown to atoms by a shell exploding near him. I could fill many pages telling you these distressful stories. They say goodbye and they all go so cheerfully, poor devils! Some have already been to the front and know what it is, so you see that it is not all put on.

"I have had a good many men under my care who have been poisoned by gas. I have been trying to find a man who could describe to me what it was like. I mentioned the fact the other day at mess, and a young officer said to me: 'Do you think I would do, because I have had a slight dose of it?' He gave me the following description which I transcribe almost verbatim.

"On the afternoon of April 26th I was with my regiment in support to a French attack N.E. of — on the ground recently recovered by the Canadian Division. At about 3.30 p.m., the French attacking line were forced to fall back on our trenches owing to the gas. At this time I was aware of a sickly sweet smell and, this becoming stronger and more pungent, I felt faint and giddy and short of breath. I coughed a good deal and my eyes were watered. I lay for a considerable time unable to collect my wits, but remained more or less conscious of my surroundings. Two or three hours later (I believe), I walked back to the dressing station and thence went to a hospital in — in a limber. Here I lapsed into unconsciousness, and awoke to find myself in the hospital train. It was quite dark and I believe about 10.30 p.m. Effects: General feeling of weakness and recurring headaches and occasional fits of coughing. Wakefulness or else bad dreams at night. Heat and light give pain to the eyes."

"I learnt from other officers and men who were in the same action that the gas is propelled (from high pressure cylinders) from the parapet of the German trenches in a greenish-yellow or brownish-yellow cloud which sweeps along the ground before the wind, gradually diffusing in the air. When met at close quarters it suffocates and irritates the eyes, nose and throat of the victim. I have observed, on the field and at the dressing station, men who could breathe with the greatest difficulty, and the more they tried to inhale the worse became their condition. Others were lying unconscious, but had not so much difficulty in breathing.

Amongst the men passing through here, I met a Second Lieutenant Sewell, who used to be in Montevideo, in the Western Telegraph. I did not recognise him at first until he started talking about the "Glasgow," and then I remembered him quite well.

18th May.—I have had to stop my letter as I was called away urgently. My work here keeps me pretty well busy all day. I am called at 7.30 by my faithful "retainer." I have breakfast at 8.30, and start my day's duty. First, I have to attend the morning sick, from 80 to 200 (they vary). Some are allotted certain work, when well enough to do it. After that I go round the camp inspecting dining rooms, cook-houses, wash-houses, etc. Our camp is in a splendid sanitary condition, and I was complimented the other day by the Director of Medical Service, who came round on an inspection tour and found everything perfect. After that we have lunch, and then I generally have to inspect some draft of men going to the front, after convalescence, and find out if they are fit for active service. I have had some time to start early and inspect as many as a thousand of them. Of course I may be liable to be called up at any hour of the day or night to attend some poor chap, so I am kept busy all day practically.

We have had a new lot of officers, amongst them young Sewell, who this time is going straight to the firing line. He lost a brother quite early in the war. There is a young Argentine here of the name of Webster. He was born in Buenos Aires, but has been away many years, travelling about."

OFF TO THE WAR

Regina d'Italia Sails

ENTHUSIASM AT THE NORTH BASIN

(By Our Special Representative).

When the British volunteer goes away, with the amiable intention of knocking corners off the Huns, he rejoiceth and singeth "Tipperary" and other glad anthems, in the joy of his heart. When our French or Italian friends and Allies depart for scenes of strife, the lid is taken off and they enthuse some. By the kindness of the Anglo-Argentine Coal Company, who had placed one of their tugs at the disposal of the Press, it was possible to get a view of the departure of the Regina d'Italia yesterday, from the water level whence things always look more imposing. The party, which was very select, left the steps at the east end of Dock IV. at 3 p.m. The mast, copiously provided with halliards, displayed a magnificent collection of flags of large size, the Italian flying from the truck, the French, British and Belgian accompanying it. The temporary acquisition of a very large Russian flag made the display complete. On reaching the North Darsena, it was evident that the Italian transport was about to leave, as her green banded buff funnels emitted great quantities of smoke, and the tugs in charge were sidling and bridling on the hawsers; all blowing off steam lustily. There was no whistling however, as the susceptible Minister of Hunmark had complained on a former occasion, and his tender feelings had to be considered. Both the Regina d'Italia and her shore background, presented an extraordinary appearance. The whole dock side was lined with crowds of spectators, they crowded on the sides and on the roofs of the Railway waggons, and the cranes along the quay were black with them. From all came the thin distant sound of cheering. On the steamer the crowds were equally dense. Where it is proposed to stow another 400 men, it is difficult to say, for she looked as if her complement were nearer 3000 than 1500. Black dots crowded every deck, gangway, and ladder. The boats were covered, the davits supported their quota, the shrouds of both masts sustained numerous enthusiastic reservists, the ventilators were loaded, the davits almost invisible and clumps and clusters of humanity hung everywhere. It really appeared as if a gigantic swarm of bees had settled upon the vessel, so dense were the clusters at every point of vantage. Some enthusiasts had even got into the cross trees, and one at the very main truck, hung on calmly brandishing a French flag with his unoccupied hand. As the tugs worked the ship out into the basin, the cheering became tremendous. Those who had exhausted their vocal powers fell back on waving. The sides of the ship simply exuded flags, they seemed to start from every rivet, they were mostly Italian and French, and made a brave show of colour. As the tug ran under the big ship's counter, the group of Allied flags became the object of the warmest demonstrations of friendship and joy. To the Muansa, lying in the next dock, the spectacle was obviously unpleasant. All the shipping round gave friendly greeting, and good wishes for a safe and speedy voyage by their flag code but, for the reason already alleged, the fog horns were silent. As the steamer gathered speed and went out between the further horns of the harbour works, several of the officers came to the bulwarks and courteously saluted the Allied flags, a compliment acknowledged by much hat waving from the small craft. It may be said that many employes of the Anglo-Argentine Coal Company, of whom over 80 have already left, were

BRITAIN'S WAR LOAN

Open to the Masses

LOCAL SUBSCRIPTION ARRANGEMENTS

The new British War Loan is the first great democratic issue in the history of the nation. The aim of the Government is to obtain subscriptions from Britons at home and abroad, rich and poor.

In order to give British subjects and others in Buenos Aires an opportunity of subscribing to the new loan which bears interest at the rate of 4½ per cent, the four British Banks in the capital, and their Branches, are prepared to receive applications for subscriptions to the Loan, and to telegraph the amount of such subscriptions to London at a small cost. The following are the particulars:—

The loan is issued at par. Payable 5 per cent on application; 10 per cent on July 10, 1915; 15 per cent on August 3, 1915; 15 per cent on August 17, 1915; 10 per cent on September 14, 1915; 10 per cent on September 28, 1915; 10 per cent on October 12, 1915; 10 per cent on October 26, 1915; Or in full on July 20, 1915, or after, under discount at the rate of 4½ per cent per annum.

A full half year's dividend will be paid on December 1, 1915. The subscription list closes on or before July 10, 1915.

"CUCULLUS NON FACIL MONASHUM"

BOGUS PRIEST ARRESTED FOR BEGGING.

To attire oneself in the garb of a priest when not holding sacerdotal orders is a grievous wrong and most offensive but when the offender is in addition a dog of a Turk, the offence is aggravated. Mr. Zacarias Dimitri, notwithstanding his Slavonic name is alleged to be a Turk and has been sequestered by the police for stopping people in Charcas, Maipu, Paraguay and Esmerajda, soliciting alms for various religious movements in which, he alleged that he was interested. Several of the faithful whom he accosted, considered that he was not convincing either in manner or make up and conveyed that opinion to the Comisario. On being arrested the Unreverend Dimitri could produce no proof of being in Holy orders or authority to collect money. He stated that his papers are at Paraguay 339 where, the police are looking for them without much expectation of success.

NATIONAL MILITARY CABINET

OFFER BY NEW ZEALAND'S PREMIER.

London, June 29.

A cable message from Wellington, N.Z., says that the Premier of New Zealand has announced that he is prepared to form a national military Ministry.

on board. By four o'clock the Regina d'Italia was outside in the muddy lap of the great river, heading Italy wards "and on the mere the cheering died away." The rest of the proceedings are private history, and if there were the classic copa (or copas) de champagne con "sanwitches" in the saloon, it is nobody's business but those who were there. A run down to the South Basin and back to enable the vigilant and argus eyed Press to keep an eye on the sneaky tricks of any German ships, and a landing at the stone stairs at 5 p.m., terminated a very pleasant afternoon.

ANONYMOUS PAPERS

LOMAS DEBATING SOCIETY MEETING.

It was unfortunate that there was not a larger gathering last night at Lomas, to hear and debate upon the interesting variety of papers which were down in the agenda for presentation. Six papers in all were read by members, but the authors of these remained anonymous.

The Rev. Maynard Wolcott occupied the chair. Amongst the selected subjects were the following: One on "Dare we tell the truth," which was read by Mrs. Herald; "The Protestant Churches and the War," read by Mr. J. Triggs; "On Cooking—Mothers and Mothers-in-Law," read by Mr. C. H. Smythe; "The Immorality of Modern Advertising"; Mr. Howard, "Inheritance," Mr. S. Jones, and "Some Notes on Darwin's Visit to the Argentine," Mr. Herald.

The first paper was a humorous one as can be judged from the fact that it opened with the information that a mother, whom the writer knew, had declared her baby to be the most beautiful and perfect child in creation, whereas the writer was the most beautiful child in creation. The question of "Dare we tell the truth" was argued in the affirmative, and theoretically proved sound. Messrs. Herald, Triggs and Howard assisted the argument.

The paper read by Mr. Triggs was one of interest, especially so, and intended to be so at the present crisis in European affairs. The trend of the paper can be summarised in the words, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall inherit the Kingdom of Heaven." The subject was beyond ordinary discussion, but the reader was supplemented by remarks from Mr. and Mrs. Herald, and Mr. Wolcott.

Another humorous or rather semi-humorous paper was that on "Cooking—Mothers and Mothers-in-Law," such was the title, and the greatest care and attention must be paid to the interval between cooking, etc. The reader dealt with the query were mothers-in-law or grand-mothers more experienced cooks than the modern wife. It appears almost superfluous to state that the general argument tended towards the negative. Mr. C. H. Smythe, Mr. Taylor and Mr. Herald debated the point.

It was over the "Immorality of Modern Advertising" that Mr. Howard read that perhaps the most debate took place. Although in agreement with the appointment of a controller to suppress untruthful advertisement, there was some difference of opinion as to the advertising itself, and whether or not the majority of press advertisements ought not to be censured by the editor, but as was pointed out, the editor of a paper was a man of intellect and extreme ability, and "ads." were not therefore (sic) in his province.

The paper was a good one, but the debaters did not seem to appreciate the essential argument and inclined themselves to side issues. However, the whole matter was one of considerable interest.

"Inheritance," the title of the paper read by Mr. S. Jones, appeared to be founded upon a false basis. The writer interpreted the definition of inheritance as being, briefly, "something for nothing," or a question of the "merit of faith." Its tendency was scientific, but it did not cover the necessary ground to prove its premises.

The definition of inheritance in itself was faulty as might have been shown by the opening words of a previous reading, namely, the one concerning the inheritance of peacemakers. The last paper on Darwin's visit to the Argentine, contained points of sufficient interest to call forth a proposal that the reader should, at a later date, lecture upon the subject.

South America and the Argentine in particular were described as being BOMB OR "BROMA"?

Alarming Discovery

AT THE PALACE OF JUSTICE

Yesterday about 5 p.m. there was great excitement, and not of a pleasurable kind, at the Palace of Justice. A rumour flew round the building that a dynamite bomb of prodigious explosive power, had been discovered in the premises. The first crude and highly coloured editions of the story gave scope for fancy and suggested that the devilish engine had exploded with fearful effect. This was only a little bit of local colour and the facts, as far as they can be ascertained or believed, are said to be that two boys going up the staircase by the Consulting Room of Dr. Ortiz de Rozas, Juez de Instrucción, on the Plaza Lavalle side, observed on the third step a cylindrical package, to which they called attention. José Gonzalez a police orderly informed the guardians of the Palace, one of whom received the suspicious object, assuring himself that he held in his hands nothing less than an explosive bomb. The report of the discovery attracted a large concourse from all over the building but, a certain modesty was manifested as to actually handling the article. The latter is about 12 cms. long and 7 cms. thick. It is a metal cylinder, covered with papers and having wires attached. It weighs about 800 grammes. In view of its dubious aspect, it has been sent to the Arsenal where bombs and things are supposed to be understood and, perhaps appreciated. It is there to be rendered innocuous opened and analysed. It is still uncertain whether this represents an actual find of a deadly bomb or merely a very bad and silly joke but the employees of the building do not regard the affair as funny and don't want to find any more bombs at present. For the next few days, vigilant eyes will sweep every dark corner and obscure nook of the great building and all ears will be listening for the mechanical tick, tick or the gentle sizzling of a burning fuse.

THE FRATERNAL AMERICAS

U.S. BUSINESS MEN'S TRIP TO THE SOUTH.

Washington, June 28.

The Secretary to the Treasury, Mr. McAdoo, announces that the following names have been added to the committee which is to make the necessary arrangements for the visit of American business men and financiers to Latin America:

Senator Duncan Fletcher of Florida, Chairman of the Southern Commercial Congress; B. Y. Cooper, North Carolina; G. A. Davidson, California, President of the California Exhibition in honour of the opening of the Panama Canal; S. M. Hastings, Chicago, Chairman of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association; A. L. Mills, Portland; Charles Moore, President of Exhibition at Panama; and Walter Parker, Manager of the New Orleans Chamber of Commerce.

the nursery of Darwin's learning and discoveries.

All the readings during the evening were of interest, and those members who were not able to be present missed an opportunity of gaining information.

Mr. Taylor, the Secretary, remarked that persons should not hide their light under a bushel, and that it was apparent that such had occurred in the past, judging by the meeting. The meeting was then adjourned.

LAND OF LILLIPUT

Conducted by Egeria

My dear Lilliputians:

I am sure most of you know a little about our friend the bee, and maybe some of you know a great deal. Well, I am going to tell you something about it from an article entitled "Romance of the Bee" written by James Collier, so those of you who know little can learn something, and even those of you who know a lot may refresh your memories about the honey maker.

Maurice Maeterlinck, who has told the inhabitants of Lilliput so many things about Nature, first learnt to love the bees, he says, in a village of Dutch Flanders, where an ancient sage had built himself a refuge from the world, with his garden as his chief wealth, and his apiary as the chief attraction of that. Of course you know that apiary is the name of the bee-house! There the Belgian learnt the lesson of strenuous and unselfish toil, and enjoyed delightful days and an happiness not felt elsewhere. The ancient Greeks were interested in bees and their work; but it is said that we owe much knowledge about them to a man, blind from his youth, a native of Genoa called Francis Huber, who gave his whole life to the science, and Maeterlinck says that none of his statements about the bees have been proved to be wrong. The modern hive we are told by the writer of this article was "made in Germany," and the movable frame, we know so well now, was made there too. And now comes the story:

As Winter is nearing its end, the queen-bee begins to lay and the workers leave the hive to gather their stores from the willows, the gorse, the violets and anemones. Then Spring arrives, and the eggs laid by the queen-bee start into life in thousands of bees, and the workers are kept busy bringing in pollen and nectar on which they must live. Then comes the departure for which they have long made preparations not because they want food, but when there is plenty and 60,000, out of a community of 90,000 bees will fly away from their old home to begin a new life, the queen-bee leading. Extensive preparations indeed are made; each bee will load itself with five or six days' honey, and from it they will each distil the wax of their future combs. They also carry off a due store of resin (called propolis) to close any cracks in the new hives and to strengthen and varnish. They will never return to the old home and will die at the entrance rather than accept charity. Noon is the hour of swarming, and a few workers being left to guard the hive and feed the thousands of eggs, the ten thousand larvae, the twice 10,000 nymphs and the 7 or 8 princesses. (these do not join the swarm, but sacrifice themselves to the community) the signal for departure is given and there issues a black throng which spreads into space, and an everlasting whirr of wings weaves a gossamer web of sight and sound, which floats in the air and waves to and fro, hesitating and expectant. At last the four corners of the magic mantle come together, obeying an unseen gesture or a command of the bee queen heard only by them. The queen leads the way, and almost simultaneously with her the swarm alights on willow, pear, or lime tree, and hangs there in groups till the scouts return with tidings of a quiet resting place. And all is still once more. The scouts return each with his report, and the whole swarm deliberates sometimes taking a night over the matter. Then the choice is made and the entire swarm makes a bee-hive to the distant goal over river and village, hedges and cornfields till it is lost to human eye. If the bees find a hive ready for them, they take possession and begin to find their bearings. They then make their city, and if wax be provided with the hive the bees are saved the time and trouble of making it. But if not the bees convert the nectar into wax by some wonderful process unknown to us all. At earliest dawn the bee-scouts fly off and come back to the swarm with the news that the limes are blossoming on the banks of the canal, or the grass by the roadside is white with clover; and then forth go the elder bees to the number of 5,000 to attack the limes; while some 3,000 youngsters attack the clover. For there is a strict division of labour among the bees—for the day. The robbers of the lime blossoms will not rob the mignonette of its pollen, nor will the bee mix the yellow pollen of the lilies with that of the sage or lotus. But later in the seasons they will desert the flowers for cultivated plants. They keep themselves well informed, it is said, of the state of the flower market and plant within a radius of four or five miles, and they distribute themselves over the flower fields in proportion to the numbers of these and their melliferous value. There is a sculptor or carver bee which produces no wax, and whose work it is to cut and carve the wax into shape. They build four kind of cells—the royal, the large (where provisions are stored and males reared), the small (for workers' cradles and ordinary storerooms), and transitional, of irregular shape. Each cell is a hexagonal tube (that means six-sided tube) on a pyramidal base—that is you know with the bottom like that of a pyramid—and two layers of tubes form the comb. As soon as the first row of cells is ready, the queen, who has been waiting, takes possession, attended by a royal escort, always facing her and walking backwards, like people at human courts. When she comes to the proper spot, she lays her first blue egg; she then passes to the next and the next and repeats the act. Nor does she ever cease, from early spring to the first frosts of autumn. She lays eggs while she is being fed, and while she sleeps, for that is her whole business in life. Now don't you think this is all wonderful?

Here is your usual story.

With love from

EGERIA.

A DREAMLAND TRIP

(BY MARGUERITE.)

On Philip Green's ninth birthday his mother let him give a party. Philip invited fourteen of his school friends to tea. It was a cool night in spring, and the windows in the dining room were shut to keep all the fresh air outside. There was a lovely tea; there were jellies and cakes, and a big snow-capped cake with "Philip" in pink icing across the centre. After tea they danced and sang and played games till nine o'clock, then Philip handed round lollies and chocolates and more cake, and the guests went home.

Philip had not been in bed very long before a small voice whispered, "Come with me." Philip was always ready to go anywhere, so he started at once. The Dream Fairy led him along narrow tracks round precipices, over boulders and logs and steep hills, then brought him to a little town in a pretty valley. Here there were quaint little houses with gardens round them. In the gardens were beautiful trees and flowers that Philip had never seen before. A river ran through the town, and on one side was a lovely blue lake surrounded with trees.

As Philip and the Dream Fairy drew near, numbers of quaint little boys came out of the houses and ran towards a large building beside the river.

"Are they going to have a party?" asked Philip.

"We shall soon see," answered the Dream Fairy. Philip and the Fairy joined the boys at the door, and as no one asked who they were or what they wanted, they entered. The door opened into a large airy room. In the middle was a big tub of water, and on a shelf along one side were towels, cakes of soap and sponges.

"It's not a party," said Philip, in a disappointed tone.

"It's better than a party," said one of the little boys. "It's washing day," and he skipped and jumped about in high glee.

"I don't think washing is much fun," said Philip. "I had to wash my coat once because I carried some quail eggs in it, and some of them broke."

"You'll see," said the boy, and he danced again.

Some of the boys were not taking off their clothes.

"What are they going to put on while their clothes are being washed and dried?" asked Philip.

"You'll see," said the boy again. Philip was astonished to see that instead of putting their clothes in the water, the boys got in themselves.

As soon as the first group of boys were out and capering about the room wiping themselves, another group got in.

"Come on," said one of the boys to Philip. "We must go in with the next batch."

"But aren't you going to change the water?" said Philip. "It must be very dirty by now."

"Oh, no, it isn't," said the boy. "We are clean boys; we have a washing day once a week."

Now, although Philip did not want to get into the water, and nobody forced him to, he undressed and jumped in with the boys. The water didn't feel pleasant at all; it was dirty, and Philip felt very uncomfortable. "I don't like this," he said, but still he went on washing himself, getting dirtier as he washed.

When all the boys had finished dressing an old man came in and told them it was time to be away and in bed. He was a very, very old man, with white hair and a long white beard. Philip thought he looked like a picture of Father Time.

Philip did not go out with the boys, and as the old man did not tell him to go away, he stayed.

"Do you live here, sir?" asked Philip.

"Not exactly," said the old man. "I never stay long in one place."

"Don't you think the people here are very dirty?" said Philip.

"Why?" asked the old man.

"The boys all wash in the same water," said Philip. "There is no need to do it either, for there is plenty of good, clean water in the river, just outside. Don't you think it is a very dirty habit, sir?"

"It is," said the old man. "But I know of another dirty habit in the land of the 'know-alls,' the land from which you come, and I know not which is the dirtier."

"But we are clean people, sir," said Philip. "We always wash in clean, fresh water."

"Last night," said the old man, "you had a party. Although you did not know it, I was the one who packed you all off to bed. When I came in, I tasted the air, and it wasn't nice at all. There was about enough air in that room for three people, just as there is about enough water in that tub for four. Now, I wonder which is worse, breathing the air that other people have breathed over and over, or washing in water in which other people have washed."

Philip blushed. "I don't know," he said.

"I don't know, either," said the old man. "It is not as if air was scarce. Last night there was plenty of good, clean air just outside, but you would not let it in. I often enter a church," continued the old man, "to whisper to the minister to end his sermon and let the people go home to dinner or to bed, and I find the air very dirty. Sometimes there is not a single window open."

"But there are ventilators," said Philip.

"Ventilators do let a little air in

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

Early this year Miss May Morris, daughter of William Morris, brought out the collected works of her father in twenty-four volumes, including some drafts and late poems hitherto unknown.

Miss Viola Meynell, daughter of Mrs. Alice Meynell, and one of the sister children immortalised in Francis Thompson's poetry, has lately brought out "Colombine," a novel of modern English life, showing a rare charm and grasp of character.

The British Government has lately taken over three or four farms, where three hundred women are to be trained in agriculture, in addition to Radlett, the women's farm worked by the Queen's Fund.

Lady Huggins, the famous woman astronomer, who is honoured wherever science is known, died last autumn in England. She was born in Dublin, and married Sir William Huggins in 1875.

It has been common for Royal ladies to hold commissions in the Army, and Queen Victoria, Queen Alexandra and Queen Mary were all decorated with military rank. Not so popular is the Navy, yet one Royal widow, Queen Olga of Greece, holds a commission as Admiral in the Russian Navy.

A curious custom prevails in the African tribe named the Ibibio. When girls are approaching womanhood they are secluded in a special room to fatten up to the standard of tribal beauty. They are indulged in every way, fed bountifully and allowed to do no work. According to the wealth of the parents, the time varies from a few weeks to two years. The girls emerge hugely fat, and covered with finery, and make their debut before the admiring village.

One of America's great benefactors is Mrs. Shepard, once Helen Gould. Her husband, whom she married a year or two ago, when she was already in early middle age, is as zealous a philanthropist as herself. She spends little of her million a year on herself, but has brought giving to something like an organised science and is never happier than when entertaining parties of city workgirls. She works hard every day at her desk, and keeps a dozen secretaries for her correspondence.

On at least one occasion Belgian women actually took up arms and repelled a German force. At Herstal, when all the men had left to join the army, the town was attacked, and the women swore that the National Arms Factory should not fall into German hands. Armed with revolvers and other weapons, they are reported to have repulsed several charges of Uhlans, and when all their ammunition was exhausted, barricaded themselves in various houses and poured boiling water on the Germans in the streets, 2000 of whom were disabled by wounds and scalds.

and let a little out, but they can't keep the air clean enough. If, while the boys were washing, there had been a tiny stream of water running into the tub, and a tiny stream running out, the water would have been a little cleaner, but it would not have made very much difference. But if there had been a large stream running in and a large stream running out, the water would have been kept clean. It is the same with air.

"When I enter picture galleries, theatre, and concert halls to tell the actors and singers to finish and let the people go home to bed, I feel as uncomfortable as you did when you had your bath just now, and I wonder whether the 'know-alls' know very much after all."

Sports and Pastimes

PALERMO

SUNDAY'S MEETING.

If the whole of this community confined itself to one point, one interest and to one animal and that animal, Occurrence, who would blame or be bold enough to say that we had no reason?

Strictly speaking and from all other points of view, except that of the betting man, and by him we mean the man who looks upon a horse with no more interest other than a machine to empty or fill his pockets, as the case may be (and also, there are sadly too many of such individuals at Palermo) we should be justified in confining ourselves to the most interesting point in a day's racing.

The running of this phenomenal daughter of Val d'Or is truly interesting, and up to this present moment she has proved herself to be not only the horse of the season, but the horse of a century and of the world. That is, so far as she has gone, and we have not the smallest fear but that she will go further, much further. But there are reasons why we should not confine ourselves to this filly, and why we should put a curb on our justifiable enthusiasm.

Looking at Sunday's classic at Palermo and examining it in detail we find that apart from Occurrence's running, the race was an extremely entertaining one.

As the gate flew up and released the horses on their mile run, Canora took a comfortable two lengths lead from Rey de Leon, with Occurrence lying fourth, and Sunday last. They bunched up rounding Belgrano bend, and Rey de Leon took the lead on entering the straight. Then the race began for all, but Occurrence, who was then lying fifth. Canora shot to the front and Picacero began racing with Rey de Leon. Out came the whips. The pace was very fast. Not the slightest effort did Torterolo make (it almost looked as though he was leaving things too late) until after reaching the divisional rail between the popular and paddock stands!! There he pulled his mount from the rails to mid course. It seemed as though Torterolo had spoken aloud to the filly "Come on Occurrence, let's shew these crocks the way!" and with one movement of the rider's hands, the filly shot out, leaving everything standing, to win her race by a length and a half from Canora and Picacero, who almost dead heated for second place. Again the time was phenomenal, 1.36 2/5, Argentina's record for two year olds. If one could realise that it was in a distance of considerably less than a furlong from the post that Occurrence made her effort, and she was a good length or more behind Canora, when she did so one gains some idea of what she is, when she can pick up practically three lengths in this distance. We incline to this belief; that had Torterolo wished to get through earlier and "ride" the filly, he could again have won by several lengths and possibly broken another world's record. In other words, we believe Occurrence had this much in hand.

Canora ran a fine race, but Picacero caused us more pleasure, because we have never failed to proclaim that this son of Bridge of Cany would prove one of the best colts running at Palermo, and he is doing so.

What a day it was for the talent! Favourite after favourite rolled home and where they failed (except in the first event), the actual winner was substantially supported.

There was little to interest in the first race. The failure of the fairly well fancied Duquesita and the fact that the favourite Sotileza, could do no more than get fourth place, were, perhaps, the most remarkable points.

Fariña too, did not run as she could have done.

In the Premio Bolin, Idolatria at last scored and with absurd ease from Sweet Hope and Penitenta. Nobody saw Cosquilla, who, on past running, should have been prominent.

Navarro, as a winning rider of two year olds, is attracting no little attention.

In the first three months of the year he met with little success. But since the beginning of April there is something to justify this. Exclusive of classic races; in April he rode eight two year olds, registering 2 wins and a second. In May, he was out ten times with five wins, three seconds and a third, and this month to date, he has four wins and a third to his credit out of 12 rides. Thus in his 30 rides on non-classic two year olds he has eleven firsts, and it is interesting to note that seven of these were on fillies.

The start of this race to which we are referring was shocking. The public did not relish it at all. In fact during the whole afternoon there was an uncomfortable feeling of restlessness, impatience or dissatisfaction with the starting, and we are more confirmed than ever that the new method is a most unsatisfactory one with two year olds and not always successful with old stagers.

The third race went to the debutant colt Full Hand, who won by two and a half lengths from another new colt, Avanti.

The interest lay in the ease with which Full Hand won and the failure of Strap and Dondiego. The latter's performance did not surprise us, because we believe him to be one of those animals who will be at his best in months to come over longer distances, but Strap?—we are surprised at his complete failure. Let us forget him.

The Premio Germano was won by the twins, or rather by Shark, Englishman up. Neleo ran very poorly in comparison with his performance against the winner on June 6. This was the second winning favourite, and for the talent, from now onwards, all went well.

The classic was run as described, but there was one other minor point which made this event still more prominent. The favourite Occurrence paid $2.25 for a win and $2.40 for a place. So that the man who said he was going to buy 200 places on her was not such a mug as his friends thought him.

The victory of Radiant in the sixth race was in the nature of a gift, and it is extremely doubtful if he had not been "slipped" at the start, with a good and strong lead, whether he would have won. Cheap ran as he ought to have done, and it only shows that we were accurate enough in disregarding his previous Sunday's performance.

There is something we have to say to young T. N. Fernandez and if we were not so mild tongued we should commence it in the good old fashioned way of "What the devil, Sir!" and he would deserve all he got. The reason is this: Tata Dios cracked up (what happened we do not know, strained, winded, or something like it), and he could hardly gallop at all at the finish, being 20 or more lengths behind. Yet his jockey was riding like a madman and flogging the beast, hours after all the others had finished. A glance at the official photograph of the finish will shew in what position Tata Dios was.

Without question Fernandez should have pulled him up and walked him in, but even if not this, to flog him along like he did was disgraceful, and is deserving of much censure.

Cuaro galloped in a winner in the Premio Red Jacket. The fifth public fancy to get home. Red Jacket was sadly out of it. The race was not of particular interest and calls for no comment.

The last race of the day was from one point of view a record for the reason that Insania, by winning half a neck from Dijital, registered her fifth successive victory. Dijital ran a grand race, and we must say she has never been as good as she is to-day. San Simon's reappearance interested, but he was palpably not up to the mark. He looks better for his rest.

Royal Drop was a disgrace, at least so the public thought. He broke the spell of the run of favourites, but did little harm, because Insania, the winner, was almost equally fancied.

It is a long, long time since favourites rolled home like they did at Palermo on Sunday.

TUESDAY'S MEETING

The law of averages—which has been described as and even sometimes called "the infallible law," has, during the past one or two meetings at Palermo, been proving itself. It seemed as though there was, at one time, a run in which the favourites went down in much greater proportion than they won. Now we are having an exact reversal of this, and again yesterday favourites were generally in evidence, but for all that, it was not an enjoyable nor a particularly interesting meeting.

There was only one race that provided a decent finish, and that was when Swallow just collared Deseada on the post, apart from this the whole meeting left one "cold."

The classic was a gift for Portena, and considering things generally, the price she paid out ($4.40) was a good one. It was only the fact that Palanta has been running well, strongly, and in improved form, that allowed this to happen.

It was an event entirely devoid of interest, and would even have attracted less attention than it did, if Portena, when first out over the 1400 metres, had not been beaten by Canora. We said at the time that this should never have occurred, and it was only due to bad jockeyship and judgment.

We should no doubt feel more interest in this daughter of Cyllene and be talking about her, coupling her name with that of Decidida, were it not for the fact that we have so freshly—too freshly—in our minds the name of Occurrence.

Portena is a very good filly, and this must not be lost sight of.

The meeting started off in a red-hot favourite in La Loca, cantering home a winner in front of Fisgona, and the once utterly despised Mirona. Povera Mia was never in the hunt, and she certainly ought to have been there or thereabouts. Monedita made the running from the favourite, but crumpled up on entering the straight. La Loca came along with a goodly turn of speed, and the race was over.

There are an immensity of racing terms in the vocabulary of the "turffite," words which are used and employed in hardly any other walk of life, but we doubt even if the most ingenious member of the fraternity could find an expression suitable for the running of Brisca in the fillies' race. Even the "vilest language in the world"—we refer to German—is unsuitable. Nobody could say that Brisca could not have put up a very different show. It would be ridiculous, she has already done so. To be even beaten by such poor stuff as Dentelle, whom she herself and many others have trounced out of sight is the kind of running to which any adjective, however bad, can be attached.

As we are in a particularly generous mood, let us say that it only proves what we have always contended, and that is that Brisca's jockey is about the rottenest rider of two-year-olds at Palermo. And after this burst of generosity we will leave the race, remarking that the winner is worth watching, and the race in which she ran third to Gosse and Festuca shows that this was no fluke, in fact, it was a better performance than her win to-day. Mari-nera ran second, and will win in due course.

The Premio Locandiera went to Gontran at the expense of Americano. He won with ridiculous ease, and there was apparently sound reason for scratching Estribor, Eneas, Mahoma and company. Gontran was terrifically backed, and the talent had to be content with 70 cents for a win.

Wotan was the next favourite to crop up, and he paid a quite reasonable dividend, considering his winning form. He fairly "wiped the floor" with such strong runners as Sanchez, Bolin and others. It only shows that Wotan had plenty up his sleeve, so to speak, when he won a short head from Espadanal, receiving 4 kilos, and from Arvejo by the same distance. It was a surprise to see Espadanal clean out of the race, considering the event mentioned above. If he can give 4 kilos and be beaten by only half a neck, one might reasonably expect him to be more prominent in equal weights, and yet where was he?

Some of these Palermo results really are the limit! After the classic event we had the one good finish of the day. Nondina was backed to the clouds, and all we can say is that it served the public right. On past running, on weights, looks and all such things, whatever justification had they in purchasing a single ticket?

Swallow, the second favourite, just won the event from Deseada. Tarija made the running, and Solicitud brought up the rear. When the race proper commenced, Swallow came along with a strong challenge to Deseada, who had run Tarija to ground and taken a good lead, and nicely weighted, Swallow just did the trick.

Reina del Sud ran a bad last, but it was lack of condition and not weight that was the cause of this performance.

The Premio Lechuza saw another weakly ridden race on Englander's part. Facundo III. has already proved he can gallop better than he did yesterday. Red Bonnet was made favourite at the expense of Penitelo, and it is interesting to note that although the latter has done nothing this season, it was quite evident someone knew he was going to do it yesterday. In this knowledge may be many explanations. Rotterdam evidently did not want to win, for he made the pace a cracker from the start, and it is unusual for the top weighted animal in a race to win after doing this. However, he ran third, so perhaps all but his backers were satisfied. Young T. N. Fernandez walked away with the race, when the time came, and Red Bonnet, the favourite, had to be content with second place.

From the public point of view the last event was a hopeless failure, and it looked as though the money they had pouched with so many favourites coming home, all went astray. Lord Ragland and Molitor took all the money, and this gave Massenet the chance of paying $11.45 for his win. Acosta rode a thoroughly good race, and the son of Polar Star just being in the pink of condition, he had no difficulty whatever in winning as he pleased.

Frenetico made the running and finished last. Caucaso, the light-weighted, ran last from the start and finished last but one. So that it was a general topsy-turvy kind of race. One would have thought that the light weights would have made use of their handicaps, at least this is usual if one wishes to win, but if one doesn't, what then?

This ended the holiday meeting, and a remarkably poor one it was, without entertainment or excitement, but it served one useful purpose, and that was that it assisted the "book" very considerably for a future occasion.

ROSARIO

SUNDAY'S MEETING.

The following results of Sunday's racing at Rosario show that some good sport was seen.

There was apparently only one cause for complaint throughout the meeting, and that was in connection with the start of the fifth race. Gigantea was left standing at the post.

Favourites were even more prominent than at Palermo, and the talent had an excellent day.

LA PLATA

SUNDAY'S MEETING.

The feature of Sunday's racing at La Plata was the way in which Guerra put it across the field, and notched up a win valued at $71 per ticket. Incidentally and with our accustomed modesty we may point out that Guerra was "tipped" in the "Herald."

A glance at the results will shew that the public had a thoroughly good and enjoyable day's racing.

Premio FALSO, 1300 metres.

1. Tremus 56 (Calistro) $11.90 and $4.70; 2. Solesky 44, $4.50; 3. Cárcano 57 $8.10. Won by 1 1/2 lengths; 2 1/2 lengths. Time 1.31.

ZAVALLA CUP.

On Saturday and Sunday play was proceeded with in the competition for the Zavalla Cup.

The results of which were that Chiswell and Nicholls are left in the final, which will take place over 36 holes on Sunday next.

Sunday's results.—Chiswell beat Bryans, 2 up and 1 to play. Nicholls beat Lacey by 5 and 4.

An amusing story of Sir George Reid, the High Commissioner for Australia, was told by Lord Rotherham at the recent luncheon of the Associated Chambers of Commerce. Sir George, he said, had returned to Australia, after having been honoured with the K.C.M.G., and at one of the gatherings he attended he was asked the meaning of the title. On the spur of the moment he replied, "Oh, that means 'Keep Calling Me George.'"

LAWN TENNIS

ARGENTINE LAWN TENNIS CLUB.

Continued on Saturday and Sunday, play in the Championship Lawn Tennis Meeting of the Argentine Club progressed very considerably, and the perfect weather conditions brought a fair amount of spectators to watch the play. Some excellent matches were played on Sunday, as the following scores and results will show:—

Gentlemen's Singles Championship.—D. de Urquiza beat V. O'Farrell, 6—0, 6—1, 6—0. F. Elortondo beat Y. Castro, 6—0, 6—1, 6—0. A. Y. Villegas beat F. Elortondo 6—3, 6—1, 6—3.

Court 1.—J. Castro and E. Saubidet v. J. Lanusse and E. Sansot.

Court 2.—J. Kavanagh and S. O'Farrell v. R. Sansot and R. Gimenez or E. Pereda and J. Del Piano.

Court 3.—F. Elortondo v. A. Duranona.

On court No. 1 the final of the Gentlemen's Singles between J. Villegas and Diogenes de Urquiza.

Court No. 2.—Gladys Jacobs and Federico Elortondo v. Carmen Sastre Juan Ramon Molina (Championship).

At 2.30 p.m. Court No. 1.—Doubles championship between Alfredo J. Villegas and Diogenes de Urquiza v. Arnoldo L. Jacobs and Federico Elortondo.

F.C.C.A. LAWN TENNIS CLUB v. VILLA BALLESTER.

The Central Argentine team visited Villa Ballester on Sunday afternoon and returned home, after a most enjoyable afternoon's tennis, victorious.

The scores resulted in a win for F.C.C.A. by 8 matches to 1. Miss O'Brien supplied the refreshments, which were thoroughly enjoyed by the players. Results:—

Central Argentine Railway A.C. Russell and Parry beat:

Petersen and O'Brien, 6—1, 6—0. Lewis and Annand, 6—5, 6—5.

Babbington and Simpson beat:

Petersen and O'Brien, 6—0, 6—0. Lewis and Annand, 6—3, 6—5.

Lang and Fierro, 6—2, 4—6, 6—1. Colville-Jones and White beat:

Petersen and O'Brien, 6—0, 6—2. Lewis and Annand, 6—5, 5—6, 6—2.

Lang and Fierro, 6—3, 6—5. Villa Ballester L.T. Club.

Lang and Fierro beat Russell and Parry, 2—6, 6—4, 6—4.

MARMOL v. LOMAS.

Played on the courts at Lomas on Sunday afternoon, the home team had little difficulty in beating the Marmol team. The games were well enjoyed.

The results were as follows:—

Lomas A.C.

Lawrie and Cotman beat: Wallace and Walker, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5; Kelly and Pentreath, 6—3, 6—3; French and Mackenzie, 6—1, 6—2; Roberts and Chapman, 6—1, 6—1.

Rudd and Hayward beat: French and Mackenzie, 6—4, 6—1; Roberts and Chapman, 6—0, 6—1; Wallace and Walker, a draw.

Bridger and Hine beat: Wallace

FOOTBALL

RUGBY

BELGRANO v. LOMAS.

An excellent game of Rugby football was played at Belgrano on Sunday afternoon, which resulted in a win for the home team by 4 tries, 12 points, to a dropped goal, 4 points. The following took part:—

Belgrano.—G. Bush; Fenwick, Charlton, Sinclair, N. Bush; Sampson, Piper; D. H. Scott, Whittington, Nisbet, Van Deurs, Troncosco, Bourne, Darch, and Pellamain.

Lomas.—E. J. Adamson; A. T. Morris, Churchouse, W. Cribbes, G. H. Whyte; R. S. Whyte, C. A. Auld; T. R. Bayme, A. J. Hunter, W. K. Griffiths, J. M. Gaul, J. Plaquer, R. Clydesdale, W. Tansley and G. Cribbes.

The game favoured neither side throughout the whole of the first half. Cribbes, with one of his neat drop kicks, secured the first points and the only ones for Lomas. Generally speaking Belgrano did most of the pressing, but it was not until nearly up to the interval that Whittington got over. The goal kick was charged down. An opposing forward just reaching the leather before it sailed between the posts.

Fenwick was the next scorer for the home XV. Charlton then got over, but he had a severe collision with Adamson, who was carried off the field with slight concussion. This was bad luck for Lomas, because they had already lost Morris. Towards the close of the game Van Deurs scored.

Lomas played a fine game, and although beaten, were by no means disgraced. It was in the second half, after losing Morris and Adamson that they excelled in defence. Belgrano place-kicking was weak.

BUENOS AIRES v. GIMNASIA AND ESGRIMA.

Buenos Aires defeated their opponents at Saenz Peña on Sunday by 4 tries, 12 points to one, 3 points.

The scorers were Santamarina for Gim. and Esgrima. Smyth, after some excellent combination between the B. A. "threes," Martin, Gahan and Martin again. The last try was an excellent piece of play. The following were the teams:—

Buenos Aires—Mackern; Macadam, Cash Reed, Smyth and Martin; Mold and Gooding; Wigg, Lockwood, McCall, Etchandy, Heriot, Gahan Cox and Crawford.

Gimnasia y Esgrima.—Rumbo; Santamarina Ortuno, Crespo and Newbery; Rioboo and Garré; Jurado, R. Buzzo, E. Buzzo, Casado, Pereda, Lagleyze Henderson and Berisso.

ARGENTINOS v. EXTRANJEROS.

The above match will be played on the Gimnasia y Esgrima ground on Sunday, July 4, and will commence at 2.30 p.m. The Argentino team will play in the colours of the Gimnasia y Esgrima club, and the Extranjero team in dark blue. Jerseys will be provided for the players at the ground.

The following are the teams chosen to represent:—

Argentinos:—Full back, R. Rioboo. Three-quarters, H. B. Smyth, J. Sinclair, W. Cribbes, G. H. Whyte. Halves, R. S. Whyte, C. T. Mold. Forwards, B. Jurado, E. C. Gahan, J. Bourne, V. Heriot, R. van Deurs, H. Buzzo, J. McCall, H. Harrington. Reserves, G. Bush, A. J. Hunter.

Extranjeros:—Full back, C. J. McCarthy. Three-quarters, R. A. Mar-and Walker, 6-4, 6-5; French and Mackenzie, 6-2, 6-4; Roberts and Chapman, 6-1, 6-2

Marmol L.T. Club.

Kelly and Pentreath beat: Bridger and Hine, 6-4, 6-2; Rudd and Hayward, 6-5, 5-6, 6-5; Cockcroft and Robinson, a draw.

Wallace and Robinson beat: Cockcroft and Robinson, 6-2, 6-4.

tin, W. A. Watson, F. F. Charlton, S. W. Churchouse. Halves, A. T. Gooding, B. A. Cash Reed. Forwards: F. Dismore, B. H. Heatlie, S. Legat, D. H. Scott, H. Nisbett, E. Cox, D. Etchandy, W. H. Whittington. Reserves, Balme, Griffiths, S. Sampson, T. Piper, H. Henderson.

ASSOCIATION

RACING (2) v. ESTUDIANTES (0).

Played at Palermo on Sunday, when the following teams took part:

Racing.—Arduino; Reyes, Ochoa; Pepe, Olazar, Comacchi; Canaverl, Ohaco, Marcovechio, Hospital and Perinetti.

Estudiantes.—M. Croce; A. Aicardi, J. Susan; M. Madero, O. Ivanisovich, I. Vaccari; Lahitte, A. Panlowsky, M. Susan, A. Maistegui, A. Ochandio.

WESTERN RAILWAY (1) v. SAN LORENZO (0).

Played at Caballito. The Railway were distinctly lucky to win. After full time had been played, neither side had scored, and so 30 minutes extra was called. It was only just at the end that Moggio headed one through. It was a close and interesting game. The sides chosen were:—

F.C. Oeste.—S. C. Sernis, J. S. Sacardo, A. Pini, R. de Lorenzo, A. Aguilar, A. Elordi, F. Barbera, J. Munesci, E. A. Moggio, V. Angeletti, F. Crespe.

San Lorenzo.—J. Coll, J. O'Campo, A. Coll, J. Monti, P. Monti, A. Assali, M. Perazzo, F. Xarao, A. Etchegaray, G. Urio, L. Gianello.

Referee, C. Gardi.

RIVER PLATE (1) v. QUILMES (0).

On the ground of the former, Garcia was the scorer for his side. The teams were as follows:—

River Plate.—C. Isola; A. Chiappe, J. Calneggia; A. Lanata, C. Garcia, A. Perussi; R. Fraggia Patrao, M. Fraga, A. Penney, N. Rofrano, A. Ameal.

Quilmes.—C. T. Pearson; A. Reid, J. D. Brown; H. Dent, G. Gouat, J. C. Pollini; B. Hoare, R. Falibene, J. D. Morgan, F. Raggi, E. Pearson.

Referee, N. P. Oury.

BELGRANO (1) v. KIMBERLEY (0).

At Villa Urquiza on Sunday the following teams met:—

Belgrano.—T. Reddel, G. Brown, C. Morgan, H. Cox, A. Mallen, J. E. Hughes, C. Oliva, B. Mallet, H. Vignoles, A. B. Cullerne, A. L. Morgan.

Kimberley.—F. Diez, J. Pinaroli, S. Florentino, A. Spingardi, A. Badaracco, A. Conch, J. Gonzalez, C. Boide, A. Perez, M. Garcia, C. Badaraco.

Referee Mr. Cooke.

FRIENDLY

PHENACKERS (3) v. CHIRIPITIFLAUTICOS (0).

This friendly game, the third of its kind, was played on the Belgrano ground on Sunday. The game was an amusing and entertaining one, and thoroughly enjoyed by the players, who apparently did not devote themselves to the game with overdue exertion. Rugeroni, Thomson, and Forrester were the scorers. The teams were as below:—

Chiripitiflauticos.—E. Hearne, Warner, M. Hearne, Morgan, Wood, Black, Cadmus, Casey Ratcliff Royal, Marr.

Phenackers.—Holliman, Forrester, Whittington, Chapman, Wilson, F. Hore, Curchod, R. H. Thompson, Rugeroni J. Mackern, C. Webster.

Mr. W. Forget refereed.

AN UNWANTED VOYAGE

BRAZILIAN POLICE INCONVENIENCE ARGENTINE SUBJECT.

An incident, which is exciting no little attention has occurred at Rio de Janeiro between the police of that city and an Argentine named Odilio Gasparotti.

On arrival at the Brazilian capital, the police refused to allow him to leave the ship and land, with the result that he has had to continue the voyage to Dakar before being able to return to Buenos Aires. From Dakar he has communicated with the Argentine authorities and with the Brazilian Minister, Souza Dantas, which latter has telegraphed to the Chancellor of his country forwarding details of the case and requesting an immediate enquiry into the matter.

It is stated that Odilio Gasparotti is well known in social circles in Buenos Aires, and is a person of irreproachable character, but that he informed the Brazilian police that he had come to Rio de Janeiro in search of a certain woman of doubtful antecedents, and as the Brazilian law is extremely strict on all such points, the police had refused to allow him ashore. Furthermore the police state he refused to give satisfactory proof of his identity and for these reasons they regarded him as an undesirable person. They say the affair would not have happened but for this. On the other hand Gasparotti has stirred up the authorities of this country to action, and the attention that an apparently trivial matter at first attracted has largely increased.

THE SALVATION ARMY

CHARITABLE WORK IN JUNE.

Lieut. Colonel W. B. Palmer of the Salvation Army sends the following information as to the work done in connection with the housing of Men, Women and Children during 25 days of the present month of June in Buenos Aires.

In the Shelter for Men at Avenida Saenz 923, Nueva Pompeya District, the total number of beds occupied has been 4,443. In addition to this, meals have been received by those availing themselves of the Institution.

In the Men's Shelter at Copahué 32, Barracas, a total of 7,641 beds have been occupied.

In the Home for Women and Children in Humberto 10, 3046, a total number of 1577 beds have been occupied. We are constantly seeking situations for a number of young women under our care.

With regard to nationalities, no less than 24 different countries were represented.

Clothing as far as we have it is constantly given to the poor, and in all directions to the utmost of our resources we are endeavouring to co-operate with those in authority to relieve the general poverty and distress still existing.

HORSE SHIPMENTS

A constant export of horses to Europe continues to supply the wastage caused by the war. Previous to and during embarkation all these shipments are subjected to the most rigorous inspection both as to the installations for the care of the animals on the voyage and the quality of the forage provided. The veterinary examination is also of the most thorough description. Yesterday afternoon the s.s. Hilarius sailed with a fine lot of 296 horses from Dock 1.

SHAW AND THE VATICAN

THE DUTY OF THE POPE

London, June 26.

The famous dramatist, Bernard Shaw, in the course of an interview regarding the attitude of the Pope, said:—

"The Pope's clear duty last August was to excommunicate the belligerents with bell, book and candle, and tell them with a voice thundering through Christendom that they would all most certainly be damned for the sin of Cain unless they laid down their arms and submitted their dispute to the judgment of God through His Church."

"The Pope made it quite clear that this was his programme. What more could he do as Papal politician? What other side could have taken that capacity? Austria and south Germany are Catholic, Russia belongs to the Greek church and England is Protestant; while France is violently anticlerical."

"It is true that his choice between Mahomet and the mountain Luther may have been trying; but the Turks are entitled to the benefit of their invincible ignorance, and the heathen have always been dearer to Rome than a heretic."

In respect to the sinking of the Lusitania, Mr. Shaw said:—

"The Pope can hardly be expected to represent God as sharing in the general belief in America and Britain that saloon passengers have more valuable souls than the common soldiers or sailors because they have heavier bank balances."

INTERVIEW WITH THE POPE

EXPLAINED BY CARDINAL GASPARI.

Rome, June 29.

The "Corriere d'Italia" publishes a report of an interview with Cardinal Gaspari, who belongs to the Secretariat of the Vatican, by a representative of the paper.

The subject of the interview was the publication in the Paris newspaper "La Liberté" of an audience which M. Latapie, a journalist attached to the staff of that paper, was granted by the Pope, in which His Holiness is represented as having made statements which betrayed a certain leaning towards the central Empires.

Cardinal Gaspari, speaking on behalf of the High Pontiff, said that many of the statements of M. Latapie were mere inventions, and in many other points he had misunderstood what the Pontiff said.

The Cardinal denied that the Pope meant to excuse Germany's execution of Belgian priests by citing cases of priests having been arrested in Italy; nor, he stated, was it true that His Holiness justified the violation of Belgian neutrality. One statement made by M. Latapie was correct, viz., that the Pope condemned the sinking of the Lusitania.

Cardinal Gaspari concluded by declaring that the deplorable indiscretions of M. Latapie would result in his being the last journalist who would have the honour of being received by the Holy Father until the end of the war.

SEVERE COLD IN URUGUAY

INTENSE NIGHT FROSTS.

Intense cold is reported from Uruguay, and night frosts of extraordinary severity. Reports from the Interior state that this will have the best effect on stock and agriculture, as the hordes of insect plagues produced by the rains of the last few years, have vanished, killed by the cold. Pasture is somewhat backward however, owing to the low temperature, but this will be quickly remedied later, and the destruction of the insect hosts is a marked gain.

ROSS'S Belfast Ginger Ale

M. E. A."SMOKER" IN BS AIRES*AN EXCELLENT PROGRAMME

That the members of the Marine Engineers Association know how to make arrangements to enjoy themselves and to cause other people to do likewise was shown last evening when the Association held their smoking concert in aid of the Association's Benevolent Fund and the Missions to Seamen.

In the first place, the committee had arranged an excellent programme and many of the shining lights of Buenos Aires amateurs gave their services. Again, the hall was well filled and the arrangement of chairs, tables and refreshments added to the general freedom and enjoyment; so with this combination of preparations there is nothing to surprise in the statement that the concert was a successful one.

It cannot be said that the hall is one of the most suitable for the purpose in the city. It is difficult to sing in and the length of the hall is difficult to reach owing to its construction. This fact precluded a few persons sitting at the end of the hall from hearing all the details of each item.

Perhaps it would have been better for both artists and audience alike if the platform had been raised at least a couple of feet higher. In spite of these atomic drawbacks, the close of the concert saw everyone going away fully satisfied with their evening's entertainment, and likewise saw the coffers of the Association and the Mission appreciably swelled thereby.

It seems as though a Buenos Aires audience of late requires some special stimulant at the beginning of an evening's enjoyment before they can fully appreciate what is being offered them. Perhaps the amount of talent that has lately been heard at patriotic, Entente Cordiale, charity concerts and the like has made them "blasé," which is a mistake and which is also a fault to be shouldered entirely by the audience and not by the artists.

Last evening's programme opened with Professor Stark at the piano, and the items reached double figures. In fact, arrived well in the second half of the entertainment, before the audience unthawed as it were. In no single case was this the fault of a singer or artist.

Every item was well received, but not with that freedom to which they were entitled. On the other hand, the programme was of sufficient length to prohibit many encores, and this perhaps had something to do with the attitude of those present.

The Rev. W. H. Brady received a fine reception when he sang "Father O'Flynn," and was followed by Mrs. C. H. White, whose charming rendering of "Songs my mother sang" was greatly appreciated. Mr. Adderley's recitation and a duet by Mrs. Alfred Drysdale and Mr. Bideleux which was excellently sung, led up to Mrs. Richards' song, "On the Mississippi." Unfortunately the singer has not yet fully recovered from her severe cold, and, although she was encored and roused the audience with "Tipperary," she was unable to sing again in the second half of the programme. In spite of her cold, Mrs. Richards sang with plenty of "vive" and called forth an enthusiastic response from her audience.

Mr. Bideleux was in fine voice and has probably never sung better than when he sang the "Yeoman's Wedding Song" and the "Bedouin Love Song."

A recitation by Mrs. Bideleux was well received, but it was in the second half of the programme, when she changed her published selection to "Cheering up an invalid," that she excelled and was accorded a most enthusiastic encore.

Mrs. Alfred Drysdale sang two songs, both of them with charm and her rendering of them was beyond criticism.

Mr. Gough was just as good as ever in his humorous selections.

Mr. George Howard played two zither solos and later was loudly encored for a banjo solo and obliged with Gammeyar's Andante and Waltz.

It remained for Mr. C. Soane with his humorous songs and singing to get his audience thoroughly well pleased with themselves. Two good old songs always appreciated at a "smoker" were given in his own inimitable fashion and "Hi Tiddly Hi Ti" followed as an encore.

Mrs. White's second item was even more pleasing than her first and still more appreciated by her audience.

The last item on the programme came from Mr. Brady. He received an oration and a reception and for "Marie my Girl," which was thoroughly well sung, was recalled to give "Stonecracker John."

It was generally an enjoyable and successful evening, and not by any means was the smallest meed of praise due to Professor Stark, who throughout the concert accompanied to perfection. Only once throughout the long programme was he absent and then when Mr. Soane's comic was accompanied by his daughter.

Apprentice boys, two from the S.S. "Plutarch" and two from the S.S. "Strabo," did right loyally in the task of selling programmes. They collected at least another $50 for the funds. When next the Marine Engineers Association give a concert it will be looked forward to with increased anticipation.

The programme was as follows:
Pianoforte Solo, Prof. A. B. Stark.
Song, "Father O'Flynn," Rev. W. Brady.

Song, "The Songs my Mother Sang," Mrs. C. H. White.

Recitation, "Barker's Doormat," Mr. J. W. Adderley.

Vocal Duet, "Two Gay Owls," Mrs. Alfred T. Drysdale and Mr. F. F. Bideleux.

Song (humorous), "Sailor's Bum-kum," Mr. C. Soane.

Song, "On the Mississippi," Mrs. R. R. K. Richards; encore, "Tipperary."

Song, "Yeoman's Wedding Song," Mr. F. F. Bideleux.

Zither Banjo solo. (a) Minuet; (b) Quickstep, Mr. George Howard.

Recitation, "Ole mose," Mrs. F. F. Bideleux.

Songs (humorous), "The beautiful yacht I've not got," Mr. Gough.

Song, "The song that reached my heart," Mrs. Alfred T. Drysdale.

Interval.

Song, "Bedouin's Love Song," Mr. F. F. Bideleux.

Song, "Spring Again," Mrs. C. H. White.

Recitation, "The Charity Dinner," Mr. J. W. Adderley.

Song, (humorous), "Vain Regrets," Mr. Gough.

Song, "Down Vauxhall Way," Mrs. Alfred T. Drysdale.

Recitation, "Cheering up an Invalid," Mrs. F. F. Bideleux; encore, "Sheltered."

Duet for banjo and piano, "Police-man's Holiday," Mr. George Howard and Mrs. Alfred T. Drysdale.

Song, "Mary My Girl," Rev. W. Brady; encore, "Stonecracker John." God Save the King.

Accompanists: Prof. A. B. Stark Miss Soane, and Mrs. Drysdale.

TRADING WITH THE ENEMYNEW PROHIBITIONS BY BRITISH GOVERNMENT.

London, June 26.

A decree appears in the Official Gazette forbidding British subjects from transacting business with the enemy in Morocco, Siam, China and Persia. The prohibition extends to the branches of enemy commercial firms in those countries.

SHEEP STEALERSCAPTURED IN THE PAMPA CENTRAL*PURSUIT ON A CAR

Cuaterismo or cattle and sheep robbery, has always been a thriving industry in some districts of Argentina and, unless very severe measures are taken, seems likely to continue to be so. The tolerance with which these crimes have been regarded is inexplicable, but fortunately Justice occasionally is on the right side. Mr. Haydon, of Estancia "Kia Ora," Pampa Central, recently recovered a flock of 380 sheep which were coolly lifted from his paddock on June 19, under cover of night. As 650 were left, either from motives of moderation, which seems improbable or because they were too many to steal successfully, the shortage was not apparent until the sheep were counted on May 24. It was then manifest that a large theft had been committed and, Mr. Haydon hastened to put the circumstances before the police. He himself also at once took active steps to pursue the marauders using his motor car to pursue the trail and nullify their long start. For eight days he hunted for and followed the spoor of the thieves, no easy matter, as they were crafty rogues with the professional knowledge of Moss troopers or Highland eaters, and their custom was to drive the stolen flock into blind roads during the day, hurrying forward as soon as darkness fell, and going on all night. Notwithstanding the difficulty of following them up, Mr. Haydon only returned once during that time to the estancia. Every few leagues the trail would disappear and wide casts had to be made before it was possible to hear news of the troop. Eight days of hard driving over villainous roads rendered still more deplorable by heavy rains, necessitated a return for repairs to his car which had been running from dawn till late at night. However the deficiency was supplied as Mr. Sewell, of Pigue kindly lent his Ford car. Mr. Edye and Mr. Mosa also started for Darraguiera, and three days after put the Cabo in command at Puan on the track of the stolen sheep which were now, in the montes south of Guatrache in Pampa Central. Here the sheep were found on June 7, quite fifty leagues from the estancia, and were removed to pasturage. The animals had already been offered for sale, but the seller declined the price offered as not being up to the amount expected. He casually observed that another fine lot of 1500 would be offering shortly, and the two scamps who had stolen Mr. Haydon's sheep left, presumably to collect them. While hunting for his own sheep, Mr. Haydon came across a lot of 98 ewes near Estacion Sanes, stolen from an estancia near Goyena. Unluckily the thief escaped. Owing to the persevering pursuit of Mr. Haydon, who evidently does not take joyfully the spoiling of his goods, a nest of thieves has been located, and it is hoped that the authorities will for once, strike promptly and hard. Three arrests have already been made by the police.

SCARCITY OF ANILINES

A consequence of the cutting off of German trade has been a marked scarcity of aniline dyes, which has caused much inconvenience. An immediate result has been that anilines formerly costing from $5 to $8 a kilo, according to class, have already gone up to $15 or $18 and the demand continues firm.

Before the war Germany had the greater part of this trade although French anilines are superior but higher priced. Of late years however Germany had almost monopolised the supply Britain had, though the process was originally a British invention, failed to follow it up or derive any benefit from it.

NEW PORT WORKSCLOSING-DOWN RUMOURS*DEPRECIATION OF BONDS

Under the terms of the contract made by Messrs. Walker and Co. with the Argentine Government, payment for work on the extension of the Port of Buenos Aires was to be made by the issue of Government bonds. In normal times this system, which is general in all great engineering propositions carried out on behalf of the state, works admirably. The bonds are sold in open market, or, if the holders prefer it, are used as security upon which the contractors may rely when in need of cash advances from their bankers. Unfortunately the present times are far from normal, and Messrs. Walker and Co. have therefore approached the Minister of Public Works, asking him to intervene on their behalf to remedy a situation that if not corrected may force them to consider the advisability of shutting down, for the present at any rate.

According to La Prensa they wish the terms of the contract to be modified, cash payments being substituted for the delivery of bonds. Their reason is to be found in the fact that the latter, which bear 5 per cent interest, mean a loss of some 20 per cent for the contractors, presumably owing to the depreciation in the saleable value of this class of security, and they further point out that inasmuch as the Government is able to borrow at 6 per cent, this situation is unfair to their interests.

It is fairly certain that Dr. Moyano will give this reasonable request favourable consideration. For although the terms of the contract leave no room for doubt as to their interpretation, in strict equity the contractors are right, and the Minister of Public Works has promised to confer with the Government on the matter at an early date.

AN INTERESTING FOSSILFOUND AT THE NEW PORT WORKS.

While excavating at the New Port Works yesterday for the foundations of the warehouses, an interesting discovery of a fossil was made.

The fossil represents the remains of what is known to science as a Glyptodon, the giant ancestor of the paludo member of the armadillo family. The glyp-etc. has been extinct for thousands of years, and consequently is not a subject for reminiscence by even the oldest inhabitant. His fossil remains have been found in the Chaco and in Mexico, but nowhere else, so far as is known, so that Argentina may consider herself as having been honoured at some remote period of the world's history.

The specimen found yesterday is in an excellent state of preservation, although it was damaged slightly before the workmen realised that they were trying to delve through the armour-like scales of a prehistoric monster. The fossil was discovered about six metres below the bed of the river, in what is known as the "tosca," a formation below the silt. Information of the discovery was given to the National Museum authorities, and they have undertaken the further excavation of the glyptodon, which measures about one and a half metres across the back.

Messrs. Walker's workmen have made several interesting discoveries while engaged in constructing the port. Not so long ago, a coin of 1827 was found. Previously, a tombstone was brought up, the date and name being decipherable in the leaden letters let into the stone. Cutlasses have also been recovered from the mud.

AN ADVENTUROUS VOYAGE

Newport Steamer Captured by Raider

HOW THE 'KRONPRINZ WILHELM' DEALT WITH THE 'CHASEHILL'

Captain's Story of Dirty Tricks

(PASSED BY CENSOR.)

The following interesting narrative of the adventurous voyage of the Chasehill, which sailed from Newport in February last, and was captured by the German raider Kronprinz Wilhelm, now interned in America, has been penned by Capt. R. H. Kidd, of Newport, the skipper of the vessel, and we have much pleasure in publishing it:

We sailed from Newport at 10.30 p.m. on February 3 in a stiff south-west gale, and gales prevailed until the night of Feb. 5, when at midnight we met with our first misfortune. In the height of a severe gale, and a very heavy sea, our steering gear parted. All hands were immediately called on deck to tackle the dangerous task of repairing—an exceedingly dangerous proceeding, owing to the ship falling off into the trough of the sea. Huge seas came crashing on board, sweeping the decks, fore and aft, the whole time. However, by 4 a.m., this job was completed, and the watch went below. On Feb. 6, with the gale still raging, our steering gear again carried away, and the above performance had to be repeated. On Feb. 9 the gale abated, and we started to make a little better progress, and we finally signalled at Ileta (Gran Canary Island) on the 12th at 5 p.m. two days late. Everything went well after this, and when we crossed the Equator without seeing anything of enemy ships, everyone began to look forward to our arrival in the River Plate, and some had letters written ready to post on arrival. Then came our first scare. On Sunday evening, Feb. 21, a light was reported to me, coming straight for us, and although I took the precaution to sail without masthead lights, and gave particular instructions to act upon in an emergency, this oncoming ship had undoubtedly spotted us. Immediately I ordered "all lights out," altered my course 90 degrees; or at right angles from the oncoming ship. The ruse succeeded, for we got away. All on board were firmly convinced that it was a German tout. Our safety, however, did not last long, in spite of a sharp look-out both day and night, for the very next day, Feb. 22, at 2.30 p.m., a large ship was sighted coming straight for our port beam, steering in such a way as to come exactly end on, so that we could only see one funnel. I tumbled at once, and knew it to be a cruiser. But of what nationality. English or German? At first, the officers said she was flying the white ensign, and it looked so to me. On closer inspection, however, I saw that it was a German. She signalled, ordering us to stop instantly and show our ensign, but I continued my course, and at the same speed. I did not intend to comply, unless I was absolutely compelled to. The cruiser, unfortunately, was soon down alongside of us, and proved to be the Kronprinz Wilhelm. As I was still continuing my course and speed, the Kronprinz Wilhelm fired two shots at us, one ahead and one astern. Well, I had a look at him, and didn't like the look of his teeth.

THREE GUNS POINTING STRAIGHT AT US.

Seeing that it was impossible to ram her, and that it was hopeless to try to get away, together with the knowledge that I had a crew of 44 souls on board, and a lot of them married, I decided that discretion was truly the better part of valour, and stopped my ship, although it was with the greatest reluctance. I would love to have rammed her. The Germans held the whip hand for the time and knew it. It was hopeless to try and get away from a ship that had held the "blue ribband of the Atlantic." They quickly boarded us; came in their life-boats fully armed all the boarding party wearing lifebelts. But only the officers boarded us fully armed, most of the crew leaving their rifles in the boats. The prize officer at once demanded all my papers, and I had no option but to obey. He next wanted to know what cargo we had on board, the quantity, and eagerly asked how much fresh water, being quite crestfallen when I told him only ten tons. It was 3 p.m. when we were boarded, and although we were told we could take all our belongings with us, as far as the chief engineer and I were concerned, the boarding officers took up so much of our time that we only got away with a part of our effects, for we were all on board the K.P.W. at 4 p.m., only one hour from the time we were boarded. I lost also, not only all my private stores such as tobacco, cigars, wines, spirits, and slops, which, of course, it was impossible to take with me (which the Germans thoroughly enjoyed), but they also demanded my telescope, binoculars, chronometers, sextants, and electric torches, promising to return same when we left the K.P.W. They did not keep their promise. I only received my sextant back; the rest they kept. The object of taking these navigating instruments away from us was to prevent our taking observations, and thereby finding out our position. After we were all on board both ships started to steam to the eastward, about ten knots per hour, and continued the whole night in this direction. At 5.30 p.m. we had our first feed. Dinner it was called, but it was entirely uneatable, being putrid tinned stuff, and it was then I understood the boarding officer's anxious inquiry for fresh water. The tea offered us was salt, and although we were all parched with thirst none of us would drink the salt water that was given us as fresh. We mostly went to bed that night with empty stomachs and parched tongues, and not talking very nicely of Crazy Bill, and, needless to say, all hoping for a speedy delivery from the K.P.W. Our position when captured was lat 6.15 S., long. 28.10 W. Next morning, long before we were allowed on deck, we knew that this huge vulture was pouncing down upon another innocent victim, for we could tell that she was off at full speed. Besides, one of the German stewards came down gleefully rubbing his hands, saying "Ve gott von odder von." A fine steamer, too, with two funnels. It proved to be the French Transatlantic liner Guadeloupe, with 143 passengers, 151 crew, and 500 bags of mails from Buenos Aires to Bordeaux, via Rio Janeiro and Dakar. After the capture was effected, we were allowed on deck (which was at 8.30 a.m.) after having been battened down below from 5.30 p.m. the previous evening with no lights allowed, port holes closed, screwed up tight, and blinds drawn, thus effectively shutting off all ventilation. I've never suffered from heat and stuffiness so much before in all my life as I did during my stay as a guest of the Kaiser on the K.P.W.

PENNE IN SHEEP PEN.

This steamer when caught was about 100 miles further east than where the Chasehill was caught. We found on reaching the deck that all three ships were steaming to the eastward, and had a good view of the Guadeloupe that day from our sheep pen, where we were all penned up on the starboard side aft. At 4 p.m. the Guadeloupe was brought alongside the K.P.W., and all the victims brought on board the K.P.W., with their luggage and the mails. Then both ships parted company for the night. Next morning at daylight, the Guadeloupe was brought alongside, and relieved of all her cargo and valuables, and all her fresh water—being from the River Plate, all her ballast tanks were full—which was a God-send to the Germans. After this we had some very good water to drink, although they were very sparing with it, and no one got any to wash with, only getting for that purpose what we were smart enough to steal. I had about a glass of water to wash in daily, and had to watch my chance to steal it, of course. It was pitiable to see some of the poor women with three or four children covered all over with sores and dirt because they could not get any water to wash with (steering passengers). The first and second class ladies managed somehow to keep their children clean. Well, having relieved the French steamer of all valuables, she was cast off and sunk that night. I think by opening her sea cocks, for the last sight I had of the Guadeloupe she had a very heavy list over to starboard. We never saw her again. The French captain and officers looked for her with tears in their eyes on the morning of the 24th, but it was no good; she was gone.

The Germans turned their attention to the Chasehill, and we steamed to the eastward until Saturday, Feb. 27. On this day, she was brought alongside the K.P.W. and discharging operations commenced. I could not see the method employed, but it continued daily, Sundays included. The order was: "Come alongside at 8 a.m., and cast off at 6 p.m." This continued until Saturday, March 6, when the Chasehill finished discharging her cargo and bunkers. Both ships then started to steam back to the westward, and we all knew then that the Chasehill was to be given back to me to take off the Guadeloupe's passengers and crew, and our own crew, and take the lot into Pernambuco. The quicker we could now be got off the K.P.W., the better, for the commander found that we were a great strain upon his provisions, and fresh water, the latter again becoming very brackish, and although the K.P.W. was supposed to condense her own water, her condenser was apparently very much out of order; and as her crew alone was 500, it required a little water to go around the total number on board. On Monday, March 8, we were all to go on board the Chasehill. But to our surprise, at noon the K.P.W. set off at full steam, leaving the Chasehill behind—stopped. I soon learned what was in the wind, for I made it my business to chum up to one of the stewards of the K.P.W. and by this means I got to know many things that I was interested in. So I buttonholed my Fritz, and asked him what was up, so he told me, "Ve gott von odder von." I gathered from him that some ship had signalled Fernanda-Norona, giving her position by wireless, which of course, was intercepted by the K.P.W., and we were supposed to come up to this other new victim by daylight next morning.

From this time on I was thinking very seriously, and I thought no enemy merchant ship would be silly enough to use his wireless giving his position, and that there was no reason why the K.P.W. should expend such a large quantity of coal going full speed after a neutral ship. I decided, therefore, in my own mind, that it was a hoax by a British man-o-war, and decided to watch events, being rewarded at 1 a.m., by seeing the K.P.W. turn sharp around. (I ought to state that I was stealthily watching events through my port), and race back again towards the Chasehill for all she was worth. She had very evidently got a big scare, I concluded. This supposed victim that the K.P.W. was after had again been using her wireless, and unfortunately the K.P.W. detected just in the nick of time to save herself, that it was the wireless tone of a British cruiser! However, it took the K.P.W. from 1 a.m. Tuesday until 3.30 p.m. to get back to where she left the Chasehill, when we were, every soul of us, bundled on board the Chasehill at break-neck speed, bag and baggage, together with the mails of the Guadeloupe; and some luggage, "slings of it" were lost over the side in their hurry to get rid of us. At 7 p.m., the commander sent for me and told me I was to go back aboard the Chasehill. That he would give me the ship on condition that I made my way to Pernambuco with the ship and all on board. For this purpose he had caused to be put on board two days' water, provisions, and coal. He gave me my position (which I could have worked out for myself, and no thanks to him) with my instruments, and found I had to go 535 miles to reach port, and I once again took charge of the Chasehill. At 7.30 p.m. we left the K.P.W., which was lying stationary, and right glad were we all to get away. Personally I am sure that had I been another week on the K.P.W., I should have had scurvy, probably something worse, beri-beri maybe. As it was I had to put four of my crew in hospital soon after reaching Pernambuco with swollen legs, and ulcers breaking out all over them. I honestly consider we got away just in the nick of time to prevent a serious epidemic amongst us.

A DIRTY TRICK.

When the Chasehill was brought alongside the K.P.W. to put us all back on board, the Germans, in their usual manner, played us a dirty trick. The K.P.W. deliberately rammed the Chasehill just fore-side of the navigating bridge on the starboard side with such force that the K.P.W. trembled fore and aft with shock for about three minutes. Well, I believe the trick was to sink the Chasehill by this means after raising everyone's hopes to the greatest height of expectation, and then gloating over our keen disappointment. But the Chasehill proved too strong; she did not sink. The Germans, however, bundled us all on the Chasehill without knowing or looking in the No. 2 lower hold to see if she would float through the night or not. We were told that there was two days fresh water on board. We found, however, after the first half tank of water was finished, that on turning on our other tank (or rather our other half supply), that it was salt, which was a still dirtier trick to play, there being such a large number of people on board us, and all were soon parched with thirst, for this water that now remained was totally undrinkable. We actually had to go a whole day and a night without water. Anyone that has not gone through a similar experience in the roasting hot weather of the tropics, cannot possibly have the slightest imagination what it is like to be without a drink of water. In justice to the commander of the K.P.W. I don't think he knew of this trick, for I found the commander to be quite a decent sort. I blame the officer in charge of the provisioning department.

By the time we reached Pernambuco which was on Friday at 6 a.m., on March 12, everybody's tongues were hanging out of their mouths, and the French officers, crew, and passengers, you can bet, lost no time in slipping off the ship (as soon as the legal formalities of entering the Chasehill were complied with) to get, and which they all got, a good drink of water, and their first good wash for three weeks. On examining the ship where she was rammed, I found her leaking badly. There was already two feet of water in the Nos. 1 and 2 holds, but this I did not of course tell the unfortunate passengers for fear of increasing their anxiety and frightening them. Though I was exceedingly anxious myself as to whether we would get in port before sinking, we however, got in all right; but the ship was terribly damaged. All the insulation was destroyed; the refrigerating machines were rendered useless; also the dynamo. All electrical fittings throughout the ship were rendered useless; the main engines and boilers were seriously ill-used, and the ship was robbed clear of all spare tools and gear, and also of all cabin, deck and engine-room stores, even to the extent of robbing us of our mooring ropes and wires. The starboard side of the navigating bridge was sawed off, and missing. The Germans also painted the masts and funnel, and deck-houses and fittings, grey (man-o'-war colour). They also lime washed the bridge space and 'tween decks for the accommodation of French passengers. I passed my time away on the K.P.W. teaching the French officers and passengers the famous song called "Tipperary" and "Blue Bell," and they were soon all quite expert with them. We all of us used to roar it, and it sounded fine, so great, indeed, that even the German crew used to sing it, causing us great amusement, especially to hear them singing "Tipperary." I don't suppose they realised it, it was one of our war songs, or they would not have sung it. We found Pernambuco full of German merchant ships unable to sail, because they had nowhere to go.

SEVEN MONTHS WITHOUT SEEING LAND.

I left the Chasehill at Pernambuco (where the underwriters accepted abandonment, which meant that it would cost more to repair the ship than she was worth) on April 19, and with my crew came home to Liverpool as passengers on the R.M.S.P. Araguaya. On reaching Liverpool the crew were all paid off — the crew's wages being paid right up to the day of arrival at Liverpool. The second steward of the K.P.W. who had the looking after us, was a very good fellow, indeed, and often went out of his way to do all he could for me; and the prize officer was a real good fellow. I believe if it had been in his power to have done so, he would have let me go as soon as he caught the Chasehill. They were evidently doing this kind of work very grudgingly. But they had to obey orders. It is my opinion the K.P.W. could have done much more damage than they did. They were out seven months, and only sank seventeen ships, which, I consider, is a very small percentage considering the huge number of ships continually passing up and down the Equator. I was told on board that they had not seen land on the K.P.W. for seven months. She was in a very bad state, two inches of grass on her bottom, and her port side battered in like a concertina, and all the crew in a state of mutiny, because they wanted to go in port for a change.

The Chasehill was the only ship that was let off by the K.P.W., after being captured.

ODESSA IN WAR TIME

AND THE CONQUEST OF CONSTANTINOPLE

BY EDMOND PRIVAT.

Odessa reminds one of the great American cities, with their perpendicular streets and their tram lines cutting one another at right angles. It was night when I arrived. My vehicle plunged into black darkness as it drew near the harbour. Not a single light in that quarter. The gigantic outline of the theatre was hardly discernible as it rose against the starlit sky. The streets were absolutely deserted and the silence uncanny. As the cab debouched on the esplanade, and the driver groped his way towards the entrance to the hotel, the fresh breeze announced the proximity of the sea.

The Turks have appeared twice in the offing with the intention of bombarding the town. The first time the inhabitants were awakened about three o'clock in the morning. Some damage was done, and a French steamer was sunk. The second time the Medjidieh came in broad daylight and ran aground on a sandbank some distance from the harbour after striking a mine. It had not fired a single shot.

It was a perfect summer's morning when I ascended to the terrace to get a good view of the magnifi-

Won by half a neck. Time 2.59. cent roadstead. At my feet the harbour line formed a great red and black semi-circle bristling with funnels and dredgers, with its docks of brick, its waggons and factories stretching away to the green tongue of land to the east. If you raise your eyes slightly you catch on the horizon the glittering blue expanse of the Black Sea.

Two or three small torpedo-boats are flitting to and fro like flies on the water. A tug is slowly entering port with two heavy barges laden with precious booty: fine German cannons, taken from the Turkish cruiser grounded out yonder.

It appears that the Russian admiral was staying at the hotel on the Esplanade, and was drinking a cup of coffee when they came to warn him of the second visit of the Turkish squadron. He seized his glasses and went on to the balcony. The weather was clear. Only one enemy vessel was visible. "Why, the poor creature has stuck in the mud!" cried the admiral. "It does not move. It has settled down by the head without sinking."

Two or three units were despatched to the assistance of the Turkish crew. The vessel was deserted. Nothing but a fowl had been left behind to tell the tale. The Medjidieh's consorts had taken off the crew and hurried away at top speed. Such is the story of this comical adventure as it was told me by the head porter of the hotel.

THE LAST OF THE MEDJIDIEH.

In order to see the Medjidieh I had to take a motor-car and drive some twenty miles along the road skirting the shore to the west of Odessa, towards the mouth of the Dniester. At last I made out some funnels rising from the wreck—the hull had gradually disappeared as the huge vessel settled down more and more on her side—around which a little flotilla was busily engaged in the task of taking away everything of value.

It is declared that at the time of the first Turkish attack many Germans were caught signalling with lanterns from their windows. A decree of expulsion has now made a clean sweep of them. There were nearly 30,000 subjects of the Kaiser still resident in the city after the outbreak of war, for it must be borne in mind that Odessa was the centre of German trade in Russia. The Government of Kherson, in which Odessa is situated, has been colonised by Germans and all the land belongs to them. Now after enjoying the hospitality of their enemies for nine months of the war, they have been shown the door.

In Odessa as at Petrograd, these faithful subjects of the Kaiser had for years past carried on a vigorous propaganda in behalf of the "Flottenverein" (Navy League), which, as everyone knows, publishes a review devoted to the development of the German fleet. Often they would ask their Russian business friends and acquaintances for a couple of roubles in support of the review. A great number of Russian merchants thus unwittingly allowed themselves to be enrolled, simply because they did not like to refuse a few shillings to a colleague in aid of what they were assured was a good work. Your Russian is free with his money, and in many cases the giver had not even waited to hear for what object his subscription was solicited.

The war came, and matters suddenly took a tragical turn. The police seized the lists of subscribers to the "Flottenverein." A number of honourable architects, engineers, merchants and the like suddenly found themselves charged with high treason, and are now expiating their imprudent generosity in Siberia.

RUSSIA AND THE DARDANELLES

There is intense enthusiasm at Odessa for the operations in the Dardanelles and the conquest of Constantinople, or Tsargrad, as the Russians here would fain have it named. One morning I had the honour to be received by the Governor-General of the place. His Excellency is a man of some fifty years, lean and bronzed, with grey moustaches and flashing black eyes. He was wearing the grey-brown uniform with the red and black ribbon of the Order of Vladimir, and his appearance conveyed an impression of distinction and energy. He was working in a big hall at the end of an immense table, which would comfortably seat a hundred guests at dinner. As he courteously rose to hand me a chair, his first words were:—

"Well, monsieur, what news do you bring us? How are things going in the Dardanelles? For us Russians, you must understand, that is the most absorbing campaign of the whole war."

These words are a faithful reflection of the public opinion of the country. At Odessa, as at Petrograd, everyone is repeating, "We must have Constantinople." That is the topic of conversation. Nothing else counts. One would imagine it to be a question of life and death. It is

STARVING ARTISTS IN EUROPE

SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT SUBVENTION.

Among the unhappy followers of the Arts whose bread has been snatched from them by the bloody hands of Mars, or whose music is drowned by "the clamorous report of war," it is said that the community of Argentine students in Paris is suffering grievous privations. No one wants art, except battle pictures, and, for music, the distant thunder of guns, the hoarse close rattle of the kettle-drums and the brazen blast of bugles have displaced all other. The afternoon Press suggests that Government should see to their subsistence till the war is over; but to this there are many objections, and Government subsidies have in the past been horribly abused, and, moreover, the country needs all to meet its bills. The undoubtedly talented sculptors and painters among them are much to be commiserated, but what will be done it is impossible to say. Most likely, consideration will be postponed. "Mañana, vamos a ver."

EMIGRATION AND IMMIGRATION RETURNS

HEAVY DEPARTURES IN 1914.

Immigration returns for 1914 present the unusual phenomenon of a considerable excess of departures over arrivals. The total of the latter of all nationalities, amounted to 115,321, the departures totalled 178,684, a difference of 63,363 to the deficit side.

From 1857 up to the year 1913, there have come into the Republic 4,550,402. During the same time, 1,417,037 persons have left, giving a balance of 3,133,365 persons. It is especially in the last ten years that immigration has assumed colossal proportions, during that period the entries being 2,391,957 and the departures 178,684. Detailed information of nationalities reveals the fact that while Italians and Spaniards are leaving the country, Turks, Japanese and subjects of the Balkan States are remaining. Departures of both British and Germans are double their arrivals. One Ecuadorian arrived. He stayed, as did also the single Guatemalan who has come hither.

easy to understand this state of mind at Odessa, for the whole life of the port is centred in the exportation of wheat. A free passage is necessary to enable these millions of sacks of golden grain to reach all the ports of Europe.

Corn, corn, nothing but corn. Nothing else matters in this busy city. "They will kill me with their eternal corn," said a poor poet to me. "You speak to them of art and they reply, 'Will you buy corn of me?' You talk to them of the heart's sadness, and they answer, 'Nitchewo—never mind—corn will go up to-morrow.' By all means let those cursed straits be forced and let grain be showered on all Europe, but for heaven's sake let our hearts and minds be delivered from this obsession!" Such was the lament of this luckless favourite of the Russians, whose destiny it was to see the light in the great port of Odessa.

SELF HELP

Despite her ever-growing exports, all of which are sold for ready money, there is no appreciable improvement in the realms of Argentine finance. The circulating medium is very near the thousand million dollar mark; the banks are surfeited with funds that they cannot place out on reasonable commercial risks, and the traders, one and all, are complaining that there is nothing doing because money refuses to circulate. A more paradoxical economic position it would be difficult to find in any civilised country at the present time. There is, we imagine, no parallel to be found in the course of history. It is, be it remembered, quite a distinct problem from the cost of living, and, bold though the assertion may appear to some people, we are inclined to believe that the two are in no way related. Argentina's financial problem stands or falls by itself. Great efforts have been made to point out that the universal scapegoat, the war in Europe, is at the bottom of all our ills; but, although this is true to a certain extent as regards the increased price of imports, this increase is more than counterbalanced by the rise in export values, and the trade statistics show it.

Where, then, is the remedy for this abnormal and apparently contradictory state of affairs to be sought? There is only one answer that affords any practical hope of a solution, and that is; at home. The European capitalist, upon whom so many Argentine writers on economic subjects endeavour to throw the major portion of the blame for existing conditions, is manifestly just as much interested in righting the commercial ship of Argentina as are her own crew, and the few indications of direct European intervention in Argentine finance during the past six months all go to show that both bankers and mortgagers are only too willing to renew their commitments in this Republic rather than precipitate a disastrous crash by untimely liquidation. This is despite the marked mismanagement that has characterised far too many businesses done during recent years, a case to hand being the affairs of the Queen Province and the Buenos Aires Municipality. Broadly speaking, the opinion of the foreign financiers would seem to be that whilst there has been reckless expenditure and clumsy finance, the good faith of Argentina and her authorities has never been in question. This justified high opinion of the Republic's financial morality is an asset of the highest value, even although, like so many other assets to-day, it cannot be converted into liquid cash for the moment. The various European loans issued by the several Governments involved or affected by the war form an unscaleable obstacle to all attempts to tap money markets of the Old World, the last, and greatest, issue of the British Government being the final straw; and a very substantial straw it is, too.

The idea of looking to the United States is a chimera, and anyone who had a lingering belief that America, in order to strengthen her trading relations with this country, would be prepared to fill the maws of Argentina's most inveterate borrowers, must by now have had that belief dispelled. The terms of the consolidation loan were quite sufficient to show that there is no cheap money going a-bagging up North just now. Where there is cheap money to be had is in the Federal Capital, money, too, that is practically all in Argentine hands, the fact that it figures in the balance sheet of the banks as deposits having nothing whatever to do with its availability for investment purposes. It is not the money of the banks. They practically act merely as "bailees," to use the legal phrase for a holder of other people's goods on trust. Add to this the fact that there is close on $500,000,000 in the pockets of the people, and it will be realised, without any special economic knowledge, that there is a very large surplus of investing capital available, if only people would invest.

The outstanding fact appears to be that the wealthy Argentine is both dense and selfish. Utterly devoid of that spirit of enterprise that has made the United States, Canada and Australia what they are to-day, he prefers to hide his talent in a napkin, regardless of the just censure that has always visited such inaction, not only in the Scriptural parable, but also among all progressive and civilised communities. The purchase of land no longer offers a prospect of rapid speculative profits, and beyond the purchase of land his business vision fails to travel. Acutely myopic, he cannot or will not realise that, in the gripping American phrase, "it is up to him" to lay the foundation here and now for a wonderful era of national development by bringing the untitled land under the plough and covering the grassy wastes of the outer camps with countless herds of sheep and cattle.

There are many subsidiary ways whereby the wealthy Argentine might set his funds in circulation for the common wealth, with a very reasonable certainty of accrued profit for himself in a relatively near future. He fails to see the opportunities; he even fails to see that, by lending this money to the Government and supervising it discretely through his elective rights, he could exercise an almost magical effect on the whole course of Argentine trade; and, worst blindness of all, he appears physically incapable of understanding that his present attitude, to quote the famous phrase of Talleyrand, is worse than a crime, it is a blunder. And a blunder, moreover, of egregious magnitude.

THE WHALE

DESTINED FOR THE NATIONAL MUSEUM.

Although the whale, which mysteriously appeared in the river opposite the end of Calle Gallo a few days ago has disappeared from there, it is not to be entirely lost sight of. It is destined for the National Museum.

No one has come forward to claim the carcass and no ownership has been proved, so that it is now to become a national possession. Dr. Roberto Dabene an expert and an official photographer for the Museum, has the matter in hand. The whale is at present at Berazategui and after the necessary and usual treatment will be deposited as a curio in the National Museum of this city.

VICTORIA SAILORS' HOME

AN ENJOYABLE ENTERTAINMENT.

An enjoyable concert was given to seafaring folk, at the Victoria Sailors' Home last evening. It went with a swing from start to finish, and from the ringing up of the curtain on a pianoforte solo by Miss Lucy Gordon to "God Save the King" there was not a minute's interval that did not provide its full of entertainment.

Mr. F. F. Bideleux was responsible for the splendid programme, and he and his friends right royally sang themselves into the hearts of their audience.

The famous "F.F.F." quartette were in great form, and brought the house down with their final effort, "The Lecture." Mr. Ellis Griffen surpassed himself in his delightfully humorous songs, some of them chosen from the repertoire of "The Follies." Mr. Bideleux let himself go in singing "The Admiral's Broom," and again in his encore, "The Yeoman's Wedding Song."

Last but not least the ladies, Mrs. Alfred Drysdale, Mrs. Bideleux, Mrs. H. K. R. Richards, Miss Hughesdon Smith, and Miss Lucy Gordon were all on the programme, which in itself argues the best of concerts, with such talent, and there was, therefore, nothing whatever to cause surprise in the frequent encores.

Mrs. Drysdale sang with her accustomed charm; Miss Hughesdon Smith was loudly applauded for her manner of reciting "Pink Dominoes," and selected as her encore, "The Sea."

Mrs. Bideleux, with that versatility which is hers, chose to sing and not to recite, and both her encores, "Dolly's Revenge," and "The Old-fashioned Town," were equally appreciated. Mrs. Richards, who still suffers from cold, and could not appear in the second half of the programme, after a recall for "On the Mississippi," although singing under difficulties, was greatly enjoyed. As Mr. Harvey said in announcing Mrs. Bideleux, who sang in Mrs. Richards' stead, "that her kindness in singing at all was only equalled by Mrs. Bideleux's kindness in coming forward so that not one space in a splendid programme should be vacant."

Miss Lucy Gordon's accompanying is too well-known not to be fully appreciated for its excellence. The call for "God Save the King" put an end to the mother chasing her boy round the room and brought to a close a thoroughly good concert. The programme was as follows:—Part I: Pianoforte solo, Miss Lucy Gordon; song, "Maire, my Girl," Mr. F. F. Bideleux; recitation, "Dandy Fifth," Miss Hughesdon Smith; song, "The song that reached my heart," Mrs. Alfred Drysdale; humorous duet, "Two gay Owls," Mr. Ellis Griffin and Mr. F. F. Bideleux (encored); song, "On the Mississippi" (encore, "Tipperary"), Mrs. Cecile Richards; comic song, "Do you know Mr. Schunde," Mr. Ellis Griffin (encore, "Jane from Maiden Lane"); humorous quartette, "It's gone," the "F.F.F." Quartette, (encored). Interval for Refreshments. Part II: Humorous duet, Tenor and Baritone, Mr. F. F. Bideleux and Mr. Ellis Griffin; song, "The Lost Chord," Mrs. Alfred Drysdale; song, "The Admiral's Broom" (encore "The Yeoman's Wedding Song"), Mr. F. F. Bideleux; recitation, "Pink Dominoes" (encore "The Sea"), Miss Hughesdon Smith; song, "An Old-fashioned Town" (encore "Dolly's Revenge"), Mrs. F. F. Bideleux; comic song, "My luck" (encore "Two Little Sausages"), Mr. Ellis Griffin; song, "The Quaker," Mrs. F. F. Bideleux (in place of Mrs. Richards); humorous quartette, "The Lecture" (encore "The Hunt"), the "F.F.F." Quartette, "God save the King!" Accompanist, Miss Lucy Gordon.

IN AID OF RED CROSS FUNDS

MR F. H. CHEVALLIER BOUTELL'S LECTURE AT QUILMES.

As could be expected when Mr. F. H. Chevallier Boutell returned to this city from his trip home to England he would have some news to give, something interesting to recount, and still more, that he would again be doing "just the little we can, you know" to assist everything patriotic, to give his spare time, his energies and his purse towards these many, many things at home which it should be the duty of every Britisher to support to the best of his ability.

Last evening the Salon Sarmiento, Quilmes, was the venue of a Red Cross lecture and lantern entertainment.

Organised by the Quilmes Musical and Dramatic Society, on receiving an offer from the lecturer—a generous offer, as usual, in which all expenses are shouldered by Mr. Boutell and all profits dedicated to some patriotic fund—the entertainment was an immense success. There was not a seat in the hall vacant, and not a member of the audience who did not appreciate the excellent, even remarkable series of pictures that the lecturer had brought back from the home-land with him.

There was a set of some 145 pictures in all. Many of them obtained with considerable difficulty, some from the War Office, some from the Press, especially the "Daily Telegraph," a few from other sources and some personally taken.

There were many truly remarkable views, and shortly it is Mr. Boutell's intention to give another lecture, on the same generous terms, at St. George's Hall (and to repeat it, if necessary) where all and sundry can enjoy, applaud, shiver and enthuse at the pictures before them. They are, one and all, scenes of the war, and the impression they create only strengthens that essential island feeling and British characteristic to be up and doing and the bigger the odds the more the doing.

The pictures were shewn by Mr. F. J. Chevallier Boutell, the lecturer's son, but the smallness of the screen was a drawback, although a minor one, as the opportunity of seeing the pictures will be forthcoming again.

During the interval, Mr. Hardman Smith and Mr. Davies entertained with music, and many ladies of the Dramatic Society engaged in selling sweets, badges and favours, which appreciably helped to swell the funds of the Red Cross Society.

Quilmes has always been to the fore in everything patriotic since the war began, and last evening only added another success to their already long list.

OFF TO THE WAR!

THE DEPARTURE OF THE PRINCIPE UMBERTO

The seventh contingent of Italian reservists sailed for Genoa yesterday morning in the s.s. "Principe Umberto."

This was the largest contingent to leave these shores since the intervention of Italy in the war. The scene at the docks yesterday morning when the vessel moved out of port with some 1500 reservists on board was one of indescribable enthusiasm. There was no thought of anything but patriotism. Every one was gay, laughing, singing and shouting patriotic songs and phrases. The crowd was immense, but there were no "incidents" between them and the large body of police both mounted and unmounted, which were there to keep order.

In spite of the intense cold people came from all quarters to wave delirious farewells and join in the enthusiasm which pervailed everywhere.

The "Principe Umberto" carried no other passengers save these 1500 young soldiers, and will make no call at any ports on her way home to Genoa.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS

The illustrations in this issue are of necessity exclusively concerned with the war. The first shows a Belgian farmhouse in the hands of the Germans, who have turned it into a fortress, machine guns being installed to cover any attack from the Allied troops. The second and third illustrations deal with the tough work of the Allied forces at the Dardanelles. Perhaps unique in military history, if we except the "Wooden Horse" of Troy, is the incident shown in one picture. To secure cover for the troops landing on "V" beach, the transport River Clyde was deliberately run ashore. There were 2,000 men aboard her, and despite a fearful fusillade, they scrambled ashore through holes cut in her sides. The other picture shows reinforcements for the Australians being towed ashore under protection from the warships. One of the greatest luxuries for the British troops, so stubbornly holding to their positions in Flanders, is a hot bath. One of our pictures shows Tommy enjoying himself in the huge vats of a brewery, which has been turned into a bathhouse, where he can get rid of the mud and grime accumulated by days of ceaseless fighting in the trenches. What is described by the London press as the most terrible railway accident in the history of railway management in Britain took place at Carlisle in May. A goods train collided with a troop train loaded with men of one of the Scottish regiments. Before warning could be given, the Scottish express dashed into the wreckage, which took fire. About 150 were killed and 200 injured.

The remaining pictures are of groups of horses presented by generous and patriotic estancieros of Uruguay, to the British Government. The gifts were made through the British Patriotic Committee of Montevideo, about whose work an article appears elsewhere in this issue.

EXPLOITING THE INDIAN

TUCUMAN RESENTS UNCHARITABLE OPINIONS.

Further denunciations have recently appeared on the exploitation of the Indian population in the sugar ingenios of Jujuy. In an article, La Gaceta of Tucuman observes that these criticisms indirectly involve the Tucuman sugar factories also, and that in the Capital there is liable to be little distinction made between Tucuman and Jujuy. It goes on to say "More than once, it has been averred in Buenos Aires that the sugar industry is kept alive by exploiting the Indian. Such an opinion is damaging to us both throughout the country and abroad. The exploitation of the Indian exists indeed, but it is not practised in Tucuman. We ought not to be saddled with other people's sins. Our Government should take note of these denunciations published in Jujuy and repeated in Buenos Aires with a view to confidentially asking the National Department of Labour to investigate the case, and to put things in future on such a footing that these things may be stopped and to take such other steps as may seem advisable. We do not affirm for certain that on all the Tucuman ingenios the criollo peon has reached the ideal point in remuneration, and good treatment. But if this be the case, it is no less certain that in many of these establishments the lot of the workers has been notably improved, and that as a complement to their physical betterment, their morals and mentality are being studied and improved.

It is certainly sad that outside provincial territory this lamentable confusion of mind exists regarding Tucuman and Jujuy." It goes on insistently to demand the intervention of the National Labour Department.

BRITISH HOSPITAL

LIST OF DONATIONS FOR MAY.

The Committee of Management of the British Hospital held their monthly meeting on June 16, the following being present:—Messrs. C. H. Pearson (Chairman), T. Lloyd, A. G. Thornton, James Begg, James Dey, W. E. O. Haxell, A. W. Boote, Archdeacon Hodges, Rev. Dr. Fleming, C. Manifold, R. de Candolle, A. M. Wilson and Lloyd Davis.

FATAL ACCIDENT

MAN KILLED ON THE PORT LINES.

A fatal accident took place yesterday at the foot of Carlos Calvo on the Port lands. Francisca Rodriguez, a Customs House worker, was crossing the rails when he was knocked down by Locomotive 30, of the Port Service. The engine wheels passed over him, inflicting such injuries that he was dead in a few minutes before any help could be rendered. The habit of running across in front of these shunting operations is exceedingly dangerous.

FIRE AT PLAZA ONCE

What might have been a serious fire broke out at 11.30 a.m. yesterday morning in a large ironmonger's shop at the corner of Rivadavia and Ecuador, Plaza Once.

The business is one belonging to the Espandero, Aspiazu Company and the stock on the premises is valued at $115,000. It was the lucky discovery of the outbreak by one of the firms employees, that prevented the fire getting well hold, before the fire brigade arrived.

Half an hour after the fire was first observed, it was well under control. The cause is supposed to be the usual one of "short circuit."

The building and stock was insured by the New Zealand Company $15,000, La Comercial $21,000, La Economica $25,000, La Espana and Rio de la Plata $15,000, La Positiva $15,000, and La Estrella $5,000.

The damage has not yet been calculated, but is not believed to be of a considerable amount.

THE UNITED CLUB

The concentration march from Ramos Mejia and Villa Ballester to Greros, arranged by the above Club, took place on Sunday, in accordance with the programme which lately appeared in these columns. Favoured by splendid weather, the march, in which a goodly number of members participated, was thoroughly enjoyed by all, and it is hoped, given fine weather, that a similar march, which is projected for an early date, may be equally successful.

SIR LEWIS MORRIS: POET

MR. A. STUART PENNINGTON'S ADDRESS AT THE SCOTCH CHURCH.

A most interesting lecture was given last night at St. Andrew's Scotch Church, by Mr. A. Stuart Pennington, the subject of which was Sir Lewis Morris, one of the great poets of the Victorian era.

The hall was not as well filled as it should have been for the occasion, but those who were present did not lack enthusiasm, and the lecture afforded them considerable interest.

The Rev. W. M. Laing occupied the chair.

The lecturer, in the course of his address, said that Sir Lewis Morris was the great grandson of the Welsh antiquary and poet, Lewis Morris, of Penrhyn. He was born in Carmarthen in 1833, and died in 1907. Educated at Jesus College, Oxford, where he had a distinguished career, he was called to the Bar and practised as a conveyancer in 1880. On two occasions he tried for Parliamentary honours.

In 1871 he published his first poems, "Songs of two worlds." The "Organ Boy," "Evensong," "Ode to Free Rome," and "The Wanderer" were considered masterpieces by the critics of the day.

In 1876-77 Morris gave to the world the "Epic of Iliades," in which the ancient myths of Greece and Rome were told in vivid language, so as to shew that underneath these legends are hidden the great truths of nature.

This work was received with the most appreciative criticism by literary men of the day and won unstinted praise from such widely different men as John Bright, W. E. Gladstone and Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Later Morris wrote the "Ode of Life," a beautiful description of the meaning and possibility of every phase of human existence. This was followed by "Gwen" and later by "Gycia" a dramatic story of love and patriotism.

In "Songs of Britain," 1887, Morris incorporated wild Welsh tales and some of British rural life. A "Vision of Saints" followed in 1890 and in 1894 he published "Songs without Notes," "Idylls and lyrics" 1896, and "Harvest Tide" 1901.

During the premiership of Lord Rosebery, a literary Knighthood was awarded to the poet in recognition of his work and of the indebtedness of the nation for it.

The lecturer read several extracts from the poet's works to illustrate his various styles of thought and expression.

Mr. J. Montiegh Drysdale accorded Mr. Stuart Pennington a hearty vote of thanks at the close of the lecture.

CHARCOAL'S DANGEROUS FUMES

WOMAN AND CHILD ASPHYXIATED.

An accident which caused the death of one person, a woman named Gabriela de Vega and nearly caused the death of her daughter, Augustina, aged 16 years, occurred at a house in Carabobo yesterday.

The two women are servants in the house of Sr. José Rodriguez and were engaged in washing clothes, up to a late hour last night, preparatory to sailing for Spain, where the deceased woman's husband is at present and from where he had written to his wife and daughter to join him.

It appears that they were using, for the purpose of heating irons, a charcoal stove and apparently they were both overcome with the fumes. When discovered the mother was already past assistance and the daughter in such a grave condition, that her life is despaired of. She now lies, in an unconscious condition, in the Alvarez Hospital, where she was removed by the police.

ANTI-HUN PROPAGANDA

PRO-ALLY WORK IN URUGUAY.

The ninth number of the publication "Por la Civilización" has just been issued by the local French-British-Belgian-Uruguayan Committee. This committee is to be congratulated on the immense popularity "Por la Civilización" has attained. Its influence has penetrated into the ramifications of camp and back country of Uruguay, Paraguay and Rio Grande. Applications averaging 30 per day are coming in daily from all parts of the continent to be supplied with back and future numbers. "Por la Civilización" has laid by the heels the unscrupulous and mendacious German fabrications. The protestations of injured innocence by the German River Plate communities evoke nothing but contempt and scorn. The Uruguayans are solid with the allies and have no time for the local German whinnings.

The popular Uruguayan editor of "Por la Civilización" in the ninth number gives an interesting resumé of the situation. "A few months more (he says) and we will see the dreams of Pan-Germanism reduced and the monstrous Teuton stripped of his self-conceit and barbarity."

"Por la Civilización" quotes the German paper "Tag" which makes an abject confession of dishallucination. The "Tag" states:—

"We have erred in many of our calculations. We had hoped that India in its entirety would rise in rebellion at the first roar of cannons in Europe, and instead—we have here thousands and tens of thousands of Indians fighting

PRACTISE ECONOMY!

ASQUITH'S ADVICE TO THE PEOPLE.

London, June 25.

To-day the Prime Minister stated in the House of Commons that the Government had taken certain steps to induce the population of the United Kingdom to adopt habits of economy during the war.

The agitation against the constant increase in the price of articles of food has resulted in the appointment of Parliamentary committees to investigate the whole subject.

her millions of men with celerity and her resources in numbers are overwhelming. Those of our leaders who have brought us into these errors, these false calculations, these great disappointments, as regards our neighbours and their condition, have assumed a heavy load of responsibilities."

Other interesting topics treated on from authoritative sources are the "Incorporated Law Society of Belgium." "The robberies of valuables, jewellery and plate by German officers from the residences of wealthy Belgians," "Further proofs of German Culture," "German Imperialism and the Yankees," "The egotism and mania of German nobility," "The glory of France," "The results of German piracy," "German brutality" and "German Infamy."

Every British household in South America should preserve the numbers of "Por la Civilización" that they may have them all times at hand to convince their native friends what German Culture means and conspires at.

Applications for copies should be made to "La Administración" "Por la Civilización," Casilla Correos 84, Montevideo.

PATRIOTIC ESTANCIEROS

GIFTS TO WAR OFFICE

GENEROUS ACTION BY BRITONS IN URUGUAY

In "The Herald" to-day, we publish several photographs of horses recently shipped from Montevideo to England. Given to the War Office by Patriotic British Estancieros in Uruguay, the animals were nearly all of excellent quality and were one of the most effective gifts that could have been made.

The following acknowledgment has been received from the War Office:—
War Office,
London, S.W.
24th May, 1915.

Sir,

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of April 27th notifying the shipment on s.s. Hesperides of 121 horses, the gift of the British community in Uruguay, marked O or X on the hoof.

I am to ask you to express to the donors the appreciation with which their gift will be received, and to assure the Committee that the greatest care will be taken of these horses on landing and a careful report made upon them as soon as they have recovered from their voyage.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant.

(Signed) W. H. BIRBECK,
Major General

Director of Remounts.

The British Minister,
Montevideo.

The following were the donors of the horses above referred to:—

Estancia Guaviyú Co., Ltd., Guaviyú, Manager A. F. Taylor, 12. The Uruguay Estancias, Ltd., Estancia Las Delicias, Manager A. G. Seth-Smith, 10. The River Plate Land and Farming Co., Ltd., Estancia "Los Merinos," Manager Sep. Mohr Bell, 10. Mrs. Jones, "Los Manantiales," Manager Jon. E. Jones, 10. Thomas Bruce, Mercedes, 10. Pranges Estancia Co., Ltd., Estancia "La Concordia," Manager Vincent H. Ricketts, 10. James McCulloch, "San Gregorio," 6. Liebig's Extract of Meat Co., 10. Anonymous, 12. H. Ricketts, 2. British employés on Uruguayan estancia, 3. E. C. Cobham, Estancia "Media Agua" and "San Patricio Co." Palmitas, 6. Raymond Forbes, "Santa Rita," 2. R. Morse, 1. Luis Mouriño, 2. V. Garmendia, 1. J. Kelly, 1. Mrs. Justa M. de Wilson, "Santa Rita," 2. A. Cobham, 2. Wilson Bros., Montevideo, 2. Harry W. Partridge, Buenos Aires, 1. Barbat Huos, 1. J. Martino, 1. Other donors, 4. — Total: 117.

In addition to the above, other British estancieros not having suitable horses subscribed the following sums to a Fund for defraying the expenses in connection with the above shipment:—

E. F. Symonds $150, E. A. Griffin $100, Succession Peel $100, V. H. Ricketts $100, D. MacGillycuddy $100, F. Millard Bennett $100, Garland and Morse $100, Thomas Jefferies $100, James P. O. Durnford $94, John L. Kelly $50, P. W. McCulloch $50, Guillermo J. Sloane $50, William Peile $50, Carlos Rose Young $50, A. G. Seth-Smith $50, A. F. Taylor $50, S. Mohr Bell $50, F. A. Hughes $20, H. J. Perrett $20, W. N. Weston $15, William Hastings $10, Thomas Peile $10. — Total: $1,791.

Out of the horses donated, 22 were rejected by the Inspection Committee as not fulfilling the conditions required by the service. These were sold by public auction, and with the proceeds from same, added to the cash donations referred to, 26 horses were purchased, bringing the shipment up to the handsome total of 121. The small balance of cash over has been passed to the general account of the Patriotic Fund.

TEN HORSES PRESENTED BY MR. THOMAS BRUCE, MERCEDES, URUGUAY.

BRIEF BIOGRAPHIES

COMMODORE TYRWHITT, R.N.

Commodore Reginald Yorke Tyrwhitt, the distinguished commander of the destroyer flotillas of the First Fleet, has held his present post since December, 1913, and has taken a prominent part in all the important North Sea actions of the war.

COMMODORE TYRWHITT, R.N.

Commodore Tyrwhitt, who is forty-four years of age, entered the Navy in 1883, and has had a large experience of destroyer work. From 1908 to 1910 he was Captain of the Fourth Flotilla, and in 1912 he was appointed to command the Second Destroyer Flotilla. As a lieutenant on board the Cleopatra, he landed at Bluefields, Nicaragua, in order to protect the inhabitants during a native disturbance, but he had not seen active service before last August. It fell to him to report the first naval action of the war, the sinking of the Konigin Luise, and he came into prominent notice during the Battle of the Bight on August 27. In that affair his handling of the Arethusa won him a place in history. The Arethusa is the first of twenty light cruisers built by the present Board of Admiralty, and in her maiden fight the new vessel justified her existence to the full. She had been in commission only forty-eight hours when she went into action under Tyrwhitt. Leading the line of the destroyers, the Arethusa sank three German cruisers and at least two destroyers. For thirty-five minutes she was sharply engaged at 3,000 yards' range, and, although seriously damaged, drove off two German cruisers, one of which was badly mauled. Later in the day she helped to sink the Mainz. Seriously damaged herself and with her speed reduced to ten knots, she nevertheless managed to crawl back under her own steam to Chatham for repairs. As far as the Nore she submitted to be towed, but meanwhile her engineers had temporarily got the engines into some sort of order, and the victorious vessel came back to port unaided. In reporting the action, Rear-Admiral Christian remarked that Commodore Tyrwhitt's attack was "delivered with great skill and gallantry," and the conduct of all concerned was "worthy of the best traditions of the British Navy."

SIX HORSES PRESENTED BY MR. JAMES McCULLOCH, ESTANCIA "SAN GREGORIO," URUGUAY.

KILLED IN ACTION

LANCE-CORPORAL FINLAYSON.

Confirmation of the death of Lance-Corporal G. Finlayson, 2nd Batt. Cameron Highlanders, has now been received in the Capital.

Lance-Corporal Finlayson, who went to the front from Rosario, subsequently penned a vivid story of life in the trenches. The description was published in "The Herald."

LANCE-CORPORAL FINLAYSON.

A few weeks later, Mr. Finlayson was killed in the desperate fighting on the Yser. It now transpires that his company was, with the exception of four men, "wiped out" by overwhelming hordes of Germans. Two brothers and a cousin of the deceased Highlander are still with "Kitcheners' Army."

NEWS FROM VOLUNTEERS

ANGLO-ARGENTINES FOR EAST AFRICA.

Mr. Walter F. Manington, of Buenos Aires, has received a letter from Private H. Manington, a well-known camp man, formerly of Entre Rios and Bagual, San Luis, stating that he is to be sent to Mombassa, East Africa.

Private Manington is with A Company of the 25th Battalion, Royal Fusiliers, which comprises volunteers of the Legion of Frontiersmen, of which organisation he is a member. Private Manington states that his battalion includes about 50 Anglo-Argentines. He says that the expedition on which they are setting out has before it a bigger task than most people realise. The Germans in East Africa number about 70,000, and they have got together a fighting force of about 30,000, including many renegade Boers. Up to the present, the operations from Mombassa have been conducted by Indian and colonial troops, and the War Office is now sending out strong reinforcements.

RUSSIA V. TURKEY

THE PRELIMINARIES OF THE WAR.

The Russian Foreign Office has published, through the Legation in this Republic, a collection of the Diplomatic documents and telegrams which passed between the Turkish Government and that of H. I. M. the Tsar, and also the notifications through M. de Giers, Russian Ambassador to the Sublime Porte. These extend over a period from July 19 to Nov. 1. The vacillation and tergiversation of the Turkish Government are manifest throughout, if that can be called a Government which is merely the tool and the fool of Potsdam. A pitiful exhibition of falsehood, prevarication and small deceit ended in the declaration of a war which is the end of Turkey. Our Russian friends and allies needed no justification in our eyes, but, if they had, their action is amply justified in this brochure, and they are proved to have displayed extraordinary and unappreciated forbearance and patience. The pamphlet is on sale for 50 cents.

"LA UNION'S" FAKE

An Impudent Fraud Exposed

HOW "GERMAN" LOYALTY IS MANUFACTURED

"The Herald" has been advised of another impudent fraud on the part of the German newspaper La Unión, which on this occasion has been guilty of an attempt to fasten German descent on a British subject, and serve up to its gullible readers a lesson in "German" loyalty.

In its issue of June 24 La Unión published a two-column picture, surrounded by letterpress, of Miss Kurina Bresler, whom it described as a "daughter of Germany." According to La Unión Miss Bresler, had come all the way from San Martin de los Andes, a long and hazardous journey involving a horseback ride of 14 days, and had left for South Africa where she would join the German South-West African forces as a red cross nurse. Subsequently she was to proceed to Turkey, and thence to Germany. La Unión went on to say that this was a splendid piece of devotion, and suggested that no one but a German could show such loyalty.

All this supposed devotion to the German cause was imaginary. The facts are that Miss Bresler, a daughter of an old supporter of "The Herald," is a British subject, and is not of German descent, neither is she of German sympathy. She was born in Cape Colony, and for three generations the Bresler family have been British subjects. Their remote ancestry is French and Dutch. They are all strongly British, and sympathetic only to the cause of the Allies. Some members of the family in Cape Colony are serving with General Botha's forces against the Germans.

How La Unión came to concoct the story is explained simply. Miss Bresler intends returning to Cape Town to complete her education. She was to have sailed some days ago, and before departing went to C. Amassa y Cia., 126 Florida, and had her photograph taken. The photographers, without permission or authority, gave a copy of the photograph to La Unión, and some information regarding Miss Bresler's journey from San Martin. The rest was simple for La Unión. A striking instance of German loyalty was required, and was duly imagined. Evidently La Unión thought nothing more would be heard of the matter, as Miss Bresler was to leave next day for South Africa, and all her family were supposed to be too far away to raise any protest. However, the ship by which the lady was to have sailed, could not take passengers, and Miss Bresler had to remain with friends in Buenos Aires until she could secure a passage. Her brother also happened to be in Buenos Aires, and La Unión's fraud was pointed out to him. The annoyance caused by the impudent swindle was heightened by the fact that all the friends of the Bresler family are British, and Miss Bresler was asked why she had decided to join the Germans.

Miss Bresler and her brother immediately demanded an explanation from La Unión. They were first told that the photographers had given the information. The photographers denied this, though they admitted having handed over the photograph. La Unión then admitted that "a mistake" had been made, but they thought they were doing the family "an honour." Mr. Bresler demanded an apology for the unwarranted use of his sister's name, and for the insult to the family's loyalty to Britain. La Unión, after some argument, consented to publish an apology. In yesterday's issue the paper said that they owed it to their reputation for the

"HUMMINGTOP'S NIECE"

Lomas Spanish Theatre

CHORAL UNION'S VENTURE

The Choral Union's production of Sidney Grundy's "Hummingtop's Niece" at Lomas, Spanish Theatre, was billed last night for 8.45, but that was only their fun and the hour was obviously intended to be taken in a purely Pickwickian sense. From that time until 9.30, when with praiseworthy punctuality the show commenced, knockings within and excursions of stage carpenters across the drop cloth front, riveted the attention of the audience. The Banfield orchestra also threw themselves nobly into the breach and soothed the savage breasts of the too punctual audience, which was agreeably numerous, with choice musical selections. Once, however, that curtain was persuaded to go up, things got a move on.

The moral of the piece, beyond the "tangled web we weave" even when we have got considerable practice and ability "to deceive" business, appears to be that, unless a really talented liar has remarkable luck and an amazing memory, he is certain to come to grief, especially if he has a mother-in-law like Mrs. Gillibrand "Good Old Truth!"

Beyond this it is not necessary to trace the plot already well known, and Mr. Hubert Waldron as the amazingly inventive Hummingtop, pointed all the other morals with a fine eye to effect. Mr. Waldron has played many parts, a few of which I have seen, but none better than this, and that without going beyond the legitimate bounds of comedy into the region of screaming farce. Mrs. Alfred Drysdale, while a distinctly agreeable looking mother-in-law, inspired awe by her majestic aspect and her implacable bearing. She made a good use of the opportunities of the part, and, with the assistance of the raffish "Josh," made one sorry for her wretched son-in-law. Mr. Grinham is the latter character invested it with the natural characteristics of its detestable tribe and was a finished picture of infernal cheek. The Rosa Colomblie of Mrs. Emily Hogan could scarcely have been improved upon. She literally went with a bang; her impudence, her address and perfect self-possession were throughout admirable. Mrs. Grinham as Mrs. Hummingtop was pleasant and natural, though at times inclined to be inaudible. Of the Ralph Ormerod of Mr. Norman MacQueen it may be said that, while very earnest, perhaps a little too much so, there was an inclination to stiffness; he was, however, brisk and clear in his delivery. Mr. R. Peard as Dobson was perhaps a little too fussy for the well-trained semi-automaton domestic which he represented, but he also was satisfactory. The Daisy Mailland of Miss Molly Mortlock, while rather engaging in some respects, displayed occasional gaucheries. Miss Nugent filled the part of Barbara capably. As a whole, the performance was good and went well without hanging fire, nor except once or twice was the voice of the prompter heard in the land. The repeated applause throughout and at the conclusion was fully merited. Doubtless, the long wait may have been due to circumstances over which, etc., and punctuality will be a star virtue next time.

accuracy of their news to state that Miss Bresler was a "daughter of South Africa," and it was not correct that she was going to join the German Red Cross. This supposed apology is not satisfactory to the family, but it is typical of the paper in which the original fake appeared.

"MARITANA"

ENGLISH OPERA AT THE COLISEO

OPENING OF THE NEW SEASON

Every impressario believes that he, and he alone, can accurately determine "what the public wants." Now this optimism, or egotism, may be a useful thing, but there are moments when it is apt to go wrong. What man, other than Cav. F. Castellano, would have decided to open an English comic opera season with Wallace's played-out and threadbare "grand" opera, "Maritana"? The question is one that cannot easily be answered. Possibly the best explanation is that a company requires some little time in which to find its feet, and "Maritana" is so poor a work that it cannot suffer very greatly at the hands of its protagonists.

When one takes into account the many circumstances which at present militate against the probability of an English entertainment meeting with financial success, it must be admitted that the audience at the Coliseo last evening was surprisingly good. Whether or not that attendance can be maintained throughout the season is a point on which there can be two opinions. Personally I am somewhat pessimistic. The company had a fighting chance—no more—but that chance was not taken. A sparkling performance of "Veronique," or a bright production of "The Mikado" would have been an excellent advertisement, and the public might conceivably have been induced to patronise the later performances. As it is, the Castellano Company have commenced with "Maritana," and the result is that they have still to make a debut sufficiently meritorious to justify the use of superlatives. Had it been possible to save the weak work by Wallace last evening, the ability of the orchestra would have done it. As it was, one instinctively indulged in comparisons with local productions of the Italian and German operas. Such comparisons do not provide a pleasant mental labour for the mere Englishman. However, it is to be presumed that there is still a market for Wallace and Balfe, just as there is for penny novelties and tin whistles. They are all innocuous, if not particularly intellectual.

The Castellano company, on last night's showing, is uneven. The best of them is Mr. Cynlais Gibbs, whose Don Cesar de Bazan lost nothing in comparison with those of his competitors in the homeland. Possessing a sound tenor voice which, if less "silvery" than that of the Italian, proved extremely effective in a manly part, Mr. Gibbs is a conscientious artist who won the approbation of the audience. An "encore" was stoutly demanded when he rendered "Let me like a Soldier Fall," and the tribute was a deserved one. The Don José of Mr. Mario Vail was also good. Mr. Vail at times showed a disposition to accent wrongly the syllables of many of his words, but he sustained a vigorous part in an efficient manner; and, after all, English is not exactly the best language in which opera can be sung. Mr. Patrick McCaffrey's talents are principally vocal. As Charles II of Spain, he displayed good stage presence, but his histrionic ability is clearly subordinate to his vocal powers.

As Maritana, Miss Lilian Coomber strove hard, but not invariably with success. Before passing final judgment on her work, it will be necessary to see her essay another part. The probabilities are that she would be better in a lighter play—possibly in "The Tales of Hoffmann." The Lazarillo of Miss Madge Ray was capably sung and fairly acted. Miss Clara Belton, Mr. John T. MacCallum, Mr. Haydn Middlicott, and Mr. Lewis, filled the minor roles in a way that calls for no adverse comment.

The chorus were good, from a vocal point of view, but they were not particularly favoured in the dresses which they were called upon to don. These were uninviting. The scenery was, on the whole, in advance of that which the local theatre-goer is generally compelled to witness.

COLISEO THEATRE.

Last evening the second performance of Wallace's "Maritana" was given. The function was in honour of the officers and crew of the R. M. S. P. Demerara, and was opened with the playing of the Argentine and British national anthems.

The "Maritana" of last evening was an entirely different production from the "Maritana" of the debut. It may have been the strangeness caused by being in a new country and a strange theatre notably difficult in acoustic properties, or possibly the fatigue after a long voyage which accounted for the poorness of the performance of the opening night, but in any case those of the English community who failed to attend last evening certainly lost an opportunity of hearing once again the familiar melodies of Wallace's opera rendered, if not in first-class way, at any rate in a very pleasing manner. The chorus showed more vim and "go" and worked hard from start to finish. The "mise-en-scène" was improved, and the general setting adequate.

BRITAIN'S NAVAL ESTIMATES

INCREASE OF 50,000 MEN.

London, June 26.

The supplementary naval estimates which appeared to-day make allowance for an increase in the personnel of 50,000 men, bringing up the total naval strength to 300,000 men. Further increases will be made according to the exigencies of the service.

The Bore at Argerich.

Water is still issuing from this bore. Pipes have been connected with the mouth of the bore which take the water to a distance of about one hundred yards away before it flows into a culvert which has been bricked and cemented and which conveys the water past the house of Dr. Argerich. There is still a good deal of work to be done as the water comes up on the outside of the pipe as well, and is forming a small lagoon near to it. In this cold frosty weather the steam can be seen at a distance of half a league away as it rises. The water is sweet and good for drinking, only that it has to be allowed to settle as it comes up with a red colour, owing to the sand through which it has to pass. In view of this result obtained at Argerich it has been decided to ask the government to make another bore in the vicinity of the town, and in an interview that the Intendente had with the Governor and the Minister of Public Works authorization was given him to ask the Minister of Agriculture for the necessary machinery for this work.

The 14th of July.

Preparations are being made by the French community to celebrate July 14, the 126th anniversary of the taking of the Bastille. The celebrations will be in the form of a concert, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the funds of the Red Cross Society. The concert is to be held in the Municipal Theatre. Tickets are already being sold.

Railway to the Lake of Nahuel.

The Minister of Public Works has given instructions for the continuing of the railway line in construction from San Antonio to the lake of Nahuel Huapi, the work being under the direction of Sr. A. Caspersen. The distance to be done is 39 kilometers. A lot of back wages and salaries are still owing by the Government. Already a large number of colonists have taken up land in this district in hopes of the line through it being shortly concluded.

Departure of Italian Reservists.

The first contingent of Italian Reservists left here to night by the Pringles train for Buenos Aires, from where they will proceed to Italy to join the forces there. Much enthusiasm was displayed and over 2,000 people were present at the station to bid the men farewell.

Distinguished French Visitors.

On Friday, at 8.30 p.m., the special train containing Sr. Baudin and the members of the French mission arrived here. They were met by the French Consul and a large number of the French community as well as by several of the representatives of the Municipality. Sr. Baudin was accompanied by Sra. Baudin, Sres. Pontalis, Seval, the manager of the National Bank of Credit, and his wife, R. Bloch, M. Paul, P. Iwein, L. Guilaime, D. Drago, Tornquist, Pasman, Labarthe, Cartazar and M. Civit. On the following morning they paid a visit to Port Militar, Ingeniero White, and Port Galvan, but had not time to visit the meat factory at Cuatros as was at first their intention. In the afternoon they visited the town in motor cars and finally left again at 9 p.m. for Buenos Aires via Tres Arroyos.

Diphtheria Causes Schools to be Closed.

On account of the spread of diphtheria in this district, the Municipality have decided to close all the schools within the town and suburbs. The private schools as well as the public ones have received instructions to this effect. A quantity of lymph has been sent by the National Health Council to the chemist's shop near the market, Sres. Carabelli Hnos., and will be sold to the public at the same price as in Buenos Aires.

Items in Brief.

A big alteration is now being made in the Plaza Rivadavia and although none of the trees are to be moved a large piece is being taken out of one side so as to give the Avenida Colon the appearance of being much longer.

Sr. E. G. Majz has been appointed defender of the "menores," in the place of Sr. Caviglia, and his office which is in the Municipality, will be open to the public between the hours of 9 and 11 a.m.

A concert, in which a lot of well-known players will take part, is to be held in the Municipal Theatre on the night of July 3, in aid of the Italian Red Cross Fund.

On Thursday morning last a man named A. Pompey attempted to board a train in motion near the Bunsow siding on the Pacific line. He was unfortunate enough to slip and fall, the rest of the train passing over his left leg, he was at once conveyed to the hospital for treatment.

A bazaar is being held in Calle O'Higgins 72 in aid of the Patronata de la Infancia, and last night was again open, but not till 11 p.m., in order that the people who attended the concert at the theatre might be present.

On Friday last a visit of inspection was paid by the authorities here to the local prison and they afterwards expressed themselves well satisfied at the way it was being managed.

Several constructors have been fined and prohibited from working at their trade, for not having first paid the taxes and working without the necessary permission being granted to them.

The police are again taking active steps against the large number of children and women who are constantly to be seen begging in the streets. It is said that the majority of these cases are not genuine, the children being sent to beg because their parents do not care to work.

The post office are now giving out notice that on June 30 the term allowed for the renewal of the 'casillas' there terminates.

Until further advice postal orders to England have been suspended in the post office.

Wheat for exportation, with a base of 80 kilos, is now being sold for $11, and for Brazil $11.50. Oats for exportation $6.80 and barley $5.25.

District Notes.

The sales yards in Catriló which formerly belonged to Sr. Pastor, and which have been closed for the past two years are shortly to be opened by a company known as the Granadiera del Norte, who will shortly hold their first auction sale there, after which there will be one every month. This same company are also opening other sale yards in Macachín, and will be under the direction of Sr. C. E. Harris.

The Pacific railway have sent one of their inspectors to report on the road known as El Cañadon near Quemú-Quemú, so that if possible steps may be taken to make it possible for carts. It is calculated that the town lost quite 60 per cent of carting, that would otherwise have gone there, had not the roads been impassable on account of the heavy rains.

The inspector of the National Post and Telegraph Offices has been making a visit to these institutions in the Pampa.

The frosts in this district have been very sharp lately. Inside the houses the temperature has been down to two degrees, and outside seven degrees centigrade.

Although the rain in Medanos has only been slight the farmers there are able to progress with their ploughing, but a little more rain would do a lot of good to the ground.

A fight took place last week in the camp known as San José, near to Medanos, between two peones. One of them, named Paine drew his knife on the other named Ortiz, who on being attacked, took out his revolver and fired three shots at his assailant and killed him instantly. Ortiz was then brought to the prison here.

Agricultural & Pastoral

CAMP NOTES

(By Our Agricultural Editor).

The weather during the past week has proved cold, and against the interests of holders of cattle for fattening purposes, especially those, who are anxious to sell with a view of getting ready money to meet obligations. Reports from the alfalfa region say that a tremendous amount of harm has been done to lucerne pastures by recent heavy frosts.

Consequent on the damage above referred to pastoreo has been eagerly sought after in all parts of the Queen Province. As high as $3 per head has been asked and obtained in the South and West, while alfalfa potreros have been taken at $2 to $3, according to stocking. In many cases estancieros, who fully anticipated being able to carry their cattle over to the spring, find themselves compelled to seek new pastures, to see them through the winter.

In cases where alfalfa camps have been disoccupied for months past, owing to the scarcity of ready cash for stocking them, owners are now leasing at very remunerative prices, for three to six months tenure. There is really no actual scarcity of feed, be it understood, but holders of half-fat, and forward cattle now realise, that they will experience more difficulty in finishing them for freezing and export requirements than was anticipated a month ago.

Naturally enough, existing conditions have slackened demand for store steers and cows; but breeders who are not forced to sell will do well to hold on to their animals until spring time cometh. Fat cattle have naturally gone up in value, and this has been particularly noticeable in the Mataderos market, during the past few days. There is every likelihood of long prices being paid for fat steers in August, September, October and more especially so if the European winter is to see a continuance of the war.

Steers for freezing have commanded up to $220 at the Mataderos market during the week, while sales of special "Chillers" have been reported in the camp at above that figure. Good quality and fat heifers and "Machorra" cows are in demand at figures showing increased values on prices of the past week while prime "Vealers" and heavy "Bueyes" are eagerly sought after, by local butchers. A friend of mine told me the other day that he had to pay as high as $2 per kilo for a prime cut of veal in one of the retail markets.

In cattle breeding circles at the moment the principal topic of conversation is the proposed restriction on the exportation of cows. There appears to be considerable diversity of opinion regarding the proposed Government decree; though in the best interests of this country, it would be a pity, to export best quality breeding stock. There is no doubt the drain on our supply of beef, necessitates the retaining of all female stock, suitable for breeding the better class cattle as foreign demand for Argentine beef, is likely to be even greater, in the future than at present. Not only will the demand be greater; but increased prices will make the more scientific feeding of steers, almost a necessity. The gradual evolution of stock feeding, in this country, has got to undergo a change, just as the enormous amount of live stock, in this great pastoral country has attracted many up-to-date freezing establishments, to handle the surplus fat stock produced by grass feeding alone. The annual fat stock show has already awakened a keen rivalry among many well known estancieros, as to who can produce the best finished steer. As a few extra choice animals can be prepared, by artificial feeding, so can this method of fattening be practised on a large scale. In years gone by, prices ruling for fat steers, did not warrant the estanciero to employ the use of artificial feeds, the rich alfalfa and natural grass pastures serving to fatten for ordinary requirements. Cattle here, if given a supplementary ration of grain feeding will kill out far better, feed in less time, and the consumption of artificial feeding, will not only maintain the fertility of the soil; but considerably enrich its productiveness. This can be taken advantage of by sowing some crop, to be in turn used for the production of prime Argentine meat.

Bye the bye, the mention of artificial feeding, reminds me of the excellent results obtained by a private syndicate, some time ago by the use of the Cerealfa foods. Some of the cattle fed and fattened, were killed under Government veterinary inspection at Palermo Show grounds, and the quality of the beef obtained, was clearly demonstrated to the public. This particular cattle food or forage was also in great demand for feeding on board ship; but I do not know if it is being manufactured in any great quantities now-a-days. Perhaps some of my readers will enlighten me on the subject?

Sheep continue selling well, though there has been an absence of any special yardings at Tablada, during the week. On Thursday last there were a few drafts of early lambs, corderos penned, these naturally being cross bred blackfaces, and hailing from northern ranches. Notwithstanding the fact that they were rather small, considerable interest was shown, by local butchers, with the result that one lot, coming from the Mackenna estancia of Sr. Vergara, was sold by Messrs. Bargo, Lascourain and Etcheagaray, at $6.80 each, while Messrs. Bellocq and Hita, disposed of 127 from Realicó (F.C.O.), bred by Sr. Salgado, at $6.40, rather remunerative prices.

A visitor to Buenos Aires from the Uruguayan side of the river, reports live stock in good condition but camps generally highly stocked more especially in the South-West of our sister Republic. Very cold weather has been experienced during the whole of the present month, and rain and sunshine are both needed to gladden the heart of the smaller stock breeders and tillers of the soil.

Conversing to a "Herald" subscriber from Santiago del Estero only yesterday, he informed me that things are in a very bad way in that part of Argentina. "Money has never been so scarce," said he, "in fact there are many of the working classes, compelled to beg for food," you might think, I am exaggerating; but what I say is true. My brother and myself have been up there for nearly 18 years; but we have left to see, if we cannot better ourselves, in some other district. My informant added that mule breeders, who in the past were able to trade their animals to Bolivia at $160 and $180 per head, were now compelled to sell to Buenos Aires buyers at from $45 to $60.

There would not seem to be any great demand for mules to-day; but breeders of Clydesdale, Shire and Percheron horses, are having quite a decent innings. There are no less than eight shippers of draught animals, scouring the Republic, for good quality sound mares and geldings, preference being given to those well broken to harness, though "broken to lead" animals are also meeting with ready sale, at greatly enhanced values, compared to prices ruling, before the great European war broke out.

Apropos of the demand for heavy horses, it is high time that the owner of good breeding mares should consider wisely his choice of stallion before mating. It is a business proposition, which will more than repay him in the end. He wants to produce a colt which will develop into a big sound horse, with both quality and finish. The small, coarse, or long legged animals, have no place in the markets of to-day. For many years the horse breeding industry in this country, has been sorely neglected, with the result that a nondescript animal, has been more generally produced and now these or the greater majority of them, are thrown aside by all buyers. Breed quality, and true to type. It will pay to do so.

Shipment of Horses.

The commission in charge of the purchase of horses for the French Government continue to keep their buying agents busy, and have dispatched four shipments lately. Light artillery and good cavalry horses are the types principally accepted, though draught animals are also taken.

The s.s. Holbein left this port on Thursday afternoon last, with close on 250 head of heavy sorts, consigned to Liverpool. The greater part of this shipment was made by Mr. Adam Machattie to Mr. Joseph Shepherd, who is engaging himself to a large extent in both the importation of live stock from Argentina to Great Britain; and the exportation of pedigree farm stock, from the latter country to this Republic. Included in the Holbein draft are a large number of really first-class horses, bought personally by Mr. Machattie, from estancia "Fortin Las Lunas," Arias, F.C.C.A.

Mr. James Taylor, of Llavallol, F.C.S., also sent one hundred very fine specimens of the principal draught breeds, by the Holbein, and about half of this number were bred and reared on the estancia of Sr. José Imaz, who has figured prominently in the list of prize winners in the horse classes at all the Argentine rural shows. These animals are being forwarded to Messrs. Robert Taylor and Sons, of Dundee, Scotland, where they will be used for van and lorry purposes. Animals previously shipped by Mr. James Taylor have won golden opinions for Argentine, in the "Land of the Heather."

A Famous Shire Stallion.

Messrs. Alfred Drabble and Bros. have just imported from England for their shire stud at Drabble, F.C.O., the two-year-old stallion Primley Forester. He is a bay, standing 17 hands. At the London Show of 1914 he was 7th in his class, and at the London Show of 1915 he was 8th in his class, after which he was purchased by Messrs. Drabble Bros. for 1,000 guineas from Messrs. W. and H. Whitley, Primley Farm, Paignton, Devon. Primley Forester is exceptionally well bred. His sire is Childwick Champion, who was the leading sire of the London Show of 1913; and his dam is Mollington Movement, by Lockinge Forest King, and she has

THE WORLD'S CROPS

HEAVY INCREASES IN ITALY.

Washington, June 24.
Information received from Italy regarding the crops shows that that country will harvest 29,396,000 bushels of wheat more this year than in 1914.

This is the official statement cabled to the United States Department of Agriculture by the International Institute of Agriculture in Rome, which gives the estimated wheat yield in Italy for 1915 as 202,093,000 bushels against 172,697,000 in 1914.

No yearly comparison is given for other grains, but it is estimated that Italy's crop of rye this year will total 4,724,000 bushels, that of barley being placed at 9,186,000 bushels, and oats at 31,003,000 bushels.

A report from Japan indicates that the crop of wheat this year will yield 23,671,000 bushels, barley being estimated at 97,510,000 bushels.

Taking 100 as representing the average yield per acre, the state of the crops of wheat and oats in Scotland this year is placed at 100. In Ireland, barley is placed at 105 and oats at 101.

ITALY'S CROPS

WOMEN AND CHILDREN TO ASSIST IN HARVESTING.

Rome, June 24.
In order that the harvest shall be garnered the Italian Government has temporarily suspended the operation of the Act which prohibits the employment of youths under fifteen years of age; the idea being that the children can be of great assistance in co-operation with the women in light work, thus saving the fruit of the men's work from being lost.

In addition, a portion of the troops will temporarily be given leave of absence in order that they may attend to the necessary farm labour.

SOCIEDAD RURAL ARGENTINA

JUDGES AT NATIONAL SHOW.

Advices from the Royal Agricultural Society London state that the Judges appointed to officiate at the next National Cattle Show of the Argentine Rural Society, will embark on July 18 or 20 and are expected here in August. The Judges are Mr. G. W. Milyard, for Herefords and black faced sheep; Mr. A. W. Law, for Shorthorns; Mr. George Green, for Aberdeen Angus and Clydesdales, and Mr. Charles Clarke, for Lincoln and other sheep and for pigs. The names of the Judges of Shire and Light Draught Horses will be shortly announced.

probably won a greater value in prize money than any other mare in England. Primley Forester has the size and weight, and such breeding must tell. His late owners must have thought so, as before being sold to Messrs. Drabble Bros. he had served Lorna Doone, the champion mare of the London Show of 1914.

TUBERCULOSIS

FACTS FOR STOCKOWNERS ABOUT THIS DISEASE.

Tuberculosis is a widespread disease affecting animals as well as man. Human beings and cattle are its chief victims, but there is no kind of animal that will not take it. Hogs and fowls are quite often afflicted, horses, sheep, and goats, but seldom, while cattle are the most susceptible of all animals.

NATURE OF THE DISEASE.

Tuberculosis is contagious or "catching." It spreads from cow to cow in a herd until most of them are affected. This may not attract much notice from the owner, as the disease is slow to develop, and a cow may be affected with it for several months and sometimes years, before any signs of ill-health can be seen. This slow development is the chief reason for the great loss it causes to the stock-owner. He does not suspect its presence in his herd, until perhaps a large number are diseased. If the disease develop rapidly, and cause death in a few days, the owner would soon take steps to check its progress and protect the rest of his herd. Tuberculosis is slow and hidden in its course, and thus arouses no suspicion until great damage is done.

HISTORY.

Where did tuberculosis come from? We do not know. History records it from the earliest times. Over a century ago its contagious nature was suspected, and many facts were recorded to prove that it must be catching. Doctors differed about it, and for a long time the question was hotly disputed. Finally it was settled by Dr. Robert Koch, a distinguished German physician, who discovered the germ of the disease in the year 1882, and named it "Bacillus Tuberculosis." He proved by experiment that the disease is produced by these germs, and without them the disease cannot be produced. It is now universally admitted that tuberculosis is a contagious disease, and may be transmitted from animal to man. In North America the disease was introduced with early importations of cattle, and has been there ever since. Modern methods of transportation by rail and water have spread the disease from one end of the continent to the other. No part of the country is entirely free from it, but it is more prevalent near the great centres of population than in the remoter parts.

IMPORTANCE.

The importance of the disease must be estimated from two points of view, first the loss it entails upon the cattle owner, and second, the danger of communication to human beings. Consider first its effect upon the pocket of the owner of cattle, whether estanciero, invernador, or dairy man. A serious percentage of dairy cows are generally to be found infected. The disease is commoner in some regions than in others. It is no uncommon thing to find as many as 70 per cent, or 80 per cent, of the cows in a herd diseased. These animals will be in various stages of the disease, some recently affected showing no signs of ill-health, others badly diseased, but outwardly appearing healthy, while a few are evidently breaking down and wasting away. The loss to the owner is evident when a cow dies of the disease, or when an apparently healthy animal is slaughtered for beef, and found so badly affected as to be unfit for food. The calves in such a herd do not long remain healthy. They catch the disease before many months old, and are a source of loss instead of gain. Although the disease is most frequently found in herds that are more or less closely confined, such as dairy herds, and pure-bred cattle, other herds are by no means free from it. Even range cattle are sometimes affected, and the infection spreads in spite of the open-air life of the cattle. Tuberculosis is common among hogs. The aggregate of these losses among cattle and hogs is enormous, amounting to millions of dollars every year, besides materially decreasing the food supply of the country. Turning to the other aspect of the case, the danger of infection of human beings with tuberculosis from cattle, we have only to consider a few facts to realise its vital importance to every community. Milk is the staple food of infants and young children, and is usually taken in the raw state. If this milk is from a tuberculosis cow, it may contain millions of living tubercule germs. Young children fed on such milk often contract the disease, and it is a frequent cause of death among them. Meat from tuberculosis cattle is not as likely to convey the infection for several reasons. It does not so frequently contain the germs, cooking destroys those that may be present, and lastly, meat is not consumed by very young children.

SYMPTOMS.

Before describing the symptoms or signs by which tuberculosis is recognised or suspected in a living animal, it is well to state that there is no symptom that can be relied on with certainty. Any of the symptoms may sometimes be caused by some other disease, and not one of them is characteristic of tuberculosis alone. Many of the symptoms that are relied on by the human physician in reaching his opinion are not available in examining cattle. The thickness of the skin and chest wall, for instance, makes it difficult to detect a diseased condition of their lungs by listening to the sounds made in breathing, whereas this is comparatively easy in human beings. It must also be clearly remembered that cattle may be very badly diseased, and yet show no symptoms of ill-health. They may be fat and sleek, looking the picture of health, while their lungs and other organs are full of tubercles. Such cases can only be detected by the tuberculin test. As tuberculosis may attack almost any organ of the body, we may have in each case the symptoms connected with the part affected, as well as those affecting the general state of the body as a whole. We will take up in detail each of the more important symptoms suggestive of the disease.

— Unthriftiness. —

The animal is not doing as well as it should do for the care and feed it is getting. Its coat is rough, and its skin has lost its suppleness, and feels harsh and thick.

— Loss of Flesh. —

Along with the unthriftiness is noticed a gradual loss of flesh; the animal gets thinner from week to week. It appears to be pining away, and such cows have been known to dairymen for a long time under the name of "piners" or "wasters." After a time they are reduced almost to skin and bone.

— Cough. —

This symptom is only present when the disease is attacking the lungs or some part of the breathing organs. It is not a loud, sonorous cough, but rather a subdued and infrequent one, and may be heard only at such times as when the cow-shed is first opened in the morning, or when the animal is driven. At a later stage of the disease it may be heard at any time of the day. Cows do not usually appear to cough up anything. This is because they do not spit. Most of the material coughed up from the lungs is swallowed, and many tuberculosis germs escape from the mouth in the form of spray, or are discharged from the nose.

— Enlarged Glands. —

Enlargements in the region of the throat, especially when they cause difficulty in breathing, are very apt to be due to tuberculosis.

— Loss of Appetite. —

This symptom is not seen until the latter stages of the disease, when the animal is evidently wasting.

— Bloating. —

Sometimes the diseased glands in the chest prevent the usual passage of gas from the pauch to the mouth by pressing on the gullet. In this case the cow suffers from bloating, and the pauch is often greatly distended with gas. This, however, is not a very frequent symptom.

— Diarrhoea. —

Looseness of the bowels, or "scouring," is seen in cattle affected with the disease in the bowels. This kind of scouring cannot be cured by any known treatment.

— Hard Lumps in the Udder. —

When tuberculosis attacks the udder, no change can be detected at first, but after a time hard lumps can be felt in some parts of the organ after it is milked out. Milk from such an udder must not be used, as it is almost certain to be teeming with germs of the disease.

— Post Mortem Appearances. —

When the carcass of a cow affected with tuberculosis is opened, the disease may be found in any part of the body. Lumps (tubercles) may be present in the substance of an organ such as the lung or liver, or they may be growing on the surface. These lumps may be so small as to be scarcely noticeable, or they may be as large as the closed fist, or even larger. If one of the lumps is cut open, the inside is yellowish, and gritty on the knife like sand, or else is of a cheesy soft and creamy or hard and dry. The lung is a favourite place for tubercles, and should always be examined. Lymph glands are often the seat of tuberculous changes. When the healthy lymph gland is a little rounded body, not much larger than a good sized bean, the largest only the size of one's thumb. They are found all through the body, and when healthy are so small as to attract very little attention. Tuberculosis may cause them to grow to an enormous size, sometimes as large as a child's head. In this condition they are similar to the tuberculous lumps already described. Those lying between the lungs and in the throat are the most frequently affected. Tubercles may be found in any part of the body, glands, lungs, liver, bowels, kidneys, womb, udder or even bones. The muscles and skin are seldom affected.

THE NEUTRAL GERMAN

CLEVER TRADING DEVICE.

Paris, June 28.

A despatch from Rome says that it is announced by the "Corriere d'Italia" that Italian merchants have received circulars from German exporters saying that they have established agencies in Switzerland to continue the transaction of business with foreign countries.

In Rome it is stated that the Swiss authorities have decided to discountenance such a move.

NO ANNEXATION!

GERMAN SOCIALISTS AND BELGIUM

THE MASSES WANT PEACE

New York, June 25.

Despatches from Berlin report that a debate in the Reichstag yesterday in which the attitude of the German people towards peace was discussed by the Progressive Socialists and answered by the Minister of the Interior, is attracting considerable attention this morning.

Herren Braun, Wienter and Liebknecht took part in the debate. The newspaper report of proceedings is substantially as follows:—

Herr Wienter, Progressive Socialist, cited, with signs of approval from the members, an article by Hugo Heineman, Socialist, to the effect that no German wants peace until Germany's enemies are willing to concede her the right to develop her economic and cultural powers.

Herr Liebknecht, Socialist, interjected "We have the masses with us, and the masses want peace."

Herr Wienter continued "We are convinced that the co-operation of all parties and classes can be guaranteed to hold out until we can be certain of being spared from such dastardly attacks in the future."

Herr Braun said that the Socialists did not deny that the German people must stand together against their innumerable enemies; but certain persons were talking about continuing the war in order to realise wild plans for annexation. The great majority of the German people wish imperatively that no opportunity of securing an early peace be lost, and emphatically reject annexation plans of all kinds, particularly such as have been advocated by one German ruler. Democracy was opposed to these objectionable projects, if only for the reason that they prolonged the war, and consequent unheard-of sacrifices, wasting the strength of the German people.

The Minister of the Interior's answer was in part as follows:—

"While we are involved in such a war as this we can have but one thought, namely, to terminate it in such a way as to make its repetition impossible. That is the goal which the Imperial Chancellor and the allied Governments have set themselves—a goal for which you must strive along with us."

The speech was greeted with evidences of disapproval by the Socialist members.

TO BE ABANDONED FOR "AUTONOMY."

London, June 26.

The Swiss Socialist Journal "Lugano" says that the German Chancellor, addressing a confidential gathering of the heads of parties in the Reichstag, said:—

"The annexation of Belgium might have its inconveniences and delay the celebration of peace; but is it necessary? What other means are there than annexation? Germany can leave Belgium her autonomy; but she can force her to enter the German Customs Union, accept the German Civil Code, and allow Germany to exploit her railways. This would be accompanied by a military convention between the two countries. It is in this sense that we must interpret the recent speech of the King of Bavaria."

KITCHENER'S BIRTHDAY

CONGRATULATIONS FROM ITALY

Rome, June 24.

To-day being the sixty-fourth anniversary of the birthday of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener, the Italian Minister of War, General Zuppelli, sent a cordial message of congratulation to the British Secretary for War. Similar messages were sent by other leaders in the Italian army.

TE AGUILA ES EL MEJOR

BILLINGHURST DEAD

Ex-President of Peru

A FRIEND OF ARGENTINA

Santiago (Chile), June 29.

A telegram has been received from Iquique announcing the death of Sr. Guillermo E. Billinghurst, lately President of Peru.

The ex-President, who was formerly well known in Buenos Aires and was always a sincere friend of Argentina, settled in Iquique since the conflagration in Peru which led to his giving up the Presidency of that Republic.

Señor Billinghurst was deposed as a result of the coup d'état on February 4 last year.

At 3 a.m. on that day the 9th regiment assembled quietly in the Paseo Colon and advanced against the Presidential palace, led by Colonel Benavidez, Chief of Staff. After an engagement which lasted an hour the President was made prisoner and signed his resignation.

Meanwhile General Varela, Minister of War, who was at the Santa Catalina barracks, urged the troops there to remain loyal. This, however, they refused, and General Varela, upon drawing his revolver, was shot dead. It is estimated that the total killed and wounded was eighty.

Guillermo Eduardo Billinghurst was inaugurated President on Tuesday, September 24, 1912. He succeeded Augusto B. Leguia, who was the ruler of Peru from 1908 to 1912.

He was born in Arica on July 27, 1851, and was the grandson of Captain Robert Billinghurst, who was a member of an old Sussex county family which traces back to the days of the Conqueror. Captain Billinghurst was among the British officers who fought for the independence of Argentina, and was the first foreigner to be made a citizen of this country. His descendants occupy various positions in the country to-day, and, as is well-known, a street in the Capital bears his name.

The father of the Peruvian President was born in 1839, and married a Doña Belisaria Angulo.

The President was educated in Valparaiso and Buenos Aires, but was compelled to return to Iquique, where his parents resided, owing to the loss of his father and the family fortune in the earthquake of August 13, 1868.

He devoted his early years to retrieving the finances of the family, and to study and research.

During 1874 and the succeeding years, he commenced the study of politics, and while Secretary of the Provincial Council of Iquique, he published a work on "Municipal Legislation in Peru."

He represented the province of Iquique in the Legislature of 1878 and 1879, and rapidly distinguished himself by his knowledge of the economic and social conditions of the province. Its interests he earnestly safeguarded, and caused the Tribunal of Mines of Iquique to have its privileges and jurisdiction restored.

He then studied the defects of Peruvian legislation as affecting the nitrate of soda districts, and prepared for Congress various projects tending to better the situation in the south of the Republic. These, however, were not put into practice, and, as a result, the public wealth was not increased in the way that it might have been, and it was left to Chile to legislate on the mineral riches of Tarapaca in accordance with the ideas of Mr. Billinghurst.

On the outbreak of war with Chile, he organized the Red Cross service. He was appointed Commissioner to reconnoitre the River Desaguadero and the Andean plateaus by the Government of Lima in 1880. Subsequently he was appointed Chief of the Northern Army.

He afterwards returned to Iquique, of which port he was made Consul General.

"GRAVE No. 340"

Resting Place of Sec. Lieut. P. J. M. Anderson

LETTER FROM THE TRENCHES TO "THE HERALD"

By yesterday's mail, "The Herald" received a letter from Mr. A. Cresswell, who is serving with the British Expeditionary force in France. The letter, which will be of interest to many Buenos Aires readers, is worded as follows:—

B. E. F. France,
May 29, 1915.

The Editor "Buenos Aires Herald,"
Calle Corrientes, Buenos Aires.

Dear Sir,

With reference to the notice in the "Weekly Herald" of April 16th, 1915, regarding the death of 2nd Lieut. P. J. M. Anderson.

Perhaps it will interest his friends in Buenos Aires to know that he was buried on February 25, 1915, in the cemetery at Bailleul, North France, and the wooden cross bears the following inscription:—

(Grave No. 340.)

2nd Lieut. P. J. M. ANDERSON
3rd Br. Ryl. Irish Regt.
Died from wounds received in action.
Feb. 24, 1915.

I have seen the grave and also the graves of 1200 British soldiers buried in the same cemetery.

Yours truly,

A. CRESSWELL.

A NEST OF VIPERS

UNDERGROUND BANDITS AT ROSARIO.

It is stated that the Rosario police have unearthed what would like to be a branch of the infamous "Mafia." The band were wont to hold their secret sessions, after the manner of the mysterious masks in cinema plays, in the cellars under the Teatro Colon, a habit facilitated by the fact that José Caffaro, the chief doorkeeper, was their principal. Nearly the whole gang were captured with dramatic completeness. They were plentifully provided with the tools of the craft, centrebites, braces, jemmies, skeleton keys, knives, life preservers, revolvers, dark lanterns, and masks. It is supposed that they are responsible for several strange disappearances and mysterious murders which the police are investigating. All are Sicilians, and their names are José Pablo Cuffaro, Pablo Bruno, Esteban Lacobara, Antonio Arnalto, Juan Bruno, Vicente Curaba, Francisco Lonacola, Cayetano Mazzei, José Morochello, Domingo Tanasino, José Segundo Marchello, and Camilo Vinté.

In 1895 he was elected first Vice-President of the Republic, and Senator for Moquegua, and in 1893 he was named Minister Plenipotentiary to Chile, during which time he prepared the Billinghurst-Latorre treaty, which, however, was not ratified.

He returned to Chile in 1899, and was nominated as a candidate for the Presidency. He declined the offer, withdrew from public life, and devoted himself exclusively to scientific and industrial work. Ten years later he became Mayor of Lima, and for twenty months held that office. During his mayoralty he caused the destruction of some of the worst portions of the Chinese quarter, and of a pest-ridden hospital for infectious diseases. Some of the "Lima Beautiful" projects which are being carried out were planned by him.

Popular demand was responsible for his election to the Presidency of the Republic in September, 1912.

NEW ERA IN SCOTTISH INDUSTRIES

Intense Armament Activity

CAPITAL AND LABOUR HAND IN HAND

As evidence increases that the Allies are establishing a supremacy in all theatres of war on land and sea, industrial life in Glasgow, and, indeed, all over Scotland, gains in strength. On the Clyde-side, capital and labour are now seeing eye to eye as they have never before done, and masters and men are striving with equal zeal to do their part to secure the victory of our armies. Indeed, one discerns revived interests in departments which had hitherto been badly crippled by the war, and taken all over full running is assured for many months. At the same time war bonuses and a constant worry as to delivery of raw material are telling in somewhat marked fashion on profits. The formation of the Munitions Committee for Scotland, although long delayed, has been enthusiastically taken up by all classes of employers and their men. There has been an outstanding speeding up in shipyards, engineering shops, armament works, and in factories. Even City clerks have willingly worked for six hours in armament works after their day's business was over in the City.

NEW TYPES OF WAR VESSELS AND GUNS.

Clyde shipbuilders have disclosed that they are engaged upon a new type of war vessel, and they have called upon their men to do their utmost to speed their readiness for the fighting line. Armament makers in Glasgow have also on hand guns which will astonish the world, while other firms are engaged in work which will quickly free the seas of the dreaded submarine. To employ a phrase of a leading trade unionist, "Glasgow and the West of Scotland are determined to run their own show and to give their maximum support to the gallant comrades at the front." In point of fact, during the past week or two, the tight manner in which the cords which bind masters and men has been drawn promises to open up a new era in Scotch industrial life.

EFFECT ON SHIPBUILDING.

Large squads of men have been withdrawn from mercantile to naval work, with the result that many tramp and cargo boats are now without the sound of the riveter's hammer. Shipowners have refrained from even inquiring for cargo steamers, as shipbuilders will not quote. Accordingly, the appreciation in the value of steamers afloat has been unprecedented. Owners, however, are mostly tied down to the "flat" rates fixed for Government work, and those shareholders who had been cherishing the hope of seeing their capital returned in full during the progress of the war will find that they have pitched their note much too high. At the same time, some Clyde owners since the war broke out have netted profits exceeding the six figures. Shipbrokers, however, have fared badly. They have certainly had a surfeit of work, but they are on their own admission, making no money.

OUTPUT OF MUNITIONS.

Steel works are running night and day, although the rolls have long since been crying out for repairs and rest. In shell steel, ship plates and sectional material there is no lack of business, the appetite of the Allies swallowing up every ounce of production. Munitions are flowing out night and day, yet the cry remains that the speeding-up process must be rigorously enforced. With the opening of ice-

BRITAIN'S NEW LOAN

Appeal to Democracy

MR. ASQUITH AT THE GUILDHALL

London, June 29.

This evening the Prime Minister initiated at Guildhall a movement to support the new war loan in a speech wherein he urged the necessity for personal thrift throughout the nation so as to make it possible to bear the strain of the war expenditure.

The first really big subscription to the loan was announced simultaneously with the appearance of Mr. Asquith upon the platform. It was an application by the Prudential Assurance Company for bonds to the value of £3,000,000.

Mr. Asquith opened the meeting by stating that, apart from many other features, the war was the costliest that had ever been waged, with a total prospective expenditure for the year approaching £1000,000,000.

The Prime Minister emphasised the fact that, for the first time in the financial history of Britain, a great democratic loan was being floated. The State, he said, was appealing to all classes, even to those whose resources were most limited, to step in and contribute towards meeting the supreme needs of the nation.

The Minister added that under such conditions he was confident that the success of the loan, as a financial instrument, was absolutely assured.

REGARDLESS OF COST

HUGE AMMUNITION ORDERS PLACED IN THE STATES.

New York, June 29.

The Press judges by the large orders for ammunition placed by the Allied Powers in the United States that the war is going to be a long one. Orders are to increase the supplies a hundredfold, no matter what the cost provided that the quality is good and that there is plenty of it; and it is requested in each case that the ammunition be forwarded with the least possible delay. No prices are fixed, and the profits which the factories are making are enormous. In many cases the number of men employed making ammunition has been hugely increased and large wages are being paid.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE AND PROHIBITION.

Washington, June 29.

The Department of Justice states that it has received communications from a number of persons protesting against explosives being allowed to be shipped abroad. The officials of the Department say that they never heard of such action being taken by any Government, and it is doubtful whether there is any legal sanction for the prohibition of the traffic.

"Is your brother Albert out in France as well?" "Yes, sir, 'e's with our Frank—same regiment." "Your eldest brother, Lionel, will be out there also, I reckon." "No," said the youngster, with a proud shake of the head; "our Lionel ain't gorn to the Continent. 'E's mindin' India!"

bound waters, the pressure will increase, especially on Russian account. Employers' patriotism in many cases has been so quickened that they frankly express satisfaction that now there is more glory than gold to be found in their business. In the earlier months employers were careful to allow a safe and perhaps large margin of safety in tendering; now matters are quite the reverse, they place their business unhesitatingly at the disposal of Government.

OMAR KHAYYAM.

Starving Prisoners.

It is borne out on the reports of prisoners and invalids recently returned, that while the evil treatment of British prisoners of war in Germany, is not now so conspicuous in some respects, that the food remains "horrible." It is indeed declared with every appearance of probability, that the health of many has been ruined by the detestable dog's rations issued, and that some have actually died of inanition. The lot of those who have no one to send them parcels which help to keep them alive, is dreadful, and there are many whose friends either have forgotten them or do not care, shame it is to say it, what becomes of them. These are in very evil case, and the German authorities wreak their wicked worst upon them. If the food continues to be "horrible" the only way to work an improvement is to feed our captive Huns on similar rations until their Government sees the error of that particular way.

The Murderer at the Door.

It is quite possible that Switzerland, the most peaceable of nations, may be the next involved in the European conflict. Increasing aggressiveness is noted on the frontiers and a German aeroplane crossed the border and, though fired upon, pursued its way and dropped bombs, narrowly missing a body of Swiss troops. Arbitrary seizures of Swiss subjects are also reported, and several other indications of the usual advance copies of "Frightfulness" as published by the "All Frightful." If Germany can perceive any military advantage to be obtained by a rush into the cantons, it will surely be attempted. Happily the Swiss nation know their neighbour, and do not trust him. Even within the last few years the illustrious Sneak and Imperial Spy, went to the manoeuvres of the Swiss Army, and overflowed with compliments, Republican simplicity condemning Red, Pink, or Purple Eagles. He is reported to have asked Colonel Wille, what the Swiss would do if he sent 300,000 men against them? "Meet them with 300,000 men," was the reply. "But," persisted the Modern Iscariot, "if I send 600,000 men, what then?" "Our men will fire two bullets, where they fired one before." Certainly, if anything of the kind results, the bones of many Pomeranian Grenadiers will be "Scattered on the Alpine mountains cold."

"— then, Venom to thy work."

From poisoned gases to poisoned weapons is a mere step and, that step, it is believed the inexorable German war organisation and its diabolical Director, are about to take, if they have not already done so. It would surprise no one to hear that German swords, bayonets, lance heads and bullets were poisoned so as to inflict a certain and agonising death. Any one who can read the account of the murder by "gassing" of the soldiers, published in Sunday's edition, without the strongest indignation and horror, must be constitutionally a German in mind. They have gone to Hell itself for weapons and Hell has duly furnished its sons with the most atrocious weapons from the Infernal armouries. This they do on one side; on the other all the busybodies whose clack can be set in motion, are advised that now is the accepted time to talk about "Peace," and its blessings. Peace under present arrangements would be a curse.

BRITON.

COMMERCE AND WAR

Why the German Plan Failed

BY FREDERICK RENNET.

PETROGRAD, May 18.

As the months pass and Russia moves along into the summer, one notices that the people are philosophically determined to accommodate war and peace until happier times. They are quite decided to cut their enemy down and out, and to be done with him, and, as it is proving a fairly long struggle, they are gradually thinking more of their ordinary avocations.

Evidently their allies and friends are of this mind also; for this month has brought to Petrograd a French commercial attaché, and, for the first time, an American. We have always had a British commercial attaché, and he is very busy. It is likely that many people in England do not know it, but if they could think of this year without thinking of the great German war, it would still be true that 1915 had to be a most important turning point economically for Russia. And for this reason: Russia and her western neighbour Germany have been living under high tariff commercial treaties, renewable every ten years.

In 1905 she had just finished an unsuccessful war with Japan and was entering upon an unsuccessful revolution at home, when the late Count Witte had to accept a set of tariff schedules which made Western Russia by far a more profitable field of commerce to Germany than all her other foreign trade put together. Whatever people may think abroad, Russia was becoming enormously strong economically. As her last Finance Minister said, Russian credit was like a sound steel spring which, when any weight was taken off, rose up of its own inherent strength. He was perfectly right; it was not a question of being radical or conservative, but simply that, speaking economically, at each period of quiet the country recovered automatically much of the ground she had lost during the troubles.

CAPTURING THE MARKET.

Another thing had become absolutely certain. It was that this year Germany would have had to give way commercially to a disastrous extent for herself. The treaty of ten years ago was so inequitable, so unfair to Russia, and the great German economists did not pretend that it could be renewed now on anything like the old terms. Their great chance came when Russia was domestically in a very bad way. Why not press her again? Why not see if war abroad, or revolt at home, would so hold her up that Germany could successfully "hack a way through" to another treaty for another ten years which would bring many more millions of pounds into the pockets of the Fatherland?

In spite of the politics of the Franco-Russian Treaty, Germany has been economically winning hand over fist against all comers till the war broke out. Certainly her geographic frontier was a great count in her favour, as was also her system of dual nationality, whereby her citizens could cross over into Russia, become Russians if they could, and yet remain Germans. The comparatively small English colony was too settled and prosperous to care. An Englishman would either build a factory or he would do nothing. Germans were ready to follow any trail that had money in it. And we here know now to our cost, they used to send us all the little necessary things that we take for granted. All the pens, and buttons, and studs, and all the haberdashery came from Germany on so profitable terms to the exporter that they had captured the Russian market entirely.

THE GERMAN PLAN.

It was always the plan behind the whole German idea, to keep the Russian army weak, if they could, and to keep the Russian political police as strong and provocative as they could. That would naturally make Russia less to be dreaded, if Germany failed to get anything like such a good arrangement in business as she would have had to renew, if the world had remained at peace, in 1915. Her first and greatest miscalculation was the common sense of the Russian people. They knew enough to know that if they stood by their army, through thick and thin, nothing could go wrong in the end.

During the few days after the First of August of last year and the day when England declared war on Germany, a good number of Russians expected to have to go through with it alone, except only for France. To hear them talk then one might be reading of the great days of Napoleon a hundred years ago. They were ready to go back to Moscow, but you never found one who was ready to yield to the Germans any more than to the other great tyrant of history. Most of them have a much clearer perception of what this war means for their country, than many Englishmen at home seem to realise. It is the position of Russia as a great and equal European Power that they insist on having accepted. The whole German philosophy of the Uebermensch is not only utterly repugnant to the Russian, but absolute nonsense to him as a humble easy-going Christian.

ENGLAND'S CHANCE.

When it comes to be once more a question of treaties, and when Germany has to put up with a worse humiliation economically than all her political exponents of a German hegemony over the Continent could have dreamt of, it will be England's chance. All question of one's own nationality aside, they are the best-liked people here, have most of the live and let live of the Russian about them. Unfortunately, and unlike Russians, they refuse to learn other languages. We have very good men of business here, who are usually altogether too great personages to be forced to know the language. But we have others who are now coming out, who cannot afford yet to employ linguistic secretaries. Usually they not only know nothing about the Russian language, but refuse to try to learn. They make a very great mistake. It is not a question of passing any examination in it. A serviceable smattering is all that is required to get on good terms with the Russians, without the barrier of translated correspondence. The comparative few who come out here, having learnt Russian beforehand are, unhappily, not the kind of person the ordinary Russian business man expects or hopes to meet. They are too bookish and too "viewy," and if they do not return disgusted they generally abandon commerce altogether and are found indexing somebody's library or tutoring the children of prosperous families.

If the Englishman of the ordinary Board Schools who has enough sturdiness of character to become, say, a foreman at home, would learn the Russian language, he would rapidly grow into as important a personage as the old type, who, after coming from forty shillings a week in some Yorkshire or Lancashire mill, made a thousand a year out here and talked with much ignorance and self-satisfaction of the "European situation."

FORMATION OF A NOVEL SYNDICATE.

COLOUR BEHIND THE TRENCHES

Dusty Roads Crowded with Life

STORES, MUNITIONS, AND MANY UNIFORMS

BY ARNOLD ASIITON.

Northern France, May 29.

Summer is now ablaze over Flanders, and the country only a mile or two behind the firing line is supremely beautiful, with placid moonlit nights.

The last fortnight has wrought a change everywhere here. The ardent sun has tanned us all to a mahogany tint, and the scenes one witnesses every day along the white roads, whirling with dust and incredibly hot, remind one of the old South African days, with every man the colour of his own khaki, soldiers swinging along coatless, with their sleeves rolled up, their shirts open at the neck, and the steel of their rifles blistering hot to hold.

The roads are already almost unendurable, for the traffic along them is tremendous—dusty convoys of ambulance cars and waggons, empty and rushing along at break-neck speed one way, laden with wounded and creeping slowly the other, with our brave men lying inside bandaged and strapped, suffering severely, no matter how carefully the car may be piloted, but never complaining.

Then, the supply convoys are never ending—huge W.D. waggons piled with all manner of things grinding along, fleets of little traction engines, emitting as much thick, black smoke as a destroyer steaming full speed ahead; mule trains, heavily packed, plodding through the dust, and now and again, moving through all this clatter and smother an unexpected touch of the East—the Indian mail vans, piled high with yellow canvas bags, and a dozen or so Indian soldiers sprawling among them, silent, sad-eyed, inscrutable.

From time to time other pictures mingle into the kaleidoscope—a batch of scarlet-faced Turcos swinging along with a most wonderful collection of "Cheap-Jack" goods slung around them—pots, kettles, frying pans, scimitars, sausages, coffee pots, bird cages, fire irons, and anything else you would like to imagine; a company or two, perhaps of Senegalese, black as night and all agrin, like nigger minstrels, but mighty men of valour when it comes to fighting. And then, of course, there are always the picturesque French, with their gay, almost comic opera costumes, coloured like Joseph's coat, and all very fine and brave and martial, bearded to the ears, quick and nimble on their feet, and a gleam in the eye of stern resolution. Even the very young men, the New Army of France, carry the same mark. They are well aware of the great work ahead as they swing along sturdily under the sunshine.

And so the picture passes, hour by hour and day by day. It is ever changing, interesting, and enthralling. Seemingly, there is chaos in it. But it is all moving resolutely and surely to one great end.

COLLISION IN A FOG

DUTCH LINER'S ESCAPE FROM LOSS.

London, June 30.

A telegram from Deal reports that the Dutch liner, Nieuw Amsterdam, 17,149 tons gross, was run down in a fog to-day by an unknown steamer while anchored in the Downs. There was a large number of passengers on board the liner bound from New York to Rotterdam. Her port quarter was damaged, but she is still riding safely at anchor.

Public Opinion as expressed in the Argentine Press.

THE CATTLE TRADE

(La Prensa.—June 24).

Considerable discussion has arisen over the statement that Government intends to submit to Congress a law restricting the export of cows, and La Prensa is of opinion that even although this measure may affect a few cattle breeders who must have ready money at all costs, and who sell their brood kine to obtain it, the public interest of the Republic stands before such considerations. Moreover the internal credit of the country, and more especially the new long date loans conceded to estancieros by the Banco de la Nación, are there to provide for individual cases. Argentina's function is to ship beef, not to provide breeding stock for other nations. In very truth everything augurs that the time has come for the institution of a fixed policy adapted to the estanciero's needs, a policy devised in order to secure and augment existing riches.

All the national industries have had state protection, and although it is true that up to the present the cattle trade has been able to stand alone, there are important reasons why it should be given special care and attention. All the European Governments do so, and, says La Prensa, the opposition that the introduction of frozen meat formerly encountered was based on the need for protecting the home breeders. Even free trade England excluded Argentine cattle on the hoof, though it based its objections on the ground of infection of the home herds. The projected measure is designed to increase the number and value of the Argentine herds, and however much it may be stigmatised as being a return to protective measures, the effect locally will be beneficial. Nor does the argument that in certain parts of the Republic there is an excess of brood kine hold water, seeing that there are vast extensions of camp still ungrazed, and this camp can be had at profitable rates. Enterprising men will therefore do as their forefathers did, namely go further out and establish their herds. Hence it is manifestly inadvisable to leave the ports of the Republic open for the shipment of good breeding stock, and distinctly more advantageous to set about the decentralisation of the estancias. The war is bound to bring about a shortage of meat, hence every means of increasing the sources of supply is certain to give good results.

THE SALE OF FOOD-STUFFS

(La Nación.—June 24).

According to La Nación the Chief of the Asistencia Pública has drawn the attention of the municipal authorities to the frequency with which foodstuffs are sold by auction when not in a fit state for consumption. As a general rule these articles consist of tinned foods showing by their bulging sides that the contents are in an advanced state of decomposition, another favourite "cheap lot" being hams that in the ordinary course would be unsaleable across any counter. It is hardly necessary to point out that such practices are distinctly prejudicial to the public health, and, continues La Nación, Dr. Obesero has drawn up a suggestion for the municipal authorities, based on the need of an ordinance compelling all auction rooms dealing in food stuffs to inscribe their names with the Asistencia Pública.

It is also proposed to prohibit the sale of food stuffs in this manner unless a veterinary inspector's certificate has been first obtained, and two days notice must be given by the sellers to the department concerned in order that this requisite may be complied with. All unsound food will be destroyed, a certificate being extended

THE DECLARATIONS OF HIS HOLINESS

(La Nación.—June 25.)

Dealing with the recent "interview" conceded to a French journalist by His Holiness Benedict XV., La Nación points out that whilst his predecessor in the Papal chair limited himself to praying for peace, the actual successor of St. Peter has gone much farther, and the general opinion in Europe is that the article published in "La Liberté" was a fairly faithful exposition of his remarks, which expressed a more or less veiled sympathy with the Germanic cause, despite the evident desire of the Holy See to remain perfectly neutral. And the question is, continues "La Nación"—Ought the Vatican to be impartial in the present juncture? Considering the Vatican as a purely political entity, the reply is in the affirmative. But if His Holiness is regarded as the head of the Catholic Church, the Vicar of Christ upon earth, in his spiritual character, he cannot but condemn the injustice, the broken faith, the useless cruelty that has characterised this war. Thus the question is argued in France and Belgium.

In Germany and Austria, the matter is regarded in a more positive light, beneath which certain persons see a quasi-promise to restore the temporal power of the Papacy. It is recalled that the Emperor Francis Joseph has never been to Rome, not wishing to sanction by the mere fact of his presence in the Eternal City the extinction of the temporal power, whilst in 1906, von Hertling, subsequently Chancellor of the kingdom of Bavaria, declared that all German Catholics ought to apply all their energies towards the restoration of Rome to the Pope. At first sight this appears impossible, but, given the predominance of Berlin and Vienna in the political world, the re-establishment of the temporal papacy is not so unthinkable, and would be regarded in those quarters as a death-blow to Italy. Be that as it may, there is no gainsaying that the declarations of Benedict XV. have caused a very bad impression among the Allies, and particularly in France. The French Catholics felt that their unswerving fidelity to the Holy See gave them right to a warmer sympathy on the part of the Pope, and are hurt at the favour shown to the Lutheran Kaiser, who, in a certain letter published some time ago, stated publicly that he hated the Catholic Church. True, Russia is schismatic, England Protestant, but what of Catholic Belgium? Surely, think the French Catholics, Belgium deserved something more than a few lukewarm words of sympathy and a few francs distributed to relieve in part its unprecedented miseries. In short, concludes "La Nación," the statements of Benedict XV., until such time as they are categorically contradicted, have placed the Pope in a delicate situation towards the Italian Government, have caused cruel pain to the French and Belgian Catholics, and have most certainly rejoiced the heart of Wilhelm II., Francis Joseph, Enver Pasha, and Sr. Vasquez de Mella (head of the Spanish intransigents). At the same time they will have been received with satisfaction all the world over, since these latter remember that whenever the Papacy has sought the protection of the Germanic emperors, the Church has passed through evil days and has suffered many sorrows.

wherein will be stated the reasons for so acting, and the precedence of the goods. Fines of $100 for the first offence and $500 for further infractions will be imposed, and it is hoped that these drastic measures will put an end to what has become a dangerous abuse of public confidence.

SICKLEY CHILDREN IN THE SCHOOLS

(La Prensa.—June 25.)

The project laid before the Chamber of Deputies relative to the advisability of carrying out a technical inspection of weak, sickly or defective children embodies, says "La Prensa," some very important principles in scholastic hygiene. It is well known that among children of school-going age there are always a number who may be rendered unfit for life if they are forced to follow the ordinary routine, and such cases must, therefore, be educated in a manner suitable to their biological deficiencies. There are others whose abilities are stunted or deformed, or who are mentally backward, and conjointly these problems have led to a special pedagogic study of such cases in almost every civilised country. In this Republic, for instance, there were established two schools for weak and sickly children not so very long ago, whilst special institutes for the blind and the deaf and dumb have existed for a considerably longer period.

Admittedly Argentina is somewhat behindhand in this matter, continues "La Prensa," owing very largely to the lack of an efficient means for classifying and treating these cases. The ordinary school mechanism is not sufficient to this end, nor are there reliable data available whereon to base a consistent form of action. Many abnormal forms of mentality are unknown to the school authorities, since such children never go to school at all, whilst the sketchy nature of local ideas on social hygiene are not conducive to a careful study of their needs. The legislator who brings forward the measure must surely know that scholastic hygiene in this country is more in the nature of a much desired ideal rather than an actual reality; thus until the service of medical inspection in the primary schools is reorganised, any consideration of special cases is premature. "La Prensa" is also surprised that such a matter should have been taken direct to Congress, when in reality it corresponds more directly to the internal policy of the Educational Council. In short, it is a matter that calls for scientific debate ere it can be deemed suitable for positive legislation.

IMMIGRATION AND SOCIAL DEFENCE

(La Prensa.—June 28).

Not so very long ago, remarks "La Prensa," attention was drawn in its columns to the need for reforming the Immigration Law, and the recent case of murder that has occupied so much attention of late gives point to the observations then made. Both the murderer and his victim belonged to the worst section of European society, both had a long record of convictions against them, yet they came here to continue their evil practices. Hence the question naturally arises as to how they managed to get round the law aforesaid, appearing in Buenos Aires with clean hands, metaphorically speaking, in other words with all their documents in order, externally men of just and upright demeanour, worthy to be incorporated Argentine citizens. There are many ways in which the law can be nullified, says "La Prensa." If they came through as first class passengers, the matter explains itself, since there is no inspection required in such cases.

It is however more likely that they landed here from the second or third class, provided with passports that were mute as regards their antecedents, and that stated them to have some profession or other. Hence their detention was naturally impossible, since a man cannot be judged merely by his appearance. "La Prensa" therefore urges the adoption of a system akin to that of the United States, where the right of residence is at first precarious, and can be revoked at will. Here were these two men, after carrying on a despicable existence in their own country, free to pursue the same courses here up to date at which the horrid tragedy took place. Given a probationary period of a couple of years it is reasonable to suppose that characteristics of the nature displayed by these individuals would manifest themselves, seeing that they were criminal by predisposition. The honest man who may perhaps have once slipped is likely, on the contrary, to make the most of his new opportunities, and settle down to respectable work. Something that will protect society better than is done under existing methods is clearly required, and "La Prensa" concludes by saying that full enquiry ought to be made into the circumstances under which the precious pair in question managed to enter the Republic, if only as a guide for future action in similar cases.

THE SUGAR TRADE

(La Nación.—June 28).

The powers that be have always given preferential attention to the sugar trade, says "La Nación." From 1883 onwards various governments have done their best to ensure heavy profits to the sugar lords by all the means in their power, even going to the extent of raising duties to 100 o/o of the value of the merchandise in order to kill all foreign competition, subsequently allowing a bonus on exports, giving privileges to refineries, and lastly, when people thought that there was some chance of sugar becoming cheaper, it is found that the needs of the industry call for a diminished supply in order to maintain prices. A decree of the Tucuman government insists on 30 o/o of the crop being exported. This does not help the exporters directly, true, seeing that they have perforce to sell their sugar cheaper abroad. It does however enable them to maintain prices here by making sugar scarce, and that this is the case can easily be proved.

The stock of sugar at the end of May, commercially considered, was 100,000 tons. True in 1914 the ingenios turned out 330,000 tons, but consumption also went up, whilst 61,400 tons were exported in the last four months. Add this 100,000 tons to the current production and it will be seen that there is not enough sugar for 1915. There will be nothing like 330,000 tons this year, says "La Nación." The frosts make it very probable that something like half this amount will be available, and this, added to the stock on hand, gives 270,280,000 tons. Internal consumption oscillates round about 250,000 tons, and will not be less than 245,000 tons this year. "La Nación" calculates that altogether a shortage of 75,000 tons will be brought about by the Tucuman decree, and will therefore profoundly disturb the market, possibly bringing about the reduction of the duties on foreign sugar, which by law is enforced when the price of the commodity at home passes fixed limits. But this year the measure will bring no relief, since best sugar cannot be shipped, and all the other sugar producing centres have a strong demand for their merchandise. Thus the problem created by the measure of the Tucuman government is of the first importance, seeing that it affects the economic position of the whole nation.

CHEESEPARING IN THE HOSPITALS

(La Prensa—June 26.)

When the Municipal estimates were under discussion and the authorities announced their intention of effecting various economies, "La Prensa" registered its protest against the proposed reduction of the number and salaries of the employés of departments such as the Asistencia Pública, departments which, if they are to be wholly efficacious, must be maintained at their full strength. The Asistencia Pública has never been completely dowered with sufficient means to carry out all the work that falls to its share, even when ordinary routine is in question, whilst the disparity of resources becomes still more marked when any extra effort is called for. Further proof of the exiguity of the means available is afforded by the fact that for four years past this section of the municipal budget has been unchanged, despite the manifestly increased number of cases that it has to serve.

The first consequences of these excessive economies are now beginning to be felt, for the heads of the various municipal hospitals have addressed a note to Dr. Obejero pointing out that they cannot give proper service to the districts wherein they are situated, owing to the suppression of a number of sick wards and other employés. And "La Prensa" lays stress on the fact that if the mutual aid of doctors, students and nurses is to go on as before, this error must be remedied. It arises from an ignorance of the way in which the Asistencia Pública must perforce maintain its internal organisation if it is to meet public necessities that cannot be put off. The report of the hospitals ought to meet special attention at the hands of the head of the Asistencia, whilst the Municipality will do well to take note that the warnings uttered but a short time ago by "La Prensa" have already been fully confirmed.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEDURE

(La Nación—June 26.)

According to Argentine Laws 2714 and 3721, legislative business that is not definitely and concretely transformed into law by official decree, lapses, and this rule, says "La Nación," has brought about a peculiar position in regard to the proposed pensioning of railway workers. Common-sense is against considering as lapsed a measure that has received the consent of both Chambers, and virtually speaking the measure in question was as good as on the statute book. The Senate committee consider, however, that the point ought to be referred to the tribunals, but "La Nación" doubts whether they have jurisdiction in a purely legislative affair, the point at issue being merely whether a projected law that has received the sanction of Deputies and Senators is to be treated in the same manner as one that has only been sanctioned by one Chamber and thereafter abandoned.

This matter is not touched upon in the Olmedo Law, designed to clear the portfolios of the various committees of sundry matters that have been begun, but never carried to a successful conclusion, and it cannot be held that the railway law comes within this category. Olmedo's measure is based on the neglect of the Chambers, in other words, is devised to clear up half-forgotten projects; an occasional measure to correct parliamentary mistakes. Art 69 of the Constitution, which deals with the form and method of presentation of all projects, does not establish any time limit. It merely points out that a measure may be brought forward in either Chamber, passed and revised by the second Chamber, and, if then approved, it is to be handed to

FOODSTUFFS IN BUENOS AIRES

(La Prensa—June 29.)

The proposal to submit foodstuffs sold by auction to a closer inspection has been received with general approval, remarks "La Prensa," though many people are surprised that it was necessary to make a special reference to the case etc action was considered advisable. Given the inarticulate nature of the Municipality's arrangements however "La Prensa" declares that it was not surprised at all, and goes on to say that the feeding of the city has not been supervised with the care that ought to be paid to such an important matter. It is not merely a question of adulterated or damaged foodstuffs being sold by auction; there is far too much reason to think that owing to insufficient inspection a good many other foodstuffs are no better in quality than they should be. This is made very plain in the pamphlet published by Drs. Penna and Madero, entitled "Sanitary Administration and Public Aid in Buenos Aires."

At the same time it is not just to throw all the blame on the Intendente, since many of the difficulties met with by the Municipal authorities day after day arise out of the interference of national departments attached to the various ministries, many of them practically superfluous. To make this plain "La Prensa" points out that the following departments intervene in the matter of the city's food supplies; the director general of cattle, a dependency of the Ministry of Agriculture; the National Chemistry Office, a sub to the Ministry of Finance; the Department of Hygiene, attached to the Ministry of the Interior. The Commune, on its own account, has established the following offices: the Sanitary Administration, the Veterinary Police, the Bacteriological Laboratory, Inspection of Markets, of Dairies, and of Butchers' shops. With such a number of departments it would seem that nothing could be overlooked, but sad though it be to have to confess it, the inspection of foodstuffs is a farce, and "La Prensa" suggests that the time has come to take more practical measures.

THE PROVINCIAL ROADS

(La Nación—June 29.)

Despite much expenditure and many experiments, the problem of road transport in the Province of Buenos Aires is still far from solution. The excellent soil, so beneficial to the crops, is also the reason why the roads are so bad. And the more the rains benefit the fields, the worse do the roads become. Hence, remarks "La Nación," the better the harvest, the more difficult is it to carry it away. Moreover there must be added to this fundamental difficulty the fact that throughout the enormous extent of the province the total road area is but 25,000 kilometers. Metalled roadways have more than once been mooted by the authorities, but the heavy cost that the implantation of such a system would call for puts it entirely out of court. A moderate calculation gives $800,000,000 as the cost, whilst with bridges and the needful supplementary work added, the total would not be far short of $1,000,000,000.

This being out of the question, people have looked to light railways as the best means of solving the problem, and although they too would cost a large sum, the total is not so great as that called for by metalled the Executive Power for publication. Law 3721, therefore, calls for revision, either by rendering it unnecessary owing to a quicker despatch of business, or by extending the time limit for important affairs which have been hung up owing to parliamentary delay.

THE HOUSING PROBLEM IN BUENOS AIRES

(La Prensa—June 30.)

In all great cities, says Sr. Augusto Bunge in La Prensa there are to be found houses dating from different epochs. But Buenos Aires differs from most other great cities in that its latest houses are vastly inferior, hygienically considered, to those erected at an earlier date. In London, in Paris, and above all in the great German urban centres, despite the ever increasing value of land, the higher the houses, the more open space is allotted to them. Here on the contrary, where once the city was like a garden, every house having its ample patio, the reverse has been the case, less air space and higher dwellings being the rule. In practice this means that the inhabitants of Buenos Aires are perforce compelled to live like troglodytes, and unfortunately they cannot punish the proprietors of these "dens" by refusing to live in them.

Formerly the number of architects in Buenos Aires was relatively small, house construction being left to working masons and latterly to engineers, despite the fact that the problems of architecture are many and various. Rentable value, hygiene, and beauty have all to be harmoniously combined, and the phrase beauty in this connection means something more than mere outward adornment. Engineers are not necessarily architects, hence one has sleeping apartments opening on to closed vestibules, unventilated bathrooms and so forth, living rooms that give on to openings of a metre and a half wide by twenty deep. A desire to make the most of the available ground rather than ignorance is the reason for this criminal construction. A high rate of interest on the capital invested is the first consideration; to it all other ends are sacrificed. Only by competent building regulations can this form of usury be checked, and the health of the people be assured. Unfortunately Buenos Aires, under its existing building laws, does not possess this necessary check, and Sr. Bunge winds up by saying that for all practical purposes the existing edict might be drawn up as follows:—

Art. 1.—There are plenty of architects who do not know their work.

Art. 2.—Proprietors will be good enough to draw up their plans solely with a view to extracting therefrom the maximum rent.

Art. 3.—Tenants who have the audacity to ask for economy, comfort, air, and light, may go elsewhere.

In short the building regulations of 1910 are nothing better than a public calamity.

roads, whilst they not only serve to transport the crops but may also be counted upon to bring in some return on ordinary freight. It must also be remembered that the roads, as a rule, have no fixed route. The cart tracks are merely laid out in order to take the grain to the nearest station, and every alteration in the railway routes means a corresponding alteration in the roads. Hence the roads are always changing. The government has no fixed policy, and "La Nación" is of opinion that the first thing to do is to hold a national road congress, but admits that owing to local differences, it is not easy to find common ground of action. A prize for the best scheme has also been talked of, and if private enterprise was sufficiently rewarded this course might prove successful. Be that as it may, the fact remains that something must be done. For whilst money is being spent merely to keep up the existing tracks, the question of transport by road is the most cruel enemy that the rural industries are called upon to face.

DEALING WITH THE UNEMPLOYED

(La Nación—June 30.)

It is generally known that the problem of unemployment has not yet been settled satisfactorily. Indeed quite the contrary is the case, there being many poor families at the present moment on the verge of misery. Interest therefore attaches to the scheme brought forward by the municipal commissioner, Sr. Carlos Guerrero. He points out that the street cleaning department is continually besieged with would-be workers, whilst out in the camp bands of men unable to find employment assault the trains in order to get to places where they imagine that there is more chance of something to be had.

Sr. Guerrero then points out how the problem has been handled in other countries, notably in Australia, where many men are engaged in keeping down the rabbit scourge. The same thing could be done here with the hares, an ever-present pest, whilst still further work might be assured by making arrangements with the provincial authorities to put the unemployed on the roads, weed clearing and generally aiding in the improvement of the rural thoroughfares. The work would be of undoubted utility, whilst it would certainly remove many thousands of unemployed from the streets of the city.

HOW GUNS ARE LANDED

THE "HANDYMAN" IN THE DARDANELLES.

It is common knowledge that the British sailor, amongst his many nick-names, can always be distinguished as the "handyman." To have earned such a name denotes special adaptability, and it is in this direction that the men of the fleet have distinguished themselves in the Dardanelles.

The difficulties of the landings of the shore parties can readily be imagined, while the task of attending to the navigating and running of boats exposed to a murderous fire without the opportunity of retaliation, can better be imagined than described; but these tasks are chiefly tests of nerves, and they are comparatively simple when compared with the problem of getting field guns ashore.

The simplest method of transporting field guns from ship to shore is as usual not always practicable. Two boats are lashed a few feet apart by means of heavy beams, and the gun and carriage complete is lowered from the deck of the ship and slung between the boats. The whole is then towed ashore, until the wheels of the carriage rest on the ground, when the slings are released and the gun hauled up.

Using a single boat the gun has to be dismantled on the ship, and the several parts are lowered on to blocks of wood placed in the boat ready to receive them. The trouble begins when the shore is reached, for the heavy parts of the gun can only be moved by rigging up a pair of sheer-legs. With these the gun limber is lifted and placed ashore, and the gun is then carefully lowered into its mounting. All this work requires extreme skill and care; novel problems have frequently to be faced and the methods applicable in one case are impossible in another.

Our Navy is doing wonderful work in many parts of the world, but when the full facts come to be published the part which they have played in landing troops and guns on the Gallipoli Peninsula, and in supplying those troops and guns with the necessary stores and ammunition, will be rightly considered one of the most remarkable feats of the war.

ROSARIO NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

June 29, 1915.

Frosts, White and Black.

The frosts have played havoc with the grazing areas, and cattle are suffering severely in consequence. In most gardens almost everything growing has been cut off, and only the more prudent of folk have had immunity from troubles with water supply.

Social at Alberdi: Prince of Wales's Birthday.

The coming of age of the Prince of Wales was made the occasion of a social gathering at Alberdi, and one can only hope that the organisers will find plenty of other anniversaries to celebrate. As being more cosy than the High School hall, the classrooms were thrown together, and here games were played in the intervals to an impromptu concert. To see grave railway experts, maize magnates or commercial colossi blowing at a feather on a sheet gave one hopes for humanity after all! Miss Searle, who, it may be remembered, laid the foundation stone of the new class rooms, played one of the charming old-world "Tarantelles"; Mr. Gerald V. Cumberbatch sang "The Dawn," Mrs. Cumberbatch accompanying; Miss Unwin contributed that plaintive song "Until," her sister being at the piano; Miss Jean Watson (violin), Miss Watson (piano), and Mr. H. Ransdale (flute) gave the "Royal Gavotte" as a trio; and Miss Hutchison recited "Her first call on the butcher."

Canon Pepys, introduced by the Rev. J. A. Rickards, gave a short address on "The Empire," laughingly saying that he had had to borrow a book on the subject from Miss Gillbee, but had not had time to assimilate enough to be able to impose upon them. (Laughter). What he could attempt to do was to make each person ask himself whether there was really any reason why we should all be so ignorant about this Empire in which we take so tremendous and so right a pride. If they harked back some three or four hundred years, they would remember that there were three extraordinary discoveries or inventions which gave the impetus to that wonderful world-spread re-birth, the Renaissance as it was called, in all sorts of departments of life, which was the main-spring of that adventurous career of Britons and others across the seas. He believed it was the discovery of the rules of perspective which gave the great impulse to art at that time; the discovery of gunpowder put into people's hands the power of advancing their interests; and the application of a very old invention, the mariner's compass, was probably the reason why at the time of the Renaissance there were all those wonderful discoveries in all parts of the world, including that of America. Calling at Lisbon on his way out he had wondered however the Portuguese could have brought themselves to adopt a new flag, when the old blue and white had been carried all over the world in the great days of old. Apparently they did not care for tradition, and had no sentiment on the subject at all. But we feel a tremendous pride in that cross of St. George which was flown by Drake, Raleigh, and in later days by those who helped by arms to found the Empire; by Nelson, and still flies over the "Iron Duke" with Jellicoe. There is a great deal in tradition, and we should be a great deal better off in every way, intellectually and morally, if they made a stronger bid for tradition. We out here, living in a country where there is not a very long history, suffered considerably, and it was therefore all the more to our advantage that we should insist on the value of a knowledge of our Empire. He confessed he spoke as an ignoramus, and admitted a distinct sense of shame that it should be so, and that he could not speak to them as could some present; but he did feel also rising within him that there were many of the men present who would give something to be in the place of that young man with a whole alphabet of names in front of him, the Prince of Wales. (Applause). They would like to be at the front and trying to do something for the furtherance of the Empire. Also, not because he wanted to preach, but because he believed it to be true, they should remember that the flag which spread the Empire all over the world is essentially a Christian flag; it is made up of crosses, and crosses mean sacrifice; and if they and he meant that they were going to do anything for the Empire they meant sacrifice. (Applause).

The hymn "God bless the Prince of Wales" was sung as a sextet the Misses Unwin, the Misses Watson, Canon Pepys (tenor), and Mr. H. C. Hearn (bass), taking part, and the refrain being heartily echoed by the gathering. Tea followed, and more games, and then a photogravure of the Prince, suitably framed, presented by Miss Searle, was put up to auction, Mr. Ransdale wielding the hammer. Mr. Grace brought the portrait at $42, and then had the generosity to put it up again. Still not content, he purchased it a second time, for $10, showing how variable is the market for Art. A cake was also auctioned, and so too were some of the flags. Lastly mention must be made of the Patriotic Competition, in which nineteen questions, well calculated to bring out that ignorance of which Canon Pepys had spoken, called for a like number of answers, and the initials of the answers made the title "Edward Prince of Wales." The prize was awarded to Miss Annette Hamblin, who managed seventeen correct answers.

The net result of the evening was a contribution of some $200 odd to the Prince of Wales's Fund. Well done, Alberdi! And well done the Church Council of the S.A.M.S. at Alberdi!

Golf Fixtures for July.

The fixtures for July of the Rosario Golf Club include the Ladies' Handicap on Saturday, the 3rd, the usual monthly handicap of Sunday, the 4th; the competition for the Fisherton Cup on Sunday the 11th; and the Secretary v. Treasurer match on Sunday, the 18th. The links have seldom been in better order.

The Markets.

The wheat trade has been of a very nominal character, supplies being so small that millers have had some difficulty in buying what they required. As prices continue, so much above the parity of other markets, it is reported that the Brazilian markets are making arrangements to supply their future needs from the United States. In the open market there has been some demand from short sellers to cover their commitments; holders, however, are sitting back, and the result is that prices are nominally 50 cents dearer on the week. No business worth naming has been effected. Maize has seen active business during the week, prices being subjected to very small fluctuation, as although the markets of Europe are quoted slightly lower, there was weakness in the freight market which compensated. At the close of the week, however, the market is firmer. From $4.60 to $4.70 may be quoted as the value of spot; $4.73 to $4.75 for July; August $4.81 to $4.84; and September $4.94 to $4.97. The weather has continued very favourable for the free movement of maize, and the receipts in the port have been very liberal.

MR. FURNESS WILLIAMS

Mr. Furness Williams, whose picture is reproduced above, is the principal tenor of the Castellano Opera Company, and made his first appearance in Buenos Aires last night in "The Lily of Killarney." Mr. Williams has established a high reputation in England and the colonies, and has received unstinted praise from the critics of the Press. Mr. Williams was tenor at Covent Garden for the Grand Season of 1913, the Raymond Roze Season, 1913, and for the Spring Season of last year.

CONCERT AT SEAMEN'S MISSION

Last night's concert at the Seamen's Mission, was arranged by Miss Rita Baines, and was excellent of its kind. There was a large audience, including a number of uniforms which might have come straight off the "Worcester," and had a thoroughly man-o'-war aspect. The programme was as follows:

Part I.—Miss Baines, Rag Times; Miss Lett, Song, "Where my caravan has rested"; Rev. Mr. Brady, "The Trumpeter"; Mrs. Baugh, Recitation "Lasca"; Miss van Waasnaar and Master van Waasnaar, Scotch reel; Mr. Ramus, comic.

Part II.—Mr. Parry, Rag Times; Miss Lett, Song, "The Orange Girl"; Miss and Master Waasnaar, Golliwog dance; Mrs. Baugh, Recitation, "The 9.43"; Rev. Brady, Song; Miss Baines, Song, "Quaker Girl"; Mr. Baines, Dance; Mr. E. Ramus, "How dare you?"

Miss Barnes' playing, Mr. Ramus' eccentricities, and the dancers, are all known and appreciated and the other turns were very good. Mr. Ramus left with a mournful impression of being atrociously hen pecked.

At the conclusion "Auld Lang Syne," and "God Save the King" were sung by all hands, and cheers given for the artistes, the King, the Allies, and the Ladies.

SEVERE WEATHER IN THE SOUTH

HEAVY SNOWFALLS INTERRUPT COMMUNICATIONS.

The severity of the weather in the South of the Republic is increasing. From information received from the Postal authorities all communication with Patagonia and places South of Port Deseado are completely cut off. Snow continues to fall heavily and especially at the latter point, where for several days past it has continued without intermission.

Latest information says that it has been found to be an impossibility to make any attempt to repair the telegraph lines and that it may be several days before this can be done.

GRAND OPERA

COLON THEATRE.

The old Italian school of opera was beautifully represented on Sunday evening at the Colon by "L'aria de Lammormoor." Donizetti's music is so healthy and pure, its freshness and clarity so apparent in the harmony, that the listener willingly foregoes the more abstruse complications of modern works, and finds sensuous delight in its simplicity. These qualities of freshness and spontaneity require the same characteristics in the singers, and the Colon management took good care to select well-tried artists for the occasion. The famous sextette, for example, is a veritable "tour de force," and all those who take part therein must be on the same level of excellence for it to be a success. Although Señora Amelita Galli Curci was suffering from slight nervousness in the first act, it soon became plain, as the evening wore on, that the part was peculiarly fitted to her temperament. Gifted with a refined voice of extensive range, Señora Curci united a pure utterance with a finished stage presence and an interpretation of her rôle which at times rose to heights of vivid intensity, as was manifest in the Mad scene, the duet of the first act, and the sextet. During these moments, the audience, from the stalls upwards, gave way to demonstrations of applause rarely heard in the local opera house. Señora Curci's reputation as a fine artist, which she brought from Spain, has been amply confirmed, and her voice seems to have greatly improved since she was heard at the Colon two years ago.

Sr. Caruso began his interpretation in a voice full of promise. It seemed that the evening would be unforgettable, but as he proceeded it was evident that a slight cold had caused an appreciable hoarseness in the throat, and in the final scene of the suicide this was marked to such an extent that he was forced to leave the stage. Many persons in the stalls and boxes stood up insistently applauding and shouting for Caruso to re-appear, but this he refused to do.

Here it is right to mention that the unequal manner in which the Colon Theatre is heated, allowing blasts of cold air to sweep from the stage into the auditorium, would be quite sufficient to damage the vocal chords of a singer, and the unfortunate breakdown of Sr. Caruso's part must only be attributed to this cause, which, it is to be trusted, the authorities of the theatre will see fit to remedy at an early date.

The scenery and orchestra, as well as the minor parts and the choruses, were all above reproach.

JOCKEY CLUB INCOME

A NEW PROPOSAL.

The Deputy for the Province of Buenos Aires, Dr. Nicholas A. Avellaneda, is stated to be seriously engaged upon a project, which he wishes to make law, whereby the earnings, profits, income or by whatever term these may be designated, accruing to the Government from the Jockey Club shall be turned over to the Municipality of the city.

Dr. Avellaneda does not agree that the income should remain in the hands of the Jockey Club, but proposes, that as soon as his project becomes law, that in the first year 20 per cent of the Club's earnings should be handed over to the Municipality and that this amount should go on increasing year by year until 70 per cent of profits found its way into the pockets of the city's authoritative body. The remaining 30 per cent Dr. Avellaneda proposes to leave alone, for prize money, wages, donations and the like.

The originator of this project is stated to believe, that in these hard times such a step is necessary and that possibly such an idea may save the making of more radical laws in the future.

Mainly About People

Mr. Charles Kenny has left town for Venado Tuerto.

Mr. Andrew Wallace has arrived in the Capital.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin, late of Villa Devoto, have left for Rosario, where they will live in future.

Mrs. S. O. Stanton will be at home Calle Moldes 1716, Belgrano, on Monday and Tuesday, July 5 and 6.

Mr. G. Meads and Miss Ethel Meads, of Olavarria, F.C.S., are on a short visit to the Capital.

A parcel of reading matter for the men of the British warships in South American waters has been received by "The Herald" from Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Laing.

The British Bank of South America Ltd., having received various applications to subscribe to the new British War Loan, are prepared to telegraph such applications to London.

Mr. Fred. C. Haddock, of the Establecimiento "La Peninsula," Camarones, Chubut, has been in Buenos Aires for some days. Mr. Haddock has two nephews serving with the British forces.

Mr. M. M. Stewart, of the J. I. Case Threshing Co., Bahia Blanca, who has been in hospital in Buenos Aires for some time, is now able to get about, but his medical advisers fear that another operation will be necessary before he is completely well.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Middlemas are among the passengers leaving by the Demerara on Monday for England. Mr. Middlemas proposes, on reaching home, to offer himself for service. His mechanical qualifications would probably be of special use in the Engineers, to which branch of the Service he will endeavour to be attached.

Copies, in English, of the official "Report of the Committee on Alleged German Outrages" appointed by His Britannic Majesty's Government and presided over by the Right Hon. Viscount Bryce can be obtained on personal application to the Secretary of the British Chamber of Commerce, Calle Sarmiento 643.

Mr. Harry Lonnon, of Estacion Aparicio, F.C.S., will leave for England on July 10 in charge of a shipment of horses for Señor Casares. The horses are a special lot, and have been selected mainly by the well known expert, Mr. James Garlick. Mr. Lonnon expects to return to Argentina in the course of a month or two.

Mr. Francois Gordon Spicer, late of the F.C.C.C., after a three years residence in this country, is leaving for England. Mr. Spicer is a relative of Sir Albert Spicer, and before coming to Argentina was for several years professor of English at the German University of Prague, in Bohemia. He has already two brothers in the trenches in Flanders, and proposes himself to join the Red Cross Ambulance Corps. Mrs. Spicer is under medical treatment, and is therefore unable to accompany her husband.

Lieut. Charles Murchland, only son of ex-Provost Murchland, Irvine, Ayrshire, who was killed on May 26, held a commission for a number of years in the 1st (Irvine) Battery 2nd Lovland Brigade R.F.A., retiring with the rank of Captain four years ago. He then went to the Argentine Republic, from whence he returned on the outbreak of war and received a commission in Kitchener's Army. A ranker at one time in the old Volunteers, he was highly popular amongst the officers and men both in Irvine and with the Regular Battery in France. He refused a commission in the Territorial Force in order to get quickly to the front. He was a keen athlete, being well known in football, rugby and cricket circles. Lieut. Murchland was only 32 years of age.

DAY BY DAY IN BAHIA BLANCA

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

June 24.

Some ten visitors are expected to arrive here on Saturday morning from the Southern Railway departments in order to take part in tennis, chess and golf competitions which are to be held at the end of the week.

Sr. U. Orsi, whose father was formerly a Captain in the Italian army, is leaving the Pacific Railway at the end of the month in order to proceed to Italy as a volunteer.

Mr. Bullmore, who has been living at the Port for the past year, is leaving there next week as a passenger on the "C. 4" for Australia.

June 27.

A very successful concert was held last night at the municipal theatre in aid of the Scotch Church Building Fund.

Mr. Thomas, who was formerly assistant engineer at Port Galvan, left with his family on board the s.s. Consols for England last Friday in order to offer his services to the British Government.

Mrs. Harding Green left here on Friday night by the Pringles train for Buenos Aires.

ENGLISH--AS WRITTEN IN LOMAS

A PECULIAR PROGRAMME.

The following weird example of English, as written in Lomas, appears on the newly issued programme of a cinema hall in that salubrious suburb:—

We have the great pleasure to announce you the collection of the most important cinematographic films that will be exhibited during the next week in this biograph, beginning in the date still Sunday 4th of July.

As you can see, it is an extraordinary collection of moving pictures just received and for the first time exhibited in Buenos Aires City where they have made big exit.

We desire that will be agreeable to you and waiting see you there, we present our most consideration.

Your very truly

Lomas de Zamora, 28 Juny 1915.

JEWEL ROBBERY

Notice has just come to hand of a daring robbery which was perpetrated on Tuesday night at a private house in Berutti 3741.

The house is tenanted by Señora Isabel Engreen and the knowledge that she possessed a beautiful collection of jewels determined some person or persons unknown to make the attempt to transfer her property to themselves.

The house is of modern construction and of two stories, the upper one being tenanted by the injured lady.

At 11 p.m. on Tuesday night a vigilante noticed that the door of the house was ajar and on closer examination he observed it had been forced. He awoke the servant girl and drew her attention to the discovery and proceeded to report the matter at headquarters. Returning with his superiors it was discovered that the inner door and two cupboards, in one of which the jewels were kept, had been forced open and the contents stolen.

The police have no knowledge of the perpetrators of the robbery but they state they possess clues which will soon bring them to justice.

It is stated Sra. Engreen's loss amounts to $25,000.

THE KAISER DESIRES PROFITABLE PEACE

"PREPARATION FOR THE FUTURE"

Paris, June 19.

Extracts from a letter alleged to have been written by the Kaiser to a personage connected with the Bavarian Court and published in Spain have been reproduced by "Le Matin."

In one part the letter says:

"Our only object is to obtain a peace which shall be profitable to the German States. Peace may be concluded sooner than is thought; and if it gave, for the time being, only an incomplete result, it would at least serve as a preparation for the future. It could be signed tomorrow if I wished."

"When my august grandfather placed the Empire on its present basis, he did not pretend to have realised a completed work. The Empire is always susceptible of growth; and what cannot be achieved to-day will be achieved later."

NO DESIRE FOR PEACE

NO DASHING ADVANCE

NEGATIVES IN THE GREAT WAR

New York, June 19.

The London correspondent of the United Press Agency telegraphs:—

"Although no official information is obtainable on the subject, I am in a position to state authoritatively that the Allied Governments, especially that of England, would look upon any peace proposals which Germany may make at the present moment as premature. Great Britain is determined to continue the war until at least the Germans have been driven back to their own territory."

"There is good reason to believe that Germany has passed the culminating point of her offensive power, and that from now onward she will have to fight desperately on the defensive in order to retain the territory she occupied in the rapid advance she made at the commencement of the war."

"England, on the other hand, is only now arriving at the completion of her military preparations, and when these are all complete the Germans will be dislodged from France."

"The opinion entertained in military circles here is that the final result of the war will not be obtained by a dashing advance but by a long drawn out campaign, as the Germans have numerous defence works in Flanders and France. The prolongation of the struggle must be to the advantage of the Allies, as they have at their disposal greater resources than Germany."

"Lastly, Britain wishes to prove to the world that an army of volunteers can oppose and overcome the system which the English call 'German militarism.'"

"As for the reported German victories in Galicia, there are some who doubt their importance, and in any case it appears that they are due to the want of ammunition in the Russian army. This is what also prevented the British and French from taking the offensive in the West. But this is an inconvenience that will soon be remedied, and the Allies will soon have the upper hand over the Germans as regards abundance of ammunition."

"The French nation would undoubtedly oppose any attempt to make peace at this moment. The Government has, in this matter, the decided support of the whole nation."

It was an old labourer who the other day achieved a pile of negatives when the vicar gave him the last ticket for grocery, and the old fellow was asked not to talk about it. Said he: "If no one didn't tell no more nor what I do, they's know not more nor what they do."

WAR PLANNED IN 1908

KAISER'S ALL-NIGHT COUNCIL.

In a lecture given recently in Edinburgh by Mr. William Le Queux on the German spy peril, the following passages occur:—

Mr. Le Queux at the outset read a telegram which he had received from Lord Charles Beresford, to the effect that the German spy peril was very serious, and, in his opinion, the authorities were not taking adequate steps to meet it. (Applause). The lecturer went on to say that the fact that the Kaiser was planning war was first known in 1908, and he was the first man, or one of the first, in Great Britain who knew that fact. He then discovered that already a perfect network of espionage had been spread over the face of the land. With this knowledge he went to the War Office, but he was not believed. He persevered, some months elapsed, and he was able to return to the War Office, and with certain documents which made it no longer possible for them to disbelieve him. The late Lord Roberts then came to his assistance, and, owing to his efforts, there had been formed a Department at the War Office dealing with the matter.

Mr. Le Queux told of how he obtained in Germany a document for which the Germans would have paid many thousands of pounds. It was a verbatim report of a speech made by the Kaiser in 1908 to his Generals, Admirals, and the Chiefs of the Federal States. The speech took two hours and a half to deliver, and was discussed for five hours during the night. In this speech the Kaiser declared war against England. The document was put before the Cabinet, and after inquiries they accepted it as true. In the course of the declaration, the Kaiser used these significant words: "We shall strike as soon as I have a sufficiently large fleet of Zeppelins at my disposal. I have given orders for the hurried construction of more airships of the improved Zeppelin type. When these are ready we shall destroy England's North Sea, Channel, and Atlantic Fleets, after which nothing on earth can prevent the landing of our Army on British soil and its triumphant march on London." The Kaiser also said in conclusion:—"With Great Britain and France in the dust, with Russia and the United States at my mercy, I shall set a new course to the destinies of the world, a course that will ensure to Germany for all time to come the leading part among nations of the globe." Lord Roberts on account of that speech resigned from the Army Council, and commenced his great work of universal service. (Applause).

HUN EXCUSES FOR REPRISALS.

New York, June 19.

A radiogram from Berlin announces that the German Government has published the following official statement:

"By way of reprisal for the treatment to which German prisoners in tropical Africa are being subjected, the French prisoners in Germany will be compelled to work in swamps in various parts of the Empire."

"In spite of the repeated representations which we have made through the American and Spanish Ambassadors, the French Government has refused to modify the brutal treatment of German prisoners, both civil and military, especially in Dahomey. White men of good education are kept under the vigilance of blacks, without proper clothing or food, with no provision against illness, and are obliged to do the hardest work while being subjected to the vilest indignities."

EXPORTATION OF CERFALSCONSIDERABLE DECREASE.

The official figures of the exports for the week which ended yesterday show a total cereal exports of 170,634 tons, as against 200,315 tons of the previous week. The amount is made up by 34,670 tons of wheat, 112,164 of maize, 13,939 of flax, and 9,911 of oats.

The shipment of maize has been very large. Rosario and San Lorenzo have sent away 74,435 tons of the commodity; 25,385 to Buenos Aires and 12,344 to San Nicholas.

No shipment of wheat has been made from Bahia Blanca, which generally heads the export list, but from Rosario 19,645 tons have been exported.

Total shipments from the commencement of the year now amount to 2,236,600 tons of wheat against 957,760 tons of the previous year; 1,418,412 tons of maize as compared with 1,133,351; flax 599,086 as against 676,962 tons, and oats 465,307 tons as compared with 327,597.

Butter shipments were very poor and insignificant. 2,046 bales of wool were shipped, being divided as follows:—767 to the United States, 400 to Bordeaux, 383 to Barcelona, and 373 to Genoa.

AUTONOMY OF POLANDAN ACCOMPLISHED FACT

Petrograd, June 25.

The Ministerial Council has resolved to nominate a commission composed of six Russians and six Poles, with M. Goremkin, State Councillor and Senator, as President. The duties of the commission will be to make the preliminary arrangements for establishing the autonomy of Poland, which will be proclaimed in accordance with the proclamation issued by Grand Duke Nicholas on August 14 last year.

The announcement has caused an excellent impression, and meets with the approval of the whole of the Press.

CONSOLIDATING UNION WITH FRANCE AND BRITAIN.

London, June 25.

Telegrams from Petrograd announce that within a short time the autonomy of Poland will be an accomplished fact.

It is universally allowed that the act of the Tsar Nicholas in voluntarily granting Poland her freedom will go far to consolidate the union of France and Britain with Russia, inasmuch as it will be a convincing proof that his Majesty is swayed by the highest principles of justice.

Incidentally it will probably also prove to be a wise action as being calculated to enlist the sympathies and aid of the Poles in the struggles with the German invader.

AFRICANS FOR FLANDERSUNION TROOPS LEAVING THE CAPE

London, June 25.

A cable message from Capetown announces that a strong contingent of South African troops is just about to sail for Europe to join the Allied forces. Other contingents have been mobilised and are now in training with the object of following the first with as little delay as possible.

GREEK MONARCH NOW CONVALESCENT.

London, June 29.

A telegram from Athens reports that the condition of King Constantine's health continues to improve steadily, and in a few days his Majesty will be considered convalescent and will be removed to Decelle castle. No more medical bulletins will be published.

THE DEATH WHISTLEGermans and Their Wounded*A HORRIBLE ACCUSATION

We have been regaled with many more or less authentic reports concerning the callous manner in which the Germans treat even their own wounded, but it has been left for M. Alexander Guchkov, an ex-President of the Russian Duma, who is now at the head of the Russian Red Cross organisation on the German frontier to accuse the enemy of the systematic and cold-blooded murder of soldiers whose wounds are of such a character as to render them of no further value as part of the war machine.

Mr. Victor Marsden states that M. Guchkov has in his possession a little piece of mechanism provided by the German Government for the military hospital officials and used by them on the field to give the "happy despatch" to men whose injuries seem likely to result in permanent incapacitation from a military point of view. It is, nominally, a special form of whistle with which the hospital orderlies who inspect the fields are supposed to summon extra aid when needed, and is thus described by Mr. Marsden:—About five inches long, it looks like a rounded bit of wood shaped to fit the grasp. From one end protrudes the whistle, which really whistles when blown, but is a strong steel tube looking more like a small-bore revolver muzzle when viewed end on. At the other end of the wooden grip is a small cross-piece round which a couple of fingers can conveniently hook. A very curious whistle, and of no particular value as such. But grip the wooden handle and catch a couple of fingers in the cross-piece, and pull apart, and you find something working like a squirt. But it is not a squirt, not even for vitriol, the latest Germanic war-weapon; that particular invention of the field is worked by compressed air. This "whistle" for hospital orderlies is a miniature single-shot pistol. The whistle part runs solid through the handle and beyond; when the cross-piece is pulled out like a piston it reveals a slot into which a ball-cartridge is slipped. There is a strong spiral spring in the upper part, against which you pull to expose the loading slot. This spring also serves the firing pin.

The hospital men of the German army, having satisfied themselves that a given German soldier lying helpless on the field is of no further use to the State as a part of the fighting machine, apply the innocent-looking "whistle" to temple or heart or other vital spots, which even the elementary knowledge of a hospital orderly does not permit him to mistake. There is practically no noise, and the work is always done at night. The German soldier is not a man, only a part of the war-machine, and his value when "outed" is that of the useless horse, namely, the skin he wears. Whether the helpless soldier might recover and live out an average lifetime minus a limb or two is of no importance; this particular little bit of the mechanism of the war-machine is no further use for war and is "scrapped" on the spot, like the badly wounded horse.

It is quite a small thing, this "whistle," but, as Mr. Marsden remarks, it explains many things. It reveals to us the inward meaning of reports we have read of a moaning roomful of wounded soldiers suddenly becoming dead silent on the appearance of their own officers. It explains why the Russians, when they finally took Prasnish, found German wounded hidden away as far as the poor wretches could crawl, in attics and cellars and sties and barns, anywhere to escape the eye of their butchers—not the enemy, but the secret butchers appointed to the German army by the German Government, with special weapons devised and made for the ends of war as understood by the Germans.

H.M.S. GLASGOW

REPORTED REMOVAL FROM STATION.

A report from Montevideo alleges that the cruiser Glasgow, which since 1911 has been peculiarly the ship attached to the South American station, is about to be detached on other service, possibly north of Brazil or in the Pacific. The Glasgow, which is popular both here and in Montevideo, not only as an old friend, but on account of her prowess in battle may be replaced by the Bristol, another acquaintance of proved fighting quality and of the same class.

SHIPPING NOTES.

It is announced for the interest of shipping that H.B.M. Consul-General has received telegraphic advice from Las Palmas, Canary Islands, that clean bills of health are now being issued at that port to all steamers.

The Scientific American has compiled the following table of merchant shipping as at the end of 1914:—

	Tons.
Great Britain	20,275,791
Germany	4,998,746
United States	3,489,736
Norway	2,475,324
France	2,246,504
Japan	1,700,062
Italy	1,571,761

It should be noted that the figures corresponding to the United States include all vessels on the Great Lakes, rivers, etc., tonnage which amounts to more than a million and a half. Deducting this from the total, America drops to fifth position, i.e. after Norway and France.

The Pacific liner Ortega, under the command of Lieut. D. R. Kinnier, D.S.C., R.N.R., left Punta Arenas on June 25 en route for Liverpool. Previously she had made her first call at Port Stanley for over four years, and as, in addition to the fame of the commander, she had on board Mr. Young, the new Governor of the Falkland Islands, the populace gave them both a royal reception, but unfortunately Captain Kinnier had not brought with him the gold chronometer which he had received from the French Government. At Valparaíso it was reported, from Juan Fernandez, that the sunken German cruiser Dresden was lying, stem to shore, in 29 fathoms of water, and therefore it will be possible for divers to reach her. The natives marked the spot by buoys ingeniously made out of some old empty oil drums. They looked upon the fight as a rare bit of fun for them, just as if some enterprising cinema show had paid a visit to their remote possession.

GERMAN LINERS IN NEW YORK.

The German liners held up in New York—the Vaterland is one—are subjected to a monthly inspection which is usually made by twelve inspectors. Recently seventy were told off for the purpose. The unusual size of the detail gave rise to various reports—including one that the visit was more than a mere inspection, and that the big vessels would be searched throughout. It was rumoured that the visit was made upon telegraphic instructions from Washington.

There are several other reports as to what the inspectors are searching for. One is that they are seeking to determine if any of these ships have explosives aboard. At the collectors' office it was said that the men were only on the regular monthly trips of inspection, but no reason could be advanced why the number of inspectors was increased to seventy.

The wireless apparatus aboard some of the boats has been put out of commission, and a watch is being kept by the navy yard officials to see that no attempt is made to use it again.

COAL TO SOUTH AMERICA VIA CANAL.

Reports current on the west coast of South America indicate that a company has been organised in Chile to construct works for the smelting of the tin ore of Bolivia at Arica, in the extreme north of Chile. Formerly most of the tin ore of Bolivia reached the coast at Mollendo, in South Peru, in the form of a "concentrate" and was there put aboard ships and sent to Europe for smelting, since the cost of coal on the Pacific coast of South America had rendered smelting extremely expensive. Much of the coal used on the northern Pacific coast has been in the past imported from Australia or England, but the opening of the Panama canal

THE STRANDED SHIP

CONSIDERED A TOTAL LOSS.

From Porto Alegre news continues to be received concerning the wreck of the Spanish vessel, "Nuestra Señora de Borgona," which went ashore on the Brazilian coast a few days ago and was later abandoned by her crew.

The "Nuestra Señora de Borgona," as stated yesterday in these columns, was carrying a cargo of 2,000 tons of coal from Cardiff to Rosario, and that it was feared that both the vessel and the cargo would be completely lost.

Strenuous efforts have been made to save the ship and to re-ship some of her cargo, but without avail. The high sea running makes the task one of considerable danger, and the ship is reported to be breaking up fast.

A further effort will be made, but it is considered that this, like the first, will be futile.

The crew, twenty-seven in number, will be shipped to Buenos Aires, and from thence to Spain.

THE DANGERS OF FIREARMS

A BOY SERIOUSLY WOUNDED.

Although there is a law in the Republic which prohibits the carrying of firearms without permission and under heavy financial penalties, it is one of those laws which are made apparently to be ignored, except when convenient to the authorities. Almost daily some more or less serious shooting affray is reported, but practically never is heard the voice of authority insisting upon the fulfilment of their own laws.

The latest information in respect to wounding by firearms concerns a boy named José Berenzo, who lives in a house in Sarmiento 1915. He was playing with a companion, another boy of about the same age, Carmelo Bartolome, 16 years of age, now lies dangerously wounded in hospital as the result of "examining an automatic pistol."

It appears that after the incident, which is reported to have been entirely an accident, José fled and has not since been heard of.

It is not known whether he knew the pistol was loaded nor how he came in possession of the weapon. The neighbours who gave information to the Comisaria whose officials immediately removed the boy Bartolome to the hospital, deny all knowledge of the affair.

WOMAN'S HAND FOUND

MORE REMAINS FROM WASTE GROUND.

Human remains seem to have become unpleasantly common of late in the Capital and an epidemic of grisly discoveries has apparently set in. The latest is that of a hand, a woman's hand, which was found on Thursday by two boys on the waste ground fronting number 2754 Tronador. Dr. Espina, the Police Surgeon, after examining the relic, gave it as his opinion that in this case there is some reason for the theory that the object has been in the possession of Medical Students. The hand has been preserved in Formol and has been either lost or thrown away. It obviously came from a subject used for anatomical investigation. The police, however, are making full enquiries lest the origin of the find should be less innocent than this opinion suggests.

gives a short route from the coal ports of the United States with the advantage that ships carrying the coal to the smelter can bring back the smelted tin to that market, which now imports annually nearly 50 million dollars worth of pig tin.

WHAT NEXT

CARNETS FOR TRAM PASSENGERS.

Considerable irritation is said to have been caused at Montevideo owing to the Tramway companies wishing to make season ticket-holders carry a carnet bearing their portrait and finger prints for identification. It is declared that no company which is ostensibly in business to serve the public and to sell them certain facilities has any right to make such a demand, which is regarded as improper and impertinent. It is expected that the Municipality will intervene to define the rights of the tramway companies.

BLOODLESS OCCUPATION

SCUTARI BOWS TO THE INEVITABLE.

Rome, June 30.

Details communicated from Cetinje regarding the occupation of Scutari by the Montenegrins state that there was no fighting. A parley was held between the Montenegrin chiefs and the authorities of Scutari in which the foreign consuls took part. The result was an amicable agreement, the inhabitants being loth once more to undergo the inconveniences attending a siege, especially as they entertained no particular enmity towards the Montenegrins.

The Austrian consul is still in the city, having of his own accord taken down the badge over the door of the premises he was occupying and placed himself under the protection of the Greek consul.

Germans Prepare Another Attack

British Prepared for Desperate Struggle

London, July 7.

Information received from the headquarters of the British Army in Flanders and from Amsterdam leaves little room for doubt that the Germans are making preparations on a vast scale for a renewed attempt to break through the British lines and advance upon Calais.

Great masses of German troops are being assembled before Ypres, obviously with the intention of commencing the attack as soon as it is considered advisable. In addition to troops, numbers of heavy guns and all kinds of war material are constantly arriving in the German lines in this region.

The impression among the military critics is that the recent German attacks in the Vosges and Argonne districts are merely to keep the French troops there engaged and prevent them from reinforcing the British when the attack begins.

The British are quite aware of what is going on, and have strengthened their positions all along the line.

GERMANY'S LATEST SURPRISE PACKET.

London, July 7.

A telegram from Rotterdam to the "Daily Mail" says that the Germans have another surprise in store for the Allies, which consists in the automatic loading of the fieldguns which will enable them to be discharged with a rapidity such as has never been known hitherto.

This surprise is being reserved for the moment when the Germans are ready to make their fresh attempt to force their way past the Allies' lines to Calais.

FRENCH OFFICIAL REPORT

Paris, July 7.

An official report published this afternoon says:

"In the region to the north of Arras the bombardment continued all last night. Two attacks were delivered by the Germans, neither of which were successful.

"An attack upon the railway station at Souchez was repulsed.

"On the heights of the Meuse at about 9 o'clock last night an attack was directed against our positions on the southern side of the Souvaux ravine, but was checked by the fire from our barricades. At the same time the Germans delivered an attack to the west of this ravine, but here also they were repulsed.

"To the southeast of Saint Mihiel the enemy, after a bombardment of great violence, took the offensive last night along a front stretching from a hill which commands the right bank of the Meuse to a point south, as far as the locality known as Cow's Head in the forest of Apremont. At one single point in the Vauxfery region, they were successful in penetrating our first line along a front of about 700 yards. At all other points they were repulsed with heavy losses.

"In the eastern part of the forest of La Pretre we checked a fresh German attack, which was preceded by the throwing of flaming liquid."

VON KLUCK COMMANDS AGAIN

Amsterdam, July 7.

Information has been received that General von Kluck has now quite recovered from the wound he received some months ago, and has resumed command of the German forces operating in the region of Soissons.

FIGHTING IN THE VOSGES.

Paris, July 7.

Yesterday the Germans took the offensive in the Vosges region, and fighting has been going on ever since, the French holding on to their positions and inflicting heavy punishment on the enemy.

It has been discovered that the German troops being utilised in this district are largely composed of raw recruits.

The French forces have been further strengthened, and their artillery fire is demoralising the enemy.

Artillery duels are also proceeding at La Fontanelle, Hartmannswillerkopf, and Thann in Upper Alsace, the French batteries having the best of the encounter.

GERMAN AEROPLANES OVER DOVER.

London, July 7.

Two German aeroplanes were sighted this morning over Dover. They were pursued by British aeroplanes and compelled to flee.

CLOSER WATCH ON GERMAN PRISONERS.

London, July 7.

Following on the report of the escape of German prisoners from Donnington Hall, it is announced that special measures are being taken to prevent such escapes in future.

Some of those who are suspected of the intention of trying to escape have been placed in safer custody.

PRODIGIOUS CONSUMPTION OF SHELLS.

London, July 7.

Despatches from the British front in Flanders state that the severity of the artillery duel is increasing, and that the expenditure of ammunition is prodigious.

A REPORTED CONFIRMED.

London, July 7.

The report that General Liman von Sanders has been wounded in a recent attack on the British lines of Gallipoli peninsula is confirmed by German official despatches received in Holland.

MORE TRENCHES TAKEN.

London, July 7.

A despatch from Tenedos announces that the Turkish positions on Gallipoli have again been subjected to a heavy bombardment which was accompanied by an infantry attack, the Allies taking several trenches.

BRITISH AIRMEN ATTACK POSITIONS.

London, July 7.

Telegrams from the Dardanelles report that the British airmen have bombed the Turkish military positions at Smyrna and elsewhere on the coast of Asia Minor, doing considerable damage.

The British Government has received official despatches stating that the Turkish forces have been reinforced by ten thousand Arabs.

BRITISH AND FRENCH COOPERATION

FINE RESULTS OF COMBINED OPERATIONS.

London, July 7.

The report of the capture by combined British and French forces of a number of German trenches at Pilliken serves to show how splendidly the Allies are working together, and how the union between them is further strengthened by their joint efforts and sacrifices.

In this case the trenches were first subjected to the fire of the French 75's. When their work was finished, the British infantry charged and took the trenches at the point of the bayonet.

SHARP FIGHTING AT ARRAS.

London, July 7.

There have been sharp engagements at Souchez, near Arras, at the forest of La Pretre, in the vicinity of Pont-à-Mousson, and on the heights of the Meuse, in all of which the Germans have suffered severely, the Allies also having taken several lines of trenches.

ANOTHER WINTER CAMPAIGN

GERMANY ORDERS 15,000 MOTOR SLEDGES.

London, July 1.

It is reported from Bern that the German Government has placed orders in Switzerland for fifteen thousand motor sledges, showing that preparations are being made by Germany for another winter campaign.

GERMAN GENERAL KILLED

OTHER HIGH OFFICIAL CASUALTIES.

La Hague, July 6.

Despatches from Berlin announce that Lieutenant-General Hildebrandt, commander of an infantry division, fell in battle on July 3.

The deceased officer had a distinguished record, having been in possession of Iron Crosses of the first and second classes.

It is also reported that Lieutenant-General Von Pözel has died of illness contracted during the campaign.

It is reported from Athens that the German military Attaché to the Embassy at Constantinople, Von Lelispig, has committed suicide.

Athens, July 6.

It is now officially announced the Colonel Von Leipziger, military Attaché to the German Embassy in Constantinople, who had been reported as murdered by the Turkish party which is opposed to the war, committed suicide.

GENERAL VON SANDERS WOUNDED.

Athens, July 6.

It is insistently rumoured that the German General Von Sanders has been removed from the Gallipoli front to Constantinople seriously wounded in a recent attack on the British positions near Aviburnu.

ZEPPELIN DESTROYED

ACCIDENT NEAR BRUSSELS.

New York, July 2.

A telegram from Amsterdam announces that a Zeppelin was accidentally destroyed near Brussels owing to the machinery going wrong. The crew on board the dirigible escaped, but the Zeppelin was burned.

AN UNFORTUNATE ACCIDENT

Amsterdam, July 2.

The destruction of the Zeppelin near Brussels to-day was caused by an explosion as the airship was being brought out of its hangar. The cause of the explosion and the number of victims are unknown.

GERMANY SUPPRESSES DETAILS

Amsterdam, July 7.

Despatches from Ghent say that to-day a Zeppelin became unmanageable owing to a defect in the motor and fell several hundred feet, alighting on a farm near Asseneve. The German authorities have suppressed all details as to victims and damages to the airship.

CAMPAIGN IN AFRICA

CAPTURE OF OTAVI.

London, July 7.

A cable message from Pretoria announces the receipt of a despatch from General Botha reporting the capture of the German military station of Otavi in the northern portion of German South-West Africa, after a long running fight.

AT THE DARDANELLES

Turkish Attacks Fail Completely

FRENCH TRANSPORT REPORTED SUNK

Energetic Naval Operations

London, July 7.

The British Government officially announces that the casualties of the Turkish army on Gallipoli peninsula since the commencement of the attack upon the Dardanelles amount to 180,000 men.

TURKISH REPORTS OF SUCCESSES.

New York, July 7.

A wireless communication from Constantinople announces that on July 4 a German submarine sank a large French transport steamer off Seddul Bahr (apparently the Carthage).

It is further stated that on the night of July 3 the Turks repulsed attempts of the enemy to bring forward strong divisions against their right wing.

TURKISH SHIP SUNK.

Petrograd, July 7.

A despatch from the headquarters of the Russian army in the Caucasus reports that a Russian motor-boat in the Black Sea sank a large sailing ship of Turkish nationality.

TURKISH DEFEAT IN THE CAUCASUS.

Petrograd, July 7.

To-day's official report states:

"In the Caucasus to the south of the Kaladagh range a Russian detachment encountered a regiment of Turkish infantry with artillery and machine guns, and two squadrons of cavalry. The enemy was defeated.

"Heavy losses were inflicted upon the Turks west of Aylavat. The Turks attempted to take the offensive, but failed. Nothing of importance has occurred on the rest of the front."

GENERAL GOURAUD WOUNDED

FRENCH COMMANDER'S NARROW ESCAPE.

Paris, July 6.

According to a telegram from Athens, an officer who has come there from the Dardanelles states that on June 30 the French Commander, General Gouraud, hearing that the Turks were about to commence an attack, went to the advanced trenches about 200 metres from the enemy's lines. While there, a shell exploded at his feet, the force of the explosion hurling him into the air.

The General sustained injuries to the right arm and leg, but none of them of a dangerous character.

TURKISH DEPUTY ASSASSINATED

CRIME IN ASIA MINOR.

Petrograd, July 2.

A telegram from Tiflis announces the receipt of a despatch from Melazgero in Asia Minor reporting that the Turkish Deputy, M. Vradian, had been assassinated at Diarbekr, the capital of the district he represented. No further details have been furnished.

TURKS FAIL AGAIN

ALLIED LINES HOLD FAST.

Paris, July 7.

An official communiqué concerning operations in the Dardanelles reports as follows:—

"On July 5 the Turks renewed their efforts of the early days of May last to drive us into the sea.

"At four in the morning a very intense artillery fire opened on our first lines, as well as on the zone behind those lines which were occupied by French and British troops.

"The enemy subsequently attempted to deliver several infantry attacks, but not one was successful in coming as far as our trenches. Decimated by our artillery fire, and mowed down by our rifles and machine guns, most of our assailants never left the field of battle.

"During this action the batteries of the enemy on the Asiatic coast took a desultory part in the engagement, and a Turkish cruiser steamed up and down the channel opposite Maidos bringing her guns into action. On several different occasions also the enemy's aviators dropped bombs on our lines.

"Towards the end of the day a group of about fifteen British and French aviators flew over the Turkish aerodrome at Chanak and threw bombs. They were successful in striking the principal hangar with a big bomb."

FRENCH NAVAL ACTIVITY

TURKISH SUPPLY SHIPS SUNK.

London, July 7.

The "Daily Telegraph" publishes a telegram from Athens reporting that a French destroyer cruised along the coast of Asia Minor from Chios to Kiobama, visiting all ports and bays on the way. She sank twelve of the enemy's supply ships and set fire to the Birmen forest.

Another destroyer bombarded Hitia, Chesmeh, and Agailion, destroying the lighthouse and Customs station and sinking several vessels.

GOOD SHOOTING BY FRENCH SHIPS.

New York, July 7.

A wireless message received by the Sayville station to-day from Berlin states that the French armoured cruiser Jeanne d'Arc has again bombarded the Turkish port of Alexandretta. The Turkish authorities there deny the report that they hauled down the German flag over the Consulate of that nation, but state that it was knocked down by the fire of the French cruiser.

It is also stated in the message that the French liner Carthage, which was sunk by a German submarine off Cape Helles was carrying war material valued at $200,000.

The German Government denies that German officers opened and censored correspondence aboard the Swedish steamers Bjoern and Thorsen. It is stated that in the case of the former vessel they did remove some nippers for cutting barbed wire which were addressed to the British Government.

RUSSIAN SUCCESSES IN THE BALTIC

GERMAN BATTLESHIP SUNK.

London, July 5.

The Russian Admiralty announces that in the naval fight off the Gothland islands last Friday a German battleship of the Deutschland type, which was leading the line of battle, was sunk by a Russian submarine, while a light cruiser which had been severely shelled, was compelled to run aground to avoid capture or being sunk.

(Note.—The Deutschland is a battleship of 13,040 tons, and over 18 knots speed. Her armament includes four 11 inch and fourteen 6.7 inch guns, with six submerged torpedo tubes).

SUBMARINE RAMMED BY RUSSIAN DESTROYER.

Petrograd, July 5.

The Russian squadron which engaged a German squadron last Friday off Gothland island was strengthened by the arrival of several cruisers and destroyers, and continued the pursuit of the retreating enemy in a southerly direction.

There has been a heavy interchange of fire with only slight occasional interruptions.

The Germans, on their part, were joined by several Zeppelins and a large number of aeroplanes, which endeavoured to bomb the Russian units; but the dirigibles were driven off by the Russian guns.

The losses on board the Russian warships have only been trivial.

The Russian Admiralty announces that yesterday a Russian destroyer rammed a German submarine which sank and did not rise again to the surface.

DESTRUCTION OF MINE LAYER.

London, July 5.

It is officially announced that when the German minelayer Albatross was sunk Lieutenant Loewenberg and seven other officers on board were killed while 187 of the crew were taken prisoners by the Russians and interned.

HEAVY GERMAN CASUALTIES.

New York, July 5.

Despatches from Berlin announce that those who were killed on board the Albatross in the combat of July 2, were buried to-day with full honours on Gothland island.

Revised estimates give a total of 40 killed, three dying of their wounds and 30 wounded who are getting better.

SITUATION IN POLAND

CONSIDERED TO BE SATISFACTORY.

Petrograd, July 7.

In the Shavli region, on the Narew and on the left bank of the Vistula the situation is stationary.

The Germans attacked and captured a forest in which the Russians had constructed strong defence works near the high road between Shavli and Kalwarie; but the Russians have gathered fresh troops and are about to counter-attack with the object of recovering the position.

Elsewhere nothing worth mentioning has occurred. The two armies remain in an attitude of suspense, waiting for an opportune moment to take the offensive with advantage.

It is expected that the operations on the left bank of the Vistula will become more active when the Russian reinforcements arrive. The Russian troops on the Narew also are expecting to receive new artillery. On the whole the situation in Poland is considered satisfactory.

RUSSIA'S NEW LOAN

2,500 MILLIONS OF FRANCS.

Petrograd, July 3.

An Imperial decree has been issued authorising the Minister of Finance to raise two loans of 1250 million francs each by the issue of Treasury bonds, bearing 5 per cent interest free of taxation.

A POPULAR LOAN.

Petrograd, July 3.

The details of the new loans which are about to be issued by the Russian Government, as given in the official newspaper, show that Treasury notes will be issued for the amounts redeemable at short dates bearing 5 per cent interest free of income tax. Subscriptions will be accepted from 250 francs upwards in order to give the loans a popular aspect and as constituting an appeal to Russian as well as to foreign investors. The issue will run for six months beginning from to-day.

RUSSIAN ARMY TRAITORS

HANGED—NOT SHOT.

Petrograd, July 5.

Three accomplices of Lieutenant-Colonel Miassoyedoff, interpreter on the staff of the Tenth Russian army, who was hanged as a traitor some time ago, have been convicted by courtmartial and also hanged.

After the sentence upon Lieut. Miassoyedoff was carried out early last April, it was announced that many accomplices, unconnected with the Tenth army which was routed on the Mazurian Lakes on February last had been arrested.

The circumstances connected with the disaster led to the suspicion and conviction of Miassoyedoff.

SERBIAN SUCCESSES

AUSTRIAN AEROPLANE BURNED.

London, July 2.

An official despatch from Nish says:

"Early on Sunday we forced a landing on the island of Nicharska in the Danube, and captured the place, taking 185 prisoners. The enemy lost heavily in killed and wounded. Our booty included a field telephone, 106 rifles and bayonets and five ammunition waggons.

"Early on Monday four hostile aeroplanes flew over the suburbs of Belgrade, and were attacked by our artillery. One of them was forced to land in the heights of Repanja, where it caught fire and was burned. The other three bombarded Obrenovatz without result."

LAND MINES EXPLODED

Petrograd, July 6.

Another official bulletin issued to-day says:—

"In the region of Jedwabno on July 3 the Germans unsuccessfully exploded two mine chambers, then opened a violent artillery fire.

"An explosion by our sappers blew up a German mine gallery next day, this success provoking another fierce bombardment by the enemy.

"In the direction of Lublin the enemy, after stubborn fighting, has advanced on the front between Krasnik and the Vievprz river.

"On the Dniester the situation is unchanged."

DROUGHT IN AUSTRIA

SERIOUS DAMAGE TO CROPS.

Paris, July 1.

A telegram from Zurich states that a prolonged drought is doing great harm to the crops in Austria. The crop of barley and oats is considered a dead loss, and the yield of hay will be very deficient.

THE ITALIAN CAMPAIGN

No Decisive Movements

AUSTRIANS MURDER NURSES

Fine Work by Alpini

Rome, July 7.

The newspapers publish an official contradiction of the charges of the Austrian Press that the Italians are conveying machine guns from one place to another concealed in the stretchers of the medical sections. These false statements are evidently published to justify the breaches of the laws of civilised warfare committed by the Austrians themselves.

As a case in point it is mentioned that on June 29 near Plava the Austrians fired on some members of the Italian Medical Corps and killed two nurses. Also at Monfalcone on July 3 they made prisoners of a Captain of Grenadiers and thirteen stretcher bearers while engaged in picking up the wounded.

The Austrians habitually make use of small balloons whereby to scatter in the Italian lines leaflets and manifestoes full of silly lies and coarse insults to the Italian Government, persisting in their attempts to induce the soldiers to desert.

The only reply from the troops is increased vigour in the attack, giving proof of the good fellowship existing between officers and men.

RUSSIAN CAPTIVES TO JOIN ITALIAN FORCES.

Rome, July 7.

"La Tribuna" says that the negotiations between Italy and Russia for the release of the prisoners of Italian origin captured by the Russians in the battles with the Austrians in Galicia are on the point of reaching a successful termination. This will enable over 6000 trained Trentinos to join the Italian forces in the present war against the Teuton empires.

DESTRUCTION OF SILK INDUSTRY

Rome, July 7.

The war is having a most disastrous effect in the Tyrol where millions of silkworms have been thrown away owing to there being no one to look after them. Also the military authorities have cut down great areas of mulberry trees in order that they shall not form cover for the enemy.

The Swiss-German frontier is still kept closed by the Germans.

KING'S SON AN AVIATOR.

New York, July 7.

The "New York Sun" publishes a communication from its correspondent in Rome saying that King Victor Emmanuel's young son, Prince Humberto, and the young American aviator John Lansing Callan have become close friends through the Prince's interest in flying and his wish to become an aviator.

A month ago the Prince met Callan at the aviation camps at which the American was instructing the recruits attached to the Italian air forces. Callan took the Prince for an hour's flight, and explained the technique of flying to his royal passenger.

AUSTRIAN WAR LOAN.

New York, July 7.

An official despatch from Vienna announces that the subscriptions to the second Austro-Hungarian loan have amounted to 2,650 million crowns.

HIS TROPHY OF WAR

AN ALPINI'S ADVENTURE.

London, July 7.

A telegram from Udine to the International News Agency gives an account of an incident that occurred recently on the Italian frontier.

A detachment of Alpini and Bersaglieri was despatched to reconnoitre one of the enemy's advanced posts. The men crept cautiously along the ground until within a hundred paces of the Austrian advanced post, obtained the information required and were returning, when one of the Alpini, who was acting as guide to the party, observed that it would look bad to return to camp without a prisoner.

Saying to his comrades "You go on a little and then wait for me," he returned along his tracks to where he had observed an Austrian sentinel.

Creeping up stealthily he got close to the unsuspecting soldier, and leaped on his back. Before he had recovered from his astonishment the Austrian was gagged and bound, his captor bringing him into the camp and handing him over to the officer in charge.

HEAVY ITALIAN ARTILLERY

IN POSITION IN THE MOUNTAINS

Rome, July 7.

Official despatches state that the Italians have succeeded in getting heavy guns up to various peaks in the Stelvio pass which have hitherto been inaccessible on account of the weather.

The sites for the guns were selected after reconnaissances under the most difficult circumstances, the Alpine troops engaged in them having to climb over almost inaccessible heights in the midst of furious storms.

A further result of these reconnaissances has been to localise the principal defences of the enemy. Now that the weather has cleared up it is hoped to carry on the offensive with greater vigour.

CHOLERA IN AUSTRIA

A WIDESPREAD EPIDEMIC.

New York, July 7.

It is reported from Amsterdam that news from Austria tends to show that the cholera has spread to several towns in the empire in spite of the steps taken to prevent it.

The great heat that has prevailed recently has contributed to the dissemination of the epidemic.

Special medical commissions have been appointed to visit the concentration camps and take instant remedies in the event of the disease manifesting itself in them.

MORE CASES REPORTED.

Zurich, July 7.

Telegrams from Buda Pest report two cases of Asiatic cholera in Vienna, five in Moravia, one in Silesia, two at Cracow and twenty-eight at Volovitch.

DARING ITALIAN SCOUTS

FACING DEATH AS SPIES.

Rome, July 7.

A telegram from Ala reports that some days ago an Italian reconnoitring party made a daring excursion as far as Mori, where they were greeted by the inhabitants with demonstrations of joy.

Spies among them carried information to the Austrians, who thereupon sent a detachment of troops to Mori to arrest the leading members of the community. It is feared that the prisoners will be shot, as has been done in a number of similar instances in the territory of Trent.

AUSTRIAN SPIES SHOT

TREACHERY TO ITALIAN FORCES

Rome, July 7.

The Italian authorities have found it necessary to display increased severity in dealing with the frequent cases of espionage in favour of the Austrians and attacks on Italian officers which occur in the zone of war.

During this week two men have been tried by court martial and shot for offences of this kind.

The military authorities receive valuable assistance from the Italian civilians residing in the locality in their attempts to free the country from these traitors.

ITALY AND GREECE

THE OCCUPATION OF ALBANIA.

Paris, July 3.

A telegram from Rome states that the "Giornale d'Italia" of to-day, commenting on the reported movement of bands of Greek irregulars towards Berat, says that Italy cannot tolerate such a patent violation of the Conference of London, which directly affects Italian interests. An advance in that direction assume, from the Italian point of view, greater gravity than the Serbian and Montenegrin occupation of El Bassan, Tirana and Scutari.

ITALY AND TURKEY

ITALIAN CONSULS LEAVING FOR SAFETY.

New York, July 6.

A despatch from Constantinople via Berlin says that the Italian Consuls in Turkey are steadily leaving the country, and will probably be followed by the Ambassador.

The American representatives will take charge of Italian interests in Turkey, with the exception of in Palestine, where the duty will be undertaken by the representative of Spain.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN

A NEW TREATY.

London, July 7.

A telegram from Honolulu announces the receipt of despatches from Tokio reporting that a new alliance is about to be celebrated between Russia and Japan, and that the Elder Statesmen spent yesterday compiling the details of the treaty.

It is reported that the document has nearly reached its final form.

BERLIN'S MAGNIFYING GLASS

New York, July 3.

A wireless telegram from Berlin says the military writers to the papers estimate that between May 2 and June 27 the Russians left in the hands of the Germans 1630 officers, 520,000 men, 300 fieldguns and 770 machine guns, besides an incalculable amount of other material.

THE KAISER AS PROPHET

London, July 6.

According to despatches from Copenhagen conveying news from Berlin, a sensation has been caused in the German capital by recent declarations by the Kaiser as to the duration of the war.

A few days ago there was held a military ceremony at which the Kaiser, the Kings of Bavaria, Saxony and Wurtemberg, various officers of high standing and members of the Court were present. The Kaiser declared on oath that plans were on the point of completion whereby the war would be brought to a conclusion by the end of October next.

The British Press, commenting on the incident, considers that this fore-shadows another furious attempt to break through the lines of the Allies in France and Belgium.

BULGARIA AND TURKEY

BERLIN ANTICIPATES SUCCESS OF NEGOTIATIONS.

New York, July 6.

A wireless telegram from Berlin reports the receipt of intelligence from Sofia to the effect that the British Minister there has withdrawn because of the undiplomatic attitude of the negotiations between the Allies and Bulgaria.

The message adds that the negotiations between Bulgaria and Turkey are proceeding with every prospect of success.

TRENCH WARFARE

WOUNDED SOLDIER'S DESCRIPTION.

Paris, July 3.

The Bureau of Information publishes an account by a wounded French soldier of the fighting in what is called the Labyrinth three days after the last section of it was captured. He says:—

"This trench warfare is not in the least like what is depicted in the accounts and communiqués that have been published about it.

"Our field of action was in galleries lit up by oil lamps, where the combatants were separated by barriers of sandbags, between the interstices of which we fought with bayonets or hand grenades. The Germans used Browning pistols, and sometimes threw corrosive acid at us, and we had to be quick in dodging it. "In the hand-to-hand fighting we always had the best of it. If we knocked a man down we finished him off with the butts of our rifles, or even with our hands.

"These galleries were 20 or 30 feet deep. The water at the bottom stank, as there were corpses lying there for many days owing to our inability to spare any men to remove them.

"One trench of 200 feet in length cost us 13 days of constant fighting. To prevent our advance the Germans had interposed barricades and snares of all kinds, with pits at the bottom of which they had fixed bayonets for us to fall upon. In this trench we fought in pitch darkness, and only in extreme cases did we use pocket lamps with the greatest caution."

ALBANIAN'S ROUTED

END OF SERBO-ALBANIAN CAMPAIGN.

London, July 3.

The "Daily News" published a telegram from Rome wherein it is stated that the Serbian campaign in Albania is announced as having terminated with the occupation of Tirana and El Bassan, where the Albanians commanded by Austrian and Turkish officers suffered an overwhelming defeat. The Serbians have stated that the occupation of Durazzo is unnecessary.

BOMBS ON BRITISH SHIPS

Murderous Schemes of Holt

TRANSATLANTIC LINERS MENACED

Holt Commits Suicide

New York, July 7.
The man Holt, or Holtz, who was imprisoned for attempting to assassinate Mr. Pierpont Morgan, has finally succeeded in taking his own life, although accounts differ as to the manner in which this was achieved.

One report says that he blew his head off with a charge of dynamite which he placed in his mouth; while another and more credible version is that he jumped out of a window 60 feet off the ground.

It is also stated that he was formerly a Professor at Harvard University, and disappeared after having been accused of the murder of his wife in 1906.

FREE USE OF DYNAMITE

CONFESSIONS OF HOLT.

New York, July 7.
Further reports about the would-be assassin Franz Holtz state that the man declared to a detective not long before he committed suicide that he placed 50 lbs. of dynamite on board a steamer which was about to sail from New York.

The inquiry proved that Holt had received, under another name, a parcel containing 67 lbs. of explosive, part of which was used in the bomb which exploded in the Capital and another part in a bomb discovered in Mr. Pierpont Morgan's garden.

It is considered possible that the remainder was put on board the Cunard liner Saxonia, 14,271 tons, which left on Saturday, and a wireless has been despatched to the captain of the ship to warn him of the danger. News has been duly received of all other vessels which have left this port since June 26.

In a letter from Holt to his wife he said that the Saxonia would be blown up on the 7th of this month, (to-day).

OTHER SHIPS MENACED

DISCOVERY OF BOMBS IN CARGO

New York, July 7.
The European agents of an American motorcar company announce that a bomb was discovered in the case containing a motorcar which has been shipped with a number of others and a cargo of wheat in a British steamer bound for Havre.

In another vessel the officers found concealed in sacks of wheat a number of bombs which were so constructed as to explode with the movement of the ship.

VICE-PRESIDENT MARSHALL

THREATENED WITH DEATH.

Washington, July 5.
Mr. Thomas R. Marshall, Vice-President of the United States, announces that he has received several letters recently threatening him with death.

HOLT'S IDENTITY ESTABLISHED

An Ex-German Professor

SOME OF HIS HUNNISH TRICKS

New York, July 7.
It is now known that Holt shipped dynamite aboard either the American liner Philadelphia, 10,433 tons, belonging to the International Mercantile Marine Company, or on the Cunard liner Saxonia, if not on both. This is indicated in a letter which he sent to his wife who lives at Dallas, Texas, wherein he says that the vessels would be sent to the bottom of the Atlantic.

The fact was communicated to the Chief of the Washington police who informed the Navy Department. Wireless warnings were at once sent to both steamships, and the Captain of the Philadelphia has replied stating that all the packages among the baggage and freight have been identified and everything is right so far. The Saxonia has not replied, possibly because she has passed out of the zone of wireless communication.

The announcement was corroborated authoritatively to-day that in May last bombs were found in the cargoes of three steamships which had left New York for Havre. Fortunately the acid had not reached the explosive before the bombs were discovered.

Three men from Cambridge, Massachusetts, to-day positively identified Holt as Professor Erich Muentzer of Harvard, who disappeared after the death of his wife from arsenic poisoning and was indicted for murder.

BRITISH PARLIAMENT

No Compensation for Lusitania Victims

EMBARGO ON METAL EXPORTS

London, July 7.
Replying to a question put in the House of Commons to-day as to whether the survivors of the Lusitania would be compensated for their losses, the Chancellor of the Exchequer stated that the Government cannot undertake to pay compensation for losses incurred through the action of the enemy.

The Minister of Munitions, Mr. Lloyd George, announced that measures had been taken to prevent future exportation from the United Kingdom of lead speiter, antimony, nickel or any other metal necessary to the manufacture of munitions.

THE SUBMARINE ATTACKS

SUGGESTIONS OF NEGLIGENCE.

London, July 7.
The members of Parliament for the district of Liverpool have given notice in the House of Commons that they intend to ask the First Lord of the Admiralty why assistance has not been sent more rapidly to vessels that have been torpedoed; who received the distress calls from the Anglo-Californian, and what was the speed of the warships which answered the call?

It is stated that on many occasions the "S.O.S." call has not been answered at all.

GERMAN SUBMARINE SUNK.

Boulogne, July 7.
The armed steam trawler Notre Dame de Lourdes, chartered by the French Government, reports that yesterday evening when six miles west of Boulogne she sank a German submarine, firing at her three times.

AMERICAN STEAMER SEIZED.

New York, July 7.
A despatch from Berlin announces that the American consular agent at Swinemunde reports that the steamer Platuria, from New York, with a cargo of petroleum for a Swedish port, has been held up by a German warship and brought into Swinemunde.

A SOUTH AFRICAN CONTINGENT

Capetown, July 7.
It is officially announced that the British Imperial Government has gratefully accepted the offer of the South African Government of a contingent of troops and some batteries.

FRANCE'S LOSSES IN MEN.

London, July 7.
The appeal issued to-day by the French Relief Society says that the French losses since the beginning of the war up to July 1 have been 400,000 killed, 700,000 wounded and 200,000 prisoners.

ROTHSCHILD IN THE HAYFIELD

GERMANY'S GENTLE TREATMENT OF PRISONERS.

Amsterdam, July 2.
The Bavarian paper "Die Kurier" reports that among the prisoners at the Lerchenfeld concentration camp there is a member of the Parisian branch of the Rothschilds, who was captured by the Germans while driving in a motorcar.

The paper says that the Spanish embassy in Berlin has attempted to obtain better treatment for him than he is receiving, but without success, and he is compelled to work in the hayfields with the other prisoners.

SWISS FOOD SUPPLIES

PROBABLE PURCHASE OF SWISS CROPS.

Basle, July 2.
Austro-Hungarian agents are buying up great quantities of foodstuffs throughout Switzerland at high prices. It is understood that it is proposed to obtain as much as possible before the Swiss Government imposes a general embargo upon food exports, which appears likely to be soon.

A BIASSED NEUTRAL

SVEN HEDIN RETURNS FROM THE FRONT.

Paris, July 2.
A telegram from Stockholm announces the arrival of the well-known Swedish explorer, Sven Hedin, who has returned from accompanying the German army. He is about to compile a book containing his impressions of the campaign in Galicia.

GERMANY'S SUBMARINE CAMPAIGN

PROFESSIONS OF GREAT SUCCESS

La Hague, July 6.
The newspapers from Berlin announce that Germany's submarine ring round the British isles is rapidly growing tighter every week.

The Admiralty is launching two monster submarines of the U class, of sufficient power and capable of carrying enough supplies to be able to cross the Atlantic.

Reliable despatches received by the Admiralty indicate that a high toll was taken by the submarines during the last fortnight, striking terror into the hearts of the English shipowners.

Not more than half the vessels destroyed are reported by the English Press. According to careful estimates made here, the loss of British shipping in the past month has averaged a million dollars in value per week.

The German newspapers print longer lists each week of the victims of the submersible craft, under the headline, "The toll of our tireless U boats."

The success of the submarine blockade is proved, according to the German naval authorities, by the rise in the price of foodstuffs in Britain and France. The only question asked in Berlin is "How long can the English shipowners stand the drain?"

TOUGH GERMAN PIRATES.

Paris, July 6.
From Amsterdam it is reported that when the German submarine which sank off Borkum island was raised after having been 36 hours under water, only one of the crew was dead.

ANGLO-CALIFORNIANS' LOSSES.

London, July 6.
It is now announced that the loss of life on board the steamer Anglo-Californian, which was shelled by a German submarine on the way from Montreal to Queenstown, was 21 out of a total crew of fifty Americans and Canadians.

HUNS INSULT PRESIDENT WILSON

A BURLESQUE INDEPENDENCE DAY BANQUET.

London, July 6.
A telegram from La Hague to the "Evening News" says that a number of Germans in Berlin posing as Americans celebrated a burlesque Fourth of July festival, when they carried the Stars and Stripes draped in mourning to the foot of Frederick the Great's statue.

In the evening they held a banquet at which contemptuous speeches about President Wilson were delivered, condemning the exportation of munitions to the Allies.

FRENCH WAR MUNITIONS

AN AMPLE SUPPLY. BENEFITS OF ORGANISATION.

Paris, July 6.
The Under Secretary for War, M. Thomas, who is specially charged with the supervision of the manufacture of munitions, announces that France has now sufficient supplies to meet all requirements, even if the present rate of consumption were doubled.
The work of turning out munitions is now thoroughly organised. In every establishment in the country which is fitted for such work the making of arms and ammunition has the preference; while any time there may be to spare is devoted to the requirements of the public.

GOVERNMENT AND THE LABOUR TROUBLE

London, July 1.

The Trade Unionists have made good their pledges to meet the demands of the Government in regard to the turning out of munitions, according to a statement by Mr. W. E. Morgan, who is Mr. Lloyd George's chief assistant.

The seven days allotted by the Minister of Munitions have expired, and Mr. Morgan says that the enrolments have been so highly satisfactory that he thought he could say that the voluntary system had justified itself as applied to the munitions workers.

During the last two days the rate of enrolment has averaged 10,000 daily.

Mr. Lloyd George has announced substantial concessions to labour in the form of a Munitions Amendment Bill, the final stage of which was dealt with in the House of Commons to-day. The chief amendment limits the power of compulsory arbitration in labour disputes to the field outside the actual manufacture of munition. As amended, this prerogative will be exercised by the Government only when the work of making munitions is affected.

The question of the British coal output, which, owing to the restiveness of the miners, has been giving the Government anxiety, is to be dealt with at an important conference of miners' representatives convened by the Government in London on July 7. The conference will be addressed by Mr. Lloyd George among others, and an attempt will be made by voluntary means to bring about an increased output.

Meanwhile, the dispute which threatened to cause a strike of 22,000 South Wales miners and endanger the coal supply of the Navy was settled yesterday through Government intervention, the conference at Cardiff having accepted the Government's proposals that a compromise shall operate during the war.

BRITAIN'S RESPONSE TO CALL FOR MUNITIONS WORKERS.

London, July 2.

To-day Lord Curzon, in introducing the Munitions Bill in the House of Lords, announced that the first week of the campaign to speed up the manufacture of arms and ammunition had resulted in the enrolment of 46,000 voluntary workers. His Lordship added that he was confident that before the end of the war the advantages, both in men and material, would be decisively on the side of Britain and her allies.

LOANS FOR RUSSIA AND GREECE

FATHERED BY BRITAIN.

London, July 2.

It is stated in financial circles that the British Government is occupied in seeking a means whereby a loan of some importance can be raised for Russia. It is not thought that such a loan could be successfully floated in the United States at the present moment, and there will probably be a consultation on the subject between the financial Ministers of Britain and France.

It is further stated that a loan is to be granted to Greece on liberal terms to meet certain expenses.

The financial outlook for both France and the United Kingdom is so satisfactory and based on such solid foundations that it is considered that these requirements can be met without upsetting the market.

A MODERN GUY FAWKES ATTEMPTED DESTRUCTION OF U.S. SENATE

Washington, July 3.

Last night there was an explosion in a wing of that portion of the Capitol set apart for the deliberations of the Senate. Only slight damage was done and no one was injured. A search failed to discover any fragments of the explosive, and it was believed at the time that it was either due to an accident or the work of some crank.

To-day, however, a light was thrown upon the incident by a letter received by the "Washington Times" to which the signature of E. N. Pearce was appended, the postmark on which showed that it was posted half an hour before the explosion.

The writer confessed to having been responsible for the explosion, and said that the unusual times and circumstances required unusual action in connection with the affairs of the Senate. It would be as well for the Senate to stop and consider what they were doing. The United States were enriching themselves by selling ammunition at the cost of millions of lives and millions of widows and orphans. The sale of ammunition must stop.

The matter is in the hands of the police, who expect to trace the culprit through the letter.

SHOTS AT A MILLIONAIRE

ATTACK ON PIERPONT MORGAN.

New York, July 3.

To-day a man attempted to assassinate Mr. Pierpont Morgan in his residence on Long Island, firing several shots at him. Two of the bullets are reported to have taken effect, but the wounds are said not to be serious.

JEALOUSY OF A GERMAN.

New York, July 3.

The man who attacked Mr. Pierpont Morgan to-day calls himself Frank Holt. He is believed to be of German origin. On being arrested he said that he tried to shoot Morgan because he was helping to prolong the war by sending large contributions of money to Great Britain.

The victim is wounded in the hip, but not seriously. The man is suspected of being insane.

THE ASSASSIN'S STATEMENT.

New York, July 3.

The assault on Mr. Pierpont Morgan was committed at 9 a.m. to-day at Mr. Morgan's residence, Glencoe, on Long Island.

The assailant says that his name is F. Holt, and that he is German Professor at Cornell University.

The doctors are taking special precautions in attending to the wounds in case the bullets were poisoned, as the patient is suffering great pain.

The aggressor, who is in gaol, declared that he was a "Christian gentleman." He represented ten millions of Americans. The war must cease. Morgan had lent too much money to England.

He then signed a full declaration explaining that he went to Glencoe to see Mr. Morgan three days ago, but could not get an interview with him. To-day he decided to await him at the station. He then went into observations about the shipments of munitions to the Allies, who he says are being financed by the millionaires. He wanted Mr. Morgan to use his influence to put an embargo upon the trade. He considered the American nation are responsible for the deaths of thousands of their brethren in Europe. He added that he regretted the unpleasantness caused to the Morgan family.

CONFESSION BY HOLT

RESPONSIBLE FOR BOMB OUTRAGE.

New York, July 5.

The man Holt who shot at and wounded Mr. Pierpont Morgan last Saturday has confessed that it was he who put the mine in the Senatorial rooms of the Capitol. He sustained some slight wounds in the head which were inflicted by one of Mr. Morgan's servants at the time of the attempted assassination.

Mr. Morgan is reported to be doing well.

MR. MORGAN'S LIFE SAFE.

New York, July 5.

The doctors attending Mr. Pierpont Morgan declare that the patient's life is in no danger.

ANOTHER BOMB OUTRAGE

NEW YORK POLICE HEAD-QUARTERS ATTACKED

New York, July 6.

Yesterday a bomb placed by some unknown person in the headquarters of the New York police exploded at 9 o'clock in the evening, doing considerable damage, the ground floor being almost destroyed and all the windows blown out.

It has been ascertained that the bomb was loaded with nails and pieces of iron.

The police attribute the deed to anarchists, some of which a few months ago placed bombs beneath St. Patrick's Cathedral. On this occasion the fact was discovered in time by a spy employed by the police who was consorting for some time with the anarchists.

HOLT ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

New York, July 6.

This morning the man, Frank Holt, who tried to assassinate Mr. Pierpont Morgan, made an abortive attempt to commit suicide by opening the veins of his left arm. He lost a good deal of blood.

BRYAN AND MILITARISM

OPEN LETTER BY FRENCH SENATOR.

Paris, July 1.

M. Destournelles de Constant of the French Senate has addressed an open letter to the former Secretary of State in America, Mr. Bryan, regarding the attitude of the United States in the war.

The writer reminds Mr. Bryan of the efforts they made jointly to prevent the war, which were brought to naught by the odious attack by Austria and Germany on Serbia and Belgium. He declares that no one wants the United States to go to war, but the whole world expects that the States shall not remain indifferent spectators of violations of right. The silence of the American Government in the presence of the invasion of Belgium was a lamentable surprise for the friends of the United States.

The letter continues:—

"You advocate a peace which would allow Prussian militarism to retreat unharmed to make ready for better luck next time. My dear Mr. Bryan, you are working against the very object you wish to attain. You are running the risk of prolonging the war by lending to Prussian militarism the assistance of your eloquence, and you will thus cause still further bloodshed.

"The peace you look for, brought about by the weariness of the combatants, is not, and never will be for us. Better death than such a peace.

"As we have always maintained, it is necessary to put an end, not only to the war but to the causes of the war, the heavy load and the uncertainty of an armed peace. An end must be put to conquests by violence, to prussian militarism."

TRANQUIL TURKEY

CONSTANTINOPLE IN WAR TIME

GAIETY AND IRRESPONSIBILITY

New York, July 2.

A telegram from Constantinople to the United Press reports:—

"Despite all the efforts of the Allies to create the impression that a desperate situation exists in Constantinople, the city is leading a gay and absolutely normal life, while the Allies land forces and pound away at the Dardanelles and the Russian fleet occasionally shells the forts of the Bosphorus twenty miles away.

"A goodly part of the population gathers every afternoon in the municipal gardens of Petits Champs and take tea or café au Turque, while listening to the magnificent orchestra as in times of peace.

"The contrast between the city to-day and when I visited it a month after Turkey's entrance into the war is amazing. In November it was a city living in terror. At nightfall every shop and store was closed and darkened. The streets were deserted after six o'clock and not a soul ventured out of doors. To-day the shops and stores are open till 9.30 p.m., when begins the life of the cafés, parks and concerts.

"In spite of the dangers which the outside world fancies to be hovering over Constantinople, every phase of public life and administration is continuing in a matter-of-fact way. One actually gets the impression that war has so long been part of the business that it no longer interferes with routine.

"Coming to Constantinople from the Bulgarian frontier I was struck by the extent of the agricultural operations everywhere. Practically the only evidence of military preparations to be seen in Constantinople are the recruits, who are continuing to arrive daily from all parts of the Empire in the ragged but picturesque costumes of their districts.

"Occasionally during the night there may pass a train of wagons or troop trains conveying companies of artillery or cavalry; but the public sees little of them.

"No doubt Constantinople has suffered in some degree the same effects of the war as have all the countries engaged, and poverty and misery increased as the price of food advanced; but these conditions are less apparent here than in Rome or Paris."

BRITISH REGISTRATION BILL

PASSES SECOND READING.

London, July 6.

The so-called Registry Bill, introduced by the British Government, authorising the registration of every British subject in the United Kingdom between the ages of 16 and 65, passed the second reading in the House of Commons to-day.

The object of the bill is to make available the number of workers available for the manufacture of war munitions, and for other purposes in connection with the war.

THE MINE MENACE

NOVEL EXPERIMENTS IN FRANCE

New York, July 1.

The "New York World" has received a communication from a correspondent in France stating that the French naval arsenal is experimenting with a huge steel net invented for the purpose of destroying the menace of mines. The naval experts are also trying a method of wireless control over torpedoes, and the yards are making a kind of submarine unlike any now afloat. They are also turning out missiles the cost of which is estimated at 5,000 francs each.

HOW THE ARMENIAN WAS SUNK

NO EFFORT TO SAVE DROWNING MEN

Washington, July 1.

Recent details of the sinking of the Armenian show that twenty-nine persons on board lost their lives and ten others were injured.

Among those on board were 22 Americans, seven of whom were white and the rest negroes. Three of those are stated to have been rescued by the submarine, the others being drowned.

The Armenian was being used as a cargo boat, and had on board a cargo of horses for England. Most of the victims were men employed in looking after the animals.

CAPTAIN'S BID FOR FREEDOM

London, July 1.

Despatches from Avonmouth report that the Armenian was sent to the bottom only after the captain had made two gallant efforts to escape.

When submarine U 38 was sighted, the Armenian was sent ahead at full speed, the engines being raced at their maximum in the hope that the vessel would be able to reach the coast. At the same time the S.O.S. call was flashed by the wireless apparatus on board.

The submarine however had the greater speed and soon came up opposite to the Armenian's boats. Her commander shouted a demand through a megaphone for the Armenian to surrender; but the reply of the captain was a turn of the wheel which changed her course.

The submarine then sent a shell crashing through the skylight into the engine room, which was put out of commission by the explosion and several men killed. Seeing that flight was impossible, Capt. Trickey signalled that he would surrender.

The work of saving the survivors then began. The small boats were swung out to be lowered. At that moment another shell from the submarine came screeching through the air, cut the falls of one of the boats and threw the occupants into the sea.

Five other boats loaded with survivors escaped. When they were clear, the submarine fired two torpedoes at the Armenian's hull and the ship sank in about thirty minutes.

MULES ON BOARD.

London, July 1.

The crew of the steamer Armenian consisted of 72 men. Besides these there were 96 others, many of them Americans, who were in charge of the consignment of mules on board.

The survivors have reached Avonmouth.

"ON ADMIRALTY BUSINESS."

London, July 1.

The British Admiralty has officially informed the American Ambassador that the steamer Armenian was engaged in Admiralty business. Mr. Page immediately communicated the information to the Department of State at Washington.

The survivors, who have arrived at Cardiff, declare that the German submarine ran close to the drowning men who had been thrown into the water by the capsizing of a boat; but the crew of the submarine refused to rescue any of them.

INTIMATION TO PRESIDENT WILSON.

Washington, July 1.

President Wilson, who is still at his summer residence has been informed by wire of the official report of the sinking of the Armenian which has been telegraphed by the American Ambassador at London.

In the Department of State no comment is made on the disaster, or on the attitude of the United States Government pending the receipt of all details, together with a complete report as to the status of the Armenian.

TENSION IN OFFICIAL CIRCLES.

It is especially desired to clear up the point as to whether the service which the Armenian had undertaken for the British Admiralty was of such a nature as to render her liable to attack without a violations of international law being incurred.

The receipt of the American Ambassador's despatch, while not entirely disposing of the issues raised by the sinking of the vessel, has greatly lessened the tension in official circles, which became acute when it was learned that twenty or more American lives had been sacrificed in the war zone.

SUNK BY THE SEA HUNS

LOSS OF ITALIAN SAILING VESSEL.

London, July 2.

The Italian 2000 ton sailing ship Sardomene has been torpedoed by a German submarine off Bearhaven in Cork. The vessel had on board a cargo of timber. Two of the crew were killed and two others wounded while seven escaped.

SERIOUS LOSSES TO BRITISH SHIPPING.

London, July 2.

A German submarine has sunk the British steamers Inglemoor, Caucasian and Welbury. The crews of the first two have landed at Falmouth. The crew of the Welbury is safe.

The schooner L. C. Tower was sunk off Fastnet, and the same submarine also sank a barque six miles away. Nine of the schooner's crew have been landed at Queenstown.

The commander of the submarine was much pleased by learning that the Welbury's cargo was sugar. When the vessel left Matanzas some one on board saw a notice written up inside the forehold saying "You are taking sugar to England, but you will never get there."

Yesterday afternoon a submarine sank the steamer Lomas from Argentina to Belfast with maize. The first of two shots fired at her was apparently a warning to stop; but the second killed the second officer. The crew took to the boats and were picked up by a Belgian trawler which brought them to Milford Haven.

The Lomas was sunk by shellfire and torpedoes.

The Italian sailing ship Sardomene was sunk without warning five miles from Castletown. Nine of the crew were drowned, two more died of injuries and only the mate survived out of the officers.

GERMAN MINELAYER DESTROYED

VESSEL BEACHED AFTER ATTACK.

London, July 3.

A telegram from Stockholm announces that a German minelayer was attacked by Russian warships off the island of Gothland.

The German vessel, which is stated to have been the Albatross, was beached in order to escape pursuit. Twenty-one of the crew were killed and twenty-seven wounded.

27 KILLED; 71 WOUNDED.

London, July 3.

According to a despatch from Stockholm, the German minelayer Albatross, which was attacked by Russian cruisers and run aground at Ilceireikan, near Katthammarsvik, had 27 men killed in the engagement and 71 wounded. The latter have been removed to the hospital, and the remainder of the crew of 225 men have been interned.

ACTIVITY OF GERMAN SUBMARINES

London, July 5.

A German submarine attacked the British steamer Anglo-Californian, 5600 tons gross, with shell fire, killing the captain and eleven others and wounding eight.

The Anglo-Californian succeeded in reaching Queenstown a good deal damaged.

A submarine torpedoed and sank the schooner Sunbeam, the crew being all saved.

NORWEGIAN BARQUE SUNK.

London, July 5.

The crew of the Norwegian barque Fiery Cross have landed at Swansea, the vessel having been sunk by a submarine.

RAISED AFTER 36 HOURS.

London, July 5.

It is reported from Holland that the German submarine which was sunk by an explosion off Borkum island recently has been raised.

The crew were found to be alive after having been thirty-six hours under water.

ANOTHER STEAMER LOST

Paris, July 5

The General Transatlantic liner Carthage, 5601 tons, is officially reported to have been sunk by a German submarine near Cape Helles, on July 4. Sixty-six of the crew were saved, and six are missing.

A SUBMARINE REPORTED HIT.

Paris, July 5.

The Ministry of Marine announces that two German submarines were sighted yesterday in the English Channel by vessels belonging to the Second Light French Squadron. Both submerged, but one was hit by several shells before it disappeared.

LOSS OF BELGIAN AND DUTCH STEAMERS.

London, July 3.

A German submarine has sunk the Belgian steamer Boduognat. The crew has been landed at Falmouth.

A despatch from Amsterdam says that the Dutch sailing ship Katwyk struck a mine in the North Sea and sank, ten of the crew losing their lives.

BRITAIN'S SUBMARINE WARFARE

CHARGES OF INHUMANITY.

New York, July 6

A wireless message received at the Sayville station says that an official report has been published in Berlin giving full particulars of a number of cases wherein the British submarines have torpedoed boats in Turkish waters, sinking without warning unarmed passenger ships, and even in one case a hospital ship with 700 wounded on board.

This statement points out that while England considers submarine warfare within a specific war zone as a barbarous, cruel and murderous practice and a violation of international laws, she has used the same methods in other parts of the globe which have not been specified as war zones.

U 11 SUNK

VICTIM OF AN AEROPLANE

New York July 2.

A telegram from Rome reports that the Austro-Hungarian submarine U 11 has been attacked and sunk in the Adriatic by a French aeroplane.

There is some reason to believe that the pilot of the aeroplane was the well-known French aviator Vedrines.

GERMAN REPLY TO AMERICA DELAYED

New York, July 5.

A telegram from Berlin reports that an article from Admiral von Truppel, ex-Governor of Kiao-Chau, appears in "Die Tag" of to-day, warning Germany to take heed in her action with regard to the United States.

He asks the Government to weigh seriously the question whether the value of Germany's submarine warfare upon British commerce is great enough to justify its continuance in its present form, at the expense of a probable rupture with the United States.

All the naval publicists in Germany from whom he has hitherto heard, the Admiral continues, have been devoting their energies to selling public opinion against any modification of the submarine campaign, endeavouring to prevent, or at least to limit, any concessions to the American demands in the forthcoming German reply.

The Admiral says that in Berlin the campaign between the advocates and the opponents of compromise is still intense, and the delivery of the Note, a few days ago scheduled for Monday or Tuesday, will probably be delayed several days. It is to be hoped that during those few days additional consideration will produce a change in the attitude of the Naval party, whose views have thus far opposed any Note of the character outlined previously in these despatches. This was to the effect that in all probability the reply would include proposals to exempt ships employed wholly or partially in passenger traffic from submarine attacks, though making them subject to stoppage and examination. The Naval party, however, has been bringing heavy pressure to bear upon Ministers engaged in consideration of the answer to Washington.

The telegram adds that serious dissension in Government circles, coupled with the ascendancy of the Radical-Naval cabal as a military party, has been seen here in the action of the German Government postponing the reply to the American demand.

REPLY TO BE DELAYED.

Washington, July 5.

Diplomats here consider it likely that the German Government will delay replying to the United States in regard to the submarine campaign until the conclusion of the investigation into the sinking of the liner Armenian, which the British Admiralty has announced was in its service.

The German Government may consider this avowal a proof that Great Britain makes use of merchant ships for conveying war material for herself and her allies.

RAVAGES BY THE HUNS

BRITISH COMMISSION SURVEYS WRECKAGE AT RHEIMS.

Paris, July 2.

A British commission, among the members of which were Messrs. Owen Johnson, Arnold Bennett, Walter Hale and G. H. Mair, has visited Rheims with the object of inspecting the Cathedral and noting the damage caused by the fire of the German artillery.

The Commission, which had been sent for the purpose by the British Foreign Office, arrived on Sunday morning just after some German shell struck the Cathedral, and picked up fragments of the projectiles which had glanced off the walls and roof.

It was agreed that neither French troops nor guns were anywhere near the Cathedral, and therefore no justification for the bombardment could be pleaded.

As for saving the beautiful and valuable stained glass windows, the French said that was impossible, because the erection of a scaffolding would be necessary to take them down, and that might give the Germans the idea that the Cathedral was being used for observation purposes.

BAHIA BLANCA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

July 4.

The War Loan.

In response to the request of the British Government for subscriptions towards this fund, amongst the first to reply from here are Messrs. P. A. Harcastle and Co., one of the oldest established firms in this city. On Friday last these gentlemen forwarded the sum of £10,000 through the London and River Plate Bank here towards this loan.

Exportation from Bahia Blanca.

In the first six months of this year there has been exported from Bahia Blanca the total of 1,247,000 tons of cereals, which is some 800,000 tons more than was shipped last year. For the same period in 1914 the total amount exported only reached 434,591 tons. The loading this year, in spite of the shortage of ships, has been carried on with great regularity and besides this some very good records have been made with regard to the quick dispatch of ships. Had it not been for the heavy rains of February and March the harvest would have been still greater, as it is calculated that the losses caused by the bad weather were quite 20 per cent so that up to the end of June the exportation would otherwise have reached the total of a million and a half tons. Up to the present the shipment of wheat has reached 839,351 tons, oats 386,096 and barley 18,786, and the merchants calculate that there yet remains some 300,000 tons to be sent away so that this year's total will amount to 1,600,000 tons in all.

Sailing Vessel Sunk.

News have been received of the sinking of the four masted Norwegian sailing vessel the "Thistle" bank" by a German submarine off the coast of Ireland. This vessel loaded here for the firm of Sanday and Co. with cereals for England and left about the end of May last. It is reported that part of the crew were saved and landed at Baltimore in Ireland.

In Aid of the Red Cross.

At the dance held last Monday night by the Athletic Club in Ingeniero White the sum of $330 was collected, which is to be devoted towards the fund of the Red Cross Society.

Missions to Seamen Concert.

The weekly concert at the Port was well attended last Thursday and the chair taken by Mr. H. G. Bennett. The following good programme was gone through:—Song "According to the Act" Mr. Mackenzie, s.s. "C.4"; Song "Poor Old Geoff" Capt. Breckon, s.s. "Beelham"; Song "Tipperary" Mr. Mahoney, s.s. "C.4"; Song "My Ain Folk" Miss Robertson, Song "Sweet Genevieve" Mr. Gulmore, Song "The Song that reached my heart" Mrs. Simpson, Duet "Larboard Watch" Capt. Breckon and Mr. Tregarthian, Song "Since I loved thee" Mrs. Watt, Song "I don't care if I do" Mr. Smith, s.s. "C.4," and encore "The Wheel of Life"; Song "All the while" Miss Bennett; Song "Belay, Boys" Mr. Mackenzie, s.s. "C.4"; Song "Sing us a Song of bonny Scotland" Mrs. Robertson, encore "Shadowland"; Song "Dear Little Shamrock" Mr. Lett, s.s. "C.4"; Song "Poor Old Joe" Capt. Breckon, Song "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" Mr. Mahoney, s.s. "C.4"; Song "Rule Britannia" Mr. Lett, s.s. "C.4."

Diphtheria Outbreak.

On Friday last some hundred tubes of lymph were received in the municipality in reply to the request to the authorities in Buenos Aires, made by the Intendente, for use against the diphtheria. The lymph is now in the Municipal Hospital where it will be used free of cost to those who are too poor to pay.

Arroyo Parejas.

During his visit here M. Baudin stated that once the war was over the work at this port would be fully continued again, and besides the building of the mole several new railway lines would also be constructed.

District Notes.

The loading of livestock from the station of Zapala, the last station on the southern line towards Chili has been very great this last year as there have been sent away over 20,000 head of cattle and 100,000 sheep. The greater part of these have come to Bahia Blanca. The cargo received at this point during the year has been 460 tons of general goods.

The Port of San Blas, which is only five hours journey from here is said to be very pretty and easy to navigate as the never ending trouble with harbour pilots, who may, or may not know their work, which has always to be contended with here, is done away with on account of the bay entrance being wide and even at low tide has always 36 feet of water. The climate there is good and the bathing excellent. The bay is three miles long and well shut in from the winds. The Pacific line reaches to within twelve leagues of the port and the connecting link is now under construction.

The majority of the colonists in the district of Bernaseoni, under the charge of the government expert Sr. Tassart, have now paid the government for the wheat and oat seed lent to them last spring. The total of the amount paid in this district has reached the sum of $229,247.

The tender presented by D. A. Malocino for making the necessary repairs to the building occupied by the postal staff at Allen (Rio Negro) has been accepted by the Minister of Public Works. The tender presented for the repairs to the post office at Las Lajas (Neuquen) has also been passed.

In the Neuquen district the governor Señor Elordi, has now been in office for three different terms and will probably be elected again. The roads in this district are almost impassable in some parts owing to the river overflowing and these washouts are only passed by having ferries over the rivers as well as boats so that the service of motor cars there is able to continue uninterrupted.

Items in Brief.

An important capture was made by the police in the capital recently. A man named J. F. Rodriguez was arrested by them in Banfield, after being wanted for the last two years for the murder of a member of the detective force here.

The concert held in the municipality on June 6 in aid of the San Vincente de Paul Society netted $1,999. The expenses, which did not include the rent of the building as this was lent free of cost, were $271, which left a profit to the Society of $928.

A little more interest is now being taken in the wheat buying and yesterday several lots were sold for Brazilian importation at $10 f.o.b. Oats remain the same as before $6.80. During the last few days over three thousand tons of barley have been sold, and the price for this is now $5.70. Alfalfa seed is in good demand and the better class is fetching $7. From July 1, 1914, to June 30, 1915, the quantity of wool taken into the Victoria Market was 11,845 tons for the year, and that of the previous year being 15,759 making a fall of 3,913 tons in the two years, in sheep skins there was also a fall of 710 tons and cow hides 34 tons, in fact there was a considerable less quantity of different classes of camp produce brought into this market, as what has usually been taken there other years is now often put into the numerous private deposits here. Cow hides are now sold at from $12 to $13.50 and those from the Cordilleras $11.50, horse hides $5 to $7.50.

WEDDINGS

LYALL—GETHINS.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated on July 5 in Holy Cross Church, between Mr. Hugh Launcelot Vickers Lyall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh C. Lyall, of Monkseaton, Northumberland, England, News Editor of "The Buenos Aires Herald," and Miss Eileen Anita Patricia Saphira Gethins, second daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Gethins, of Bray Lodge, Bray, Co. Dublin, Ireland.

The service was performed by the Rev. Father Joseph Campbell, assisted by the Rev. Father John Macklin. The church was artistically decorated with white flowers and maiden-hair fern, and pot plants were before the altar, which was decorated with white flowers by the friends of the bridal couple. The organist played the usual wedding hymns, and many of the guests were present at the service.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of Mr. J. Blair Easton, who subsequently gave her away, looked very sweet in a dainty gown of ivory duchesse satin and Brussels lace, with overdress of chiffon, handsomely embroidered in pearls, and with finishings of Brussels lace, the veil of silk tulle being delicately embroidered, and fastened with a wreath of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of orchids, jasmine and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid was Miss Annabelle Angus, who was charming in her three-tiered frock of silk tulle and taffetas. The flounces were daintily finished with the taffetas, and pearls were used to finish the bodice. A large black picture hat with orchids was worn, and she carried a bouquet of orchids, jasmine, and lilies of the valley. Little Miss Lenore Matters was the train-bearer, the dainty little maiden wearing a two-tiered frock of satin and tulle, with pearls and orchids as finishings, and she wore a mob cap to match. The duties of best man were ably carried out by Mr. Neville Hemsley. The bride's present to the bridegroom was a silver toilet set, and the bridegroom's present to the bride a silver toilet set. The bridegroom's present to the bridesmaid was a platinum pendant and chain set in diamonds and pearls; and to the train-bearer a pretty gold chain bracelet.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's cousin, at 890 Avenida de Mayo, where Mr. and Mrs. Lyall received the congratulations of their many friends and well-wishers. The guests were received by Mrs. Leonard Matters, who wore a gown of cream charmeuse and black Chantilly lace, with finishings of pink moire ribbon and brilliants, and black velvet hat with osprey. Miss Brown (cousin to the bride) wore a smart gown of Pile silk brocade, with lace vest and finishings, smart black toque, and much of the success of the reception was due to her indefatigable efforts.

Among the guests were:—Mrs. Matters and Miss Matters, Madame Noailles, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Williams, Mr. and Miss Angus, Mr. and Mrs. Easton, Mrs. A. E. Bach, Mr. and Mrs. Grinham, Mr. J. Eccles, Miss K. McCormack O'Connor, Miss A. McCormack O'Connor, Mr. F. E. Beatty, Mrs. Waldstrom and Mr. Waldstrom (junr.), Mr. D. W. Finlay, Mr. and Mrs. H. Willis, Mr. Devereux, Mr. F. Murray, Mr. C. Murray, Mr. E. G. L. Berry, Mr. H. Goldflam, Mr. W. H. Scannell, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Sullivan, Mr. J. J. McNally, Miss Browne, Sr. O. Villosio, Mr. Neville Hemsley, Mr. Addi Angus, Mr. and Mrs. Peters.

The usual toasts were honoured, Mr. Grinham proposing that of the bridal couple, Mr. Hemsley that of the bridesmaid, and Mr. Beatty of the English "Press" in Buenos Aires.

Among other speakers who eulogised Mr. and Mrs. Lyall were Mr. Scannell, Mr. McNally, and Mr. Peters.

Mr. Lyall paid a tribute to the services of the bridesmaid and the best man, and spoke of the reciprocity and of the kindly feeling existing between the two English papers in Buenos Aires. During the proceedings songs and recitations were given by Mr. Scannell, Mr. Grinham, Mr. McNally, and Mr. Fitzpatrick, and the proceedings terminated in singing, "For they are jolly good fellows," and "Auld Lang Syne."

Many handsome presents were received, which included the following: Friends of the Irish Society (including the President, Mr. E. J. Sullivan, Mr. J. H. Williams, Mr. W. Scannell, Mr. and Miss Fitzpatrick, Mr. C. N. Young, Mr. J. J. McNally), a cretonne covered arm-chair and cushion; Miss Brown (cousin of the bride), cheque; Dr and Mrs. Derwent Hill, of Russell Square, London, England (sister and brother-in-law of the bride), cheque; Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Matters, cheque; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Williams, cheque; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Ewart, cheque; Mr. and Mrs. G. P. McClenahan, silver cruet; Mr. and Mrs.

BROWN—BROWN.

The wedding of Miss Isabella Brown and Mr. James R. Brown, took place on Wednesday, June 30, at 9 p.m. at 1515 Brasil, the residence of Mrs. Brown, mother of the bride. The bride, who was given away by her brother Mr. James Brown, wore a gown of ivory charmeuse with Malines lace, a full tulle veil with wreath of orange blossoms and carried a magnificent shower bouquet of white carnations and lilies of the valley. Her sister, Miss Katie M. Brown, who acted as bridesmaid, wore blue charmeuse and chiffon, with hat to match and carried a fine bouquet of pink carnations. Mr. Fred Brown, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Dr. J. W. Fleming, and Professor Stark rendered the Wedding March. Subsequently, the wedding cake, from the Alexandra Tea Rooms, was cut and the health of the happy pair was toasted. They departed, in clouds of

E. Back, silver toast-rack; Mrs. F. G. Renó Grelliche and Mr. J. C. Hart, antique rice to spend the honeymoon at Montevideo. The bridesmaid received a handsome signet ring from the bridegroom.

The following is a list of wedding presents:—Bridegroom to Bride, gold bands; Bride to Bridegroom, suit silver purse; Mrs. Waldstrom, handsome teneriffe afternoon tea cloth; Mme. Vve. L. Noailles, silver and crystal water carafe and glass; Mr. F. E. Beatty (Stanford) silver and crystal flower vase; Miss Anita and Kathleen M. McCormack O'Connor, pair silver vases.

The handsome wedding cake which adorned the table was from the Alexandra tea-rooms, that firm being responsible also for the excellent catering arrangements. The happy couple leave to-day for Montevideo, where the honeymoon will be spent, the bride wearing a tailor-made suit of dark green cloth, and black hat.

The wedding and trousseau gowns were from Mrs. Waldstrom of Florida.

"HERALD" BELGIAN FUND

THANKS FROM BELGIAN GOVERNMENT.

The Belgian Minister in Buenos Aires (M. Chas. Renoz) has forwarded the following letter to the Manager of "The Herald":—

"Dear Sir,

I did not fail to transmit to the Belgian Government the cheque of $659.40 enclosed in your letter of the 17th of April last and representing the amount collected to that date by "The Herald" for the benefit of the children of Belgium who have suffered as a result of the war.

In acknowledging the receipts of the above said sum, H. E. the Belgian Minister for Foreign Affairs charges me to express to you and your young readers the deepest gratitude of the Belgian Government and of the Belgian children who have suffered by the invasion of the country.

It is with a real satisfaction that I carry out that duty, which gives me the opportunity to reiterate my sympathy to the "Buenos Aires Herald."

Believe me, dear Sir,

Yours most faithfully,

CHAS. RENOUZ,
Belgian Minister."

LAND OF LILLIPUT

Conducted by Egeria

My dear Lilliputians—

I am going to tell you something about the origin of the violin this week—you all know what a power the violin is in the world of music and sweet sounds, how it can paint pictures for our mental view, and carry one away from one's surroundings by its strains.

When you are told that the violin has come to us from centuries back, and that since it has been perfected it has suffered no change, you will get some idea that the sounds being so wonderful, nobody wishes to change the "box" from which they are produced. The violin is really a sounding box, beneath strings; and the Romans used such a box, the strings being plucked by a plectrum much as are the strings of the mandolin to-day. The lyre of ancient times was the forerunner of the later violin; but the sounds given forth were not of long duration or carrying power, moreover each string produced only one note. As it developed, the lyre had commonly seven strings and was played by Greeks and Romans, although it could be used only as an aid to singing. Then it was sought to make the notes longer, and it was thought that the drawing of some roughened article across the strings should be tried and what more natural than the archer's bow? Resin was known in very ancient times, and its curious properties were well appreciated; resin was, therefore, applied to the bow.

Gradually the lyre developed into the fiddle (or fidel) in use before the fifteenth century, and such as were carried by the troubadours. Do you know what a troubadour was? You may have heard of them because there are many songs about the old-world troubadour and his guitar; but they were first of all poets who were called lyric poets because they would sing, and play the lyre at the same time; about the thirteenth century, in the South of France and the North of Italy. The wandering musicians or troubadours were the ancestors of our present-day concert musicians. Not being satisfied with this primitive fiddle clever people began to think of something better; and blocks were fitted into the corners of the "box" of sweet strains and the strings were "stopped" by the fingers as you see the violinists do to-day—and in order to stop the strings, the idea of the neck at one end so that the fingers of the left hand could go round that end grew and developed, and so we arrive at the viol, whose seven strings were strained taunt by a high bridge and were in musical thirds and fourths while the hollow part of the viol was strengthened by ribs. The result of this was a soft note. Then by degrees the flat "box" became curved outwards on the front and back so as to enlarge the resonance chambers. These things of course increased the volume of sound, all being thought out by the Italians and Venetians in the latter half of the sixteenth century. It is said that the originator of the violin as we know it was an Italian named Zannetto; but three names are familiar to us. The "Amati" from the family who developed the instrument, the "Stradivari" from Antonio Stradivari the famous pupil of one of the Amati family, for his workmanship and tone, and much later Stainer of Tyrol, whose regularity was his chief improvement. The viol and violin having existed side by side for nearly 200 years, the latter slowly ousted the former; and in the eighteenth century people gave up the viol altogether.

Think then upon the history of this most wonderful musical instrument. The English made it in the early days when the House of Hanovers reigned London being still unlighted, stage coaches unknown, and footmen still running by the side of carriages to pull them out of the muddy tracks of highways. Italian workers then in the Empire city of Venice working in mediæval conditions contemporaries of Dante, musicians in Greece, slave musicians in Rome, and our beautiful violin of to-day! And what of the bow? Nothing is left of the original military bow but the name. Its shape, its size, its make, are all altered.

A Parisian called Tourte is responsible for its shape. The collection of horse-hairs in flat array took the place of a single bow string long ago, while the resin manufactured from turpentine applied to produce the continuous plucking is as old as Pliny. The violin has not changed for a good deal over a century, although in the same time most other instruments have either evolved, as in the case of the piano, or changed in form or character. The shape of modern violins shows no apparent deviation from type. It exhibits all the modern craving for standardisation. The flat box has become the wonderful instrument that makes a wider musical appeal than all others. Pine wood and maple, caoutchouc and ebony, combine to give us the developed "box." Brazil wood and horse-hair, with the resin of the ancient, draw forth from it the best cacophony of sweet sounds.

All developments when examined exhibit romance, but the evolution of the violin from far-away times is the most wonderful example of romantic truth. Now this is a lot for you to understand; but try to do so then read you weekly story.

With love from

EGERIA.

CHILDREN OF TUNIS

("Boston Globe.")

One must never express admiration for an Arab child. Exclaim over its clothes if you will—but not even so much as a word about its beauty. The parents would regard that as an unfailing invitation for the Evil Eye to visit their home.

In a book on Tunis, Douglas Sladen tells of asking his cheerful Arab guide, a boy of 17, what the Evil Eye really was. Mohammed—that was the guide's name—replied:—

"If I take my foreign visitors round the town and am growing rich and happy it may be that some man in the bazaar will see me and envy me; or perhaps he may owe me a grudge for having rescued a visitor when he was trying to cheat. He may say nothing to me, but when I pass his shop he looks at me like this"—Mohammed regarded his companion with mimic malignance—"and wishes me evil. If he does this my good fortune will cease. Visitors will take the other guides and refuse me. I shall have endless misfortune and everything will go wrong."

Arab girls and boys wear a tattoo mark which is believed to help ward off the effects of the Evil Eye.

No one is supposed to photograph an Arab child—or an older person, either, for the matter. Long ago Allah forbade making likenesses of any living creature. Not only this, but once such a likeness exists any evil wisher may bring misfortune and sorrow to the original merely by pricking or burning it. However, a generous offer of money frequently makes the modern city Arabs quite willing to risk the wrath of Allah or a visitation of the Evil Eye.

It is in the streets lined with bazaars that one sees the native life of the city in all its wealth of colour, its almost indescribable character. These streets are known as souks (markets) and each souk is given over to one particular trade—as perfumes, rugs, cloths or jewellery.

But not only is the souk a place of business. It is also a place of entertainment—the popular theatre and concert hall of the gaily turbaned natives. In one corner a group of acrobats will have an enthusiastic audience, while not far away the over-present snake charmer is surrounded by a crowd as he sits on the ground and performs all sorts of unbelievable feats with ugly pets.

The story teller never lacks listeners, as in that merry, witty way of his he spins off wonderful tales of "Arabian Nights." But the story teller earns his living by his wits, and being a clever man, he always stops short at the most exciting point in his tale—while his assistant takes a collection! And if his listeners wish to hear what the wicked ogre finally did to the beautiful princess they must lose no time in dropping a coin in the hat for if the collection is not considered large enough the story goes unfinished.

Arab girls and boys throng these gay streets and form a part of every group never failing to occupy the first row in the story teller's circle, and never missing so much as a word of the story. They are a happy, care-free lot, these handsome, cinnamon-brown youngsters with their black or brown eyes—large and snapping, yet soft as a gazelle's—their glistening teeth and dark, heavy hair. They may be very dirty and very ragged, but if they can only get one good square meal a day nothing else seems to matter.

They are fond of games. They are also fond of clustering about the stalls of the sweetmeat-seller, especially if they have a few "floors" to spend. Each merchant has a small boy whose business is to wave a large, feather-like brush over the sweets. And even though his efforts do not succeed in keeping the flies away the children do not mind—they keep on eating as long as their money lasts.

An Arab girl's care-free days are cut short at an early age. It is not thought necessary for her to go to school, and unless her family is well enough off to afford slaves, she must begin, when eight or nine years old, to carry water and to learn to grind wheat and knead bread. The grinding is very hard work and only grain enough for one meal is prepared at a time. A mill consists of two small round stones placed one above the other. Corn is placed, a handful at a time, and in small hole in the centre of the upper stone, and the mill is revolved by a little stick or handle, firmly driven in.

An English woman who visited Tunis not long ago says that she saw no toys. She did see some dolls, made by their little girl owners out of two bamboo sticks tied together in the form of a cross. The girls had cut off bits of their own black hair and tied it to the top of the main stick. These dolls were invariably dressed as brides, never as babies.

A girl's chief ambition in life is to become a bride. If she is unmarried at the age of fourteen she is often sold in exchange for sheep, camels or mules, and her life as a slave is anything but easy. Besides grinding corn and making bread, she must work spin and weave, cut wood for the fire, carry water and dig clay for making water jars and cooking utensils. Not often does she have to sew. That is chiefly a man's occupation.

A young man's mother selects his wife for him. Once married, a Tunisian girl veils her face and henceforth no man but her husband is supposed to see it.

Arab boys of Tunis, as of other cities and villages, are sent to school when about five years old. In North Africa the only textbook is the Koran. Usually the schoolroom has no windows and no furniture—just matting on the floor, upon which the pupils sit and sway back and forth, singing their lessons at the tops of their voices. If one makes a mistake he is likely to be rapped soundly on the head or across his bare little feet by the schoolmaster, who has an ever-ready stick for the purpose.

The boys learn their letters by writing them with charcoal on a

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

Mrs. Helen King Robinson is no longer the only woman Senator in America. Last November Mrs. Frances Willard Munds, the chairman of the woman suffrage organisation, was elected to the Senate of Arizona, leading her ticket. Mrs. Munds was received with extreme cordiality by the men in the Upper Chamber of the Arizona Legislature, and was made its presiding officer.

Mlle. Marie Pierron searched a wood for wounded reported to be missing, and directed their transport, looking after them all night, although the enemy was close at hand. Other Frenchwomen mentioned in despatches are Mlle. Emilie Duvrigne, a telegraphist, who stayed at her post for two days after the rest of the post office staff had left, and assisted the military telegraphists under fire from an attacking party; Mlle. Marguerite Cuny and Mlle. Bertrand, who gave efficient help in the military hospital during the bombardment of a town; and some nuns of Saint Charles de Nancy, who sheltered nearly a thousand wounded in their establishment under deadly and incessant fire after the civil authorities had abandoned the town, and also kept a lookout every day for French soldiers in order that they might give them food.

Massachusetts has a Woman's Board of Trade, which has recently sent out an appeal to American women, especially those of the wealthy class, to help the industrial situation by patronising home industries.

small white-painted board. Or they sometimes use a piece of wood upon which they have spread a layer of fine clay. When this has hardened the surface is smooth, and the lesson from the Koran is written upon it with a reed pen dipped in black ink. When a pupil can repeat without error what he has written he washes off his lesson, spreads on fresh clay and begins the next task.

When still flying kites boys begin to practice target shooting, for all expect some day to be soldiers. It is a proud day when a youth is allowed, like his father, to carry a dagger.

Should you ask an Arab child why he is so kind to the stork, he will tell you that once upon a time the stork was a Sultan. But this particular Sultan was proud and wicked, and one day he insulted, by laughing at them, some pious old men who came to call upon him. Now, Arabs are taught from childhood to pay the greatest respect to age, and this rude act of the Sultan made Allah so angry that he at once changed him into a stork. But after all, the man was once a True Believer, say the Arabs, and so they love and protect the stork. In some cities there are hospitals for sick and wounded storks, and holy men are appointed to minister particularly to their needs.

Children of wealthy Tunisians likewise live a care-free existence, one that is of course free from the work and privations that often fall to the lot of the less fortunate. They are beautifully dressed, have slaves to wait upon them, and as they grow older usually become indolent and indifferent, especially the girls.

All classes of girls and women delight in jewellery and whether dressed in beggar's rags or rarest silks they always wear a profusion of necklaces, earrings, finger rings, armlets and anklets. Those of the middle and higher classes never appear in the bazaars or on the streets.

As soon as they are old enough to understand, Arab children are taught that it is useless to mourn or to complain, no matter what happens. If misfortune or sorrow come there is no help for it. It is so written down in the Book of Fate.

"Meekut," says the Arab—"It was written." It is the will of Allah.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH

Celebrated at the Plaza

SPEECH BY THE AMBASSADOR

To anyone of the races which profess Liberty as a watchword, the American United States Celebrations of July 4 at the Plaza Hotel are agreeable functions, and last evening's was one of the best in the series.

The grand restaurant was filled with about 200 or more citizens of the Great Republic, who sat down to celebrate, in that manner dear to the Anglo-Saxon races—namely a banquet—the birth of their nation, 140 years ago. The flag of the Union, which a Herald might describe as Dexter on an inescutcheon azure 38 mullets argent; on a field argent and gules barry of seven of the second, was conspicuously displayed from the galleries surrounding the banquet hall which was likewise tastefully decorated with gigantic palms. In the gallery also was a "noise of shawms, psalteries," and "all kinds of musick" where the Plaza Orchestra played appropriate and sprightly airs to promote digestion.

Of the dinner, and the function of eating, it is needless to enlarge greatly; the first was à la mode de Plaza and worthy of the traditions thereof, and no more need be said. Lucullus dined with Lucullus.

When the popping of Champagne corks, which like fire had simulated a skirmish, had died away, and the odorous drift of Habana incense, "the Pukwana of the Peace Pipe," rose spirally roofwards, while the diners shifted more easily in their chairs, toyed with the liqueur or the fragrant mocha, Mr. R. T. Brooks arose and spoke to the assembly, reminding them of the deeds of their fathers of old time. The first celebration in Buenos Aires took place in 1825. Mr. Stimson, the Ambassador of the American people, he said, would speak as their representative.

Mr. Frederic Stimson, without having any of the acts of the orator, is a speaker to whom it is always a pleasure to listen. He does not deal in rotund periods or declamatory delivery. Rather his speech is an even, reasoned flow, clear, pellucid and convincing, and his opinions are invariably well reasoned and thought out. He is one who has thought profoundly before speaking, and his words are the result of mature study of the history of nations, of laws and of justice. His speech was one of the best he has made here.

After a few preliminary remarks, Mr. Stimson spoke as follows:—

It seems no time for the ordinary Fourth of July speech this year. The "glittering generalities," as someone called them, of our Declaration of Independence—say rather, as Tom Reed replied, "call them blazing ubiquities"—are more than ever in our minds; and it behoves us now and again, in this time of test of the world's institutions, to see whether they are fitted to stand the strain. It is most fortunate that the leading neutral countries of America, North and South, not only have the past history of the growth of their freedom almost identical, but that their ideals for the future are wholly the same and that their present written constitutions are as nearly as possible identical, making allowance for the difference of local institutions and the fact that Argentina was able to profit by our eighty years of experience in Government under a written Constitution before she developed her own.

As you know, the somewhat vague generalities of our Declaration of Independence were crystallised in the paragraphs of our written Constitution. The rhetoric of Jefferson was translated into the severe legal phrases of Hamilton, Madison and Benjamin Franklin. But further, as Americans do not always realise, these constitutional phrases of ours date NOT from the Declaration of Independence, but from the thousand or more years' experience in freedom of the English, and, before them, of the German peoples.

There are people with us in America—more than I could wish—who do not understand our Constitution or its principles, who think they were first made in the year 1789, who do not realise the grand fact that every phrase of our Bill of Rights marks the high point of each wave in the rising tide of personal liberty through the centuries. I do not know whether there are such in Argentina, but I am sure there are none among the scholars; for they realise more here than even our American scholarship, the importance of this truth. I say, therefore, that it is most happy that two among the greatest of the American neutral nations enjoy Constitutions almost identical and quite the same as to those elementary principles of human freedom.

Continuing, the Ambassador said: The point that I want to make to-night, and which I cannot make too much of, is to tell you, North Americans, that you have the happiness to live in a country with the same ideals that your own country has, and expressed in almost the same Constitution. The importance of constitutional law is not realised by the public, by the business man, by the newspaper man, by the nisi prius lawyer, or by the politician; while the statesman, jurist, historian, realises that it lies at the root of things. The dislike of the Saxon for the Norman was based on constitutional principles—distrust by the English for the Roman law and the continental idea of sovereignty. And this constitutional antagonism between the two theories is more than ever alive to-day.

There is one great difference between the Argentine Constitution and our own; but it was wider a century ago than it is to-day. Art. 1 of the Argentine Constitution says that the Argentine nation adopts for itself a representative, republican federal form of government; and Art. 5 says that each Province shall adopt a Constitution for itself, under a representative system, in accordance with the principles, declarations and guarantees of the National Constitution; that, under these conditions, the Federal Government guarantees to each province the enjoyment and exercise of its institutions. And later, in Art. 29, it says, that Congress may not grant either to the Executive Power or the Legislature of the Provinces, or their Government, extraordinary faculties or the sum of public power, so that the lives, fortunes or possessions of Argentines be at their mercy or that of any other persons. Acts of this kind are void and subject those that commit them or accept them to the responsibility and penalty of being infamous traitors to the Republic. And finally, in the last Art., No. 110., it says that the Governors of the Provinces are the natural agents of the Federal Government for the execution of the national laws. In other words, in Argentina it is the Federal National Government which is the origin and source of the States and the people's rights, and the States are, in a sense, the creatures of it. With us, as you know, the very preamble to our Constitution reads: "We, the people." The Constitution itself and the Federal Government is the creature of the people and, in a sense, of the States; and such powers as are not given to it, either expressly or by necessity, are expressly reserved by the people of the States. This difference is of immense importance to the jurist; but this is not, however, the place to discuss it. Moreover, the difference, as I have said, is decreasing every day; that is to say, our States are continuously losing their powers to the Federal Government, and the Federal Government is more and more regulating the domestic affairs of the people in our own States at home.

All this would be matter for lectures. What I wish to do to-night is to impress upon your minds what I will call the blazing identities of these two great Constitutions, under which two of the greatest American Republics are to bear the banner of Law among peoples, Justice among nations, individual liberty and neutral rights. For instance, Art. 6 says that the Federal Government shall intervene in the Provinces—"only," we say in connection with our States; they do not say "only," but the idea is the same—to guarantee a Republican form of Government, to repel foreign invasion, and, on the requisition of the constitutional State authorities, to maintain order or to put down domestic insurrection.

The very question, "What is a Republican form of Government?" has already come up in our political career. President Taft, for instance, had some doubt whether our modern device of direct legislation, taking the final legislative power from the Legislature, was a Republican form of Government; and you will notice that the Argentine Constitution especially uses the word "representative"; that is to say, it is "not" so here. It is probable, therefore, that in Argentina, Oklahoma, with its initiative and referendum depriving its Legislative of power, would not be admitted as a State. Art. 7 provides, as we do, that the public laws and judicial decrees of one State or Province shall have full faith and credit in the others. Art. 8, that the citizens of every State shall enjoy in the others all the privileges that the citizens of these others enjoy there. Indirect taxation, that is to say tariffs and customs dues, are given to the Nation only; with us direct taxation was at the same time reserved to the States only. But all taxation must be proportional; and no man's property can be taken without previous law or just compensation, nor can any man be condemned for judgement under a law not previously passed, nor be tried by a special commission, nor compelled to give testimony against himself, nor can he be arrested without the written order of some competent authority. His domicile and his private papers are inviolable (this, by the way, was a constitutional principle established in the colony of Massachusetts and re-imported back from there to England).

In some matters, as I have said, they go further and more clearly than we do, not only in the matter of personal liberty, but their constitution is insistent in that jails and imprisonment are for public safety, and not for punishment, beyond the confinement itself; that foreigners enjoy in the territories of the Nation all the constitutional rights of the citizens, may exercise all trades and acquire all property.

I have taken too much time already, and, as you see, it is matter for many lectures. I wish to-night merely to bring your minds—bring your minds, I repeat—to the importance and significance of the fact that the fundamental laws of our two countries are identical. Art. 14 of the Argentine Constitution, chapter 29 of the Magna Charta of 1215, the Bill of Rights of the State Constitutions and the first ten amendments of the Federal Constitution of the United States, contain in ten or twelve lines the same great principles of human liberty; not only personal liberty, freedom from arrest, but the right to labour or trade, to exercise any avocation freely, to navigate the seas and engage in foreign commerce, to petition or complain to the authorities, to enter, depart from and traverse freely the national territories, to publish one's ideas either in speech or in the Press, to use and dispose of private property, to associate together for useful ends—the right of political association, that is, or the right to form labour unions,—to profess any religion without hindrance, and the Argentine Constitution adds, to teach and to learn. And as I am a citizen of the State of Massachusetts, I cannot close without remarking that the most momentous question of all, human liberty in its simplest sense, was established in the Argentine Constitution in the same way that it was established in the Massachusetts Constitution of 1780, before there was such a thing as the United States of America.

Art. 15 of the Argentine Constitution says, that in the Argentine Nation there shall be no slaves; the few that did exist there should become free on the day the Constitution was signed. So in Massachusetts when we established the Constitution to the end that the State should be a Government of laws and not of men—which Daniel Webster said were the noblest words ever written by any human hand in any constitutional document—we said: "All men are born free." On the signing of these words, the shackles fell from the limbs of the nine thousand slaves that still existed in Massachusetts, and we gained by a simple constitutional formula what the country won by a four-years' war seventy years later.

CELEBRATION AT THE AMERICAN CHURCH

The passing of one more year in the history of the United States of America is drawing to its close, as tomorrow will witness the 139th year of Independence. It was socially celebrated on July 2 in the American Church Hall by an entertainment, which was attended by a large number of people, who were regaled with a brief but albeit perfect musical treat.

The celebration was opened by the American Ambassador, the Hon. Frederic J. Stimson, with a few remarks in which he explained he was not present for the purpose of making a speech, although this might be expected of him, but he was pleased to see so many persons happy on the occasion of the 139th anniversary of the American Independence, and that he could only sincerely hope that all would continue to be happy on many future anniversaries.

The musical entertainment which followed, was opened by the singing of the Argentine National Anthem, and the solo performances by Mrs. Fred A. Walton at the piano, who played Newland's Valse Caprice effectively.

Mr. Roy Guisti, although he has been present in this country some time, having arrived from San Francisco some three years ago, has rarely been heard on the concert platform, and on this account the musical elements in Buenos Aires have suffered. Mr. Guisti possesses a good and powerful baritone voice, and was heard to considerable advantage last evening. As his encore, in the second half of the programme, he sang "The Dawn" (Macdow), accompanying himself at the piano.

His audience will assuredly feel some sense of disappointment, if they do not hear him again in the near future.

Mrs. Jessie Pamplin was in excellent voice, and her rendering of Schumann's "I'll not complain," was perfection. It is in such airs as this that her rich contralto is heard to greatest advantage. The singer chose "Forgetting" (Eugene Kaus), as her encore but, although charmingly sung, it had not the appeal in it that had the song of the greater musician, nor was it so entirely suitable to her vocal register.

"King Robert of Sicily" was Mr. William Field's recitation, and on a public request for a further recitation, which he selected to give in the second half of the programme, that amusing theme by Mark Twain, "How I edited an agricultural paper" was given. Mrs. Young's accompanying left nothing to be desired.

At the close of the concert, the Rev. Dr. McLaughlin offered a vote of thanks to those who had assisted in making the evening pass so pleasantly.

It must be said that the social gatherings at the American Church Hall have an atmosphere of warmth and welcome which is not by any means to be always found in Buenos Aires, and this is one of the causes which brings success to their functions and pleasure to those who attend.

Last evening tea and refreshments were dispensed by the ladies of the Ladies' Aid Society, who also provided a wonderful assortment of the most choice dainties, in cakes and sweets, all home made, and so delicious looking that nothing should have remained unsold.

The proceeds of the concert very considerably swelled the funds of the Orphanage and Ladies' Aid Societies. The programme was as follows:

Agentine National Anthem.
Pianoforte Solo, Vale Caprice (Newland). Mrs. Fred H. Walton.
Baritone Solo, "Slave Song," (Del Riego), Mr. Roy Guisti.
Contralto Solo, "Within thine eyes of azure," (Lassen), Mrs. Jessie Pamplin.
Recitation, "King Robert of Sicily" (Longfellow), Mr. William Field.

Pianoforte Solo, "Grande Polka de Concert," (Bartlett), Mrs. Walton.
Recitation "How I edited an Agricultural Paper," (Mark Twain) Mr. Field.
Baritone Solo, "Cuando pájaro canta" (Tagiasco), Mr. Giusti. Encore, "The Dawn," (Macdow).
Contralto Solo, "I'll not Complain," (Schumann), Mrs. Pamplin. Encore, "Forgetting" (Eugene Kaus).
"America," the Audience.
Accompanist: Mrs. Young.

WASHINGTON'S STATUE DECORATED

A very patriotic and fitting act was witnessed on Sunday last, the anniversary of the independence of the United States, when the "Columbia Club" of North American ladies visited Palermo Park and placed wreaths of laurel and ivy with white jonquils and jasmins at the feet of the George Washington statue there, which was a gift to Argentina on her centennial year.

To him who began the building of the great "Ship of State," who launched it and guided its first sailing forth, to him "who saw through the superficial things of his time into the profound truths of all time, whose own character and work were controlled and shaped by it, and who made it a controlling force in the newborn nation" of 139 years ago—it was eminently fitting that some form of grateful recognition and remembrance should be manifested on the natal day of that great nation which he brought forth.

And so in the beauty of that Sunday afternoon sunshine, in a setting of greenery, with simple ceremony, the wreaths and flowers were placed at his feet, and George Washington, the "Father of his country," received in this far land the homage of his loyal country-women, the "faithful-hearted" of every nation.

NEW U.S. CONSUL-GENERAL

MR. ROBERTSON ASSUMES DUTY.

Mr. Robertson, who to-morrow assumes the full authority of American Consul General in the Argentine Republic, is a gentleman who is certain to be persona grata, not only with the American but also with the British community. In fact we may lay hold of the hem of his garment to some extent saying "Behold thou also art one of us" and St. Andrew's Society should look after as most promisory member.

As his name imports he is a member of the Clan Donnachie and is descended, on the distaff side, from the Johnstone's of Annandale, the most notable reivers and cattle lifters of the whole border side. It may be remembered that "Devil's Dick" who followed the Laird of Wamphray was of this family.

Mr. Robertson has been American Consul in Manchester and is another example of the fine class of men whom the United States Government are now, very wisely, appointing to South American posts. He has recently received his exequatur and as said, enters on his duties at once.

PORFIRIO DIAZ DEAD

END OF A MEXICAN DICTATOR.

Paris, July 3.
The death has occurred in this city of the former president of Mexico, General Porfirio Diaz. Before death he expressed a wish to be buried in his own country. The General was 85 years of age.

His dictatorship in Mexico lasted from 1877 to 1911, with the exception of an interlude of four years, i.e., from 1880 to 1884, when he was replaced by General Manuel Gonzalez. In 1911 he was overthrown by the revolution which placed Madero in the Presidential chair.

During his rule Mexico reached a height of prosperity and peace that caused it to be regarded as the model Republic of Latin America.

A THEATRICAL SCANDAL

CASTELLANO OPERA CO.

ENGLISH ARTISTS STRANDED

The English members of the Castellano Opera Company, who were brought to Buenos Aires to give a series of well-known English light operas, have been stranded by the collapse of the season.

The artists were engaged in London by Mr. Castellano or his representatives, and according to the statements of some of them they were assured that their return passages were booked, and that there was no doubt that all obligations entered into by the empresario would be fulfilled. From the opening performance it was realised by the critics, and by many of the artists themselves, that the season would prove a "fiasco." Apart from one or two of the principals the company was weak, and the productions themselves were not carried out in a way to ensure success, the dressing, properties, and staging generally being far below the standard required to ensure success in Buenos Aires.

On Wednesday night the English section of the company gave their last performance, "The Lily of Killarney." Subsequently they learned that the enterprise could not be carried on. According to Mr. Gibbs, one of the Company, who called at "The Herald" office yesterday, none of the company has been paid, and all have found to their sorrow that they are stranded, and no return passages to England are available.

The facts relating to the sad plight of the company, who number about 25, have been placed before the British Consul-General. It is proposed that some of the artists shall be sent back to England by the R.M.S.P. Demerara, and that the principals shall remain behind and organize themselves into a concert party. If this idea is carried out it is to be hoped that the British community will rally to the support of those, who through no fault of their own, find themselves in an awkward position in a strange land.

HELP FOR STRANDED ARTISTS.

A number of members of the Castellano Opera company, stranded in Buenos Aires as the result of the collapse of the season and the default of the principal of the enterprise, will be sent back to England by the R.M.S.P. Demerara on Monday, their passages having been arranged for through the British Consul-General.

Local theatrical managers have been apprised of the condition of the English artists, and have taken action to help them out of their plight. "The Herald" is advised that Messrs. Salvate and Bracale, empresarios of the Coliseo Theatre, have paid the hotel bills of the artists up till Monday. Arrangements have also been made for some members of the company to merge with the Italian opera company playing at the Coliseo, and Mr. Seguin, of the Casino Theatre, has undertaken to "assist" the others.

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS

ARRANGEMENTS BETWEEN FRANCE AND GERMANY.

Amsterdam, July 2.

It is reported from Berlin that the arrangements have been completed for an exchange between Germany and France of prisoners who are incapacitated from taking part in the fighting lines.

The German prisoners from France will arrive at the Swiss frontier on July 11 and will be taken to the hospitals at Karlsruhe or Mannheim. The French prisoners will reach Lyons the same day.

A NEGLECTED COLONY

Bitter Complaint of Settlers

WHY AUSTRALIA CALLS

Colonia 16 de Octubre, June 7.

This is a far, and little known place, even in Buenos Aires, where have been living for 25 years, some of the Welsh settlers from the Valley of Chubut. It is very near the borders of Chile and lies among great mountains, and rivers. The place is surrounded by high hills, and some mountains to the west. In summer, in fact, from November to the end of April the weather is nice, but, in the winter, much snow and rain fall and, at times strong winds prevail.

This year, it has been raining almost daily for six weeks, and the snow is low on the high hills. The farmers have lost a great deal of wheat. The stacks were badly made, so with the continuous rain, got wet. It is difficult to imagine, how bad the roads are. There is no bridge to cross any river nearer than Gaiman, 134 leagues to the east. A small one was made lately on the Teea river, but the current soon took it away. There are several rivers in, and near the Colony, and when these are high, all traffic has to stop until the rivers go down.

There are in this territory about 600 or 700 young men, who would be glad to get a little land to cultivate. They are mostly sons of the settlers of the Valley of Chubut, but many have come here from different parts of Wales during these last six years, and, in view of the Decree passed by the National Government on January 6, last, declaring that all lands are not to be let, sold, or given under any condition, all are much disheartened and ready to look for another country. Some are going over to Valparaiso, from there to Australia, a cheap and quick way. These are 14 lots of fiscal lands, measured, and established for 13 years, and the settlers cannot get any security for them. There are Engineers here, measuring many more lots, but, heaven knows, how, or in how many years they can be had, judging from the past. The first settlers waited 23 years for any deeds on their land, and very few of them have deeds yet, so, between all, this part of the territory is almost at a standstill.

All the surrounding lands, to the south, east and north are full of Chilians of the worst class—thieves by instinct—and some Indians, who are no better. Most of these people live entirely on what they steal. The police are few, and far between, owing to the great distances from one place to the other, and the cry among these men is, "When are we to be paid, the same as in all national territories?" There has been no school master for more than a year, though the neighbours have asked for one several times, indeed, there is nothing to train the young to anything better in life, than to be frontier gauchos. Only very few of us oldest settlers take any interest in reading, or anything in the way of learning.

THE WASTE OF WAR

SEVEN MILLIONS STERLING FOR RIFLE AMMUNITION.

New York, July 3.

Agents of the British Government are reported to have offered Messrs. Jamestown and Hornell, manufacturers, of Dunkirk, State of New York, £7,000,000 for a thousand million rifle cartridges to be delivered in two years. The firm, after considering the offer, undertook to supply half the quantity required, as the work of supplying the whole amount would disorganise their business.

NEUTRALITY OF CHILE

Was It Violated?

INVESTIGATION AT EASTER ISLAND

Santiago (Chile), July 5.

The commander of the Chilean corvette Baquedano is expected here some time this week to report to the Government on his visit to Easter Island to ascertain whether there had been any breach of Chile's neutrality.

The natives of the island have confirmed the report that the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel was there several days, during which the crew went ashore.

The Baquedano brought to Valparaiso the captain and six of the crew of the French barque Jean, which was sunk by the Germans.

CINEMA AT AMERICAN CHURCH

KINDERGARTEN SCHOOLS PRESENT.

The Rev. Dr. McLaughlin of the American Church, takes a great deal of trouble to present amusing and agreeable spectacles to the younger generation and—like the good man he is—he arranges that the less fortunate of the children shall have their turn in beholding "the sorts of things you read about and very seldom see," except on the screen. On July 2nd the Church Lecture Hall, which is a really hardworked and deserving apartment, was as full as Bishop Hatto's barn for the children of the Kindergarten Schools had assembled in their legions. The object of the entertainment was to assist the fund of the "Sociedad Nacional de Kindergarten," an institution which is doing splendid work among the poorer children. They are doing all they can to provide money and warm clothing in the homes of these little people, at this bitterly cold season. During the interval a collection for this worthy object was made and realised $110.35, which was handed intact to the Lady Treasurer by Dr. McLaughlin. The Edison Company on this as on other occasions has kindly supplied the films and exhibition gratis. Most of the children belonged to Spanish speaking families, and manifested the most lively interest in the excellent series of films provided for their delectation.

GYMNASTIC GAMES AT THE Y.M.C.A.

At the Y.M.C.A., Paseo Colon, on July 3, an exhibition of gymnastic games was given by members of the Association. The gymnasium was filled to its utmost capacity.

The programme included floor ball, medicine ball, cock fighting, and basket ball.

It was the latter that attracted especial attention, for its excellent and amazingly fast play. The teams were well matched, and all the players were in the front rank of the game and the finest exponents of it in the country. The most conspicuous and not to say brilliant player was Calle, who played for the Blues, which were ultimately the winners.

A bout of singleticks was also an interesting exhibition, and the entire evening was well enjoyed by those present. Mr. Hugo Wilson presented the prizes at the close of the games.

AN ARGENTINE HERO

The Late Lieut. C. Murchland

A friend of the late Lieut. C. Murchland, of the Royal Field Artillery, writes:—

"The late Lieut. Murchland who was killed in action on May 26 was formerly at the Estancia Las Violetas, Monsalvo, and afterwards at Los Ingleses, Gral. Lavalle en Ajó, from the latter he left for the war some months ago. During his residence in this district he had made many friends. Best of good fellows and cheeriest of friends his unfortunate death is a great blow to all who knew him, both British and Argentine, in the Rincon de Ajó. May the earth truly rest lightly on this kindly friend and gallant soldier."

RE-ARREST OF RONDEPIERRE

DETAINED BY THE BRAZILIAN POLICE.

According to the latest telegram received from Brazil, the police in Rio de Janeiro, yesterday afternoon arrested Francisco Rondepierre on the request of the authorities of this city.

As will be recalled Rondepierre a short time ago was arrested in Buenos Aires for various infractions of the law and stood his examination before the Judge Dr. Newton, but was later set at liberty. Further details having come to light, regarding further offences against the laws of the Republic, Dr. Newton ordered his re-arrest. The police official Zabala, who, it will be remembered played the part of the murdered Conrad in the reconstruction of the Palermo lake murder, was sent to arrest Rondepierre, but he had disappeared. He was ultimately traced to Rio de Janeiro, by means of letters which he was constantly having addressed to him from Juana Del Val, his lady love.

It appears that on obtaining his freedom he immediately went to San Fernando and from there took a small boat across to Montevideo. Thence he travelled to Uruguayana, Brasil, through Villa Maria to San Pablo and on to Rio de Janeiro. At the latter place he changed his name to Emmanuelle Soullignae and stayed in the Hotel Bristol, Rio Branco 247.

Through letters arriving at the Poste Restante from Juana Del Val, who was going to the Brazilian capital previous to sailing with Rondepierre to Europe, the police got on his track and telegraphed instructions to the Brazilian police to arrest him.

So soon as the extradition papers are in order Rondepierre will be brought back to Buenos Aires to stand his trial before Dr. Newton.

IRISH SOLDIER'S GRAPHIC STORY

REMARKABLE ESCAPE AT FESTUBERT

HEROIC WORK OF THE SURREYS

Private P. McKenna, D Company 2nd Battalion, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, in a letter from the front to his friends at Dungannon, County Tyrone, relates a remarkable escape he had when struck by a shell. He writes: "We held two lines of German trenches in the Festubert district all night on the 15th inst. and all day on Sunday, although we had no rations or anything to eat, and could not get up any support. The General was here since, and gave us great praise for what we did then, and said it was the first time the German line had been broken. I was nearly knocked out by a shell which struck me on the right side, but my pouches caught it. There were 50 rounds of ammunition in my pouch, and it tore the pouches off me and my strap caught fire. The ammunition went off, and I was sent on my back for ten yards, but was little the worse for it. I had some holy pictures in my pocket, and these were riddled, and some cigarettes I had in my pocket were also riddled, and I am sending these home as a souvenir."

"On the night we went into action our company was in front leading the attack, and we had then four hundred yards to go to the German trench. The men fell all around me in dozens, and I do not know under God how I escaped, for the men fell on every side of me. We kept going on, however, and I had no fear, and felt just like going for a walk until we got to the German trench, and I then came to my senses. We took the trench, but at an awful cost. Your prayers must have been heard, or I would never have come out of it."

FOR "OLD ENGLAND."

Pte. W. Hutton, 3rd East Surrey Regiment, writes: "It was a glorious fight. They were right on us once, but that we waited for; then we gave them gee-up. It was terrible, as bad as I have yet experienced since the war. The Surreys were in for a warm time, but the enemy got a warmer reception. It was a fight for Old England, and no mistake our boys were brave. Brave isn't in it; it was daring. One young officers whose name I would like to mention was the bravest hero. In a trench in front one youngster on his right got his rifle jammed, so all he could do was to get ammunition ready for the officer, and as fast as he did so the officer fired, shouting: 'Come on, boys; keep cool now.' He was a brave one. Then, 'Here they go; they're going! they're going!' It was a fight then, God bless him. He was wounded and was my platoon commander. I cannot say too much of what he did to cheer the boys and keep them together, being by his side. I am pleased to hear he is going on all right."

"After being relieved we were inspected by General French. He praised the old regiment up and others who were there with us, but he regretted to see so small a number. He spoke, as before, so well of the bravery of the officers and men."

WIRELESS & NEUTRALITY

WORK OF U.S. INVESTIGATION COMMITTEE.

Washington, July 2.

The Investigation Committee appointed to examine the charges brought against the wireless telegraph stations of the United States of violations of neutrality has commenced its labours at Sayville, which station is accused of having been in the habit of transmitting information to the German submarines.

THE POSITION OF THE RAILWAYS

DIMINISHED RECEIPTS AND INCREASED EXPENDITURE

Means of communication are the arteries of Argentine camp life, or perhaps a better simile would be to state that communication in this republic is more or less on a par with the venous system of the human frame, the railways representing the arteries, whilst the camp roads may stand for the lesser veins. And if it be permissible for a layman to carry the medical simile still further one might add there is a danger of arterial sclerosis setting in for Argentina unless the state awakens to the gravity of the present position. The past year—taking the year to correspond with that of the railway companies here, which closes on the 30th June—has been one of difficulty for all traders, and it would be scarce reasonable for the railways to complain at diminished receipts if that was their only trouble. The drop has undoubtedly been heavy; the Central Argentina shows a fall of £274,000, the Pacific £321,000 and the Great Southern £511,000, all compared to the previous twelve months. Heavier in proportion are the decreases shown by the Central Cordoba and the Entre Rios lines, and among the railways that count the only concern showing increased receipts is the Western, with £20,000.

Be it said straight away that there is every possibility of these deficits being made good during 1915-16, at anyrate in the majority of cases. There is an enormous amount of cereal cargo to be lifted in the course of the next three months, whilst there are reasonably good promises for the success of the next crop. Gross earnings therefore may improve, but the two rocks ahead are working costs, and running expenses, taking the former to include charges of business in the Argentine, whilst the latter embraces coal, renewal of rolling stock, and similar expenditure. That the last mentioned item is bound to be heavier calls for no detailed explanation. Freight and coal prices alone show an increase of 20 o/o. at the most moderate computation, whilst the purchase price of machinery, whether in the shape of complete locomotives, or wagons, or parts, has almost doubled when compared to the figures at which the bulk of the rolling stock now in use was acquired. This is a heavy first-charge on gross receipts, but it can be allowed for with reasonable certainty. Not so the multifarious charges that month by month are being imposed on the railways by irresponsible legislation coupled with judicial hair-splitting.

The temptation to tax powerful and wealthy concerns that are in the full tide of prosperity is almost irresistible to a government pressed for funds, and this is the bed rock reason for a certain distrust that the conservative home investor has manifested in the past towards foreign railway stocks. The history of railway bonds issued by companies working abroad with British capital is very chequered, the honourable exception being the great Argentine lines, whose capital issues have always enjoyed a confidence second only to home rails. Indeed during the railway strike and coal troubles at home they were if anything in a better position on the Stock Exchange than many of the leading English railway shares.

It is of the first importance to Argentina that this absolute confidence in the management of her railways should continue. Diminished traffics and smaller dividends naturally bring about a fall in quotations, but there is every reason to fear that the present sagging away of the Argentine railway securities on the London market is now due to other and more deep-seated causes. To go to the root of the matter one must look back for a decade. The beginning of the boom, coupled with the heavy traffics of the companies encouraged the idea that directly or indirectly they could be counted on to provide funds for the government, national or provincial and the municipalities, whenever called upon. The situation thus created growing serious, positions were defined on a permanent basis by the terms of the Mitre Law, a measure admittedly designed to benefit both the companies and the republic. Briefly it may be said that the former gave up sundry special privileges obtained in their original concessions, in consideration of exemption from present and future taxation, at the same time paying 3 o/o of their gross earnings to the government for the sole purpose of road construction and maintenance. By this arrangement it was hoped to remedy, once and for all, the crying defect of provincial administration in regard to means of communication, by providing a certain and punctual income of which the amount could be easily determined. Further provisions of the law gave the companies the right to establish their own tariffs when nett profits were below 6.80 o/o on capital investment.

No-one has ever ventured to dispute the soundness of the principles embodied in this law. Theoretically it approaches perfection. In practice its benefits to the country have been but small, whilst to the railway companies it has represented an actual loss. The approach roads to the stations, if in good order, have as often as not been built up by the railways themselves. The state of the camp roads is too well known to call for comment. But the companies pay their 3 o/o regularly. Then on top of that comes a new reading of the law which makes them responsible for various municipal imposts all over the country, a reading that is manifestly in flagrant contradiction with the expressed purpose of the decree. The dread of government taxation is always before the European investor in South American states, and the Mitre Law was specially drawn up to abolish this dread in so far as Argentina was concerned. It has always been the boast of this republic that in matters of administration it was more practical and less variable than that of its fellow states of the southern continent, and up to the present that boast has been justifiable. The railways have laid their case before the highest authorities of the state, and both commonsense and justice plead their cause. Given the immense interests at stake one is bound to believe that they will triumph, and the principles of the Mitre Law be translated into actual practice.

VERY GOOD NEWS FOR VEGETARIANS

A marked drop is noted in the consumption of meat in the Capital, per inhabitant, during the last four years. In 1911 each consumed 156 kilos of meat; in 1912, 140 kilos; in 1913, each inhabitant only ate 125 kilos, and last year the total had fallen to the paltry figure of 106 kilos. This is due partly to "crisis" and also "porque de la guerra," that fruitful source of evils to which so many things are blamed. There is an actual diminution of carcasses used as food in the Capital of 241,085, a weight of 36,665,030 kilos, a truly enormous reduction. The figures of wholesale buying at Liniers during 1911 and 1915, respectively, are, for beef, in the former year 14 to 29 centavos; in the present year, the charge is 20 to 44 centavos. In mutton, the increase of cost is equally marked. Sheep cost per head in 1911 from $2.50 to $6; in 1914 they cost 6 to 11 pesos per capita, and at present average from 6 to 10 pesos a head. In pork only there is a diminution of price, due probably to the larger supply from increased pig breeding. In 1911 pork cost per kilo from 55 to 94 centavos; now the price is from 46 to 54.

Naturally if this kind of thing continues, we shall become a city of bread-eaters, for vegetables are too dear to count. During the intense cold of the present season, an increase of meat consumption may be expected, if the consumer can afford it; but can he?

FANCY DRESS BALL AT VILLA DEVOTO

DANCING AND DERAY AT SAN CARLOS SALON

On July 3rd the younger British community of Villa Devoto and district, gave themselves up wholeheartedly to the worship of Terpsichore with a dash of Momus; they had in short a Fancy Dress Dance at the Salon San Carlos, which was a conspicuous success. The venue of the affair was rendered easy to find by a large merchant service flag (which for some unaccountable reason, terrestrial establishments prefer to the correct plain Union), displayed over the entrance. The Bandera Nacional naturally made a striking accompaniment and the interior of the salon simply wallowed in Union Jacks, wherewith the walls were draped tapestry fashion. The Villa Devoto Hockey Club is to be congratulated on the result of their efforts which resulted in bringing together a remarkable variety of costumes, most of which had the merit of being easily recognisable for what they represented. The crowd had a Pentecostal aspect, for while there were no Greeks, Jews, Elamites, dwellers in Cappadocia or the parts of Lybia, modern races were strongly represented and in Heraldic language all garbed and blazoned proper. The Allies were all recognisable, Miss Britannia with Union Jack shield and flaming helm, accompanied by Mademoiselle La France, a small Belgian soldieress in kepi, and short skirts, a gentlemanly Russian recognisable by his boots and an Italian Bersagliere. There were likewise Irishmen in the invariable garb of County Kerry, to wit read waistcoat, green tail coat, smalls and stockings, caubeen and dudeen, Welsh damsels in steeple hats; a witch, with suggestions of diabolical dealings in a red and black skirt and the pointed hat associated with witches; pierrottes; May Queens; Bo-Peeps lacking nothing but the sheep. Red Riding Hoods minus the wolf, gay gitanas, a Circassian beauty, a bold Pirate, an Incroyable of 1793; a Colonial trooper with a rifle; various sailors; a Highlander in hunting Stuart tartans with dirk and black skene. Erin in green without her harp, and other varieties, as catalogues say, too numerous to mention. Great also was the number of those who had not assumed Fancy Dress, and the Hall was well filled. On a raised platform at the end under the Allied flags, was situated the highly important refreshment department. The programme consisted of about 20 events, including waltzes, one steps, and that good old dance, the Polka, pleasantly diversified by musical chairs, nuts in May, jing á ring, musical bumps not found in the majority of ball programmes. A number of prizes had been kindly given to be competed for by the best dressed characters. These included silver scent bottles in case given by Mr. A. N. Guy, silver scent bottles in case given by Mr. G. McHardy; work box given by Mrs. McHardy; two more hand bags given by Mrs. McHardy; hand bag given by G. Brown and Co; two cricket bats given by Mr. A. Watson Hutton; a hockey stick given by Mr. McHardy, and its twin brother, given by Messrs. Lacey and Son.

The Committee, to whose labours these excellent results were due, consisted of Mrs. McHardy, Mrs. Day, Mrs. McDonald, Mrs. Pepper and Mrs. Orton.

H.M.S. EDINBURGH CASTLE

The British auxiliary cruiser, Edinburgh Castle, sailed yesterday from Montevideo after a stay of less than 24 hours to take in stores, provisions and coal. Her course on leaving appeared to be due east. The Edinburgh Castle in civil life was a Union Castle liner of 13,326 tons, of 18 knots speed, and able to do 20.

GERMANS IN CANADA CHARGES OF ILLTREATMENT

REFUTED BY AMERICAN CITIZEN

"The article in the German newspaper Deutsche La Plata Zeitung entitled 'My Escape from the Prison Camp in Park Richelieu, Quebec, Canada,' is one big fake."

This is the opening paragraph of a statement written and signed by a young American citizen, Edmondo Dantes, in answer to an article which appeared in yesterday's issue of Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, over the signature of Arthur Pfeiffer. In this article various allegations of ill-treatment were made by the author against the Canadian authorities. Dantes claims that Pfeiffer was never in a prison camp, and that the whole story of his treatment, and his escape is pure fiction. According to Dantes he and Pfeiffer came to Buenos Aires on the same ship, the former as member of the crew and the latter as a stowaway. In his statement in answer to Pfeiffer's allegations Dantes, who is of German descent, his father having emigrated from Alsace to the United States, says:—

"When the war broke out I was in Canada looking for a job, and therefore I can say that I know the land and the people very well. Particularly I know the prison camps in that country, though I was never interned, because I am an American citizen. It is not true that all Germans and Austrians were interned for nothing, or without any exception. There were many persons who made speeches against the Allies, and only these and the spies were made prisoners because it was necessary for the public security. The others who had done nothing were left in their positions the same as in peace time. Everybody can understand that the Germans and Austrians had to go to the police stations in order to be registered and controlled, but it is not true that after the declaration of war the Germans were badly treated. About the prison camp at Park Richelieu, and the food and lodging there, I know everything was alright. The prisoners got their regular breakfast dinner and supper. Straw was enough as bedding in the well built houses, and it was changed every week, but in addition each man had a good blanket, and they could buy anything they wanted because nobody took their money. I saw them with my own eyes playing cards (pinocle) for money. That some of the prisoners became sick is nothing to wonder at. That is just the same as in the German prison camps. Those who were sick were treated in a good hospital."

"As to the man Pfeiffer himself, he stated that the Canadians took from him $200 gold and $600 in bills. I met him in different places in the United States, but he never had a cent in his pockets. He was surprised to see me on the same ship. To everybody on board he told a different story, because of course they didn't know anything, but he didn't tell me he had escaped from the prison camp because I knew that was impossible. Anyhow he is a good inventor."

THE "BOMB" HOAX

TIN CAN AND RUBBISH

Colonel Ledesma, Chief of the Arsenal, has informed Dr. Newton that the "bomb" found in the Palace of Justice consisted of a metal and old papers. A tin case, 10 cms. long and 6 in diameter, contained scraps of coal and nails. The cylinder was wrapped in paper tied with wire, then came a wrapping of zinc, and finally more paper and string. A screw of the type found in electric batteries gave an air of realism, together with a piece of slow match. It is feared that the "criminal attempt" was nothing less than an impudent joke on Justice in her very Temple.

NORTHCLIFFE AND KITCHENER

The Meaning of the Vendetta

BY A. G. G.

May 22.

The gravest blow that this country has sustained since the war began has befallen us this week. It is not the fall of the Government. That, is true, is sufficiently serious—serious because of the peril of changing horses while crossing the stream, serious because of the effect which this evidence of internal disunion will have abroad, still more serious because we have lost a Government, which, by universal consent, has conducted this war with extraordinary capacity and are about to have a Government of whose capacity we know nothing.

To every Liberal, of course, the event is one of profound sorrow. It is the tragic close of a great drama. In the drama the poet might see the spirit of Liberalism fighting, like the Greeks of old, a ten years' war against an embattled Troy, and in the end being struck down not by its enemies but by an implacable fate. It needs, indeed, little exercise of the imagination to see in the story of these years the element of an heroic combat, in which every victory leads to a fiercer struggle, and which, when the final triumph seems assured, is enveloped in universal disaster by the thunders of Olympus. The Immortals have had their sport with the mortals, have grown tired of the play and have overwhelmed the foes in a common ruin. The Liberal Achilles and the Tory Hector are no longer fighting against each other for the possession of Helen, but with each other for the life of Helen, in whom we may see the symbol of the soul of freedom in all the world.

THE FALL OF THE GOVERNMENT

In the midst of this vaster conflict we have little thought to spare for the pitiful ending of a great story. Yet there is one for whom Liberalism means the vital principle of human society who does not feel today that a great light has been quenched and that the darkness that has come upon the earth in these days is, for him at all events, deepened. His thought goes back to that triumphant dawn ten years ago. He sees again the historic scene in the Albert Hall when Campbell-Bannerman, who had borne the flag so bravely during the dark days of reaction, appeared before the country as the head of a Liberal Government. The emotions of that night can never be forgotten. We had, like Ulysses, reached an arch wherethrough

Gleamed the untravelled world, and we had only to enter and take possession. And when, a few weeks later, the nation repudiated the Balfour Government and everything for which it stood with a violence and emphasis unparalleled in political history it seemed that at last after many false starts democracy's title deeds were secure.

And now the end has come amid the thunders of battle and the collapse of all the laborious achievements of men into the feverish barbarism of war. It is a tragic end to a Ministry that has fought so brave a fight to humanise society and whose work has no parallel in this or, indeed, any country either for magnitude or for spirit. Whether it ought to have fallen we must leave for the historian to decide in that calm which will one day come back to the world. Perhaps he will say that it ought not—that Mr. Asquith should have adopted the course of Signor Salandra in Italy and resigned. That course would have solved his difficulties and shown that there was no alternative to him any more than there was an alternative to Salandra in Italy.

THE CHOICE

But it is not the fall of the Government to which I refer as the greatest blow this country has sustained during the war. It is the manner of its fall. For what is the ultimate truth about the disaster? It is not the result of the disagreements between Lord Fisher and Mr. Churchill. It is not due to the deficiencies of Lord Kitchener. These things are only the immediate causes. It is due ultimately to this fact, that in the midst of the most stupendous struggle in the history of the nation the issues of life and death are the sport of a sensational journalist. This is the plain fact of the situation and no one intimate with events doubts it. It is the fact which the country has to face, and the most serious problem at this moment is not who is going to form the new Government, but what is that Government going to do with Lord Northcliffe. For this thing is clear, either that frenzied office boy must be suppressed or no Government can live. It will have surrendered its authority to the mob that Lord Northcliffe hounds on in the columns of "The Times," "The Daily Mail," and the "Evening News" and it will die by the mob. We have to choose, in fact, between responsible Government and a Press dictatorship.

THE PRESS DICTATOR.

Now there may be something to be said for a dictatorship, but there is nothing to be said for an anonymous dictatorship, effected by the simple process of capturing the newspapers and using them to poison public opinion. A dictator has to come into the open. He is seen and known, and he stands or falls by virtue of his own visible acts and purposes. But an anonymous dictator, who skulks behind his newspapers, can play the secret assassin without ever being seen by the public, ever being called on to explain his motives, ever suffering the penalty of exposure.

Let us see what this power means in the hands of an unscrupulous adventurer like Lord Northcliffe. And in the first place let us remember who Lord Northcliffe is. He is a man whom the public has never seen and never heard. He came to fortune by exploiting the shallowest form of journalism, represented by "Answers," "Comic Cuts," and a multitude of similar sheets. And these journals are the measure of his mind. He has become the master of "The Times," but he still retains the outlook of "Answers" and "Comic Cuts," and his whole career has been a record of vulgar sensationalism, divorced not only from any moral purpose, but from any intelligible meaning except the exercise of power.

THE IDOL.

Now as an illustration of the methods and motives of this man I do not propose to take his vendetta against Mr. Asquith. I will only say in passing that that vendetta is not finished with the fall of the Government. Mr. Asquith and Sir Edward Grey are still marked down for slaughter. I will take the case of Lord Kitchener because the destruction of Lord Kitchener is the immediate object which Lord Northcliffe has in hand and because the case illustrates all his processes.

At the beginning of the war Lord

Haldane was engaged at the War Office and there was expectation that he would resume his old position as Secretary of War. That would have been the obvious course, for Lord Haldane was the maker of the British Army and he was the author in 1911 of that scheme for the dispatch of the Expeditionary Force which worked with such surprising smoothness in August last. The presence of a civil head at the War Office was especially necessary at a time when the whole civil resources of the country had to be applied to the improvising of a great army and no one was so marked out for the task as Lord Haldane, whose organising genius is indisputable. But Lord Northcliffe saw that he could stampede the Government in a moment of excitement and the streets flamed with his placards about the "Haldane Scandal" and his demands for the appointment of Lord Kitchener. And in "The Times," the "Daily Mail," the "Evening News" and the "Weekly Dispatch" he called for Lord Kitchener with varying degrees of violence. The prestige of Lord Kitchener was so great that the Government yielded.

WHY THE IDOL FELL.

Lord Northcliffe had won his first great victory in the war. He had made his nominee head of the War Office and he now looked for his reward. He was Caesar's Caesar. But he had mistaken Lord Kitchener. That distinguished soldier, like Mr. Asquith, is not a gentleman who cultivates the Press or politicians. He declined to be the tool of Lord Northcliffe. He would give him no special privileges for his newspapers, he brought down his hand very heavily on the disgraceful "Would to God" message of "The Times," above all he refused to declare for Conscription. Now Lord Northcliffe's second object in the war was Conscription. When he was asked to support some recruiting scheme his reply was "I will not lift a finger for two reasons, because of the way the Government have treated my papers and because I want Conscription." But Conscription will not come and the chief obstacle to it was the man he had put in power. Such ingratitude could not be tolerated.

THE ATTACK.

Lord Northcliffe had failed to run the British Army through Lord Kitchener, but he had still another string to his bow. It became evident that being refused admission at the front door, so to speak, he was forcing himself in at the back. There began to appear in his papers significant evidence that he had a friend at the front. The famous message of his Military Correspondent about shells indicated to the public who that friend was. But the fact had been notorious for some time among those familiar with events behind the scenes. The visits of Lord Northcliffe to Sir John French were much discussed and much resented and the special attentions given by Sir John French to Lord Northcliffe's representatives were the subject of the gossip of Fleet Street. If Sir John French had any grievance against the administration of the War Office at home his obvious course was to make his representations to the head of the Government. If he did that and did it without success his duty was to resign. The last method of securing a remedy was a newspaper campaign.

But Lord Northcliffe had now got the whip hand of Lord Kitchener and day by day the venom of his attacks on the man who refused to be his obedient servant increased. The fact that he had been his patron only embittered his campaign, for Lord Northcliffe is as faithless to men as he is to causes. The attacks have culminated in an impudent denunciation of Lord Kitchener's latest recruiting appeal. "Lord Kitchener Must Stop It" he says with brazen effrontery, and, as though assured by the fall of the Government that his power is now established and that he can defy every authority, he announces that he will refuse to publish the advertisement and demands Conscription and the deposition of the man whom he exalted and whom he is now resolved to destroy.

MOB-RULE.

Now I have taken this episode simply as a specimen of how the Northcliffe dictatorship works. I have not discussed whether Lord Kitchener has failed or not, because that is not the point. The point is that he is where he is because Lord Northcliffe stampeded the Government into putting him there and that now he is to be flung to the wolves because he has not been a dutiful lackey to his patron. If the Army is in peril because of Lord Kitchener's inadequacy it is Lord Northcliffe with whom the public must have its reckoning. And the question for the Government which is being formed is whether it intends to live by his sanction or whether it intends to deal with him as the gravest public peril that this country has to face.

And let it be clearly understood by the Government that they cannot buy this Mad Dervish off with bribes. That has been tried. Mr. Balfour gave him a peerage, but that did not win his loyalty. The last Government gave honours to his family, but that only inflated his pride and enlarged the scope of his ambition. The more the Government pays in blackmail the more it will have to pay. The more it fears him the more aggressive will he become. He rides on the crest of every wave of passion, regardless of what he wrecks and has deliberately set himself to establish mob-government in this country at a time when mob-government means ruin. Had he been in Germany or in France he would have been dealt with as a public peril long ago. But the Government here have hesitated to deal with him, chiefly no doubt, out of respect for our traditions of a free Press and free criticism. But the country is encompassed by perils. Its very existence is at stake. There was never a time when a strong hand on the tiller was more necessary and when the authority of a responsible Government was more urgent. The freedom of the Press is a great thing, but that freedom involves responsibility, and there comes a time when even the freedom of the Press must give place to the safety of the State.

THE OFFICE BOY AND THE DREADNOUGHT.

That time has come with us. The attempt of Lord Northcliffe to establish a dictatorship has been allowed to go too far. It has been the chief factor in the crisis that has come upon us, and unless it is dealt with with a strong hand it will bring this country to disaster. There is no section of the community which does not feel the gravity of this danger. There are none, even among the millions who are the victims of Lord Northcliffe's maleficent influence, who buy his papers and despise the man, who really wish the destinies of this country to fall under the sway of his crude, unbalanced passions. They have laughed at his sensationalism in the past, his Pekin massacres and his sweet-pea sillinesses. But he is no longer a jest: he is the most deadly enemy that this country or this Empire has to face. He is ready to set either in a blaze to light a placard.

Do not let us misunderstand the position. The man is nothing. He has neither intellect nor purpose: nothing but an idle passion to be mischievous and masterful. The source of his power is not in himself or in anything that he has done. It is in the possession of an unexampled vehicle of influence. He is great, as the German Emperor is great, because of the machine he controls. Take him away from that machine and he is as negligible as any office-boy. But with that machine he is as dangerous as if that office boy were in control of a Dreadnought. It is the first clear instruction to the Govern-

THE NEW FIRST SEA LORD

A SPECIALIST IN TORPEDO WARFARE

BY PERCIVAL A. HISLAM.

Although the name of Sir Henry Bradwardine Jackson is unfamiliar to the general public—he has, in fact, only once commanded a group of ships at sea—he is an officer of very high scientific attainments who has filled many offices of great administrative importance.

Admiral Jackson was born on January 21, 1855, and so is younger by fourteen years than Lord Fisher. He entered the Navy in December, 1868, and at first specialised in navigating duties; but the possibilities of the torpedo, which had only been invented in a very crude form in 1866, exercised something of a fascination over him, and he very soon transferred to that branch of service. The only vessel to which he was appointed as a navigating officer was the old battleship Agincourt, and it is curious that Sir John Jellicoe, then also a lieutenant, was gazetted to the vessel on the same day, while another officer serving in the same ship was Midshipman H. F. Oliver, now a Rear-Admiral and Chief of the War Staff.

In September, 1881, Admiral Jackson was appointed to the Vernon, the Portsmouth torpedo school-ship, for a course of instruction, and for the following twenty years his attention was almost continuously devoted to this branch of the Navy's work. It should be pointed out that to specialise in the Navy as a torpedo officer involves much more than a knowledge of torpedoes. The torpedo officer of a modern ship is responsible for the efficiency of the whole of the electrical equipment of the vessel, so that a wide practical and theoretical acquaintance with electricity is demanded.

In the Vernon, Lieut. Jackson, as he then was, was associated with many officers holding high appointments to-day—Sir Frederick Sturdee, Sir Charles F. T. Hamilton (Second Sea Lord), and Admiral Sir George Egerton (Commander-in-Chief at Devonport), among others. After completing his course, he was appointed torpedo-lieutenant of the battleship Alexandra, flagship of Admiral Lord John Hay in the Mediterranean, and here his shipmates included the Hon. Stanley Colville, now holding an important command afloat, and Rear-Admiral (then midshipman) A. C. Leveson, recently in charge of the Operations Division of the War Staff.

SPECIAL SERVICE.

In June, 1886, Lieutenant Jackson was appointed to command the special torpedo vessel Vesuvius, attached to the Vernon as an experimental vessel, and here he remained until Jan-ment, too, that the nation expects this peril to be swept from its path.

A DARK OUTLOOK.

The times are dark, the dangers many. The crisis that has brought the Liberal Government to the dust is far from over. It has come from many causes, intrigues, rivalries, quarrels, ambitions. All those causes are at work at this moment, and behind them is the growing feeling in the Liberal Party that there has been foul play in quarters where foul play will never be forgotten or forgiven. The Government, after piloting the country through the most perilous currents it has ever been embarked on, is dead, and in the midst of the war we are floundering in a domestic bog the issue from which no man can foreshadow. Lord Northcliffe may rejoice at the confusion he has done so much to create, but the country will deserve any disaster that can befall it if it permits his sinister influence to play with its destinies again.—“Daily News.”

uary, 1890, when he was sent to Fiume “for torpedo service,” being succeeded in the Vesuvius by the victor of the Falklands. Fiume was, of course, the home of the Whitehead torpedo.

On vacating command of the Vesuvius, Lieut. Jackson was advanced to the rank of Commander, and at the end of his services at Fiume he served for a short time in the battleship Edinburgh, in the Mediterranean. In February, 1894, he was again appointed to the Vernon “for service with committee of torpedo designs,” and in the following January was gazetted to command the Defiance, the torpedo school-ship at Devonport, being promoted to the rank of Captain while holding this appointment. Among the officers of the Defiance at this time were Lieutenants Robert Falcon Scott, of Antarctic fame, and Carlyon Bellairs, now M.P. for Maidstone.

While in command of the Defiance, Captain Jackson devoted much attention to the subject of wireless telegraphy, and in scientific circles is properly regarded as one of the pioneers in that wonderful discovery, though the necessities of the service have prevented the full story of his work from being given to the world. It was for his services in this direction and in other matters connected with electrical physics that Captain Jackson was, in 1901, nominated to a fellowship of the Royal Society.

This was followed by a short period of service as naval attaché, and Captain Jackson was then appointed to command the Vulcan, a torpedo vessel on special service attached to the Mediterranean Fleet. One of his lieutenants in this ship was the present Captain Philip Dumas, who in 1906 was Naval Attaché in Berlin, served as one of the secretaries of Lord Fisher's Oil Fuel Commission, and is now Assistant Director of Torpedoes at the Admiralty. Captain Jackson himself became Assistant Director of Torpedoes after leaving the Vulcan, and then, in 1903, commanded the battleships Cæsar and Duncan in the Mediterranean—where, it will be noted, the whole of his sea service was spent after reaching the rank of lieutenant.

AS THIRD SEA LORD.

In February, 1905, he came home to take up the appointment of Third Sea Lord and Controller of the Navy (an office in which he followed Sir William May, and was succeeded by Sir John Jellicoe). The Third Sea Lord's business is mainly concerned with the material of the Fleet, and it was while Rear-Admiral Jackson (he was advanced to flag rank in October, 1906) filled this office that two very notable advances were made in the material of the torpedo branch of the service. The first was the adoption of the Harcastle torpedo, the invention of a naval engineer officer, which was a modification of the Whitehead, three inches greater in diameter, carrying a heavier charge, and capable of travelling much longer distances at higher speed. The second was the introduction of the “ocean-going” type of turbine-driven, oil-burning torpedo boat destroyer—a type which has so completely justified itself in the present war.

Leaving the Admiralty in October, 1908, Rear-Admiral Jackson took command of the Sixth Cruiser Squadron—again in the Mediterranean—this being his only appointment afloat as a flag officer apart from manœuvres.

In February, 1911, a month before his promotion to Vice-Admiral, Sir Henry Jackson—he received the K.C.V.O. on Nov. 9, 1906—took command of the Naval War College at Portsmouth, an appointment which, as its name implies, is of vast importance from the point of view of preparing our senior officers for war. After two years here he became Chief of the War Staff. In this he was succeeded at the end of last July by Sir Frederick Sturdee, but since the outbreak of war his services have been constantly at the disposal of the Admiralty, his name being borne on the

UNITED ITALY

THE POPULARITY OF THE NEW WAR

BY WALTER LONERGAN.

One afternoon in the early part of 1912, while Italy was engaged in fighting the Turks and Arabs in Tripoli, the writer was conversing outside Faraglia's, on the Piazza di Venezia, Rome, with a distinguished English military officer, and an equally distinguished English war correspondent, recently deceased. The conversation was chiefly about the war between Italy and Turkey which ended a long period of European peace; and a digression ensued relative to the ever-smouldering enmity between Italians and Austrians—an enmity strongly sustained by the Italians in spite of Signor Giolitti and his partisans, then in power. The enmity had been re-aroused in Rome during the Exhibition year of 1911 by the action of the Austrian authorities against some Italian students and others in Trieste; and wild demonstrations were made by the Roman populace against the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador to the Quirinal.

The writer, who had just returned from North-Eastern Italy, suggested to the English war correspondent a visit to Verona and the whole of the old “quadrilateral” once held by Austria, so that the correspondent might see the Italian frontier near Austria, and judge of its capabilities in case of future trouble. The visit did not take place, but the conversation, vague although it was, gave a foreshadowing of what was then a remote contingency, now a reality.

ITALY'S ASPIRATIONS.

Victor Emmanuel III. and his new Ministers have undone the work of the arch-Machiavellian Giovanni Giolitti, the man from Mondovì in the north, the friend and patron of Tanlongo of the Banca Romana scandals, the tool of Austria and of Germany. The monarch and his new men are identifying themselves with the Irredentists, heart and soul. They are bent upon realising Italian aspirations, and they have flung down the gauntlet to the hereditary enemy of the Italian race and nation. Italy has real war business before her now—a business vaster and more portentous than even the making of Italian unity. She has the task of consolidating and perpetuating that unity so long deferred, and so often thwarted. She has to defend, not only against Austria, but also Germany, that great heritage which was founded theoretically in the mind of Victor Emmanuel II. when he said in July, 1858, after the Crimean War and the Congress of Paris, L'anno venturo o sarò Re d'Italia, o niente più che il Signor Savoia. “Next year I shall be King of Italy, or nothing more than mere Mr. Savoy.”

The heritage was not founded practically for years after that characteristic utterance of il Re Sabauda, but it has been in the hands of the House of Savoy for over forty-four years. It has been enlarged and developed after much expenditure of blood, treasure, and energy. The Abyssinian expeditions bled Italy badly, and so did the expedition to Tripoli and Cyrenaica; but she has emerged from her overseas difficulties and internal troubles, until she is now ready to ad-books of the President “for special services.”

Given the resignation of Lord Fisher, there is no man to whom the Navy would rather entrust its destinies than Sir Henry Jackson, whose character is essentially fitted for conducting such a naval war as the present, where patience and scientific cunning are perhaps the most vital requisites.

venture upon a vaster field, with a large well-trained and experienced army.

ITALIAN ENTHUSIASM.

There is no doubt about the popularity of the new war in Italy. It did not need the impassioned utterances of the poet D'Annunzio to fan the flame of Italian enthusiasm. Even if that greater hymnist and apostle of Italian aspirations, Carducci, were alive, he could add only little to the flame which has been kindled by the people themselves to the refrain of the Garibaldian hymn “Fuori d'Italia”—“Out of Italy the Foreigners”—and to the old cry of “Down with Austria.” A strange and novel part of the business is that this time the Italians are up against not only their old foe, Austria, but their sometime friend, Germany. At one time the Austrians were labelled in Italy as “Tedeschi.” Thus they were coupled with the Germans proper, Prussians, Saxons, Wurttembergers, Bavarians, and the rest.

But the Italians never had any great grievance against the Germans proper. Italian unity was helped on, if not actually made, by Bismarck and the Prussians, who had humbled and crippled Austria at Sadowa in 1866, and did the same to the French in 1870. The Austrians engaged in trade in Italy might be occasionally molested by Italians, but the Germans were never interfered with. The writer has had ample proof of this during an experience of seven years in Rome and elsewhere in Italy. He found Germans preponderant everywhere, from Turin, Milan, and Genoa to Naples and Palermo. Rome is filled with hotels, boarding-houses, sausage, and sauerkraut shops, beer-halls, wine taverns, all kept by men from Berlin, Bremen and Hamburg. The quay in Genoa near the Transatlantic liners is in German hands. Milan has been almost Germanised, like Antwerp, and also Brussels before the war. There is, or was, in Milan, a manufactory of spurious Chianti wine engineered by Germans.

WAITING FOR “THE DAY.”

All this will now be altered. The Italians will have to get the Germans out of their large towns and also out of their beauty spots from Venice to Vallombrosa, and from Vallombrosa to Sorrento and Capri. The “Tedeschi” must go this time—Germans and Austrians alike. Italy cannot afford to have her movements studied by spies, who have been lurking in myriads in her midst.

And it is safe to say that her movements will be effective. She has been accused of playing a waiting game, of watching to see how the cat jumped, and so forth. No doubt she has waited, but she was obliged to do so after the embarrassments incidental to the expedition to Tripoli, where she sent over 100,000 of her best men, utilised some of her best ships in bombarding the coast, and spent millions of her Treasury, although she could barely afford the money. She has recovered from the stress and strain of that adventure, and her army and navy are ready for the big task on her north-eastern frontier and in the Adriatic and the Mediterranean. Her soldiers and sailors are good fighting men, and she has efficient commanders in General Cadorna and the Duke of the Abruzzi. It is expected that the King himself will this time go to the front to encourage and to inspire his troops, thus following the example of his father, Humbert, when still heir-apparent; of his grandfather, Victor Emmanuel II.; and of his great-grandfather, Carlo Alberto, of Sardinia, author of the oft-quoted phrase “L'Italia farà da sé.” Carlo Alberto was defeated by the Austrians at Custoza, and later at Novara, in 1849. His son was defeated by the Austrians at Custoza in 1866, but their forces were feeble compared to those which their descendants can put into the field to face the hereditary foe in 1915.

A THEATRICAL SCANDAL

The facts reported to us, and published in our columns to-day concerning the plight in which a number of English theatrical people find themselves, constitute a grave scandal, and although it may not be possible to secure redress for the unfortunates, it should be possible to prevent a repetition of a similar disgraceful affair. We are informed that the English members of the Castellano Opera Company, which has been appearing at the Coliseo Theatre, have been turned adrift, practically penniless and helpless in Buenos Aires. Exactly what the terms of the engagement of the artists are we do not know, but it is alleged that in full confidence in the bona fides of the promoter of the South American tour they left England certain that all moral and legal obligations would be fulfilled.

Among the many complaints made to us by members of the Company are statements that they were assured that there was no doubt about the financial stability of the promoter of the tour, and that their return passages were booked. Some of them have stated that in their ignorance of conditions in Buenos Aires they signed engagements at salaries which they have since discovered were ridiculously low, considering the cost of living. This, however, is a minor point, though we do not suggest that there is any defence for this class of confidence trick. The essential points are that a certain entrepreneur contracts to fulfil certain obligations and fails, his failure inflicting a cruel hardship upon those who have relied upon him. In this case it is no excuse for the promoter of the venture to say that he had no capital to carry him through a disastrous season, and if he venture the excuse that he hoped to get through all right, then he exaggerates his offence.

It is no defence either to say that the company itself is weak. That, we ourselves, have stated. The case appears to us, so far as we understand the facts, to be one of heartless disregard for the responsibilities assumed. The artists themselves are not to blame in any way. Capable or incapable, they did not contract to make a success of a gambling, or speculative undertaking, nor were they to be expected to call for a statement of Mr. Castellano's bank account, or his financial resources. Assured of his bona fides they contracted to accompany him from England to South America and give certain performances according to their ability. They expected in return that the obligations into which he entered would be fulfilled, and it is natural to assume that he did not engage them with any

DANCE AT ALIANZA

BRITISH SOCIAL AND LITERARY CLUB FUNCTION.

War has sadly depleted the ranks of the British Social and Literary Club at Alianza and it speaks volumes for the patriotism of the Club's members, when, at July 3rd's dance which opened the season's social functions, there was hardly a member present who was really eligible to answer his country's call. Despite these circumstances there was a goodly muster last evening at the Club's rooms and dancing was indulged in till the early hours of the morning.

The hall had been tastefully decorated with British and Argentine flags. During the interval refreshments were served to the dancers in the dining hall adjoining the ball room.

The affair was designated a complete success by those present and the next social is being looked forward to eagerly by all. Mr. E. Milne, President of the Club, graced the proceedings with his presence, and he, together with Messrs. Prosser, Kennedy, Anderson and others were responsible for the success of the dance.

The list of the ladies and gentlemen present is as follows:—Misses Mary and Katie Quinn, Miss Maggie Park, Miss Cox, Miss Selway, Miss Moran, Miss Bryan, Miss Simpson, Miss Fagan, Miss and Mrs. Weidemann; Messrs. Montgomery, O'Brien, Brown, Proud, White, Cox, Brandon, Cowell, Bryan, Thomas, Park, J. and L. Negretti, Harry Thomas, Moffatt, McCarthy, Dixon, Kennedy, Prosser, Mulhall, McGough, McClew, Thompson, McLewin, Anderson, J. Smith, J. Sanchez, L. Suarez, P. Kyd and J. Frontoloh.

doubt in their minds that they were not dealing with one who could perform what he undertook. Foremost in the faithful performance of his part of the contracts was the payment of salaries agreed upon, whether fair or unfair, and the provision of return passages.

It was not part of the contract that the artists should assume the risk of non-payment in the event of the tour proving a financial failure. The obligation was, and is upon Mr. Castellano to see that his part of the contract was fulfilled, no matter what happened. Unless he could conscientiously assume this full obligation, then he was gambling with his own fortune, and unwarrantably gambling with those of his unfortunate dupes. As it has transpired the artists are without money, and without any immediate prospect of earning enough to pay their living bills, since they have been in Buenos Aires. They are without their bare passages back to England. The whole thing is a disgrace and a wicked scandal.

We feel that a repetition of such a thing should be made impossible by action on the part of the authorities in England, or by some of the organisations formed to protect the interests of actors and other public entertainers. Some system should be adopted whereby it should not be possible for a man to bring a company away, and then strand them in a foreign country. Suitable guarantees should be secured from all company promoters for foreign tours, and the artists contemplating the tours should be protected against imposition. If they are warned, or apprised of the risk they are running by venturing abroad with a man who relies upon chance, or good fortune, to enable him to meet his obligations, and they decide to share the risk with him, then that is their lookout. But it should be made impossible for such a man to pose as financially stable, and then disillusion his victims in a foreign land. This is not the first time English and American companies have been stranded in Buenos Aires but it certainly should be the last.

DOLLAR CONCERT

AT ST. SAVIOUR'S, BELGRANO.

The dollar concert held on July 1 at St. Saviour's Church, Belgrano, was not the successful entertainment that one has come to look upon as customary. In the first place, owing to illness the excellent programme which had been arranged could not be carried through, Mrs. Monks is still suffering from the effects of influenza and bronchitis, and Mrs. Baugh who is also indisposed was another notable absentee. Again, the audience was greatly below the average, a fact no doubt for which the weather with its present chilling propensities is to be blame.

Owing to the absence of Mrs. Baugh and Mrs. Monks the programme was a short one, but what it lacked in quantity it made up for in quality. Here any way there was no disappointment and those usual members of the audience who were absent suffered the penalty of their absence by missing one or two excellent items. Miss Kathleen Knight was again in excellent voice and received a well deserved recognition of her singing. One would undoubtedly choose her encore in the first part of the programme "I know a lovely garden" as the most charmingly sung of all her selections. The audience were very appreciative. Mrs. Marie Eidberg was heard to perhaps greater advantage than usual, especially in "Comin' through the Rye" which she chose as her encore to Tosti's "Good bye." The audience would not be satisfied with the encore and repeatedly called on her for another song, until at last she went to the piano and accompanied herself in a bright melody called "Bond Street."

Mr. H. Parry sang "True 'til Death" and "Songs of Araby." The latter was the most pleasing and brought as an encore "My old Shako."

Mr. Lovatt was in exceptionally good form with his recitations and was recalled in each half of the programme. He has never done better and his selections too could not have been improved.

Mr. Spanton told a series of amusing short stories, which created considerable laughter and these followed the clever "Dude" dance of Master Arthur Brown, who had to repeat the same.

In spite of the disappointment, to artists in the small audience and to the audiences in not being able to hear Mrs. Baugh and Mrs. Monks, the concert was an enjoyable one. Owing however to the programme not being able to be carried out in full the Rev. Spanton offered a refund to the audience of the price of their tickets. Mr. Chiswell was the accompanist.

The programme was as follows:—Part I.—Pianoforte, Intermezzo; Song "True 'til Death" Mr. H. Parry; Song "Swallow" (Cowan) Miss K. Knight, encore "I know a lovely Garden" (D'Hardelot); Song "Good bye" (Tosti) Mrs. Marie Eidberg, encore "Confin' through the Rye" and "Bond Street"; Recitation "The green eye of the yellow God" Mr. Lovatt, encore "Evin's Dorg 'ospital";

CONTRABAND OF WAR

FURTHER ADDITIONS TO THE LIST.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs has been informed that His Britannic Majesty's Government have added to the list of articles considered as contraband of war, the following: Tolnol or mixtures of Tolnol derived from coal tar, petroleum, or of any other origin; screws or any other articles, machines or machine parts which might be used in the manufacture of war munitions, all maps or plans of territories of the belligerents on a scale of 4 miles to the inch, or on a larger scale, or reproductions or photographs of the same. To the additional list is added linseed oil.

ENTERTAINMENT.

Whatever may be the excellence of the concerts held each evening at the Sailor's Home, it is never amiss to have an occasional variation of an entirely unusual programme, and at times to substitute some other form of amusement as did Lieut. Harvey last night. This is more especially the case, when the substitution takes the form of a thoroughly interesting lecture with lantern slides.

The subject that was chosen chiefly centred round the famous rock of Gibraltar, but before arriving there the audience travelled through many places of interest on the northern coast of Africa, Tangiers, Algeiras, and other Moorish towns. The subject was one with which Mr. Harvey was fully conversant, and all the surroundings of the famous rock, the scenes in Morocco of the native towns and people were to him familiar objects, because he had spent some three years in naval service there. Some of the views were very good, and of especial interest, and one of them was unique, and, as the lecturer said, is a view, the like of which can never again be photographed. It depicted the Mediterranean Fleet, fully illuminated at night, for the occasion of the visit of the German Emperor to Gibraltar. The views of the rock itself are views that are rarely seen, the majority of them being taken in Gibraltar itself, and from the Spanish side of the rock. The lecture, therefore, was one of great interest, and was a most suitable variation from an entirely musical programme.

The early part of the evening was occupied by songs and music given by Mr. P. G. Scott, Mr. Roberts, and Mr. Harvey, with members of the audience also giving their assistance.

The time is now rapidly approaching when the familiar figure and brisk personality of Lieut. Harvey will be missed at the Sailors' Home. He has received an invitation from the Admiralty to return home and again take up his duties in the Royal Navy, this time with the post of Lieut.-Commander. The invitation has been accepted, and so soon as his arrangements are completed Lieut. Harvey leaves for England with his wife and family.

The appointment of his successor has not yet been made, nor has any announcement as to who it will be. The departure of Lieut. Harvey is a fact which will be regretted by the numerous friends he has made in Buenos Aires.

ROYAL COLONIAL INSTITUTE

ARGENTINE CIGARETTE FUND.

It having been suggested that the volunteers from this country would appreciate gifts of Argentine cigarettes, the local committee of the Royal Colonial Institute have pleasure in announcing that arrangements have been made, through the kindness of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company and Messrs. Houlder Brothers and Company, to convey by their steamers, free of freight, such quantities of cigarettes that may be available; and the latter Company, in England, will deal with the forwarding of same to intended recipients.

The Local Committee of the Royal Colonial Institute will arrange to ship the cigarettes, in rotation, to all volunteers at the front and in training camps whose names and addresses are available, but any subscriber desirous of sending a gift of 10 packets to any special individual, can do so provided address of volunteer is sent in writing with the subscription.

On and after July 5, 1915, subscriptions (open to the general public) for "the R.C.I. Cigarette Fund" from $3 min. upwards, can be sent to Mr. B. Gwyn, Escriorio No. 200, Calle Balcarce No. 278;

FALKLAND ISLANDS NEWS

(From Our Correspondent.)

Port Stanley, June 28, 1915.

Weather.

The weather is wintry, with considerable snow, but we have steered past the shortest day, "though storms without may howl, and black may be the night, yet warm within the peat's sod's blaze doth dwell on faces bright." Hitherto we have had no cause to murmur as to winter severity. The live stock have been able to find feed and put on flesh.

Port and Shipping.

The German prize s.s. Josephine (re-named Graham's Land) and the s.s. Bangor (not yet convicted or exculpated by the Prize Court) have been companioned in captivity by the three-masted schooner, Pax, (whose cargo is linseed), brought to Stanley by the auxiliary cruiser Macedonia, on June 23, which cruiser will take away loaned guns and men.

The P.S.N.C. steamer arrived on May 15. Among the passengers were: Governor Douglas Young, and his sister, Miss Young; Mr. and Mrs. Innes Wilson and child; Dr. and Mrs. Craddock; Captain Newham (to command the F. I. Volunteers, and act as Private Secretary to the Governor).

The P.S.N.C. steamer Ortega arrived on May 15. Among the passengers were and cargo. She left outward bound on May 27. Passenger for Valparaiso, Miss Harding, from Stanley.

The P.S.N.C. Oriana arrived on June 12, and left on June 13. She brought 82 bags and hampers of mails, 392 parcel post packages (value £410), and 375 tons cargo.

The s.s. Freshfield (which is still here) brought 3 steam launches, the component parts of two steel lighters (to be built here), and also 64 more men for the Admiralty.

The s.s. Neuquen, from Bahia Blanca, arrived May 8, and left on May 12, for South Georgia (with barrels for whale oil) from which she returned, and last week took from Port Howard and Pebble Island 7,200 live sheep for Bahia Blanca.

The s.s. Ismailia, which had been here some months, having brought men and cargo for the Admiralty, left Stanley on June 24.

The local steamer Falkland arrived from out-stations on June 22. Forty passengers for Stanley.

Under-Sea Cable.

South sea going ships which touch or call here will soon have adequate means of apprising those whom it may concern as to their position on the chart, and their welfare. A cable house is in course of erection in Stanley on the site of the burned-down Assembly Room, and adjoining the Post Office and Government Offices. Poaching may be done while messages are being transmitted through the ether waves, and confusion of them be made by an enemy's ship's wireless drumming; but, to "cut the cackle," when we have a cable, the enemy must first cut the cable, the ends of which will be safeguarded.

New Wireless Installation.

One of the most powerful installations in the world (as it will be) is progressing favourably, in spite of our mid-winter severity. Already a small steam engine and trucks are operating on the track (north side of the harbour) from the Naval Depot to the site of the Admiralty Wireless Installation, west of the town. The existing wireless station is at the east of the town, and exposed to attack from the sea. The work at the new wireless is calculated to occupy nine months. Three steam launches, and the materials for two steel launches (to be built here) is already here.

Dissatisfied Workmen.

Of the 200 men sent by the Admiralty, some thirty were sent back, having made the boarding accommodation provided for them an excuse for refusing duty. At the end of May their prescribed quarters having been furnished up somewhat, it was again demanded that the men should go to live there and thus save time and expense of conveying them to and from the town. The men held a meeting in the Government School-room, and decided to send a deputation and protest to H. E. the Governor; upon which Governor Young attended by a medical officer and others, inspected the quarters provided, and condemned them as both insanitary and inefficient.

Empire Day.

The children's usual Empire Day, school function, festivities, and tea party, together with the public annual distribution of their school-prizes on May 31, and the King's Birthday (June 3) Party (given annually by the Stanley Benefit Club) were all knocked on the head this year;

"Theirs not to reason why,

Theirs not to make reply," but the resentment of the children at the deprivation of their wonted pleasures and stimulating exercises might—had they known how—have emulated the London Stock Exchange Auto de Fe. in its burning. "The Times" newspaper over its strictures on "K. of K."

"For when the little heart is big,
A little sets it off."

The youngsters' nearest approach to "Th' applause of listening Senates to command" takes place when publicly singing their national songs, or spouting their patriotic recitations at the Empire Day celebration; or in gaining eclat at the annual public presentation of school prizes assiduously earned during the previous year; and when the plaudits of the Assembly are almost as much to them as the prizes given. It is to them as important an event as is the wedding ceremony to the blushing bride. The school prizes were awarded by the Colonial Secretary, Mr. Condell, but the ceremony was robbed of its delights seeing that only about half-a-dozen spectators were present.

Why the few simple delights of the children should be censored while their elders have their concerts, dances, bazaars, and other excitements is not "to be understood of by the (little) people"; moreover, their time for sackcloth and ashes will come soon enough.

Whale Oil.

The total number of barrels of whale oil from South Shetlands this last season amounts to 166,000. This was exploited by eight companies, viz., Ormen Company, 23,500 barrels; Hector Co., 3,900; Nor., 15,500; Southern, 22,000; Norge, 21,735; Normanna, 11,000; Laboremus, 20,000; Rethval, 15,000.

Sheep Exports.

The s.s. Neuquen, of Bahia Blanca, arrived late in the season for live sheep. She took but one cargo, viz., 7,200 from Port Howard and Pebble Island, having previously taken a cargo of barrels to South Georgia.

Church News.

Episcopal.—Bishop Every, from the Argentine, paid a few hours' visit while on his way to Chile by the last outbound mail steamer. By the incoming mail steamer we lost the Very Rev. Dean, and Mrs. Seymore, after six years' ministrations. A watch was presented him as a souvenir. The Falklands diocese will thus be minus of a Dean as well as a Bishop. Moreover the Church Magazine of this month says: "Many of our readers will be appalled to hear that another link of the Falklands is soon to be broken in the departure of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Girling; it came upon the majority as a great shock, and will cause a blank which will be hard to fill."

At the Easter Vestry Mr. Girling was re-elected Dean's Warden, and he has been Churchwarden for the last 16 years or so. He, with Mrs. Girling has done much to further episcopal financial interests in gathering funds for the completion of the church tower and other necessary work; and by adding to its divine afflatus as regards the ornate and sacerdotal adjuncts. Mr. Girling has frequently assisted the clergy in their ministrations and meetings held by them, or during their absence. Mr. and Mrs. Girling leave by steamer to-day.

The Annual Church Bazaar was held in the Church Hall on May 27 and 28, the soldiers' barracks having been relegated to the Victoria Home after seven months' occupation of the Church Room. His Excellency Governor Douglas Young was to have opened the Bazaar, but an incessant downpour of rain, combined with "darkness that might be felt" (especially with such street lights as we have) prevented him and many others from attending. The Very Rev. Dean Seymore became his substitute in opening the bazaar, and made a short speech.

Numerous calls for Relief Funds, etc., had been beforehand in levying tribute on people's pockets, and caused the Bazaar receipts to be less than they otherwise would have been. However, the proceeds amounted to £150. Stall-holders were: Mrs. W. Hardy, Mrs. Thomas, Miss Tellman, at stall provided by Mrs. Dean; sweet-stuff stall, Mrs. A. Hardy, Miss L. Pearce, Miss L. Rowlands; jumble stall, Miss Davis, Miss Hutchinson; flower stall, Mrs. Hobley, Miss Carey, Miss M. Carey; Bagdad stall, Mrs. Rowlands, Miss Kirwan. At other stalls were Mrs. Saanum, Mrs. Olsen, Mrs. Gleadall, Mrs. Binney, and the Misses Poppy, Wilson, D. Rowlands, N. King, Thomas, and Sarney.

The Rev. McDonald Hobley is also soon to leave the Falklands.

At the Easter vestry meeting all the members of the Select Vestry (save one) were re-elected.

The Nonconformist Church has been closed save for Sunday Schools and Band of Hope meetings since the departure of its Pastor, the Rev. R. Johnson, who has promised to seek for a successor to be sent out as soon as possible.

St. Mary's, R.C.—In lieu of their usually elaborate and painstaking Empire Day Celebration, gave a gratis cinematograph exhibition to all Stanley children.

Enforced Celibcy of the Clergy.

The camp subscribers to the Episcopal Sustentation Fund having threatened to withdraw their subscriptions on account of pastoral visits to the camp being so few and far between, Bishop Every when he ruled that the future Church Clergy for the Falklands must be unmarried men, lest they say (like the man in the Parable invited to the Supper): "I have married a wife and therefore I cannot come."

Inches would seem not to lack significance in literature. Of the great English writers of the Victorian era almost all were tall. Tennyson, Carlyle, Edward FitzGerald, and Matthew Arnold, all reached six feet. Ruskin touched five feet ten, Froude five feet eleven, Dickens and Browning fell short of the six-foot level by only a narrow space, and Thackeray turned six foot three.

NOTES FROM PARAGUAY

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

June 27.

The Cold Wave.

The Asuncion people have been quite astonished at the cold weather. It is ten years—and the number varies with different persons since there has been such a winter here, but that of 1911 was about the same. This cold spell seems to be general and will be of great benefit here. The only objection is: the houses are built for summer and the poorer class have a short supply of warm clothes judging by their looks. The men wear "ponchos" wrapped around their necks mostly, while the feet are bare. The same way the women, a heavy shawl takes the place of the usual "mantá" and with the bare feet, and their dresses of the summer. This only refers to the poorer class and the market women. The well to do Paraguayans dress quite as well as do the residents of Buenos Aires, both men and women. Many of the latter, I am told, getting their clothes from Paris. That would be before the war. What is most unpleasant here and brings on a great deal of illness, are the sudden changes. One day it is warm enough to wear summer clothing and the next cold enough to put on all the clothes possible and still feel cold. It encourages Lawn Tennis, especially among the younger generation of Paraguayans. The Lawn Tennis Club gave a very successful dance on June 23, the eve of St. John, according to all accounts has been one of the events of the season. The English speaking Club has lost so many of its young men and some older ones also, who have gone to the war, that the courts are almost deserted.

Concert in Aid of Lepers.

The concert given in the theatre in aid of the lepers was a great success. The house was filled and the programme an excellent one. The tableaux were very good, also a comedy given by young children, showing considerable talent.

Escaped Tigers.

A good deal of excitement has been caused by the report that a couple of tigers had escaped from their cage in San Lorenzo—and were supposed to be prowling around between Villa Morra and San Miguel. No great damage has been done—a dog or two killed—and ditto some small pigs. They are the property of a German, and a large sum has been offered if they can be re-captured alive. How these beasts were allowed to escape has not been told—but why people keeping such dangerous animals are not obliged to have proper cages—is a mystery. No report has reached us that they have been caught.

At the Botanical Gardens in Trinidad there is a splendid tiger (so labelled) with a most beautifully marked skin. The animal is in a proper cage—and has been a very fine specimen of his kind; has a splendid head and shoulders, but appears a bit old. These gardens are well worth a visit. The situation could not be better. With time and money could be made as fine a park as 3 de Febrero in Buenos Aires—and perhaps finer—owing to the beauty of the natural surroundings. The museum is well worth a visit also, but the many objects cannot be shown to advantage on account of the lack of proper house and furniture. The houses must have been built in the time of Lopez. The main building of two stories is said to have been the residence of Madame Lynch.

Re the Fourth of July.

The American Minister, Mr. Daniel Mooney, will be at home to his friends on Monday, July 5, as the 4th comes on a Sunday this year.

TE AGUILA ES EL MEJOR

Sports and Pastimes

PALERMO

It would have been impossible to have ordered the weather more perfect than it was at Palermo on Sunday afternoon, nor could one have arranged that book form should have been better carried out than it was during the meeting. It was only in the case of the seventh race, which was won by Makaroff, that it did not work out quite properly, but even then Makaroff was "on the book" as a highly probable winner at the weights, and it was only his reputation for being an erratic beast that he was not more strongly supported. There are some horses that cannot possibly run consistently, and Makaroff is one of these, Majadero another, and we could mention a dozen more who are "moody" beasts, who one day run down the field, and no possible amount of driving and riding will make them budge an inch, and then on another day, nothing seems to stop them. We do not for one moment think that anyone was, or has been playing a game with this erratic beast. It is purely a question of the horse's temperament. El Kaiser, who won the last event, was also well in at the weights, and it was only doubt as to his condition (because he had not run since April) that kept him from being selected by many persons.

Almost from first to last the expected happened, and it was only in the case of Americano in the third race that some surprise was caused by his failure to beat even Dondiego, who ran second to a nice looking colt in Jorge Newbery. It should be mentioned, however, that this descendant of Ladas is somewhat of a roarer, and very liable to run erratically.

The classic event attracted the lion's share of notice, and a grand race it was. Aventurero showed again that he is one of the very best horses in training at the present time by making every inch of the running, and slamming a strong pair in Smasher and Pan Pan.

The same tactics were employed, with the winner, as was the case on June 20, when for the first time the experiment of making all the running was tried and proved successful. Smasher put up a good race, but the great interest was in the running of Pan Pan over this distance. The son of Ducato ran well, and confirmed our view that he will prove himself a most dangerous and redoubtable customer over the longer distances, as he has shown himself over the mile. Aventurero led about a length from Smasher, with Pan Pan a length and a half behind all the way round the course. They finished in this order, all travelling amazingly fast at the finish, but not one of them could make the slightest impression upon the other. Only Fripon was left out in the cold, and the three of them, Aventurero, Smasher and Pan Pan left him standing still, it was only this fact that showed how strongly the first three must have finished. Time 3.9 15 for 3000 metres. Some going, eh? It was a grand race to watch, and the perfect movement of the horses, with their wonderful, though distinct actions, was a treat to gaze at.

The first race showed that Wotan is a right good horse. He put it across Evoe and Arvejo, with comparative ease, and paid the respectable figure of $4.90, considering everything.

In the fillies' race Patrulla, as expected, had no difficulty in beating the field, with Sweet Hope second, and Matrera third. The much fancied Evasiva ran very poorly, and only just managed to save herself coming in last. Probably she would not have attracted the attention she did had it not been for drawing the public notice by bolting round the course on the previous Sunday.

La Loca flattered her supporters by running away with the Premio Larrea. The surprise in the result was the second place occupied by Rose of York, who, giving 4 kilos to Sotileza, easily beat her out of the place money. Inicial, although well fancied, did not run well, but do not pay too much attention to this, for Inicial will win all right and can vastly improve her running of Sunday.

After the classic event interest chiefly centred in the two-year-old race, the Premio Gay Kendal. As previously judged, it was a gift for Proteo, who beat Sin Humo with ease by a length and a half, with Baldissera just behind. The greatly fancied Floripar (why the fancy?) could do not better than fourth. As for Espartillar, we shall see a totally different kind of running when ridden by Navarro. Espartillar is very much better than the running in this race might lead one to believe, and the result only confirms us in our opinion that Englander, on a two-year-old, must have a tidy couple of lengths or more in hand before he can win. Lord Bramble ran a very bad (or good) last, while Cardoso on Don Ramiro, was surprising slow.

The last two races provided a great double, which very many of the sporting fraternity played, and thus finished off a good day's racing with bulging pockets. That miserable chicken-hearted Clinbell was made a hot favourite for the Premio Amsterdam, but as soon as it came to racing he crumpled up. In exact opposition to what our opinion is of Englander on two-year-olds, we can say that he is the jockey, par excellence, for one or two horses at Palermo. Clinbell is one of them, Piscueta is another. Nobody can get the same out of these two animals as he can. Makaroff won this event with 11 kilos and three-quarters of a length the advantage of Cuaro, second, and Clinbell third. Gladiator ran a poor last.

In the final event Insania proved herself a thoroughly good mare, although she could not add the sixth consecutive win to her list. She could not give the weight to El Kaiser and had to be content with second place. She is a fine and strong finisher is Insania, and is by no means done with even in the region of 50 kilos. Merito was a disgusting failure, and ran last, although, of course, he could have been more prominent. Thus ended the day—an afternoon of most excellent sport.

Racing will take place on both Thursday and Friday of this week.

ROSARIO

The course was in good condition for the races held at the Hippodrome Independencia on Sunday afternoon, and the weather was perfect. Good sport was the order of the day. The public generally only made one mistake and that was when they backed Cuarteto in the first race, as though it was impossible for him to lose. They got an awful shock when Galardon got home ahead, from Diavolina with Cuarteto only third. They did fairly well after that, as the following results will shew. The feature of the meeting was the close finishes.

LA PLATA

The results of the race meeting held at La Plata on Sunday caused several surprises, and it can hardly be said that some of the horses ran true to form, but at the same time the talent had a good day and only failed in the Premio Haraposa to be there or thereabouts. The real surprise was the victory of Fox, who has for months been running up and down the track both at Palermo and La Plata. Kiddy absolutely walked away with her race, the Premio Heir-ess, and made complete hacks of Divinita and Sandringham. The meeting was held under most perfect weather conditions, and the course was as easy as it ever has been at La Plata. Results were as follows:

PREMIO HALL, 1600 metres

1. Volnay 49 (T. Grigera) $4.80 and $2.70; 2. Normando 52, $3.40; 3. Saltarin 46, $3.90.
Won easily by two lengths. Time 1.40 4/5.

PREMIO HANLU, 1400 metres

PREMIO HUMITA, 1400 metres.

1. Electro (F. J. Perez) $6.60 and $3.20; 2. Galego 48, $3.30. Won by 1 1/4 lengths. Time 1.18.

POLO

RESIDENTS v. NON-RESIDENTS AT HURLINGHAM.

In perfect weather the Hurlingham residents met a team of non-resident players in a match of polo on Sunday. Play was exactly equal, but the residents won the match on account of their handicap of three.

The teams were as follows:—

Residents—Colonel I. de O. Cezar, Capt. S. A. Casares, L. L. Lacey, and R. Willes.

Non-Residents—C. Crawford Smith, M. Costa Paz, Major A. Quiroga, and Capt. A. de O. Cezar.

Seven chukkers were played altogether. In the first each team secured a goal. In the second the Residents scored twice, but their opponents equalised in the third. In the fourth and fifth chukkers the Non-Residents scored three times and the scores became level at 6 goals each. The Residents scored twice in the sixth chukker.

The best play of the afternoon was seen in the last, when two goals against one were registered by the Residents, who thus ran out the winners.

Scores: Residents, 10 goals; Non-Residents 7 goals.

A friend called on a Scottish merchant who did a large Continental business to offer him his sympathy. "This must hit you very hard," "Verra hard," said the merchant, "I've ower sixteen hundred poonds owin' me in Germany, an' I'm no sure I'll ever see a bawbee o't." "Indeed, that is most distressing," "Och, aye, but no a'together, for I owe five thousand poonds tae thae same Germans."

FOOTBALL

INTERNATIONAL RUGBY

ARGENTINOS v. EXTRANJEROS AT PALERMO.

The teams which represented the Argentine, and the Strangers, met in international contest on the ground of the Gimnasia y Esgrima Club at Palermo on Sunday, the match resulting in a win for the Argentinos by two tries (six points) to a try (3 points).

Mr. T. Duncan was the referee, and the selected teams were as follows:

Argentinos: R. Rioboo; B. H. Smyth, J. Sinclair, W. Cribbes and G. H. Whyte; R. S. Whyte and C. T. Mold; B. Jurado, E. C. Gahan, J. Bourne, V. Heriot, R. van Deurs, H. Buzzo, J. McCall and H. Harrington.

Extranjeros: C. J. McCarthy; R. A. Martin, W. A. Watson, F. F. Charlton, and S. W. Churchouse; S. Sampson and B. A. Cash Reed; F. Dinsmore, B. H. Heatlie, S. Leggatt, D. H. Scott, S. Nisbett, E. Cox, D. Etchandy and W. H. Whittington.

The opening play was in favour of the Strangers, who attacked strongly. After some up and down kicking the Stranger's forward got the ball, and rushed it down the field, but Rioboo saved. A free kick to Argentinos was taken by Mold, but immediately afterwards the Strangers were awarded a penalty, but the goal kick, taken by Leggatt failed. Watson made a mark, but again the attempt at goal failed.

The Stranger "threes" now got going, and a neat piece of combination saw Martin nearly over. Play was taken up midfield, when again from a scrum the threequarters got busy and Martin was tackled, when only five yards from the line. The Strangers continued to press, until a forward rush by their opponents took play into the Stranger's 25, and Watson and Cash Reed had all they could do to prevent a score. Immediately after, the Stranger forwards commenced to dribble the ball down the field and carried the whole length, until a clever save by Rioboo relieved.

The first score came from a line out when Mold secured, and passed to Harrington, who got over by the corner flag. Smyth failed at goal.

Scores: Argentinos 3 points; Extranjeros nil.

The Strangers now put in some excellent play and kept up a tremendous pressure, Churchouse was nearly over, but was well tackled by Harry Whyte. From a line out Scott secured and making no mistake dived over the line and equalised. Dinsmore failed at goal. The whistle went immediately after. Half-time scores: Argentinos 3 points; Extranjeros 3 points.

On resuming, the Strangers were awarded a free kick and gained a considerable amount of ground, but Harry Whyte secured and putting in a good run carried the leather into the Strangers' 25 before being collared by McCarthy. An exchange of compliments between the backs followed, which ended in Smyth attempting a drop at goal.

Play continued to be very fast. Cribbes, Whyte and McCarthy were all prominent and Mold was playing a great game.

A fine bout of passing between the Strangers' back line ended in Martin being pushed into touch when nearly over. A forward rush took play to the Strangers' 25, where Buzzo smartly picked up, and was over like a flash. The goal kick failed.

Towards the close of the game the Argentinos had the best of matters, but no further scores resulted, and when the whistle blew, these stood at:

Argentinos 6 points (two tries); Extranjeros, 3 points (one try).

ASSOCIATION

SAN ISIDRO (2) v. ARGENTINO DE QUILMES (0).

A good, fast and clean game, free from unpleasant incidents was witnessed on Sunday, when San Isidro entertained Argentino de Quilmes on their own ground. The match resulted in a win for the home team by 2 goal to nil.

Mr. P. McCarthy lined up the following teams:

San Isidro: Wilson; Idiarte and Rossi; Olivari, Morroni and Badaracco; E. and J. Fernandez, Sayanes, Marini and Alzua.

Argentinos de Quilmes: Rotondo; Ortega and Martinez; Gutierrez, Posse, Cortona and J. R. Pozo; Ginebra, Cabana, Cincotta, J. J. Pozo and Polimeni.

The star player of the match was Sayanes, who played a very fine game and scored the two goals which gave San Isidro the victory.

QUILMES (1) v. FLORESTA (0)

Played at Quilmes on Sunday afternoon. J. Morgan scored the only goal of the match.

The teams were as follows:

Quilmes: A. Pearson, A. Reid, J. D. Brown, A. L. Dickinson, C. Dent, J. C. Pollini, G. Bouat, B. Hoarse, P. Raggi, J. Morgan, H. C. Pearson. Floresta: P. E. Begoturo, Guido, Spano, A. Frascoli, Lopez, J. Astuena, F. Martinez, M. Pombo, Salas, S. Flescas, A. Cuomo, A. Repetto.

Señor Guasoni was the referee.

R. PLATE (2) v. ESTUDIANTES DE LA PLATA (2).

One of the best and most cleanly played games of the week-end was seen when the above teams met on Sunday. The game resulted in a draw of two goals each and throughout was most evenly contested by the following teams:

River Plate: C. Isola; A. Chiappe and P. Calneggia; A. Peruggi, C. Garcia and A. Lanata; R. Fraga, M. Fraga, A. Penney, N. Rofrano, and A. Ameal.

Estudiantes de La Plata: A. Barcas; L. Pastor and C. Galup Lanus; J. Aranguren, O. Duarte Indart and A. Lopez; J. J. Lamas, D. Lazcano, R. Leonardi, A. Girotto and P. Valenciani.

Ameal scored both goals for the River Plate, and Lazcano and Indart were the goal getters for the Estudiantes. Señor Gondra held the whistle.

F.C. OESTE (0) v. C. LORENZO (0)

Played on the ground of the Railway Club at Caballito on Sunday, the game resulted in a pointless draw.

Señor N. Oury was the referee in charge of the following teams:

San Lorenzo: J. Coll, A. Coll, J. Campo, J. Monti, F. Monti, A. Gardi, M. Perazo, F. Seran, A. Etchegarray, J. Urio, L. Manella.

F. C. Oeste: S. Zelis, A. Saccardo, A. Pini, R. di Lorenzo, R. Caprile, R. Lamiga, S. Barbera, A. Elordi, E. Moggio, N. Angelliti, F. Crespo.

RACING (7) v. HISPANO- ARGENTINO (0).

Played at Velez Sarsfield on the Hispano-Argentino ground on Sunday, this match resulted in the visitors running all over the home team, and trouncing them to the tune of seven goals to nothing.

The following represented their clubs:

Hispano-Argentino: Caballero; Otin and Flores; Fruto, Pardo, and Lopez; Brandoli, Danaher, Gianetto, Martin, and Roldan.

Racing: Guffanti; Ohaco and Reyes; Betular, Olazar and Pepe; Canaveri, Comaschi, Marcovecchio, Hospital, and Perinetti.

Mercovecchio played a good game, and scored three times. Other goal scorers were Canaveri two, and Comaschi two.

ESTUDIANTIL PORTEÑO (4) v. BELGRANO (3).

Played on the ground of the former at Ituzaingo. A fast game resulted in Belgrano being beaten by the odd goal in seven. For Belgrano Vignolles two, and Martin one, were the scorers, and for Estudiantil Porteño Pagano, Becco (two), and Basunto netted the ball.

The game was a fair one only, and was marked by a display of unsportsmanlike temper on the part of Garaza, the Porteño goal keeper, against the referee.

The teams were as follows:

Estudiantil Porteño: M. Garaza, José Garaza, C. Franceschi, E. Mattozzi, F. Basunto, J. Mondotta, R. Pagano, P. Paganini, C. Becco, A. Tula, E. Vattuone.

Belgrano: T. Riddel, J. Martin, C. Oliva, A. B. Cullerne, A. S. S. Morgan, B. Mallet, J. E. Hughes, W. H. Vignolles, H. Cox, A. Mallen, C. E. Morgan. Referee: J. Curiachi.

SAN ANDRES

OPEN MIXED FOURSOMES.

IN AID OF THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

The open mixed foursomes which were played at San Andres last Saturday resulted in an entry of 66. The entrance fees became part of the sum which was dedicated to the Patriotic Fund. This amount, together with the profit on afternoon teas, amounted to the sum of $553.30, which was handed over to the British Woman's Patriotic Association, and will be equally divided between the British Red Cross and the Belgian Relief Fund.

The committee in charge of the event take the opportunity of thanking Mr. and Mrs. Bailey for the handsome silver cups that they gave as prizes, and to those ladies who gave cakes, etc., for tea; also Messrs. Summer Permain for tins of tea, Messrs. Robert Grant and Company for allowing the time-sheet to be displayed on their counter, and the "Herald" and "Standard" for free advertisement. The scores and returned cards were as follows:—

CAMP NOTES

(By Our Agricultural Editor.)

The weather the past few days has been rather dull and not so "nippy" as that experienced during the concluding days of the last month. However, the plough is being extensively requisitioned in the agricultural sections of the Republic, and there is a very probability that the area under maize at the end of August will be far in excess of last season's sowing.

Foreign demand for Argentine beef continues firm, but, strange to say, prices at the Mataderos market this week have not shown the high figures of the previous eight days. Conversing with a representative of one of the local Frigorificos yesterday, he informed me that cattle are being bought at the Liniers market at the present time at value less than what sellers outside are asking. What may be said to be obtainable for 800 lb. chillers at the time of writing is about 24 centavos per pound; or, in other words, from $185 to $200 per head.

Mr. Munro, the chief cattle buyer for the Armour Frigorifico, was present at the Mataderos market yesterday morning and operated pretty freely, with the result that prices in many cases showed an inclination to an upward tendency of values. There is no getting away from the fact that "competition is the life of trade," and with the new blood in the market our veterans must look to their laurels. According to report, this new Company have been buying rather extensively outside in the camp.

There is still a tendency to slackness in the trade for "invernada" stock, but it may be said that this is solely due to the injurious effects of the late heavy frosts on pasturage. Camps that have not been stocked for some time are being sought after at quite remunerative rates to owners. The present outlook for the trade in frozen and chilled beef and beef products warrant holders in doing everything possible to have their cattle ready for demand in the months of October and November, and not relying too much on prospects of an early Spring.

Mr. J. C. Rennie, who was a passenger by the s.s. Harewood, that sailed from this port for South Africa during the week, is making the voyage to his home at Kyneton, Victoria, Australia. He can claim to be one of the pioneers of the Serna district of Cordoba, and prior to his departure, leased his camp for "pastoreo" at a very satisfactory figure. Besides being a large landholder in this Republic, he owns some 60 leagues of camp in the Paraguayan Chaco, where he both breeds and fattens cattle. Conversing about the Chaco, he holds that camps are bound to be very valuable there in the near future; in fact, he contends that Paraguay is a country that has to be known to be appreciated. He prophesies great possibilities for it.

Strange to remark, the Harewood took away some 6,000 tons of wheat from this country consigned, I am informed, to the Government of the State of New South Wales. The severe drought experienced throughout Australia during the past year caused a very poor harvest, and consequently farmers have had to look elsewhere for seed requirements; yet it would seem to me that this shipment will arrive rather late for sowing purposes.

After making a casual analysis of the importations of pedigree farm live-stock to this country this year, I find that there will be less than 200 Scottish-bred bulls for sale before the beginning of October. Perhaps I should mention the fact that when I use the word "Scottish-bred" I mean it to include bulls also bred in England, but which have been retained in Scotland long enough to enable them to enter this country under the laws referring to foot-and-mouth disease. The principal importers are Messrs. Donald MacLennan, Joseph Shepherd, Peter Miller, Sidney and Poels, Isaac Rawes, Bertie Marshall, George Campbell, Robert Duncan, J. Alexander, and last, but by no means least, those well-known breeders Messrs. P. and G. Hugh. Local estancieros who are in want of sires will do well to get in early and get the pick of the bulls on offer, as although the ports were opened yesterday to the importation of cattle from English ports, it has to be remembered that they will necessarily arrive rather late for breeding in the majority of our herds. I was permitted to look over some pedigrees yesterday belonging to some of the bulls recently discharged from the "embarcadero," and right good ones they are too, fit to satisfy the wants of the most fastidious breeder.

IMPORTED PEDIGREE LIVE STOCK

MIXED SHIPMENT TO RIVERO BROTHERS.

Messrs. Rivero Brothers, of Sanquillo Rocha, F.C.S., who have during recent years forged their way to the front as breeders of pedigree Shorthorn cattle and Shire horses, have just received an important consignment of fresh blood from the Old Country. The lot includes many notable Shire stallions, all of the best breeding, good colours and with every characteristic of the famous draught horse of Great Britain. They were personally selected in England by Mr. Harry Blunt, who has for some years acted as Messrs. Rivero's estancia manager, and who was formerly in the employ of that noted Shire breeder Lord Edgerton. The eight stallions comprise three 3-year-olds and five 2-year-olds, and they should give a good account of themselves in service with the grand quality mares at Sanquillo.

The Shorthorns imported are represented by five bulls and seven heifers, all of which are dark reds or roans, and most fashionably bred. This addition to the Messrs. Rivero's stock should have a telling effect at future shows in this Republic.

Four Lincoln shearling rams and seven ewes, from the famous Nocton Cabaña of J. H. Dean and Sons, were also acquired by Mr. Blunt when in England, for Messrs. Rivero; but, as the selling stipulation was that they should be exhibited at the forthcoming Royal Show of England, they are due to come out to this country in a later shipment.

NEW INDIAN COLONY

RESERVATION NEAR EMBARCACION.

The Minister of Interior will shortly issue a decree creating a Colony of Indians who are to be assembled at Kilometre 522 of the line between Formosa and Embarcacion. A financial commission of Indians under the direction of Herrera Vegas of the Territorial Department, will manage affairs. A sum of $40,000 will be expended on the preliminary expenses of the new Colony which will at first consist of about 100 families of aborigines. A large extent of territory is to be reserved for their exclusive use. Dr. Zwanck, Secretary of the Financial Commission, leaves on Sunday for Napalpi to organise details of the scheme.

TUBERCULOSIS IN CATTLE

THE TUBERCLE BACILLUS.

II.

The germ of the disease, the tubercle bacillus, is a tiny, slender, rod-shaped body. Several thousands of them placed end to end would be needed to measure an inch, so that they are quite invisible to the naked eye. A powerful microscope is needed to see them. Once the bacillus has gained lodgment inside the body of an animal, it begins to grow and multiply. It gets longer, and when full grown, divides cross-wise, making two out of one. Each of these goes through the same process, the two becoming four, the four eight, and so on indefinitely. This multiplication takes place quite rapidly when conditions are favourable, a few hours only being required for the birth of each generation. Nature, however, does not permit this process to continue long without offering some resistance. The forces of the body are aroused to action, and a battle begins between the tissues of the body and the army of invaders. The first line of defence is composed of the white cells of the blood which hurry to the scene of action and endeavour to destroy the invaders, by eating them up. Sometimes they are successful and the bacilli are destroyed, the infection checked. Often they fail in their object, and are themselves destroyed and the multiplication of the germs continues. The second line of defence is found by the cells of the tissue invaded by the germs. These cells arrange themselves in a circle around the germs and try to form a living wall between them and the rest of the body. This barrier gradually becomes thicker and thicker, and forms a little hard lump or tubercle, from which the disease gets its name. If this wall is complete and successfully imprisons the bacilli these gradually die, and the disease in that particular spot is arrested. Frequently, however, both these safeguards are overcome. The germs break through the barriers, and are carried in the blood stream or lymph channels to other parts of the body. New points of attack are selected, and the process begins again, but with less chance on the side of the animal. As the tubercles increase in number, the power of the body to grapple with them becomes less and less, and gradually the animal falls a prey to the disease. The tubercle bacilli does not multiply outside the body of an animal. It can live for a long time in favourable surroundings, such as dark and dirty byres. Sunlight soon destroys it. Freezing does not hurt it, but it can only stand a moderate amount of heat, exposure to 149 degrees Fahrenheit for twenty minutes kills it. Protected by a layer of dried mucus such as is coughed up from the lungs, it withstands drying, light, and ordinary disinfectants, but is readily killed by steam or boiling water.

HOW THE DISEASE SPREADS.

Sooner or later the tuberculous cow begins to give off the germs of the disease. The germs escape by the mouth and nose, the bowels, in the milk, and in discharges from the genital organs. When the germs are being given off in any of these ways, the disease is known as open tuberculosis. Germs discharged from the mouth and nose are coughed up from the lungs, and are sprayed over the food in front of the cow, or are carried in the air, for a time, until they fall to the ground. Cows in adjoining stalls may take in these germs, in the air they breathe, or in the food they eat, and so contract the disease. Germs discharged from the bowels are mixed with the manure, and may infect cattle and hogs, that are allowed to pick over the dung heap. The practice of having hogs and cattle together in the same yard is sure to result in the infection of the hogs if any of the cattle are affected. The germs in the manure come from matter that is coughed up and swallowed, and in some cases from tuberculosis in the bowels themselves. Manure containing tubercle germs may easily infect the milk. Particles of dried manure may fall into the milk pail, from the skin of a dirty cow, or be accidentally flicked off from the tail and fall into the milk. Straining the milk afterwards only removes the larger particles. The smaller ones, including the germs, remain in the milk. When the udder is tuberculous, the milk contains the germs, in vast numbers. Such milk may look and taste perfectly good, but readily transmits the disease to young animals. It is very dangerous to children. Hogs and calves are very readily infected by it.

HOW A HERD IS INFECTED.

Tuberculosis may be introduced into a healthy herd in a number of ways.

1. By the purchase of a bull or other animal that is infected with the disease. This animal may be apparently healthy at the time of purchase, but if it contains the germs the disease may develop and spread to other cattle. New animals should only be bought from a herd that is known to be healthy.

2. By feeding calves with milk, butter-milk or whey that has come from tuberculous cows. A farmer may have a healthy herd, but if he brings home skim milk from a creamery and feeds it to his calves, he may give them the disease. Such milk should be rendered safe by boiling or pasteurizing it.

3. By showing cattle at fairs and exhibitions, where no proper care is taken to keep out diseased stock or to disinfect the byres.

4. By shipping animals in cars that have not been disinfected, as they may have recently carried diseased cattle.

5. By allowing cattle to graze with diseased ones, or to come in contact with them over fences.

THE TUBERCULIN TEST.

Tuberculosis develops so slowly that in many cases it is months, and sometimes years before any symptoms are shown. During this period the infected animals cannot be distinguished from the healthy in any ordinary way. There is a test, however, which does no harm to the healthy, yet detects the diseased ones practically without fail. This is known as the tuberculin test, because the substance used in making it is called tuberculin.

WHAT IS TUBERCULIN?

Tuberculin is a fluid, containing the products of the tubercle germ, without the germs themselves. As it contains no living germ, it cannot convey the disease. Great skill is required in its preparation. A special fluid (or culture medium) is prepared and the tubercle bacilli planted in it, great care being taken to keep all other germs out. The fluid is then placed in a special kind of incubator, and kept at the temperature of the animal body. Under these conditions the germs grow and multiply. Gradually the fluid becomes filled with the products of the germs. When the right point is reached, the fluid is heated sufficiently to kill the germs, which are then strained out. The remaining fluid is tuberculin. Tuberculin does not harm healthy cattle, even in large doses, but on diseased animals it produces a marked effect. This is shown by a feverish attack which comes on about eight or twelve hours after the tuberculin is administered, lasts a few hours, and then subsides. This temporary fever is called the reaction, and animals which show it are called reactors. The value of the test lies in the fact that diseased animals react, while healthy ones do not.

RELIABILITY OF THE TEST.

The tuberculin test, in the hands of a competent and experienced man, is much more accurate than any other method of detecting tuberculosis. The records of large numbers of tests made by Government officials show that, with certain precautions, it is accurate in 98 per cent. of the reactions obtained. This gives a margin of a possible 2 per cent. of error, and this small number may be still further lessened by care in making the test. For practical purposes any animal that reacts must be considered tuberculous.

LIMITATIONS OF THE TEST.

The test should not be applied to cows that have just calved or are about to calve, as the temperature at this time is apt to vary considerably from the normal. For the same reason it should not be applied to any animal that is in a feverish condition from any cause. The test fails to detect the presence of the disease in the animal that is very recently infected. The disease has to make a little progress before the test reveals its presence, and in the beginning of each case there is a period between the entrance of the germs into the body, and the time when they have multiplied sufficiently for the test to reveal their presence. This is called the period of incubation, and lasts from ten days to two months. When the disease is far advanced and the animal is wasting, the test sometimes fails to detect it. This is not of much practical importance, as such cases can generally be recognised without the aid of tuberculin.

PROTECTIVE INOCULATION.

For some years efforts have been made to discover a method of rendering cattle immune to the disease in such a way as men are protected from small-pox by vaccination. Up to the present these efforts have been only partially successful, and until the methods in use have been perfected by further investigations, they cannot be recommended as of practical use in the suppression of the disease.

SUPPRESSION OF THE DISEASE.

The first step in getting rid of the disease is to find out how many of the herd are affected by it. This is done by applying the tuberculin test. This will show a larger or a smaller number of the herd to be affected, and the proper course to pursue will depend largely upon the proportion of the reaction in it. Suppose that only a few cattle react, say fifteen out of a hundred, or in that proportion. In this case the reactors are first carefully examined, and if any of them show symptoms of the disease by coughing, loss of condition, or any other of the signs by which the disease is recognised without the test, such animals should be slaughtered. The other reactors should then be entirely separated from the healthy cattle. If possible they should be put in a separate building, but if this cannot be done, a tight partition should be built between the diseased and healthy cattle, and separate ventilation provided. The person who attends to the reactors should not go near the healthy animals, as he may carry the infection to them on his hands, clothes, or boots. For the same reason the feeding and watering must be done with separate utensils. When at pasture the reactors must not be put into a field, where they can reach across a fence to healthy cattle. Whenever a calf is born among the reactors it should be immediately separated from its mother, and brought up by hand or on a healthy cow. The calf is usually born healthy, but would soon catch the disease from its mother if allowed to remain with her. The milk of reacting cows may be used, if it is first boiled, or heated to a point sufficient to kill the germs. This heating to a point less than boiling is called Pasteurising, and is safe, provided all the milk reaches the required degree of heat, and is kept there sufficiently long. For this it is necessary to keep the milk for twenty minutes at 149 degrees Fahrenheit, or for five minutes at 176 degrees Fahrenheit. This system of dealing with tuberculosis in a herd was planned by Professor Bang, of Denmark, and has been very successfully followed in that country for some years. It has the advantage of allowing the reactors to be made use of while a sound herd is being built up. Under this system the sound herd increases in numbers, as healthy calves are added to it, while the diseased herd becomes smaller, as the reactors die off, or are killed as open cases of tuberculosis. Finally a point is reached when only a few reactors remain, and the owner will then find it to his interest to kill them rather than have the trouble of keeping them isolated. Some time is required for the successful carrying out of the Bang system, and the owner must be prepared to follow it steadily and faithfully for the whole time that is needed, which may be several years. During this time the healthy herd must be tested every six months, and any reactors removed to the diseased herd. At the same time a sharp look-out must be kept for animals showing definite symptoms of the disease. These should be destroyed promptly, as they are the most dangerous source of infection.

PETROLEUM WELLS IN ALGARROBO

A NEW DISCOVERY.

From Bahia Blanca the report has been received of a new and successful boring for petroleum in the department of Villarino near to Algarrobo Station on the Great Southern Railway. The quality of the petroleum is reported to be of an extra fine quality, and to be flowing in great abundance.

Capitalists attach considerable importance to this latest discovery on account of its proximity to the railway and to the port of Bahia Blanca.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE IN TANDIL

TO BE OPENED IN AUGUST

Señor Luis del Carril, assistant director of agricultural affairs, has informed Dr. Calderon, that he had received and officially taken over the presentation to the nation of the land and building left by the late Ramon Santamarina, for the purpose of a national agricultural college at Tandil, to be named after the donor.

A copy of the deed of gift and all the necessary title deeds were placed in the hands of the Minister of Agriculture. The trustees have in hand the sum of $10,000 annually, to be presented to those students at the college who most distinguish themselves in their curriculum. The difficulty of furnishing the new college, erecting the necessary outbuildings and the like has been overcome by the suggestion that public subscriptions shall be asked for.

The opening of the new College will be celebrated during the first week in August, when the whole of the city of Tandil will be engaged in a public holiday in honour of the Minister of Agriculture.

THE WEEK'S EXPORTS

The official figures for the various shipments of this country's produce for the past week show a fairly good average of exportation figures.

The export of wheat amounted to 41,738 tons, of which 17,689 were shipped from Bahia Blanca, 15,356 from Buenos Aires, and 5567 tons from La Plata. Maize shipments reached 98,886 tons, of which 71,700 were dispatched from Rosario and 22,146 tons from this port.

Flax exports were low, only 3732 tons being shipped. Oats to the amount of 12,374 tons were sent away. Flour to the amount of 8,175 and barley 2,272 tons. Butter shipments were 900 cases, and 8,389 bales of wool were exported.

The total tonnage of exported wheat since the commencement of the year now amounts to 2,278,338, as against 860,241 for the same period of 1914.

Although this amount is very large, it is not equal to the 1913 shipments, when 2,501,852 tons of wheat were exported in the first three months. The total tonnage of maize to date is 1,517,298 tons, as against 1,250,221 tons of the previous year. Flax 602,818 tons, as against 683,575; oats 477,681 tons, as against 327,804 tons in 1914, and 767,647 in 1913.

Butter shipments show a considerable increase from 60,175 cases in 1914 to 115,562 in the present year.

Woollen exports have fallen. From October 1, 1914, to date they amount to 277,303 bales, whereas in the equivalent period of the previous year they equalled 299,367 bales.

ARMOUR'S NEW FRIGORIFICO

OPENED AT LA PLATA

On July 3rd a special train left Plaza Constitución conveying a representative assemblage of Argentina's public men and estancieros. Not even at the opening of the Palermo Show can such a gathering of people, all interested in the great stock trade of this Republic be found. Arrived at La Plata, the visitors made their way to the recently completed and up to date works of the Armour Company, and which probably are without a rival in any part of the world, for their ability to handle the many products for which they have been designed. The slaughtering floor was the chief centre of attraction, where some special kind of cattle were being slaughtered. The large concourse of interested visitors were unanimous in their praise of the smooth working of the slaughtering operations. After some time had been spent on this floor from viewing the live animals in the pens, to the finished carcasses as they were about to enter the freezing chambers, the visitors made their way to the large dining hall where refreshments, on a very liberal scale, were served. Here the decorations were well carried out, by the local firm of A. D. White and Co., the thoroughness being very favourably commented on. Many of the visitors inspected the other floors where the different products are handled to the best advantage, in keeping with the great reputation already carried by Armours in that respect. A large staff of workmen are still employed in hastening the completion of various sections which are not yet concluded; but within a few weeks all departments will no doubt be in full swing. The President of the Republic (Dr. de la Plaza), Dr. Marcelino Ugarte, the Governor of the Province; the Minister for Agriculture, Dr. Calderon; and innumerable other persons representing the public bodies were present; while the leading estancieros and stockmen were numerous represented; which augurs well for this firm's future operations in this Republic.

RECORD SHIPMENT OF FLOUR

5,000 TONS FOR FRANCE.

Yesterday was a red letter day in the export trade from this port, as it marked the shipment of a record cargo of flour. The vessel, the s.s. Centenario, which is sailing with this cargo is an Argentine steamer, and the property of Messrs. Dodero Hermanos. The flour has been consigned to Saint Nazaire, France.

Its value is equal to a million dollars, as the price per ton for best flour is $200. Apart from this record shipment, the Centenario will carry a consignment of horses for the French army.

THE BRITISH AND AMERICAN BENEVOLENT SOCIETY

The monthly meeting of the general committee of the British and American Benevolent Society was held in the board room of the Royal Insurance Co., Calle Bm.é. Miñe 478, on Monday last, at 5 p.m., the following members being present:—

Mr. H. G. Mackie (in the chair), Mrs. Raynes, Mrs. Lighton Robinson, Mrs. Botting, Rev. Dr. Fleming, Ven. Archdeacon Hodges, Rev. F. O. Spanton, Rev. W. M. Laing, Rev. J. Stuart Cameron, Mr. F. Phillips, Mr. James Marr (Hon. Treasurer), Mr. G. H. Hayward (Hon. Secretary), and Mr. Alexander Law (Superintendent).

Apologies for unavoidable absence were received from Rev. Dr. McLaughlin, and Col. Palmer.

After the minutes of the previous committee meeting had been read and approved, the Hon. Treasurer presented his statement of receipts and expenditure for the month of June, the following being a resumé of the disbursements:—

Charity	$ 311.70
Pensions	301.00
Repatriation	100.45
Salvation Army . . .	37.10
General Charges . . .	185.00

$ 935.25

British Aged and Infirm Fund	187.00
---	--------

$ 1122.25 m'n.

Applications for relief and other matters requiring the attention of the Committee were then dealt with.

The Hon. Secretary read a letter received from Mr. Stanley Cutts stating that it was with great regret that he was obliged to resign from the Committee owing to his absence from Buenos Aires for an indefinite period, whereupon it was unanimously resolved that a hearty vote of thanks and appreciation to Mr. Cutts, for the assistance he had rendered to the Society, should be recorded.

The Rev. F. H. Somerville was unanimously elected an ex-officio member of Committee and Mr. W. R. Cassels an ordinary member of Committee to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Stanley Cutts.

WORLD'S CROP PROSPECTS

REPORTS GENERALLY GOOD

London, July 6.

The circular report issued by Messrs. Broomhall to the Liverpool Corn Exchange, reports as follows:—

United Kingdom.—The prospects of the wheat crop are maintained. The outlook for the spring crop has improved.

France.—Prospects are less favourable, the weather being against very good progress. There are also many complaints of weeds.

Germany.—Officials here report that the drought has broken. The prospects of the crop are good.

Russia.—Both official and unofficial reports are quite favourable as to the general condition of the wheat in the interior. Offers are light, as there is very little moving. Archangel is offering wheat to Liverpool, at prices equal to American, but the quality is unsatisfactory.

Rumania and Bulgaria. Harvesting is progressing. Reports as to the yield are favourable.

Hungary.—No advices.

India.—Offers of wheat are liberal. The prospects of the ensuing crop are good.

Australia.—The weather is favourable, and the crops are doing well.

North Africa.—The crop prospects are maintained. The weather has improved.

Egypt.—The prospects of the crop are excellent. The officials are permitting exportation.

Holland.—The crops in most cases are doing well, but rain is wanted.

Scandinavia.—The drought continues. Some rain has fallen, but more is wanted.

LADIES AID SOCIETY DINNER

ALIMENT AND AMENITIES AT AV. ALEM.

The annual dinner arranged by the Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. Church at Lomas, is always an agreeable affair and yesterday's was not only no exception to the rule but a bright particular star in the series.

When a meeting is arranged round a dinner, the latter is naturally a conspicuous feature of the programme. Let it be said "right here," that the ladies associated with the Rev. Mr. Wolcott's Church understand thoroughly the science of ministering to the inner man. An advance guard of soup was flanked and preceded by skirmishing clouds of oyster patties and other pastellaria delights, light and crisp and melting to the palate. The main body consisting of dismembered chickens, cut off in the pride of their youth and tenderness with savoury bones and adorable prawns, shrimps, cold beef, iced puddings, nuts compotes, fruit, salads, puddings de todas clases and every each, more toothsome than its predecessor, made the beholder desire to be metamorphosed into a knife, fork and spoon. In short the apogee of delightful cooking (not "plain") was achieved. The other liquid and lighter provisions which accompanied these were worthy of them.

The tables were decorated with British, American and Argentine flags in fraternal harmony. It may be mentioned that there was also Tea procurable of unexceptionable quality. About 90 sat down to the tables (usually referred to as "the hospitable board") at 7.30 and the entire proceedings were such as reflected high credit on Mrs. Percy Shepherd, the President, and her energetic and talented committee of ladies to whose pastry and other achievements a respectful tribute of admiration is offered.

BRITISH HOSPITAL

The Committee of Management of the British Hospital held a special meeting on the 5th instant, the following gentlemen being present:—

Messrs. C. H. Pearson (Chairman), T. Lloyd, A. G. Thornton, James Dey, W. E. O. Haxell, A. W. Boote, Archdeacon Hodges, A. M. Wilson, R. de Condolle, Lloyd Davis and C. Manifold.

The following resolution was passed unanimously:—

That there be placed on record the deep sense of the great loss sustained by the Committee by the removal, by death, from their counsels of their late colleague and friend, Mr. Ernest Danvers, as also their high recognition of, and gratitude for, the able, loyal, and unselfish services rendered by him in the working of the British Hospital during the past eight years.

The Hon. Secretary, Mr. A. G. Thornton, having consented to take over the duties of the late Mr. E. Danvers as Chairman of the House Committee, he was elected to that post, and Mr. C. Manifold was nominated to act as Hon. Secretary in his stead.

QUEEN VICTORIA COLLEGE

To the Editor).

Sir:—In the current issue of "Life and Work," the Magazine of the Scotch Church, there is a paragraph which is misleading. Referring to the service which has for many years been held at Queen Victoria College, San Fernando, it is stated that I am about to give up my school. This is only correct so far as the Boarding School is concerned. Queen Victoria College will be continued by me as a day school as heretofore.

By inserting this letter you will oblige—Yours, etc.,

A. STUART PENNINGTON.

DEATH OF MR. E. E. DANVERS AN UPRIGHT AND USEFUL CITIZEN

The sudden decease of Mr. E. E. Danvers early yesterday morning came as a great shock to the members of the British community. Though he had been unwell for the past month, few of his friends anticipated that a man so apparently hale and hearty would be called away with such suddenness. It is no conventional platitude to say that his presence will be missed in many circles of British activity, and not least in connection with those organisations that are devoted to charitable works. He was a man of commanding presence and somewhat abrupt in manner, but the late Mr. Danvers was in fact always ready to lend sympathetic and practical aid to poverty and distress. An excellent organiser, his presence on any committee was a guarantee that the work of that body would be ably and conscientiously carried out. He had been in his earlier years a fine athlete, and to the last he took a keen interest in all forms of sport, particularly Rugby football. An engineer by profession, and co-proprietor of the well-known business weekly "The Review of the River Plate," wherein his articles were always characterised by sound common-sense, Mr. Danvers was a firm believer in Argentina and her future. His consistent defence of progressive legislation and his un concealed scorn for all petty and time-serving policy were known and admired by Argentines and Britons alike. He was, in brief, the true type of a just and upright citizen. His sudden decease leaves a widow, two daughters and a son, the latter now on active service at the front, and to his afflicted family "The Herald" tenders its sincere sympathy.

Mr. Danvers held the rank of Worshipful Deputy District Grand Master in the United Grand Lodge of Antient Free and Accepted Masons of England, District of South America, Southern Division.

THE LATE MR. ERNEST DANVERS

The funeral of Mr. Ernest Danvers took place at the British Cemetery, Chacarita, on Sunday.

The Rev. Archdeacon Hodges, of St. John's Pro-Cathedral, conducted the service. A large number was present at the funeral and numerous wreaths were sent by the deceased gentleman's friends.

A Masonic Memorial Service was held in the evening at Holy Trinity Church, Lomas, and Masonic funeral rites were observed in the various lodges of the city.

GERMAN 'DISCIPLINE' IN ARGENTINA

INTERNED OFFICERS SEEK PUNITIVE POWERS.

Though one is apt to forget the fact there are still a hundred odd German sailors interned on Martin Garcia, together with several of their officers. The latter have now addressed a note to the Argentine Minister of Marine asking for the right to inflict disciplinary punishment on their men. It appears that they keep up the customary discipline of ship-board, and to the Teuton mind this is sufficient justification for the granting of this most remarkable request. Arrogance is the chief characteristic of the German officer, ashore or afloat, and nothing of this sort ought to surprise us. But one learns with considerable satisfaction that the Minister of Marine is both surprised and annoyed. The Argentine troops garrisoning the island will keep order, and inflict punishment when required, the German request being unceremoniously turned down.

The tars of the Trafalgar may be glad of this decision. For in the German service, as a recent writer in the "Nautical Magazine" remarks, the lower deck counts for very little. After making full allowance for a discipline similar in every respect to the iron code of the Prussian army, it can truthfully be said that the relations between German naval officers and their men are far from cordial. There is no camaraderie, and though the lower deck may fear, it certainly does not love the "Herren Offiziere." The pistolling of their own men in the water during the Heligoland fight is a pretty fair illustration of the prevailing spirit.

HOUSES FOR THE WORKING MEN

GOVERNMENT PROJECT REVIVED.

During the administration of Dr. Joaquim S. de Anchorena, as Municipal Intendente, a project was mooted concerning the construction of houses for working men, the project, however, was for the time being shelved.

Yesterday afternoon it received new life when the present Municipal Intendente communicated with the Minister of the Interior concerning the erection of 10,000 houses for the working men. The communication contained full details of the scheme, and the progress it had made in Dr. Anchorena's time, it also laid stress on the necessity for immediate action and requesting that the project should receive the sanction of the Chamber of Deputies at an early date, so that the work might be commenced.

Dr. Gramajo has given his most careful attention to all details and believes that the realisation of the project is of vital importance.

JEWEL ROBBERY IN CENTRE

An important jewel robbery was committed early yesterday morning or during the preceding night. When Señor Luis Merello, of 659 Rivadavia, opened his establishment, he found that thieves had anticipated him and had, after forcing the iron safe, the name of which is not given, carried off jewellery to the value of 11,000 pesos. A fuller investigation has failed to discover any clue to the plunderers, whose booty is reported as consisting of 80 gold rings set with pearls and brilliants, 20 diamond pins, 15 gold chains (ladies and gentlemen's), 3 gold wrist watches, 3 pendants of platinum and brilliants, and 2 plated revolvers with mother of pearl grips.

FALKLAND ISLANDS NEWS

(From Our Correspondent.)

Port Stanley, June 28.

Lighten Our Darkness.

While the German squadron held the Sword of Damocles over us in the shape of threatened invasion, we were quietly content to put up with "All lights out," but we can see no reason why now, the danger being passed, and with an actual revenue of £36,765 (which was that for the year 1914), we should, during 14 hours of darkness, risk our limbs or our lives if we venture out of doors (for want of street lights) by stumbling into open drains at the sides of the roads, butting into fences, or walking into the sea. We might reasonably expect to have the town better lighted than it is during winter. Some of the very few street lamps there are, haven't been lit for months, and that where most needed.

We have had an influx of 200 or so strangers for work at the new wireless installation, and on the 8th of June, at midnight, a man whose wife was just recovering from a very severe illness, was startled by a tremendous banging and clamouring at his door, and could only get rid of the noisy invaders by threatening them with "a charge of shot." Turned out of the pubs at 10 p.m., several strange men had been wandering till 12 p.m., trying to find their boarding-house. They were covered with mud from top to toe, as though they had just evacuated the war-trenches, and all the front of the invaded house was finger-printed in mud as though they had been practising the Bertillon method of digit impressions while feeling for the door. Other inhabitants have found inebriated and benighted occupants in their back premises and outhouses. Our best means of rectifying matters, or imparting verbum sap. seems to be by causing it to appear in "The B. A. Herald."

Another badly needed improvement is some better means devised for informing the public as to when mails are expected to arrive or leave Stanley, other than a single notice tacked on the one "Government Gazette" board two or three hours before the advent or closing of the mails at the Post Office. Noah in the Ark probably had a better method of apprising his menagerie as to when it was feeding time. If nothing better can be done, a second "Gazette" board might alleviate the badly felt want, and save people from missing a mail during these irregular times of mail service.

The Falkland Islands Defence Force.

This is the new cognomen of the F. I. Volunteers, which is to expend £10,000 during the year 1915. The Volunteers have been reinforced by a new instructor and Commander Captain Newham, of the National Guard Reserve, who arrived by the Ortega on May 15.

What has been asserted by some to be unearned increment of stripes, badges, commissions, etc., will probably have to be shown to have been gained other than by favouritism, or appointment on the score of social position.

The F. I. Volunteer Corps numbers 170 to 180, which is also augmented by other trained forces concerning which one must be silent. Our "contemptible little army" is certainly not numerically strong. Still, outsiders need not persist in looking at it through the small end of the spy-glass.

To see ourselves as others see us was the gift given us by the "Daily Mirror" of February 15, 1915. In its pictorial representations appears—stated by it to be "surely the smallest army in the world." The "Mirror" mirages the Falkland Army as amounting to but 21, men and boys, all told, including artillery, infantry, cavalry, chaplain, and a brass band.

The latter recalls the nursery rhyme of "Fingers and toes,

It shall have music wherever it goes,"

for the big drum and a large musical instrument seem the most prominent features in this illuminating concept.

The single horse drawing the gun-carriage seems to demand the attention of two men out of the army of 21. Whether it be to restrain or constrain him we can't tell from the mirage. The one mounted cavalry man seems to have no difficulty with his war-horse.

Our muffled martial bristles are soaped down by the "Mirror's" statement, "The army is a model of hard work and enthusiasm." One wonders if German "Big Willie" has seen this depicted very small bunch of sour grapes that were out of his reach last December, how his moustaches and lips would curl with disdain. He would probably order laughing-gas instead of asphyxiating gas for the extraction of its teeth.

What a scoop it would have been for the "Daily Mirror" had a snapshot been taken of a detachment of our army as I one day saw it. My friends rushed to the door to see it, and doubled up with mirth at the comic sight.

At a stipulated time in the day, rubbish may be deposited at the town rubbish heap. To save the expense of carting, street urchins themselves wheeled to the heap peat-ashes and refuse from the houses. The armed guards had just been relieved and were marching to their barracks preceded by bagpipes and kettle-drums all passing close by the rubbish heap. Whereupon the war fever so infected the urchins that they immediately tailed on, following up the rear with their wheel-barrow, dilapidated and home-made hand-carts, and other antiquated vehicles, suggestive of an attending ambulance corps that had been mercilessly maltreated by the enemy, doing about as much mischief as did Herr Roempler, the German aviator who won the decoration of "the Red Eagle" by dropping a bomb on the cabbage-patch at Dover, he having been the first aviator to raid England by air.

Lost in a Swamp.

A sad occurrence took place on May 17, just outside Stanley Town. A young man named Arthur Pauline, who at times seemed to have a touch of insanity, was sent to the family peat-cut to manipulate some peat fuel. He took it into his head to visit the "Look-out" on Leg Point, Goose Green, having done so at times before. The men there gave him tea, buns, and tobacco, and at 4 p.m. advised him to get back to Stanley before dark. He left there at 4 a.m., and might easily have reached home at 4.30 p.m. The men saw him when some distance along the track to Stanley, but neither saw or heard anything more of him until at midnight a man arrived at the Look-out to inquire if they had seen anything of Pauline, as he had not returned home. The alarm was raised, and Government workmen, F.I. Volunteers, and strong parties on foot and horse-back scoured the outskirts of the town night and day for nearly a week, but could discover no trace of him.

The prevailing conclusion is that he must have walked into and become engulfed in one of the treacherous peat morasses (which in places are 30 feet deep). Possibly in aberration of mind he may have been under the impression that he was on his way to Douglas Station, where he had a brother working, but the track to that place was unknown to him.

Some years ago a child disappeared. She had strayed from a picnic party, and was never seen again. Not long ago the "B. A. Herald" told of a man's remains being accidentally found at Hill Cove, West Falklands. He had landed there in a small boat from Saunders Island, during a thick fog, and wandered until he died from exhaustion, no one having known of his arrival at the time.

Another Strange Disappearance.

took place at Weddell Island this month. Mr. Curran (who was a stoker on board the local steamer, "Falkland," which called there with, and for cargo, was put on shore to shoot geese. But when the steamer left Weddell no trace of him other than two wild geese that he had shot could be found, though search had been made for him. Later news reached Stanley that he was found next day ten miles from the settlement.

On the same trip Captain Frank Rowlands (taking a pleasure trip) slipped and fell on the cabin stairs, dislocating some ribs, but is making a good recovery.

The New Governor.

Mr. Douglas Young, accompanied by his sister, Miss Young, arrived by the R. M. steamer on May 14, at mid-day; was "sworn in" at the new Town Hall during the afternoon, and saluted with 17 guns.

Our Clerk of the Weather happened to be in one of his vilest of humours and endeavoured both to damp the enthusiasm of the public, and give the new-comers a very bad impression of our climate and surroundings. Easterly winds and deluging rain chilled and drenched the guard of honour, the school children, and assembled spectators, the numerous flags and the arch displaying "Welcome." The contrast between our "treeless-land" (as an Indian termed it) and the pearly Bahamas, from which they had come, must have seemed great to Mr. and Miss Young.

After taking the prescribed oaths, His Excellency thanked the citizens for their demonstrations of welcome. He congratulated the F. I. Volunteers on their soldierly appearance, and assured them that he would ever have their interest and that of the colony at heart; that both he and his sister already felt they were among friends. Miss Young expressed her pleasure at the healthy appearance of our Falkland children.

Taking the law in their own hands.

On May 17 two F. I. Volunteers, viz., Sergt. Barnes and Private John Goss at 10 p.m. (i.e., closing time) outside the Stanley Arms public-house, put into practice the sentiment, "Scatter our enemies and make them fall," for they pummelled and knocked down Mr. James Wilson, and as they said, "took it out of him" for alleged scandalising them by making alleged false assertions, for which under the circumstances, they deemed they could get no redress.

They were arrested and put in the lock-up, but subsequently released on bail by two sureties of £50.

The two Volunteers being on active service at the time of the assault, the case was postponed in the civil court until it was decided whether a civil or a military tribunal should adjudicate on the case. On May 27 the case was heard in the civil court the magistrate being Mr. M. Halkett. Sergt. Barnes was fined £8, to which was added £3 compensation to Mr. Wilson, while J. Goss was fined £2 and £1 salve to the wounded feelings of Mr. Wilson. The cost was £14 for this fistie encounter, but the assailants said they had value for their money. They were also bound over to keep the peace for 6 months.

A Sporting-gun Accident.

happened to James Clark (son of Mr. Henry Clark), who, with another lad, went out to shoot wild geese on Sunday, June 6. When two hours' walk out of Stanley, the lock of the gun burst open, and the cartridge, or part of it, blinded the sportsman, who was led home by his companion. It was expected that Clark would lose his eyesight but is fast recovering it.

A Generous Thank-Offering from the Falkland Islands Company.

The £1,000 given by the F. I. Company (after the narrow escape of F. I. property and industries in December last) for the relief of distress caused by the war, has been allocated

MENDOZA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

July 6.

Lawn Tennis Club.

The meteorological conditions have been decidedly propitious and the tennis courts have been of late very well attended. For July 9, 10 and 11 a Championship Competition is announced, and the events will include Mixed Doubles; Men's Doubles and Men's Singles. On July 9 lunch will be provided in the Club Pavilion.

Golf Club.

The season's programme has undergone some minor changes and postponements; but it is understood that all the advertised events will take place.

Boxing.

Mr. Jack Murray, South American champion, has been appointed as Professor and Instructor of the Boxing and Athletic classes in the Mendoza Jockey Club. The Boxing Club in the Calle Necochea under Murray's direction, continues to thrive.

Wedding.

The wedding of Mr. Sydney Forbes and Miss Ellen Enemark will take place on Saturday, July 24, at 2.30 p.m., in the English Church Hall; the Rev. Frank Middleton will officiate at the ceremony.

Conversazione.

Mr. Charles Pott, producer of the celebrated make of wine known as "Chateau Pott" gave a party at his vineyard La Compuerta, Departamento Lujan, on June 29. Among the guests were many influential Mendoza families, including Mrs. Cortes and Miss Dora Cortes. The company were charmingly entertained by Mrs. Charles Pott and her daughters, the Misses Ines Dolina and Catalina, the latter being a harpist of considerable fame in Mendoza. The amateur tenor Mr. Manuel Diaz sang some operatic selections in a masterly fashion. The programme lasted until well on into the following morning.

English Church.

The service on Sunday last was particularly well attended. A number of freemasons assisting and the Dead March in Saul was rendered in commemoration of Mr. E. E. Danvers deceased.

As previously announced the Rev. F. Middleton holds a service every Sunday at the usual hour of 10.30.

Obituary.

Profound regret was felt in British circles at the news of the sudden death of Mr. E. V. Davy which occurred at Panguelue on June 30. His remains were interred the following day in the Mendoza cemetery. The funeral was attended by all of Mr. Davy's Railway colleagues.

Visitor.

Mr. J. Oliver, of Buenos Aires, is staying in Mendoza.

by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, thus:—To the British Red Cross Society, £250; Order of St. John of Jerusalem, £250; Royal Seamen and Marines' Orphan School and Orphan Home, Portsmouth, £70; Royal British Female Orphan Asylum, Devonport, £70; Royal Naval Depot Orphanage, Chatham, £70; Sailors' Orphan Girls' School and Home, Hampstead, £30; Royal School for Naval and Marine Officers' Daughters, Isleworth, £72; Royal Dockyard Orphan Asylum, Devonport, £30; Queen Adelaide Fund, £20; British Seamen Orphan Boys' Home, Brixham, £20; Nazareth House, Southsea, £10; Naval Disasters Fund, £100. Thus many sufferers in the Homeland will have reason to remember the Falklands. A mistaken idea has got about that this £1,000 gift by the F.I.C. was to a visiting Company Officer.

Public Opinion as expressed in the Argentine Press.

MUNICIPAL DOG - CATCHERS

(La Prensa.—July 1).

The Municipality has a special service for catching dogs found loose on the roads, and also an enclosure where the animals are kept until such time as their masters redeem them, after paying the necessary fees. There are however sundry faults in this service which, says "La Prensa," might well be corrected. Useless cruelty ought to find no place in a city such as Buenos Aires, and the idea of establishing a municipal dog catching establishment was merely to free the streets from what might well become a nuisance. The cages where the dogs are kept, are however far from satisfactory. Old and very dirty, in to them are flung without the slightest precautions, dogs of all sorts. Ill or well, in they go, the Municipality evidently failing to understand that the owner has a right to get his animal back in the state in which he lost it, especially if, as so frequently happens, the dog in question is a valuable one that has by chance escaped from the house and been picked up by the Municipal dog catchers.

Nor is it right to put a lot of dogs together in the one cage. Fights result that are as disagreeable as they are cruel. Finally, says "La Prensa," the system under which a person may get his dog back is unnecessarily complicated. Fines and so forth cannot be paid at the cages, but must be settled at the office of the Street Cleaning Department, Santa Fé 1649, thus adding to the number of journeys required. Moreover, the cages are open at one hour and the office of payment at another, which means the loss of a day, and in many cases the loss of the animal. These things, concludes "La Prensa," might very easily be altered, and the old system be restored whereby, on payment of $10 at the enclosure itself, the dog was released.

TARDY HELP

(La Nación.—July 1).

Official information leads one to believe, says "La Nación," that the suggested loans of seed corn to agriculturalists will be too late to be of any immediate use. So much time has been taken in the preliminary arrangements for distribution that it is now too late to sow; and the seed is even yet undelivered! Nature unfortunately does not wait for official arrangements, and it will only be accentuating the error already committed if the seed corn be distributed at this late hour. To begin with the law was unduly delayed ere being sanctioned. Then far too much time was taken up in making out a list of needy agriculturalists, reckoning the quantity of seed required, arranging for guarantees, and sundry other provisions that in the long run have nullified the very object of the measure.

So extreme has been the delay that the agriculturalists now ask that a further period of two months be allowed them for repayment, urging with much reason that the late sowing must mean late harvesting, and their arguments certainly appear worthy of attention. That however is by the way. The main idea is to get the seed corn into the ground with as little further delay as may be, and this ought to be the main preoccupation of the authorities.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION OF THE RAILWAYS

(La Prensa.—July 2).

On June 16, representatives of the various railways operating in the Republic asked the Minister of Public Works to arrange for them an interview with H.E. Dr. de la Plaza, in order that they might make a verbal exposition of some of the difficulties under which they are at present labouring, and come to a clear understanding as to the interpretation of Law 5315. These matters had been previously submitted in writing, and, says La Prensa the railway representatives enlarged on the theme, pointing out, among other things, that the return on capital invested in the railways had been steadily decreasing from 1910 onwards. Add to this a serious diminution of traffic, heavy increases in running costs, and it will be realised that this industry is suffering from the effects of a very severe crisis.

Indeed the crisis is almost national, and the companies, in their Note, ask that the co-operation of the Minister of Finance be afforded them during the proposed conference, basing their reason on the fact that the country cannot be indifferent to the depreciation of Argentine railway securities in the foreign market. Dealing with the other difficulties against which the railways have to contend the Note states that the question of Municipal taxation stands first and foremost. Law No. 5315 was drafted with the idea of controlling and at the same time guaranteeing the money invested in railway enterprise. It was intended to remove all distrust from the mind of the foreign investor in Argentine rails, by establishing the freedom of railway capital from all National, Provincial and Municipal taxation, whilst giving the companies the right to make a profit of 6.80 per cent without there being any danger of Government interfering with the tariff fixed by these concerns, always provided that 3 per cent of the liquid funds received are paid in to the Roads Committee. When this law was decreed—the Mitre Law, as it is generally termed—the existing companies were invited to comply with its terms, at the same time renouncing many advantages to which they were entitled under their original concessions.

Now the railway companies comply with their contract obligations, paying the aforesaid contribution punctually. They do not however make 6.80 per cent, nor are they free from Municipal taxation, the clauses of the law relative to the last mentioned matter being nullified by judicial pronouncements uttered in the Supreme Court. The result has been that many municipalities, that of the Federal Capital being among the number, have imposed new taxation affecting the railways, and have gone to the courts to collect it. The Note ends by saying that these various considerations have led the companies to approach the National Government once more, in order that the public means may be made to harmonise with the rights that attach to the capital employed in railway enterprise. It is satisfactory to learn that H.E. the President has told the deputation that waited upon him that he will study the Note jointly with the Minister of Public Works in order to arrive at a definite conclusion.

MUNITIONS FACTORY DESTROYED.

Berne, July 6.

A large munitions factory at Dresden was destroyed by fire last Sunday. Eight women and children were burned alive.

THE AGRICULTURAL BANK

(La Prensa.—July 3).

The abnormal delay that has characterised the establishment of an agricultural bank, is, says "La Prensa," really extraordinary though part and parcel of the lack of provision that characterises the banking position of the republic. The Banco de la Nación itself, according to "La Prensa," only rests on a provisional base, and although everyone regards it as a state bank, it has gone out of its direct course in order to help the agricultural and pastoral interests of the republic, despite the knowledge that there was a certain danger in so doing, a danger that has happily not been felt as yet. The last transaction sanctioned by the directorate placed this view on record by arranging to grant loans to cattle breeders until such time as special credit facilities were available for this class of trade.

Thus it is clear that the law creating an Agricultural Bank is overdue, the need for such an institution being abundantly proved, hence the satisfaction with which the project now before the Senate is generally regarded. It may be objected, continues "La Prensa," that the capital proposed is exiguous, but it is the best that can be done at the present time. The great thing is to get agricultural credit into form, and that is what the present project aspires to do. Detailed discussion is as yet uncalled for, and "La Prensa" merely wishes to praise the general idea involved. Its belief in the need for a sound agricultural policy is well known, and it welcomes the proposed Agricultural Bank in the hope that no efforts will be spared to render the new institution entirely adequate to the needs of the nation.

ARGENTINE INTERNAL CREDIT

(La Nación.—July 3).

The favourable trade balance of the republic suggests, says "La Nación," that the time has come to make use of internal credit in order to build up the economic organisation of the state. Hitherto all capital requisite to this end has come from abroad, there being no national savings to be invested in development work. Now for fifteen years—save in 1911—the balance of trade has been in favour of Argentina, exports have grown and imports have decreased, with a very dim probability of their being renewed on a considerable scale for some time to come. In so far as capital is concerned, Argentina, in common with many a new country, will have to restrict her demands for many a year, the lenders themselves being to-day short of funds. Yet our exports will have to be paid for some way or other, and Argentina cannot do as did the United States after 1870 when they shipped goods to Europe and took payment in stocks and bonds, for the simple reason that the United States in those days owned their working tools, whereas those of Argentina are borrowed.

Thus, remarks "La Nación," the first thing is to get possession of the tools, in other words, to build up the capital whereby the present situation may be used to the best advantage. This can be done by drawing on the nation's internal credit, but unfortunately the surplus funds lie in the banks inactive, awaiting the moment when they can be turned over with fabulous profit to their owners. The reluctance to invest in an internal loan "La Nación" attributes to low rates of interest, and points out that both the French and British governments have had to double their rates to get money to-day, thereby naturally putting in the shade emissions such as the Credito Interno Argentino 5 o/o, a rate that is bettered by the very banks of deposit. Better rates will probably draw the money, and be even more effective than arbitrary measures for fixing the value of the stock, a course that is unwise and that runs perilously close to emitting inconvertible state paper.

THE RAILWAY NOTE

(La Nación.—July 5).

In a lengthy and weighty leading article "La Nación" draws attention to the serious position of railway capital invested in this country, and points out that although the Note embodies no concrete petition, it nevertheless deserves very careful attention at the hands of the government. For the question of the railways of Argentina is not on a par with similar questions elsewhere. The railways lie at the root of all the nation's activity, and if, through error, their interests were sacrificed, it would mean an aggravation of the commercial crisis which the country suffers to-day. It is indisputable that the financial situation of the railways to-day is a little worse than bad, traffics and receipts diminishing steadily, with no prospect of a speedy reaction, and, continues "La Nación" it is the duty of the state to do what lies in its power to alleviate their situation, if only as an acknowledgment of the multiple benefits they have conferred upon the country in the past, both directly, and indirectly as helping to maintain the national credit abroad.

If the present difficulties of the railways are indefinitely prolonged, it will mean the cessation of all development, and ultimately stop the inflow of capital. For if the British government has to pay 4 1/2 o/o for money, repayable at par, it will be difficult to find investors in Argentine rails yielding less than 3 o/o and quoted in certain cases at 60 o/o discount.

THE CASE AGAINST THE STATE RAILWAYS

(La Prensa.—July 6).

For several years past "La Prensa" has drawn attention to the deficient administration of the Government railways, and its natural corollary, defective service, and remarks that the Government, in pursuance of old standing tradition, takes no heed to the complaints that in themselves prove the management to be little better than chaotic. This indifference has continued down to the time when the introduction of new elements enabled it to be seen how far neglect had gone, and an interview with one of the new functionaries has thrown a flood of light on past doings. The starting point arose from the fact that the returns for May showed larger takings and diminished working costs, and inquiry into this unusual state of affairs brought to light the fact that the rolling stock in particular has been shamefully ill-used.

Concrete information goes to show that whilst on the whole the said rolling stock is of good quality and sufficient in quantity to meet all the needs of the service, it has not been properly looked after. Figures prove this very plainly, there being 1,400 waggons, and 70 per cent. of the locomotives unusable. The new management has found engines running with no less than 700 kilos of dirt encrusted material in their boilers. There are other engines that have done 2,000 kilometres on end, without ever being cleaned in the sheds, despite the fact that a machine, just as much as a human being, needs attention and rest if it is to do its work properly. Here if you will is proof positive of the manner in which the interests of the State have been looked after, and the fact that this sort of thing should be possible proves the culpable negligence of the Government in refusing to look into any complaints, as though such accusations were an offence to the functionaries in charge of the department. There stands the case, says "La Prensa," and on the face of it the successive Ministers of Public Works are guilty. The interests of the country have suffered, and it will be interesting to hear what the Government has to say about the matter.

IMMOVABLE FUNDS

(La Prensa.—July 5).

In the brief space of twelve months the monetary circulation of this country has increased by $208,596,000, remarks "La Prensa," adding that no country on earth has ever piled up a balance so eminently favourable in so short a time. This is due to two prime causes; the economy exercised by all classes of society, and the strong demand for Argentine produce. But in the long run all this money has been derived from the land, and one would naturally suppose that land was in strong demand. The contrary is the case. These two hundred odd million dollars have remained stationary, and "La Prensa" sarcastically supposes that they are being retained until someone discovers a new America wherein to invest them. Altogether the Argentine situation defies ordinary economic principles, and argues strongly in favour of the theories of Patten of Pennsylvania, who consistently advocates a new theory of economics for the two Americas, the accepted doctrines of Europe being inapplicable.

Theory apart, the fact is that this country alternates between great waves of pessimism, and Capital is for the moment pessimistic, unable therefore to estimate land values at their true worth. This despite the certain demand for cereal and pastoral produce, a demand that nothing can stop. Illogical pessimism could hardly go further than it has gone in certain cases where land that has brought forth in one single year enough to pay the amount for which it was mortgaged could not be sold by auction at the reserve price based on that self-same mortgage. It looks as though much of the capital in the country was not dead, but on the other hand sought to kill the values of all property in order to reap greater gains in the future. Then there are other cautious souls who talk of waiting until things come back to normal. Will the normal conditions they await give them land at the price of a year's harvest? "La Prensa" sums up the situation by declaring that the Argentine capitalist has always waited for a lead from the foreign investor. Now that the current of foreign capital has stopped, the local investor hangs back, fearful lest it should not be renewed. This is in the highest degree unlikely, argues "La Prensa," seeing that it is reasonable to expect a flood of capital hitherwards once the war is over, in order that it may escape heavy taxation. Then the local capitalist will bethink himself of his timorousness and repent when he finds that it will cost him two hundred dollars to buy that which today he might easily acquire for a hundred.

ROSARIO'S NEW INTENDENTE

(La Nación.—July 6).

After many days of official delays the new Intendente of Rosario has occupied his post, with the general approbation of his fellow citizens. This, says "La Nación," is of itself a good augury, whilst the programme announced by the Intendente is also estimable. It may be divided under three main heads. The first thing to be done is to organise the administration in order that work may be well done, always having regard to the controlling influence of full publicity. This end attained there comes the question of the communal finances, modifying the existing system where necessary in order that taxation shall be both just and sufficient to the needs of the city. Thirdly there is the question of ediciliary development; workmen's dwellings, municipal dairies for poor children, public baths, decentralisation of the work done by the Asistencia Publica, labour exchanges, night shelters, improved roads, cheaper living, and more schools for the children of the working classes.

All this is excellent, as "La Nación" remarks, and it must be admitted that the programme is well conceived, if a shade too ample as regards its varied initiatives, which may make compliance somewhat difficult. At the same time, admitting that the ideas thus expressed are sound and free from fantastic schemes, Intendentes who have already known the cares of office may very well say that it is one thing to promise and another to reform. Hence "La Nación" suggests that the Intendente of Rosario will do well to follow the example of the Council of Ten in the palmy days of Venice. Owing to an unfortunate miscarriage of justice they hung a baker, subsequently found innocent of the crime unjustly imputed to him. There was no possibility of restoring the man to life, but the Council did the next best thing by hanging in the council hall an emblem, bearing the words, "Remember the poor baker!" The new Intendente may apply the moral to himself, and hang before him in his private office, the motto: "Remember your Programme!"

ADMINISTRATIVE CONTROL

(La Prensa.—July 7).

Continuing its policy of drawing attention to the serious deficiencies that characterise certain departments of national administration, "La Prensa" points out that a mistaken sense of self-esteem is what usually leads functionaries to take amiss any examination into their conduct of affairs. They forget that in cases where their procedure has been satisfactory, inspection would help them to prove the stability of their position, a much better course than adopting a totally unwarranted susceptibility, which is doubly prejudicial to their interests seeing that it is bound to raise doubts. The Government is really the body chiefly responsible for this attitude, owing to its tolerance, which has almost reached the stage of being a weakness; it ought rather to have made regular inspection part and parcel of the ordinary administrative routine.

There is no explanation to be found for the present attitude, says "La Prensa," especially when it is borne in mind that the recent discoveries relative to the State railways are by no means the first instance of equally culpable administrative mismanagement. The autonomy that characterises certain departments has served as a shield for the machinations of unfaithful functionaries who know themselves to be secure from criticism. Almost entirely independent they have begun by small irregularities, that later have developed into serious infractions of their duty, faults that prove their misapprehension of the nature of their posts, which are public trusts, not prebends. The rule has been to place absolute trust in the public functionaries, and no steps are taken until it is too late to remedy errors arising either from the unworthiness of the functionary, or the laxity of the administration. Hence the arbitrary apportionment of public monies without regard to the Budget allotments, a state of affairs that is only discovered when the time comes to pay the debts contracted by the various departments of State without due authority or the knowledge of the executive, and past experiences ought to induce the Government to reform its administrative procedure in this respect.

RESERVISTS FOR ITALY

Preparations for the transport of Italian reservists proceed apace. In addition to the arrival of the Ré Vittorio, the Luisiana, also from Genoa, is expected to-day having come out expressly to act as troop carriers. The Luisiana has come out with a loading of general merchandise and will return with a full complement of reservists; on July 10 the Tomaso di Savoia is also expected.

IN THE OFFICE CHAIR

"Mister" Jean Addams.

If the energetic "Razon" would expend a little of the time which it devotes to exposing the iniquities of the Railway Companies, as Empresas extranjerias, to the study of proper names and titles as used in Europe, it would greatly benefit. We should not then see a lengthy cablegram rendered ridiculous by the repeated use of the description, Mr. Jean Addams as applied to the energetic lady Apostle of Peace, though not perhaps of tranquillity from Chicago. Miss Jane Addams may be of a masculine type, one does not know that she is, but it is going a little too far to "Mister" her, and style her "Jean." We are accustomed to see "Lord Churchill," "Mr. Fischer," "Sir Grey," "Mr. Sir Tower," and the "Camara do los Lores," but the changing of Miss Addams' sex is, one must contend, an unwarrantable liberty and it is time for to cry Hoo!" The City afternoon Press also assured us that Mueller had been shot in the Tower on Tuesday morning. Where has their cable messenger been loitering. He must have turned aside to play marbles or buy a lottery ticket, for the execution took place actually in June. He was sentenced to death on June 5. Queen Anne is also dead.

Cabinet Salary Pool.

Nothing could be much more mischievous, sillier or more impertinent than the behaviour of certain private Members early last month, when Government pooled the Cabinet salaries. To whatever party these men belong, they are meddling impudent bounders and, the severe rebuke which Mr. Asquith administered, was well deserved. That the Members of the Coalition Government have the public spirit and patriotism to do what they have done, ought to be matter of satisfaction but, no, these purblind, prying sneaks must try to make a public affair of nothing even

THE SCHOOL AND THE HOME

(La Nación.—July 7).

Daily the general interest in the work of education grows, and, says "La Nación," many and various are the means whereby this interest is evinced in the urban centres of the Republic. Nor is it a mere appreciation of the primary advantages of education that is noticeable, but rather, a realisation of the effect on the whole social and moral structure of society, and "La Nación" urges the need for carrying this feeling a step further by combining the influence of education in the home. This task, slow and difficult though it be, is one that must recommend itself to the authorities, since there is no denying the influence exercised on the scholars by their home surroundings. Lack of comprehension of all the factors involved has led to a belief that education begins and ends in the school.

Pedagogy, however, embraces two distinct phases; the imparting of learning, positive, and of utility, in short, intellectual equipment, and the higher, more elusive education which consists in the development of certain feelings and sentiments that are not only all-important in the home, since there alone can they be learnt to the full, but are also all-important to society at large. In short, the intellectual education of the school requires the complementary action of home training, and in order to obtain this it is necessary for the parents to realise that the school can but do its portion, leaving the rest to their care. There is therefore every reason to combat the tendency of those parents who appear to think that it is the duty of the school to care for the moral and intellectual development of its pupils, whereas, concludes "La Nación," the atmosphere of the school is not adapted to this end. The theme is one capable of considerable discussion, and affords a vast field for the educationalist.

at such a time. These are the wretches who consistently tried to starve the Navy, and to "preach our poor little army down, though the State had done it, and thrice as well." Sir Henry Dalziel is one, Sir Arthur Markham another. The latter asked "What is taste?" It would be vain to explain it to him for he would be constitutionally unable to understand. There is a rump of discontented peddlers of flapdoodle who require putting down with a strong hand, even if be needful again to resort to a sort of "Pride's purge." Mr. Booth made the following startling statement: "He frankly told the House that the nucleus of a small Opposition party was forming, which was already boasting in the lobbies of its power and threatening trouble. As most of its members are Radicals, he was anxious to assure the Government that the rank-and-file of the Liberal party heartily approved the bill and the creation of the Ministry of Munitions. It is early yet to give the names of this new coterie of Radical sectaries, whom Sir Arthur Markham, scornfully alluded to as "the friends of Germany." They will soon emerge more clearly into view, and will, of course, be recognised as men who always were prolific in excuses for Germany before the war, and always voted for reductions in British naval and military expenditure."

"Eyes have they, but they see not."

If a single eye be, as Scripture implies, if taken too literally, an aid to righteousness, how very good some of the young ladies of the present day should be. They are one eyed, from choice apparently and, can as a rule only use their starboard optic which however is employed with deadly effect to rake the susceptible fore and aft. For some time it has been the custom of many fair damselles to wear their hats at a prodigious slant and to obscure an eye, generally the left. If this be not enough, they hang a wad of their raven, golden or nut brown locks (as may be), over it and effectively become monocular. Not that this need excite comment as if they like to go about seeing as in a glass darkly, with their sinister portlids down, it is their little affair and one at least owes them thanks for provoking a smile which in these days is a good thing.

A Critic who "karped with wordes greate."

Recently the military critic of "La Nación" in discussing the Dardanelles problem, observed that while the Australian forces engaged there were brave, they were only a sort of militia. I take the liberty of differing from him. The Australian troops have proved themselves to be tall fellows of their hands, and their discipline and cohesion are beyond praise. They landed under a murderous fire and have resisted every attempt to drive them into the sea. The critic of "La Nación" may be a very great man, and a profound judge of military science and value, but with all deference I prefer Sir Ian Hamilton's opinion. The latter is a real soldier who has seen much war, real war, not manoeuvres and mudlarking merely, and he speaks as follows:

General Headquarters, May 9, 1915.

Sir Ian Hamilton wishes the troops of the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force to be informed that in all his past experiences, which include the hard struggles of the Russo-Japanese campaign, he has never seen more devoted gallantry displayed than that which has characterised their efforts during the past three days.

He has informed Lord Kitchener by cable of the bravery and endurance displayed by all ranks here, and has asked that the necessary reinforcements be forthwith despatched.

As aforesaid, the opinion of this famous General is probably of greater value than that of "La Nación's" armchair tactician, whose depreciation, however, will affect the gallant Australians and New Zealanders even less than it does

The Weather.

The frosts and the continued dry weather are mixed blessings. The stone fruit trees, retarded in their budding, will be all the better for the cold; but the frosts are also checking the early growth of wheat. The drought, welcomed by tennis players and followers of all other forms of sport, is aiding and abetting the frost in the total destruction of grass, to the great grievance of cattle men. It may or may not have been the fact that Sr. Martin Gil made a sporting bet of $10,000 that there would be a spell of three months' dry weather as from early in May, or thereabouts, but events are proving that such a prophecy would have been justified, for there has been but a negligible rainfall since that date. It is often the case in this country, as any old resident will tell you, that "spells" of weather, rain or fine, run to about an average of three months' duration.

Funes Tennis Club.

A meeting was held to mark the conclusion of the financial year, when the committee presented a satisfactory statement of accounts, and reported a successful season of play. The presidential honours fell to Mr. Albert Butt, in succession to Mr. T. Pride. Mr. J. Murray was elected as Secretary and Treasurer, a double debt discharged previously by Mr. R. A. Austin; Mr. P. Rios was chosen as Vice-President, and Messrs. Pride, Austin and Kean as members of the committee.

A Hard-working Piano.

A small Broadwood Grand is becoming quite famous as a collector in aid of the Prince of Wales's Fund. Given to the British Patriotic Committee by Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Day, it was raffled amongst the members of the British and Allied communities, and tickets at $5 each were sold to the amount of $1250. Mr. Day himself had the pleasure of selling the winning ticket, No. 098. The purchaser, Mr. Donald Fraser, was good enough to hand over the instrument to the British Patriotic Committee for another innings, and the committee hit on the splendid idea of giving the piano to Mme. Hoff to be raffled at the Franco-Belgian Bazaar for the mutual benefit of the Prince of Wales's Fund and the Franco-Belgian Red Cross Fund. So there are 2,000 $1 tickets on sale, and the drawing is to be on July 14. All concerned, especially Mr. Day, Mr. Fraser, Mme. Hoff and the piano are to be congratulated on so splendid a result.

The Franco-Belgian Bazaar.

So many British residents have paid their quota of interest and support to the Bazaar now in progress at the corner of Cordoba and Mitre that a further reference to it may be permitted. Mme. Hoff, wife of the French Consul, has been its inspiration, and she has been splendidly backed by a sub-committee of ladies and gentlemen under the direction of the Comité Patriotique Franco-Belge. One of the most telling features is a stall at which stands a nurse in uniform selling cigarettes and tobacco. The purchaser does not smoke them, however; they are destined for a large box, via which they are despatched in due course to the front. The same destination is designed for all the articles on this stall; among them shirts, socks, and other items of clothing of which the demand constantly outruns the supply. A popular feature is the cinematograph show run by Mr. E. Seaton and Mr. Reginald Parry, with the assistance of some of the boy scouts, and I have reason to know that this little effort, purely British, is greatly appreciated by the committee.

The proceeds of the Bazaar on Sunday, including $1,000 worth of admission tickets, sold in advance, amounted to the respectable total of $3547. The Bazaar is closed to-night in order that there shall be no clashing with the Italian Red Cross entertainment which is taking place at the Colon Theatre—a splendid programme is promised. In passing, may a word be put in about a custom which prevails of sending tickets for charitable entertainments of one sort and another to members of the British commercial community, and then calling subsequently to the function to collect in the event of the tickets not having been returned. This finds no favour with people; they have a feeling that they are placed at a disadvantage, and their support is robbed of that spontaneity which is as desirable to the giver as it should be to the recipient.

Three Shots.

A first-class driver named Z. Cordero, was found lying at his house near the Cruz Alberdi, F.C.C.A., this afternoon, with three revolver bullet wounds. He was removed by the Asistencia Publica, after the customary police parley, to the Spanish Hospital, where his position was pronounced to be critical.

The Show.

There are record entries for the Agricultural Show to be held in August, though so far the catalogue has not been issued. There will be several exhibits of machinery.

Golf.

Play for the Fisherton Cup will take place on Sunday next, when there should be unusual excitement. The links were seldom, if ever, in better condition.

Prosperous!

I understand that a record of 2040 wagons laden with maize was registered one day this week in the Rosario yard of the F.C.C.A. This beats previous best by some 200 odd tons.

The Markets: Some Surmises and Queries.

The wheat market has been entirely nominal, a few lots only having been bought by millers at about $11.80, 78 kilos. Maize has seen an active trade at about $4.60 to $4.65; there have been very few fluctuations this week.

Freights have seen a big jump in the last ten days, several big vessels having been chartered at 60s., whilst 61s. 3d. has been paid for handier sizes, the present tendency, however, is weaker.

Attention has been called to the small proportion of British ships now loading. In to-day's list, out of 17 steamers berthed for loading linseed and maize, only four are British, the balance flying neutral flags—Norwegian, Swedish, Dutch, Italian (an ex-neutral), Greek, etc. Some of these are destined for Amsterdam and Malmo. It would be interesting to know whether these are to be taken prisoner "by arrangement" on entering their port of destination. British authorities, please take note!

An Intimation.

In this connection I understand that steamship agents have received advices from London that in all charters which they effect on this side a clause must be inserted: "In the event of the steamer being requisitioned on Government service, this charter to be void." A sign of the times!

Forthcoming Bazaar.

It is proposed to hold a Bazaar in the Talleres Church Hall, F.C.C.A., on Sept. 10 and 11, on behalf of the Red Cross Fund. Mrs. Pearson, the wife of the General Manager of the Central Argentine Railway, who has already taken great interest in the Red Cross Fund on several occasions since the war commenced, has very kindly consented to come up from Buenos Aires specially to open the Bazaar. On the second day of the French Red Cross Fund Raffle.

The results of the raffle for the 12 handsome masterpieces in aid of the French Red Cross Society were as follows:—No. 339, Painting No. 1, "Grande marine"; No. 645, Painting No. 2, "Coronamiento del primer Románoff"; No. 981, Painting No. 3, "Acuarcia"; No. 88, Painting No. 4, "Acuerala"; No. 874, Painting No. 5, "Sousbois"; No. 844, Painting No. 6, "Isbarusa"; No. 732, Painting No. 7, "Orillas del lago de Ginebra"; No. 933, Painting No. 8, "Salvan"; No. 510, Painting No. 9, "Pintura antigua"; No. 380, Painting No. 10, "Reproducción marina"; No. 520, Painting No. 11, "Acuarela"; No. 642, Painting No. 12, "Orillas de río." The prizes can be retired from the home of Sra. Bilas, Capital Federal No. 59, up to July 12. The fund realized from the drawing of the pictures $440. As two of the numbers drawn were among the unsold tickets the corresponding pictures will be sold at auction the night of the "fiesta" at the French Hall on July 14.

Off for the Front.

Doctors Juan Bartucci and Ignacio Falcone, both of whom are connected with the Italian Hospital of this city, are shortly leaving for Italy where they will take up their duties with the Italian Red Cross. A reception was given the two medical men at the Hospital on June 27; members of the Damas del Comité de Beneficencia and the Comité Pro Patria para Cruz Roja y de Socorros and the officials of the Hospital being present. Several speeches were made and all present shook hands.

Bazaar Mrs. Crouch, who has always taken a prominent position in helping any good work in Rosario, will perform the opening ceremony, in addition to taking one of the stalls.

A list of the names of several other ladies who have promised their assistance in this venture to raise funds to help in the relief of our brave soldiers and sailors, is attached.

A number of collecting sheets have been willingly accepted, the idea being not only to solicit donations and promises of money, but any kind of goods will be equally welcome by any of the following ladies, and will help to furnish some of the stalls:

Tie and Handkerchief Stall.—Mrs. Crouch, Miss Benedict, Mrs. Todman, and Mrs. Hopkin. Flowers and Sweets Stall.—Mrs. Montgomery, Mrs. Brunton and Mrs. Barnett. Toys Stall.—Mrs. Deakin, Miss Roberts, Mrs. Sykes, and Mrs. Reid. Provisions Stall.—Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Johnson, and Mrs. Macdonald. Plain and Fancy Work Stall.—Mrs. Rickards, Mrs. Harding, Mrs. Locke, and Mrs. Smith. Tea and Supper Room.—Mrs. Studdert, Mrs. Every-Miller, Mrs. Manley, and Mrs. Finch. Parcels.—Mr. Drake.

Rosario Football League.

The first round of the Copa de Competencia was played on Sunday. Four matches took place, all of which were hotly contested. Gimnasia and Esgrima played Belgrano on their own ground and beat them 2 goals to 1. On the Rosario Central Ground the Central Cordoba beat Rosario Central 1 goal to 0; Rosario Atletico beat Newell's Old Boys, 1 goal to 0. On the Sparta Club Ground the Tiro Federal beat Sparta 3 goals to 0.

Ball Given by Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. Babb.

A most enjoyable ball was given by Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Babb on last Saturday night, at their home in General Paz. Three rooms were prepared for dancing. The refreshment room was prettily decorated with American, British and Argentine flags, with the canopy strung with alternate red, white and blue incandescent lamps, making an excellent colour effect, while numerous electric heaters were in evidence to keep the guests warm when not dancing. The merry party did not break up until an early hour the next morning. The following were among the invited guests:—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hughes, Miss Florence Morton, Miss Doris Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. F. Lindemann, the Misses Connie and Tulița Goodliffe (from Buenos Aires), Mrs. Talbot Wright, Mr. and Mrs. George Lang, Mr. G. E. Morton, the Misses Gladys and Phyllis Symonds, Miss Bessie Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Parker, Mr. G. A. Brigstocke, Mr. P. P. Schultz, Mr. E. R. Fowler, Mr. Norman Colson, Mr. Donald Smith and Mr. Charles Sadleir.

American Tennis Tournament.

An American Mixed Doubles Tournament has been arranged at the Athletic Club Courts for July 9 and 10. A cold luncheon will be served on the 9th at the Club Pavilion, and the tennis committee trust that all the players who intend taking part will be on hand early on the 9th, in order that play may be started punctually.

Benefit for Allies Red Cross.

The benefit opera performance given at the Rivera Indarte Theatre on Friday night, June 25, by the Company in charge of Sres. Bonelli and Tufanelli was a great success. The total amount received for boxes and seats sold was $3,307.90 and the money donated brought the total up to $3,598.40. The Opera Company received the sum of $1,700 for their share, and after paying the necessary expenses the amount left to distribute among the different Red Cross Societies was $1,800. This amount was distributed as follows: French Red Cross, (Sra. de Even), $300; British Red Cross, (Mr. Leeson), $300; Belgian Red Cross, (Sr. Bracke), $300; Russian Red Cross, (Sr. Djewski), $300; Serbian Red Cross, (Sr. Pacovich), $300; and Comité Italiano Pro Patria, (Sr. Feo. Sala), $300.

Football.

Two very interesting contests took place in the First Division on Sunday and Tuesday last. The Sunday game between the league champions and the Central Cordoba team resulted in a draw 2-2. The game on Tuesday between the General Paz Juniors and Belgrano also was drawn by the same score 2-2. The next games between the same teams will attract great interest on account of the closeness of the mentioned matches.

GERMAN GAS PIPES

USELESS WEAPONS SOLD TO BRAZIL.

The "Daily Rua" of Rio Janeiro states that Brazil's purchases of war material from Germany have not been satisfactory. A lot of 10,000 rifles purchased in 1908 have become mostly useless and unserviceable owing to defects in breach construction and faulty barrels or rifling. In some cases a few discharges put the rifle out of use. German-made machine guns also jam after a few rounds, and have obviously been made to sell. The Chief of the War Stores Department has reported most adversely to the Minister of War, and states that the matter is serious, as many defective rifles are being used in the campaign against the "fanatics," and are almost useless. It is added that the amount lost to the Treasury by the Teutonic swindlers amounts to 10,000 contos.

Mainly About People

The engagement is announced of Miss Emma Martinez to Mr. Reginald C. Everill.

Mr. J. Tallon, Jr., and family, have changed their residence from Moron to 1154 Mitre (Avellaneda).

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Gibson's new address is Calle Italia 148, Lomas (F.C.S.).

An announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Anita Mulvihill, daughter of Mr. John Mulvihill of Mercedes, to Mr. Joseph Lynch, also of Mercedes, F.C.O.

The following are amongst the latest arrivals at the Grand Hotel:—Sr. Penasco and son, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Whitmore, Dr. Fernando Ferrer and wife, and Mr. F. Armesto, all from Rosario.

Three volunteers, from Uruguay, left Montevideo by the New Zealand liner Ruapehu for England to serve their country: Mr. John W. Pearse of the Waterworks, Mr. Eustace Cross Buchanan of the London and River Plate Bank, and Mr. Reginald W. Masters, who is accompanied to England by his wife.

Mr. L. Leasome Mortlock, son of Mr. Lionel Mortlock, of Buenos Aires, has secured a commission as second Lieutenant in the 2nd Battalion of the Kings Royal Lancaster Regiment. Lieut. Mortlock secured his military training as a conscript with the Argentine Army, and it speaks well for his training that he secured his commission a month after presenting himself in London as a volunteer.

Dr. John Halahan is obliged to make a sudden and unexpected visit to England and is leaving on Monday by the Demerara. As his departure is so hurried, Dr. Halahan has been unable to make special arrangements for all his clients, but his brother, Dr. Robert Halahan, will afford them all the assistance in his power. Dr. Halahan intends being back in Buenos Aires not later than the first week in September.

The "Uruguay Weekly News" of July 4, says: "We deeply regret to announce the death of Mrs. Dobrée, wife of Major Dobrée, attaché to the British Legation. Mrs. Dobrée who had been ill for some time with heart troubles, died suddenly last Monday evening. The funeral took place at the British Cemetery the following day in the presence of a number of friends. Great sympathy is felt with Major Dobrée and his two little children."

Mr. Conard, Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association of Montevideo, left by the Araguaya a fortnight ago to get married in Rio, and returned with his bride by the Vasari on Sunday. The happy couple were married at the American Legation in Rio during the stay of the Vasari at that port. A reception to meet Mr. and Mrs. Conard will be given by Mrs. H. P. Coates on Wednesday evening when friends of the popular Secretary will be welcomed without any formal invitation.

DAY BY DAY IN ROSARIO.

(From Our Correspondent).

July 5.

The new Alberdi Athletic Club (F.C.C.C.) had arranged to hold their annual sports on July 9, but owing to the sad death of Mr. Lemuel Holder a postponement until a date to be fixed in August was decided upon.

Twin girls were born the other day to Mrs. Polak, of Roldan, wife of a member of the staff of the Contaduría, Rosario, F.C.C.A.

The late Mr. Ernest Danvers was well known to old Rosario residents. Some of his most remarkable athletic achievements on the football field and running track were made in this city. The news of his sudden death came as a painful shock to many of his old opponents in sport.

The Epworth League Croquet Tournament is bringing out all the latent enthusiasm of its young members. Some of them were playing the other night by candle-light, so keen were they to know the results of the round.

The date of Mr. Dickson's return to Rosario to resume his post of British Consul is still uncertain, thanks to the vagaries of steamer travel from Puer to Madryn.

A friend has received a postcard from Mr. Eric C. Buxton that he has arrived safely in London, the voyage of the Ionic having passed without incident.

A marriage has been arranged between Miss Maria Mercedes Gonzalez Arnold and Mr. Richard Barton. The date of the wedding is not yet fixed.

The Social Club at Casilda has arranged a dance to take place on Friday of this week, the National Holiday.

Mr. Richard Cullen passed through Rosario on his way to Santa Fé last Saturday.

Mr. James Oliver was spending a few days in this city last week.

Friends of Mrs. H. H. Knowles, will be pleased to hear that she is recovering from her serious indisposition, and hopes shortly to resume her usual reception day.

On Saturday of last week the interim Intendente, Sr. Luis Calderon, handed over the keys of office to Dr. Miguel Culaciatti whose appointment has been approved by the Provincial Governor. Amongst those present were the Ministro de Gobierno (Dr. Mosca), most of the members of the Concejo Deliberante, the Chief of Police (Dr. Borghi), and a deputation from the Bolsa de Comercio headed by the President, Mr. J. Martin, and the vice-President, Sr. Santos Manfredi.

Rosario friends of Mr. Dudley S. Ashforth, of the Anglo South American Bank of this city, who was one of the first to volunteer for service with the British Army, will regret to hear that he has had the misfortune to be wounded while serving at the front. Writing from Plymouth, whither he had been transferred from France in order to undergo an operation, he mentions that he had only been in the trenches about a week when he was struck just below the hip, the bullet penetrating nine inches into the flesh, without, however, touching the bone. He cheerfully states that there is no undue cause for concern and will come through alright. Mr. Ashforth was a one-time member on the staff of the Central Argentine Railway, being a nephew of Mr. J. E. Ryberg, Constructing Engineer of Gorton Shops, Perez. He was also a prominent enthusiast in athletic circles in Rosario, having on many occasions shone brilliantly in the Alberdi Rowing Club Regattas.

Mr. Thos. Wilson, of Roldan, is still an inmate of the Spanish Hospital, progressing. I am glad to say, as favourably as can be expected.

The American residents at Rosario celebrated Independence Day by a dinner at the Rotisserie Cifre on Saturday, July 3. The celebration, which was the first American gathering at Rosario, was an unqualified success. Dr. Albert Hale, Commercial Attaché to the American Embassy, attended the dinner as the personal representative of the Ambassador and was the principal speaker. Some twenty Americans were present and a considerable number of American residents of the interior sent greetings. The American Consul, Mr. William Dawson, Jr., received the local authorities, the Consular Corps and the American colony at the Consulate on the morning of the 4th.

Dr. Albert Hale, Commercial Attaché to the American Embassy, who arrived in Rosario on Friday night to attend the 4th of July celebration as the representative of the Ambassador, left yesterday morning for Santa Fé.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Whittemore returned on Sunday from an extended trip through the North-western Provinces. Mr. Whittemore, who is General Manager of the Singer Sewing Machine Company with headquarters at Rosario, has been visiting his district.

Mr. Harry Clark of the Great Raymond Company, has arrived at Rosario and is at the Hotel Mayo.

DAY BY DAY IN BAHIA BLANCA.

(From Our Correspondent).

Bahia Blanca,

July 4.

Deep regret has been felt at the news of the sudden death of Mr. Ernest Danvers of Buenos Aires, and a large number of his friends here have already sent expressions of their sympathy to his family in their sad bereavement.

Mrs. Campbell, of Port Militar, is expected to arrive back from England towards the end of this week on the "Avon."

The christening of the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer, of Ingeniero White, took place this afternoon at the Port. The boy's name is Howard Nelson.

The death took place last Friday, of Mrs. Alt, the wife of Mr. E. H. Alt, of Maldonado. B.A.P., after a long and painful illness. Only a little while ago Mr. and Mrs. Alt celebrated their fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day. The funeral takes place this morning at 10 a.m.

Mr. D. Boyd, of Messrs. Moore and Tudor, is spending a few days here, and is staying at the South American Hotel.

DAY BY DAY IN CORDOBA.

(From Our Correspondent).

July 3.

Mr. Renfrew, the well known insurance representative, is making a prolonged stay in Cordoba and is stopping at the Plaza Hotel.

Last week Mr. and Mrs. Pagel accompanied by Mrs. Hunt were visitors to town coming in from Alta Gracia for the day.

Mr. Trery, of the Engineering Staff of the Central Argentine Railroad, has been transferred to Pergamino.

Mr. Sanders, representative of Messrs. Walkins and Co., agents of the Burroughs Adding Machine Co., of Buenos Aires, who has been in town some days on a business trip has left for the Capital.

Messrs. Percy Schultz, G. A. Brigstocke and T. G. Ferguson were the guests of Mr. Kennard on Sunday last at his quinta in the camp, where the excellent tennis court of the host was enjoyed during the afternoon, followed by a very pleasant motor drive back town.

HOMEWARD BOUND FROM THE FALKLANDS

THE S.S. MAISILIA.

The arrival of the s.s. Maisilia from the Falkland Islands is giving rise to some interest and considerable speculation, as the vessel has not been seen in the port of Buenos Aires previously. She is believed to be a transport vessel captured from the Germans about the time of the British naval victory there, and is now engaged in taking home a number of passengers, who are engineers lately engaged in erecting a large wireless station and various other articles required for the safety of the Falklands. Her passengers number approximately 100. She will probably carry a cargo of cereals to Europe when she leaves.

TEACHING BELGIUM HOW TO THINK

BRUTAL VON BISSING'S LATEST. Amsterdam, July 7.

It is reported that the German Governor in Belgium, Von Bissing, has issued an order in Brussels that any schoolmasters, or directors or inspectors of schools who allow the slightest anti-German tendency in the school educational courses are to undergo imprisonment for twelve months.

German officials are empowered to supervise and inspect the schools at all times.

ARGENTINA AND URUGUAY

Need for a Fishery Convention

El Día (Sr. Batlle's paper) of Montevideo, adverts to the urgent need of an agreement between the Argentine and Uruguayan Governments with respect to fishing in the Rio de la Plata and settlement on equitable and friendly lines of the question of jurisdictional waters.

Both countries are desirous of making a mutual arrangement which will foster the fishing industry, prevent poaching and destructive and irregular methods of fishing and trawling, which would be beneficial to the fishing interests of each. All the present inconveniences would disappear at once before an arrangement, regulating fishery rights and enabling the Courts of both countries to deal with infractions of the laws. El Día adds that there is reason to believe that the Argentine Government has been deeply considering the affair, takes the greatest interest in it and is much disposed to take action in the sense suggested by becoming signatory to a treaty. All the troublesome little incidents between the sister nations would be automatically removed. Naturally for such as regard the present state of things as desirable and prefer to evade law and order, suitable penalties would have to be provided and, both countries would be equally interested in seeing that they were duly inflicted when necessary.

MONUMENT TO SAENZ PENA

AN OBJECTION TO THE PROPOSAL.

It would seem that the proposed monument to the late President Doctor Roque Saenz Peña will not be erected after all. It will be recalled that the project was laid before the Chamber of Deputies and obtained their immediate and unanimous sanction, but since then other persons have been at work who have not and do not see eye to eye with the members of the Chamber.

There is a law in the Republic that no public person shall be honoured by the erection of a statue or have any public homage of a material nature shown his memory, until 10 years after his decease. It is the Senate who are raising the objection, and drawing attention to this law, in the face of which it would seem probable that the unanimous vote of the Chamber of Deputies will carry no weight and that the necessary years will elapse before the late President is so honoured.

LEGATION DESPATCHES

Sir John French's Reports

The following is a copy of a telegram received by His Britannic Majesty's Minister at Buenos Aires from the Foreign Office, London:—

July 7 (1.5 p.m.)

Sir John French reports as follows 6th July:—

"Since my last report no change has occurred in situation in our front. Fighting has been mainly confined to intermittent artillery duels, feature of which has been the employment by enemy of large quantity of gas shells, particularly in the neighbourhood of Ypres. During this period enemy exploded 8 mines at different points on our front without doing any damage to our trenches. On the other hand, on the 13th of June we blew in 50 yards of enemy's front line north of Neuve Chapelle. On the evening of the 4th, to the north of Ypres, a German sap was blown in by our howitzer fire and a platoon of infantry advanced to complete its destruction. The few Germans who survived the artillery bombardment, were driven out and a machine gun in the sap was found destroyed. Our casualties were insignificant and the platoon returned, having completely succeeded in its mission. A German wireless report of the 5th, claiming that they had repulsed an attack with sanguinary loss on Pilken Road, was presumably intended to convey the enemy's version of this affair. On the morning of the 5th, a party of Germans rushed a barricade on the Ypres-Roulers railway after two hours' artillery bombardment, but a counter-attack by our troops immediately recaptured positions. This morning, on our extreme left, north of Ypres, we captured about 200 yards of enemy's trenches, taking 80 prisoners. The French on our left contributed to success of this enterprise with fire of guns and trench mortars."

SMUGGLING COPPER INTO GERMANY

HUN TRICKS DISCOVERED.

Stockholm, July 6.

A Swedish revenue cutter which went to the assistance of the leaking Norwegian motor ship, Hansa, discovered that a German freight car which was about to be returned empty to Germany was fitted with double walls, between which was a considerable quantity of copper.

Three Germans have been arrested on suspicion of being concerned in the fraud.

LET US HAVE THE TRUTH!

"Manchester Guardian" Indicts British Official Reports

America and the German Version

London, July 14.

The "Manchester Guardian" publishes an article under the headline "The War in Flanders, by a Student of the War," in which the writer says that one of our principal assets in the war had been our power to tell the exact truth from day to day about the military operations. This asset had been lost.

The German reports, when allowance was made for the occasional exaggerations in regard to victories and intelligent anticipations of events, are quite as reliable as our own.

It is necessary to make this clear, as on several occasions we have made much of the inaccuracies in German reports on military operations.

Impartial American opinion ranks the truthfulness of the German reports of land operations above our own. To many Englishmen the lack of frankness in the official reports is the most discouraging feature of the war.

"WE WANT NO MORE WARS"

BRITISH LABOUR AND THE STRIKE WEAPON.

London, July 14.

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, the Labour member for Leicester, said to-day that at the present moment the working men of England were shedding their blood in the trenches and working hand in hand with the Government; but when the war is over the British working men will say to the Government: "We want no more wars, and those things that make wars possible must be wiped out."

"The question was put to him as to whether he meant to say that Labour would henceforth overlook all its industrial grievances and postpone possible strikes until after the war. Mr. MacDonald replied that for the present Labour was forced to give in to the inevitable."

SPIES IN BRITAIN

TWO ARRESTS ANNOUNCED.

London, July 14.

The Press Bureau announces that two spies have been arrested on a charge of attempting to communicate to the enemy information regarding the British fleet.

PRICE OF COAL

REGULATED BY NEW BILL.

London, July 14.

The text of the Bill for limiting the price of coal, which was issued to-day, specifies that coal is not to be sold at the pit mouth at a price exceeding by four shillings a ton that which was paid for coal of the same quality during the year ended June 30, 1914. Those who are guilty of infringing this regulation will be liable to a fine not exceeding £100.

"LE JOUR DE FRANCE"

CELEBRATIONS IN LONDON.

London, July 14.

"Le Jour de France" has been celebrated with great éclat in the United Kingdom, the streets of all the principal cities being gaily decorated with flags in which the tricolor was largely predominant.

The society women who are taking advantage of the occasion to collect funds for the French sufferers through the German invasion expect to sell fourteen million French emblems in London alone.

In Scotland also the movement has met with great success. Glasgow alone has promised to sell three million tricolor flags; while the women of Edinburgh society have undertaken to dispose of 1,500,000.

ROUGET DE LISLE

REMAINS OF COMPOSER OF THE MARSEILLAISE HONOURED IN PARIS.

Paris, July 14.

The remains of the famous author of the Marseillaise, Rouget de Lisle, have been removed from the cemetery at Choisy-le-Roy and taken to Les Invalides.

This morning the coffin, placed on a gun carriage, passed through the Arc de Triomphe, the Champs Elysées and the Pont d'Alexandre to its last resting place. It was followed by a detachment of Dragoons which preceded a cortège composed of the President of the Nation, the Ministers, Presidents of the Chamber of Deputies and Senate and many other persons of high standing.

CATTLE SHORTAGE IN BRITAIN

RUMOURED OUTBREAK OF FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE IN IRELAND.

London, July 13.

Lord Selborne, President of the Board of Agriculture, will have a consultation with the principal stock breeders of the country in regard to the measures to adopt in view of the scarcity of cattle which is beginning to make itself felt.

There is an unconfirmed rumour that foot and mouth disease has reappeared in Ireland.

BRITAIN'S COAL PRICES

REGULATION BILL TO BE PLACED BEFORE COMMONS.

London, July 13.

A Bill for regulating the price of coal in the United Kingdom is about to be placed before the House of Commons.

BOMBS ON BRITISH SHIPS

ADOPTION OF SPECIAL PRECAUTIONS.

New York, July 13.

Since the discovery on various occasions of bombs on board British vessels from this port, special commissions have been formed to watch the loading of the ships. Some however believe that the bombs were introduced into the cargo before being brought to the wharves for loading, and therefore further steps will be necessary to prevent such occurrences in the future.

A REAL BOUNDARY LINE

ELECTRIC WIRE DIVIDES BELGIUM FROM HOLLAND.

New York, July 14.

A telegram from the Hague states that the Germans have erected an electric wire barrier along the frontier of the Netherlands. The wires are charged with electricity at high power, and several persons who come into contact with it are killed every night.

CANADA'S PREMIER

HONOURED BY THE KING.

London, July 14.

The Premier of Canada, Sir Robert Borden, who has arrived in London, is being overwhelmed with attentions. The Minister has been granted an audience by the King, who expressed his high appreciation of the manner in which Canada has cooperated with Great Britain in the war, and congratulated Sir Robert Borden on the magnificent bravery displayed by the Canadians in the memorable battle of Ypres.

"WAR WILL END IN OCTOBER"

KAISER'S EFFORTS TO ALLAY BANKERS' FEARS.

London, July 14.

In reference to the report that the Kaiser recently stated on oath that the war would be over in October, the "Times" publishes a message from Berlin saying that it occurred when the Kaiser was receiving a deputation of bankers, who pointed out to him the serious financial results that would ensue from another winter campaign. The Kaiser, to re-assure the deputation, declared that by the end of October next the war will have been brought to a conclusion.

KAISER'S CALCULATIONS.

London, July 14.

The British Press, referring to the statement of the Kaiser that the war would terminate in October, says that if such an event does happen it will be because Germany accepts the terms dictated by the Allies. Upon no other consideration is such a thing possible.

Possibly the Kaiser is reckoning on capturing Warsaw before October and despatching all his forces from that part of Europe to the western field of campaign; but the Allies are firmly resolved to fight to the end until they obtain a durable peace which is based on justice.

The report of the interview between the deputation of bankers and the Kaiser is of importance as indicating that Germany is not prepared for a long campaign.

DESTROYED BY BOMBS

LOSS OF BRITISH TUGS.

London, July 14.

It is announced that the British tugs Woodbine, Purple Heather and Speedwell have been sent to the bottom by bombs placed on board. The crews of the vessels were saved with difficulty.

ESSEN BOMBARDED

KRUPP HEADQUARTERS VISITED BY FRENCH AIRMEN.

London, July 14.

It is announced that a squadron of French aviators last night made a raid on the German factories at Essen on which they dropped numbers of bombs. No details whatever of the adventure have as yet been supplied.

COST OF THE WAR

BRITAIN TO SEEK FURTHER CREDITS.

London, July 14.

To-day the Prime Minister announced in the House of Commons that the Government would ask for the approval of further credits before the closure of the present Parliamentary session.

CONSTANTINOPLE'S DIFFICULT PROBLEM

Losses in Dardanelles Fighting Cause Alarm

Hand Fighting on Austro-Italian Frontier

New York, July 14.

Despatches from Tenedos announce that fresh expeditionary troops for the Allies have been landed on the peninsula of Gallipoli, and a fresh impetus will be given to the attack upon the Turkish positions.

From Athens it is reported that the Turkish losses have been of such magnitude that serious anxiety is being felt at Constantinople, where the advisability of recalling the troops from the Caucasus is being discussed.

BACK FROM THE FRONT

GERMAN OFFICERS RETURN TO CONSTANTINOPLE.

London, July 14.

A despatch from Athens says that news has been received from Asia Minor that the German officers who have been serving in the Turkish army have returned to Constantinople owing to disputes with the Turkish officers.

It is also stated that the railways in Syria are at a standstill for want of coal.

SMYRNA BOMBARDED

OIL DEPOTS DESTROYED BY ALLIES' AIRMEN.

London, July 14.

A telegram from Athens says that a despatch from Chios announces that a squadron of allied aviators last Sunday bombarded Smyrna and set fire to the petroleum depots there.

CONVERSION BY TORTURE

TURKEY'S DISGRACEFUL ACTS ON SHORES OF THE MARMORA.

Athens, July 14.

Numbers of the inhabitants of Armaki and Kyzicos on the shore of the Sea of Marmora are reported to have been put to the torture by the Turks because they refused to embrace Islamism.

Thirty thousand Greeks are stated to have been expelled from Mussulman towns and their homes plundered.

A DECOY SHIP

AUSTRIAN STORY OF DESTRUCTION OF ITALIAN VESSEL.

Washington, July 14.

The German Embassy here has published a despatch from the Foreign Office at Vienna which says:—

"About July 1st, an Austrian warship perceived a small steamer off the island of Taros flying the Greek merchant flag. As the vessel was acting in a suspicious manner she was stopped. On board there was a cargo of hay under which was concealed the real cargo, which consisted of benzine.

"The captain of the steamer, then declared that the vessel belonged to the Italian navy, and hoisted the Italian battle flag in the place of the Greek flag which he had previously displayed. This was considered to be evidence that it was intended to mislead the Austro-Hungarian and German submarines, and the vessel was therefore destroyed."

NEARING TRIESTE

Progress of Italian Armys

DESPERATE MOUNTAIN FIGHTING

Rome, July 14.

Scouting detachments of Italian cavalry sent in advance of the main body which is advancing from Monfalcone have pushed forward their reconnaissances as far as the vicinity of Trieste, retiring safely to their lines when seen and pursued by large bodies of Austrian horse.

The Austrians have made another violent effort to enter Italian territory through the region of Montecroce; but, though they had received strong reinforcements, they were checked and forced to retire by the Italians.

The Italians delivered an attack upon Kellerwald, which however is held by the enemy in great strength and occupy very strong positions, and the Italians had to fall back to their original positions. Soon after, they received re-inforcements and renewed the attack, capturing the positions and advancing beyond it.

One of the most sanguinary combats of the war is that for the possession of Monte Sabatino in the vicinity of Gorizia, the Austrians offering a most determined resistance. Nevertheless the Italians have been successful in occupying several lines of trenches, and, owing to the underground passages connected with these trenches, they were enabled to bring up reinforcements without risk.

ITALIANS "SCALE MOUNTAINS LIKE CATS AND FIGHT LIKE LIONS."

London, July 14.

The war correspondent of the "Daily News," writing from the Italian line of battle, describes an assault by the Italians on an important fortress near Tolmino. He says:—

"From the base where the Italians were camped there rose up an almost perpendicular rock, the peak of which was occupied by an entrenched force of Hungarians.

"During the night a battalion of Alpini scaled the face of the mountain, while another battalion proceeded by the more accessible side and made a feint attack. At dawn the two battalions united on the top of the rock, precipitating themselves on the rear of the trenches and taking the Hungarians by surprise. The whole of the defending forces were either killed or taken prisoners, while another force which came to their aid was routed by a few bayonet assaults, losing about a third of their number.

"More forces were despatched from the adjacent fort, consisting of Austrians as well as Hungarians; but these met with a similar fate, being either killed or taken prisoners. Altogether over 900 prisoners were captured, and a very large number killed, very few wounded men being taken. The Italian losses were insignificant.

"The Hungarian commander said that he had never encountered such terrible soldiers. They scaled the side of the mountain like cats and fought like lions."

AUSTRIANS LOSE 20,000 MEN AT PLAVA.

Rome, July 14.

Confirmatory news has been received that the losses sustained by the Austrians at Plava amounted to 20,000 men.

Information obtained from Vienna states that the Austrian losses during the first five weeks of the campaign against Italy have been 55,000 killed and wounded, irrespective of 6,500 prisoners.

It is reported that General Cadorna does not intend to announce the fall of Tolmino until the Italian command of the locality is completely assured.

ITALIAN TROOPS TAKE AUSTRIAN TRENCHES.

New York, July 14.

A special telegram from Geneva transmitted via Paris to the "Evening Post" says:—

"According to a message received by 'La Tribuna' from Villach, the Italians have captured two miles of Austrian trenches in the Carnic Alps. In this engagement the Alpine troops dragged their artillery to the heights near Roskofel, situated at altitudes of 600 feet.

"The Italians have also captured two important positions to the south of Gorizia."

THE TABLES TURNED

ITALIAN FISHERMEN CAPTURE AUSTRIAN PATROL BOAT.

London, July 14.

The "Daily News" publishes a telegram from Rome which reports that an Austrian motor boat armed with machine guns captured an Italian fishing boat containing sailors who were occupied in raising mines in the Adriatic.

The Austrians believed that they had their prey safe; instead of which the Italians suddenly attacked and captured the Austrian boat, returning in triumph with the prisoners and prize to port.

THE LAST MAN

CALLED UP BY AUSTRIA.

London, July 14.

The "Morning Post" has received information obtained from Buda Pest according to which great dissatisfaction has been caused by the new military service decree. Henceforward all men in Hungary up to fifty years of age, unless incapable of work, will be enlisted. Those unfit for service at the front will have to guard the prisoners' camp, railways and stores.

In the orders for the re-examination of those previously declared unfit it is estimated that the decree will give from 30,000 to 40,000 additional men in Hungary and from 50,000 to 60,000 in Austria. Some say that it will be the last hundred thousand this time.

RESOLVED TO HOLD OUT

THE INTENTIONS OF GERMANY.

New York, July 14.

A wireless telegram from Berlin states that a conference has been held by the Ministers of the several German States on matters of finance. The meeting approved of the presentation by the presiding officer, Karl Helfferich, Secretary to the Imperial Treasury, of a report regarding Germany's financial situation, the war loan and taxation.

Other measures which are to be submitted on the meeting of the Reichstag, including the gains from the manufacture of war materials, were also discussed.

All the Ministers present agreed that the financial situation of Germany was most favourable. The nation was resolved to hold out until a victorious peace was assured.

BALKAN STATES FOR THE ENTENTE!

London, July 14.

The reports which are in circulation regarding a reorganisation of the Balkan alliance under Venizelos are considered significant, as M. Venizelos is an ardent supporter of the Quadruple Alliance. It is, therefore, believed to be likely that the Balkan States will join the Entente in the war.

The entire Balkan situation is once more to the fore, principally as the result of disclosures that Austria and Germany have offered to Rumania alternative concessions, either to continue neutral or to join with the Germanic allies.

Confidence is expressed in British, French and Italian circles that the Balkans will not join the Teuton Empires, but it is considered likely, owing to the failure of Russia to hold Galicia and Bukovina, that they might decide to remain neutral.

Of course, success by the Allies in the Dardanelles, officially reported, would change the situation.

It is reported here that a substantial portion of the bounteous cereal harvest of Rumania seems to be destined, in the absence of any other outlet, to find its way into the Austro-German markets.

BULGARIAN BOMB OUTRAGE

ARREST OF M. GHENADIEFF.

Rome, July 14.

A telegram from Sofia reports that three men who were accused of being concerned in the disastrous bomb explosion which occurred some time ago in the Municipal Hall during a State function have been tried by court martial and sentenced to death; also that orders have been given for the arrest of the former President of the Bulgarian Council, M. Ghenadieff, whose complicity is shown by the evidence given in the inquiry.

MUNITIONS FOR TURKEY

GERMANY ABOUT TO DEMAND RIGHT OF TRANSPORT THROUGH RUMANIA.

London, July 14.

A message from La Hague reports that the Governments of Germany and Austria intend immediately to demand from Rumania that the transport of munitions for Turkey be permitted through her territory.

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS

FRENCH WOUNDED ARRIVE AT GENEVA.

Geneva, July 14.

Large numbers of French soldiers crippled by wounds received in the war have arrived from Germany, where they have been prisoners. A like number of incapacitated German prisoners from France is momentarily expected to arrive to be exchanged for the former.

COAL IN GERMANY

REGULATION OF PRODUCTION AND SALE.

Amsterdam, July 13.

Information has been received from Berlin that the Bundesrath or Federal Council has authorised the authorities of the central provinces to form a combination of mineowners with a view to the compulsory regulation of the production and sale of coal. With the Government will rest the right to fix prices, and it will thus have the power to renew the Westphalian Coal agreement which expires in December next.

MARSHAL VON HINDENBURG TO STRIKE AT WARSAW

RUSSIAN RETREAT CONTINUES TOWARDS THE SERET

The Munitions Problem Solved

Petrograd, July 14.

It is anticipated in military circles that the retreat of the Russian forces will continue until reaching the river Seret, where they can occupy impregnable positions and will be also in a territory where supplies will be obtainable from their bases.

Meanwhile the Russians will remain on the defensive and will not commit themselves to a battle on a large scale.

MARSHAL VON HINDENBURG TO OPEN NEW OFFENSIVE ?

Petrograd, July 14.

Military experts are of the opinion that Marshal Hindenburg is meditating a new offensive in the north of Poland. It is thought possible that the reason for Marshal von Mackensen having stopped his advance in the Krasnik sector is that he is waiting for operations in the north and against Warsaw to commence.

These moves have been anticipated by the Russian General Staff and any such attempt, if carried out, is probably doomed to failure.

Meantime, skirmishing has commenced on the Vistula to an extent which makes a general attack by the enemy before long a possibility.

According to despatches received by the War Office, the Austrian troops which invaded the Lublin district have been on the retreat into Galicia since the 10th instant. They are being followed up by the Cossacks who ceaselessly harass the enemy's rear, cutting off stragglers and inflicting considerable losses upon them.

RUSSIA'S MUNITIONS

SUCCESSFUL RESULT OF NEW REGULATIONS.

Petrograd, July 14.

Data obtained by the Russian War Office show that there has been a considerable increase in the output of munitions in the last week, since the enforcement of the new regulations. The Government is now in a position to meet all the requirements of the army, and large consignments are about to be despatched to the front.

WAR DEPLETES RANKS OF LABOUR

DEPARTURE OF ITALIANS AFFECTS NEW YORK.

New York, July 14.

The departure of large numbers of Italian reservists and volunteers for Europe is beginning to make itself felt both in this city and in other parts of the United States, where there is a shortage of hands for industrial purposes.

HUMANE PORTUGAL

OFFERS HOSPITALITY TO ALLIES WOUNDED.

Lisbon, July 14.

The Portuguese Government has offered the hospitality of the country, and of city of Lisbon, to the wounded soldiers of the Allied troops fighting in the Dardanelles.

THE PIRATES' HAUL

42 VESSELS IN A MONTH

New York, July 14.

A wireless message from Berlin received by the Sayville station reports:

"During the month of June, 29 British, 3 French, 1 Belgian, and 9 Russian merchantmen were sunk by our submarines. The total loss to the Allies by submarines, including fishing steamers which are mostly armed patrol boats, aggregated 1,250,000 tons.

"The loss of human life was remarkably small, the submarines using every precaution and giving ample warning and time, to the crews to leave the ships if no resistance was attempted."

TRAPPED

AUSTRIAN SUBMARINE'S FATE

London, July 14.

"Evening News" announces that an Austrian submarine has been captured by the Italian naval forces.

The event happened last Monday night after the submarine had attempted to torpedo an Italian warship in the Adriatic. The torpedo when fired by the submarine was caught in the net protecting the warship, and shortly afterwards the underwater craft was herself trapped in the net, its crew surrendering. The warship was not damaged.

SEPARATE PEACE WITH SERBIA

HOW AUSTRIA ENDEAVOURED TO PREPARE TO MEET ITALY

Rome, July 14.

A deep impression has been caused in Italy by a semi-official announcement that when Italy's entrance into the conflict appeared inevitable Austria first attempted to make a separate peace with Serbia, and then tried to conclude an armistice which would allow her to remove her troops from the Serbian frontier.

Although these negotiations have only just leaked out in the present semi-official announcement, owing to the caution of the Italian Foreign Office, it is taken by the Italian Press to indicate that the Italian Government possesses proofs of its assertions.

VENICE BOMBARDED

ATTACK BY AUSTRIAN AEROPLANES.

Milan, July 13.

On Sunday morning last four enemy aeroplanes appeared over Venice flying at a great height. When exactly over the centre of the city they dropped several bombs, some of which fell near the historic palace of Dux, causing some material damage and injuring a good many people. The batteries opened fire upon the aeroplanes, but at that great height the fire was ineffectual. The visit was only a very short one.

GERMAN REVERSE NEAR LEMBERG

WHOLE BATTALIONS SWEEP AWAY

Petrograd, July 13.

The Russian Government officially reports as follows:

"There has been very severe fighting on the Bobr and Narew rivers.

"In the region about Lublin we completed our offensive by occupying the right bank of the Urzendoka.

"We repulsed attacks by the enemy on the upper Bug, the Zlotalipa and the Dniester."

GERMAN BATTALIONS SWEEP AWAY BY RUSSIAN FIRE.

London, July 13.

An official despatch from Petrograd reports as follows:

"The Germans have attacked our positions on the bank of the Bug river to the east of Lemberg. Our troops, who were concealed in hollows and in the trenches, permitted them to approach within a distance of two hundred metres, when our artillery, machine guns and rifles opened upon them as they advanced in close formation.

"The fire was terrific, and whole battalions were swept away. As they were still staggering under the effects of our fire the infantry with bayonets fixed leaped from the trenches and completed the work of slaughter."

GERMAN ATTACKS REPULSED.

Petrograd, July 13.

A further official communication from the War Office reports:—

"The artillery duel in the region of Ossowetz has been renewed.

In the region of Jedwabno yesterday we blew up a German mine gallery.

"Between the Pissa and the Rosoga a German attack was repulsed.

"From Jednorozetz to Prasunysz there was a violent cannonade, with outpost engagements.

"All is quiet on the left bank of the Vistula.

"In the direction of Kholm in the region of Grabovetz the enemy unsuccessfully attempted to approach our entrenchments.

"Yesterday we repulsed an attack near Markoff on the Zlotalipa front, and near Koanopetz on the Dniester.

"Our patrols carried out a series of successful reconnaissances on the upper Bug and the Zlotalipa."

THE MUNITIONS PROBLEM

ITALY APPOINTS A COMMISSION

Rome, July 13.

The King has signed a decree appointing a supreme Committee to take measures for increasing the output of munitions of war.

The Commission consists of the Chief of the Cabinet, Signor Salandra, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Signor Sonnino, the Minister of Finance, Signor Cárano, the Minister of Marine, Vice-Admiral Viale, and the Minister of War, General Zuppelli.

The post of Under Secretary of Munitions has been created, to which General Dallolio has been appointed. It is permissible for other personalities of the army or commerce to take part in the deliberations of the Commission, but without the right to vote.

FRANZ JOSEF FOR THE FRONT

AGED RULER WISHES TO FIGHT THE ITALIANS.

Paris, July 13.

A telegram from Zurich states that in spite of the opposition of his physicians Emperor Francis Joseph insists in the desire of going to the front against the Italians.

GERMAN ATTACKS FAIL

French Success in the Labyrinth

Paris, July 13.

An official bulletin issued to-day announces:

"The French troops holding the Labyrinth have been the object of a violent attack by the Germans, who however were completely decimated and driven back to their own lines.

"Notwithstanding a high wind that was blowing, a raid on the territory occupied by the enemy was effected by thirty-five of our aviators, who dropped bombs on the German strategic station of Vigbeulles, which serves the localities of Galonne and Apremont. Numerous fires were started among important provision and ammunition stores."

GERMAN ATTACK REPULSED IN ALSACE.

Paris, July 13.

An official despatch issued this afternoon reports that the Germans attempted to attack the French positions on the east bank of the Fecht River in upper Alsace at a place named Sondernach. The attack was directed upon the bridge head at that point, but was repulsed.

The aerial squadron that invaded the enemy's territory this morning dropped 171 bombs weighing 90 kilogrammes each upon the store-houses at the railway station at Vigneulles-Hattonchatel. The buildings contained very important stores of every kind, particularly ammunition.

The machines returned intact despite the heavy fire to which they had been subjected and the gale wind which was travelling at the rate of forty miles an hour.

SOISSONS BOMBARDED

German Big Guns at Work

BRITISH TROOPS REPULSE ATTEMPT TO RETAKE TRENCHES

Paris, July 14.

In Belgium yesterday the Germans, after an artillery preparation of the ground attacked the trenches southwest of Pilkens which the British captured on June 5 and July 5, but were easily repulsed.

At Chateau Carleul and the Labyrinth there have been combats with hand grenades.

North of Arras the French forces occupying the Souchez sugar refinery delivered a counter-attack and dislodged the Germans from Cabaret Rouge which they had captured the previous evening.

ARRAS AND SOISSONS BOMBARDED.

Paris, July 14.

A further official despatch published by the War Office says:—

"Arras and Soissons have again been bombarded by the Germans with shells of large calibre.

"In the region of the Somme, at Frise and Fay in the Champagne district and near Perthes, mining and countermining has been going on.

"In the Argonne German attacks concentrated on the region included between Marie Therese and the Chevanches heights were definitely stopped.

"Between the Meuse and the Moselle in the forest of Apremont there was artillery cannonading but no infantry action."

“THE CLIMAX OF IMPUDENCE”

Germany's Insult to Woodrow Wilson

VIOLENT OUTBURST BY NEW YORK PRESS

Kaiser's Government Fail to Accede to America's Requests

Washington, July 10.

The following is a resumé of the reply of the German Government to President Wilson's Note on the subject of the submarine campaign:—

“The Imperial Government has perused with lively satisfaction the Note received from the United States, wherein an appeal is made on behalf of humanitarian sentiments and of proceedings resulting in the mitigation, so far as may be possible, of the consequences of the present naval war.

“Such an appeal meets with cordial reception in the German Governmental spheres, which have always been inspired by the sentiments invoked now, and has always acted in consonance with humanitarian principles and with those of international law.

“The Imperial Government announces its pleasure at the declaration of the United States contained in the Note of May 15 regarding the fact that Germany has ever defended the principles of progress and humanity in regard to maritime warfare, from the day when Frederick the Great opened the negotiations which resulted in the treaties of friendship and commerce which bear the signatures of Adams, Franklin and Jefferson, celebrated between the United States and the Kingdom of Prussia.

“Germany, in her turn, recognises that the statesmen and thinkers of America have always been in favour of the freedom of the seas and the protection of seaborne trade.

“The two countries have always and in conjunction held out for progressive principles so far as regards the abolition of the right of seizure at sea and guarantees for the rights of neutrals.

“When the present war broke out the German Government declared that it was desirous of acceding to the proposals of the American Government regarding the ratification of the Declaration of London.

“The Imperial Government has consistently maintained the principle that war should be made against armed force and that respect should be shown towards the civil population of belligerent countries so far as may be compatible with military requirements.

“The Imperial Government believes that when the war is over, or perhaps sooner, some formula will be found for the establishment of a maritime law in war, the provisions of which will guarantee the freedom of the seas. In this direction Germany would view with the greatest pleasure all efforts of the United States Government.

“The Imperial Government is obliged to point out that if at the present time the principles of maritime war have been violated, thus overthrowing an ideal which ought to be faithfully observed, hers is not the responsibility. The United States are aware how the enemies of Germany have adopted every kind of measure calculated to paralyse the commerce of the nation and its traffic with neutral nations. This has been, from the commencement of the war, the proceeding adopted by the enemies of the Empire, directed against the civil population of Germany rather than against her armies.

“England, by her declaration of November 3, proclaimed the North-

Sea a war zone and by mines prevented free transit in those waters. By virtue of that action it may be said that at the present moment all neutral ports are blockaded, a proceeding contrary to all the rules of the rights of nations.

“Before the submarine campaign was organised England had already intercepted the navigation of neutral vessels bound for Germany, and this is one of the strongest reasons that Germany had for decreeing the submarine war.

“The English Prime Minister declared in the House of Commons on November 14 that England was endeavouring to prevent the introduction into Germany of articles of consumption, with the proposal of reducing the German nation by starvation. From March 1 England began to seize neutral cargoes.

“As happened to the Boers, the German nation now has the alternative of perishing by starvation with its women and children or losing its independence, while its enemies proclaim aloud a war without quarter until our utter extermination.

“Germany is carrying on the war in self-defence, and is fighting for national existence and for a durable peace. We find ourselves compelled to adopt submarine warfare. Were the Imperial Government to be guilty of any weakness on this occasion it would be responsible before God and history for the consequences.

“In regard to the destruction of the transatlantic Lusitania, the Imperial Government declares that the said vessel was carrying a large cargo of arms and ammunition, the disappearance of which has prevented the death of many German soldiers.

“Germany is prepared to do all in her power to safeguard the lives of American citizens and formally states that she will offer no hindrance to the establishment of an American line of ships to Europe. She will also give her protection to subjects of the United States travelling by neutral vessels. With this object the submarines will allow the free passage of such vessels provided that they bear certain signs which would be indispensable for their identification and that notice of their sailing is sent beforehand.

“Germany is confident that the United States will undertake that such ships shall not carry contraband of war.

“The Imperial Government, with a view to facilitating transport, proposed to add a reasonable number of neutral vessels under the American flag subject to the same conditions.

“Germany declares that it is impossible to admit the principle that the presence of American subjects on board enemy ships should be sufficient to protect such ships and render them exempt from attack. The accidents which neutrals have suffered from in the maritime war zone are the same as those to which neutrals are exposed if they remain in a place where military operations by land are going on.

“Should there be difficulties in the way of recruiting neutral vessels as proposed Germany would consent to the establishment of a certain number of enemy mailboats under the American flag, always with the proviso that they are not to carry contraband of war.

“Finally, the Imperial Government begs to state that it would be happy to take advantage of the good offices of the United States in an attempt to ameliorate somewhat the conditions of the existing naval war.”

NEW YORK PRESS ENRAGED.

New York, July 10.

The following are some of the Press comments on the German reply to the Note from President Wilson:

The “New York Herald”:—“Stripped of its cant about humanity, of its prating about Germany's previous contentions on behalf of the abolishment of the right of capture, of its tirade against Britain, and of its altogether specious contentions in regard to the Lusitania, the German reply is one of defiance.”

The “Globe”:—“Germany's reply is an unsatisfactory evasion of the simple issue whether Germany intends to violate International Law when violation means the death of American citizens. The failure of Germany, although twice interrogated, to make a definite disclaimer of such purpose, is most discouraging to all who have laboured to preserve unimpaired the historic good relations between Germany and the United States.”

The “Evening Sun”:—“The reply of Germany to our remonstrances against the abomination of submarine raiding as practised by the Kaiser's navy would be the climax of impudence if it were not a marvel of fatuity.”

BERLIN PRESS APPROVAL.

New York, July 10.

In regard to Germany's reply to the United States which has been published simultaneously in Washington and Berlin, a telegram from the German capital says that the “Morgen Post” declares that the answer is in every way worthy of Germany. It shows a calm and good conscience and a willingness to lessen the fearfulness of war or the possible upright wish to live in peace with America. At the same time it expresses a firm determination not to abate one jot or tittle of Germany's rights.

The answer shows clearly that the responsibility for the submarine warfare rests on Britain.

The paper quotes the American Note where it declares that the States cannot admit that the proclamation of a war zone, from which neutral ships are warned to keep away, may be made to operate as in any degree an abbreviation of the rights, either of American shipmasters or of citizens bound on lawful errands as passengers on the merchant ships of belligerent nationality. It says that this was the point on which American and German conceptions were opposed to each other; and it must be pointed out that this difference of opinion also is not compromised by the New German Note, but that rather it still exists in its essential features.

The paper says that feeling in the United States has changed from what it was at the time of the sinking of the Lusitania, and President Wilson will have to satisfy this new feeling in considering his answer. The present Note will certainly meet with the unrestrained approval of a large part of the American population.

NO GERMAN OPERA

ANTI-HUN MOVEMENT IN THE STATES.

New York, July 14.

To-day's “Sun” announces that the holders of season tickets for the performances at the Metropolitan have begun an active movement in favour of cutting out the German operas from the repertoire, and are trying to persuade the impresario to fall in with the idea. The argument is that the public would approve of thus testifying to the general disapproval with which Germany's manner of conducting the campaign is viewed in the United States.

TRAVEL BY GERMAN LINERS!

GERMANY'S “CONCESSION” TO THE STATES.

New York, July 13.

The Berlin correspondent of the United Press Agency telegraphs:—

“Germany is willing to make further concessions with a view to safeguarding the lives of American travellers in the war zone.

“I was informed in the German Foreign Office yesterday that the German Government would not abandon its submarine policy, but would consent to placing several great German liners under the American flag for the remainder of the war, and, in addition, granting immunity from submarine attacks to four English liners as proposed in the latest Note from Germany to the United States.

“The suggestion is made that the German liners Imperator, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria and George Washington be placed at the disposal of the American Government for transporting neutral passengers.

“Of course you understand that this matter would rest with the ship-owners,” said the Foreign Under Secretary, Herr Zimmermann; “but Germany would be willing to place at the service of American travellers her largest liners if the American Government cares to suggest it. If America desires to place them under the American flag we would certainly agree to turn over to them these interned passenger ships without any financial gain on our part, and manned by neutral crews, from the captain downwards. By this arrangement there would be no danger of the sailing schedules being interrupted, as is the case with the English liners through the ships being commandeered by the Government as transports.”

“Official circles in Berlin regret that the English translation of the German reply does not exactly interpret the spirit of the German text, the general opinion being that the original is more friendly in tone than the translation.

“Counsellor Zimmermann commented particularly on the sentence in the English version which reads:—‘The Imperial Government cherishes a definite hope that some way will be found when peace is concluded, or perhaps earlier, to regulate the law of maritime war in a manner guaranteeing the freedom of the seas, and will welcome it with gratitude and satisfaction if it can work hand in hand with the American Government on that occasion.’ The last three words were obtained from the German word ‘Dabei,’ which might mean ‘on that occasion’ or ‘to that effect.’ The Under Secretary pointed out that the German text laid emphasis on the object sought, not on the time when it might be sought, leaving me to infer that the phrase ‘to that effect’ was nearer the precise meaning. The Minister added that Germany was willing to work immediately and at all times for the freedom of the seas.”

ALLIES UNABLE TO CONSENT TO THE SUGGESTED ARRANGEMENT

London, July 13.

It is affirmed in official circles that the Allies would not consent to the agreement suggested to the United States by Germany in regard to the interned German vessels being utilised for the conveyance of American travellers under the American flag. It is pointed out that such an agreement would be contrary to Article 5 of the Declaration of London.

BRITAIN AND THE STATES

MEAT PACKERS APPROACH MR. LANSING.

Washington, July 14.

Representatives of the meat packing companies who recently protested to the Department of State concerning the detention in the United Kingdom of the cargoes of neutral vessels have again called on the Secretary of State, Mr. Lansing, asking for a readjustment of the cases.

"WE NEED MORE MEN"KITCHENER'S CALL ON THE NATION*PROBABLE INTRODUCTION OF CONSCRIPTION

London, July 9.

A tremendous popular ovation was accorded to Field Marshal Lord Kitchener at Guildhall this afternoon by a great mass meeting, the crowd being almost equal in size to that which witnessed the coronation of the King.

Throngs lined the route from the War Office and cheered as Lord Kitchener, in a blue undress uniform motored to the Hall without escort. The place was half packed an hour before the Minister for War arrived, and another 50,000 were jammed together in the streets outside, held back by the City Territorials. Many men from the trenches were in the lines.

Lord Kitchener plunged almost without any preliminaries, into a discussion of England's needs in the war, saying:—

"The situation as regards recruiting is immeasurably better than it was ten months ago; but let me tell you—let me emphasise the fact—that we need men, more men, still more men."

"Make no mistake this war will be a long one. The reasons which led me to predict a long war still hold good; and the time will come when I shall have to make larger demands upon the resources of British manhood."

"The recent fall in the recruiting figures was due only to temporary circumstances, and the call for men is now no longer limited on account of lack of material. Our armies require larger reserves, and from now on our requirements will continue persistently."

"The time will come when something more will be required to ensure an adequate supply of men. When registration is completed for men between the ages of 19 and 40 those not required for work in the munition factories will be approached with a view to enlisting, unmarried men being preferred."

"Our recruiting efforts have born good fruit; but now it is necessary to go one step further, and attack individuals who have not yet yielded to patriotic impulses. The gallant soldiers in the firing line are beckoning in urgency to those at home."

"Our position to-day is as serious as it was at the beginning of the war."

"The Australians and New Zealanders in the Dardanelles have performed brilliant feats of arms, while South Africa is offering large forces to the Empire; but it behoves every Englishman to do his duty. We must have large reserves for meeting the human wastage at the front."

Lord Kitchener interposed in his address a tribute to the gallant work of the Canadians in Flanders, which started a burst of cheering.

While he was speaking a hundred recruiting sergeants worked through the crowds outside the Hall and in a few minutes secured hundreds of enlistments.

Inside the Hall there were many members of the diplomatic corps.

BRITISH REGISTRY BILL PASSES THIRD READING.

London, July 9.

The so-called Registry Bill providing for the registration of all British subjects in the United Kingdom between the ages of 15 and 65, has passed the third reading in Parliament.

BRITISH AIRMAN KILLEDFATAL BOMB ACCIDENT.

London, July 8.

Squadron Commander Arthur Leslie Soames, of the Royal Flying Corps, met with a fatal accident to-day. He was experimenting with a bomb, which suddenly exploded and killed him on the spot.

THE MUNITIONS SCANDALALLEGED PARTY INTRIGUE IN BRITAIN

London, July 10.

The official announcement made on July 7 by Mr. Lloyd George regarding Lord Haldane and the question of Supply of War Munitions, has produced a political sensation, of which the Northcliffe Press is making the utmost use, in order, it is said, to prevent an alleged intrigue to get Lord Haldane back into the Cabinet. The tribute to the late Lord Chancellor read by Mr. Asquith at the meeting of the National Liberal Club on July 5 was regarded as paving the way for some such attempt. Notice has already been given by Sir Henry Dalziel (L.) for Kirkcaldy Burgh, an indefatigable heckler, to inquire whether Lord Haldane's disclosures of what took place at a confidential Cabinet committee meeting were made with the Premier's authority. Mr. Asquith will be asked to set aside a day for full discussion of the causes responsible for the shortage of munitions. The entire Northcliffe Press publish an appeal urging readers to sign and send in to Government a protest against the readmission of Lord Haldane, in any circumstances, into the Cabinet. The "Daily Mail" has started a campaign for the organisation of a People's Committee, composed of business men of high reputation, who have never been identified with Parliament in any way or with Party Journalism. The Committee would have powers to call evidence and report thereon to Parliament as to what Public Servants had by their negligence or incompetence endangered the fate of the Empire and are still holding office under Government. The "Daily Chronicle" states that it is rumoured in some quarters that if Major-General Sir S. B. Von Donop, Master-General of the Ordnance, does not resign, Mr. Lloyd George will do so, and that if General Von Donop does resign, that Lord Kitchener will also leave the War Office.

LACK OF GUNS AND MUNITIONSRESPONSIBLE FOR RUSSIAN REVERSES.

Paris, July 12.

A telegram from Zurich reports that the Swedish explorer Sven Hedin, in an article contributed to the "Lokal Anzeiger," says that the Russians are brave soldiers, and that both in discipline and equipment are above criticism. The disasters they have suffered were due to want of artillery and munitions.

WAR OFFICE NOW SATISFIED.

Petrograd, July 12.

The matter of most vital importance at the present moment is the problem of munitions, and to it the Government is devoting the whole of its attention.

The War Office is satisfied with the results obtained during the last few weeks.

SKILLED WORKMEN FROM THE STATES.

London, July 12.

The Russian Government is known to be straining every nerve to give a fresh impulse to the production of munitions of war, in order to commence as soon as possible an efficacious offensive along the greater part of the lines. Steps are being taken to obtain from the United States skilled workmen to put the factories in a position to meet requirements, and it is also probable that some will be engaged in Japan.

THE FRENCH SEVENTY-FIVETO BE USED BY ALL THE ALLIES

London, July 10.

The meeting of British and French authorities at Calais was held chiefly with a view to arranging about the manufacture of munitions and selecting some particular type of weapons and projectiles to be used by all the allied armies.

It was agreed that the 75 millimeter gun should be used by France, Great Britain and Russia, and it is expected that Italy will also accept this agreement. All the factories of these countries will be employed in turning out this type of gun, in accordance with the latest style adopted in France, the weapon and its ammunition thus serving indiscriminately for any one of the Allied Powers.

Particulars were given by the representative of the French Cabinet of the increase in the production of ammunition for the 75 guns. It was stated that the arsenals, having brought their installations thoroughly up to date, are now producing about 160,000 projectiles daily, and the rate of output will continue to increase until it exceeds the maximum necessary according to calculations based on experience.

The production of missiles for the heavy naval artillery and for rifles and machine guns is being developed in a similar manner.

GOLDEN HORN ARSENAL EXPLOSION"SHOCK LIKE AN EARTHQUAKE" CAUSES PANIC IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

Athens, July 10.

The Turkish arsenal at the Golden Horn has been partly destroyed by an explosion, the origin of which is unknown.

Despatches from Constantinople say that a shock like an earthquake was felt in the city, producing panic. The impression among the population was that the fire of the Russian Black Sea fleet had blown up the fortress guarding the Bosphorus.

COUNCIL OF WARSOLDIERS AND POLITICIANS CONFER AT CALAIS.

London, July 10.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Asquith, accompanied by Lord Kitchener, Lord Crewe and Mr. Balfour, went to Calais last Monday to confer with the French Ministers MM. Viviani, Delcassé, Millerand, Augagneur and Thomas, as well as with Generals Joffre and French.

VISIT TO KING OF THE BELGIANS

Paris, July 10.

The British Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for war proceeded to the front to-day to inspect the British forces, and took advantage of the opportunity to visit King Albert of Belgium.

Lord Kitchener will also review the French troops in the Arras region.

THE HATED HUNANTI-GERMAN MOVEMENT IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

Paris, July 10.

A telegram from Rome says that it is known from a reliable neutral source that the detestation of the Germans and of the Young Turk party is attaining great proportions among the populace of Constantinople.

The death of von Leipsig, Military Attaché to the German Embassy, was not through suicide as stated, but through an attack by a Turkish officer; and about fifty other Germans have met with the same fate.

THE RAIDER EMDENAN AUSTRALIAN TROPHY

Sydney, July 8.

The Defence Department of the Australian Commonwealth has contracted with a firm for the salvaging of the German cruiser Emden, which was sunk by the Australian cruiser Sydney.

The contractors say that it will be an easy matter to raise the vessel, and that she will be in Sydney harbour by Christmas, when she will be on view to the public.

Recruiting in Victoria has been very successful, and New South Wales will shortly commence a recruiting campaign herself.

BOTHA'S MEN FOR THE DARDANELLES!GERMANY'S DISASTROUS AFRICAN CAMPAIGN

London, July 10.

Telegrams from Pretoria report that the total strength of the German forces which have surrendered to General Botha in South-West Africa consisted of 204 officers and 3,166 men, with 37 field-guns, and 22 machine guns.

The event is being celebrated with rejoicings all over South Africa.

The Government of the South African Union has issued a proclamation announcing the termination of the campaign, and the intention of organising a contingent of troops to be placed at the disposal of the British Government.

It is understood that they will be sent to reinforce the expeditionary army operating against Turkey.

BOTHA'S HOPE"MANY OF MY MEN HERE WILL TAKE A SHARE IN THE GREATER TASK IN EUROPE."

London, July 13.

In reply to a telegram from Lord Kitchener congratulating him upon the successful conclusion of the campaign in German South-West Africa, General Botha replied:—"I most cordially thank you for your kind congratulations, which are highly appreciated by all. I hope that soon many of my men here will take a share in the greater task in Europe."

FAMOUS BOER GENERAL OFF TO THE FRONT.

London, July 13.

A rumour appears in some of the papers that, now that the campaign in German Southwest Africa has been brought to a successful conclusion, General Botha will revisit England on the invitation of the British Government, and that the General will possibly go to the front for a short time in France.

NO MORE GERMAN NEWSFROM SAYVILLE WIRELESS STATION.

Washington, July 8.

By the orders of President Wilson the Sayville radiograph station was taken over by the Government to-day. Naval officers now are in control of the station and will probably continue so until the end of the war.

Investigation disclosed that it was possible for operators to communicate with the German submarines without the knowledge of the naval censors who had been sent to Sayville to enforce American neutrality.

From now, no messages will be transmitted from or received by Sayville station except through operators under the direct control of Captain Bullard, Chief of the Naval Radio Service, and of Lieutenant Clark.

FIRE ON A FLOATING ARSENAL

A RACE TO PORT.

New York, July 8.

The transport liner Minnehaha was a floating arsenal, carrying hundreds of tons of high explosives, thousands of cases of loaded shells and cartridges, and great quantities of acid, besides an immense cargo of food supplies for the British army.

The steamer left here on Sunday night with eighty passengers and a crew of about 100 men.

The fire was discovered at 5.30 yesterday afternoon when 570 miles south-east of Halifax. Captain Frank Claret immediately headed the ship for Nova Scotia and is steaming for Halifax at top speed to avoid a mishap. He should reach port by 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

NO BOMBS ON THE SAXONIA.

New York, July 8.

A wireless has been received from the Cunard liner Saxonia stating that a search has been made throughout the ship but that no explosives have been found. There are 324 passengers on board.

OTHER SHIPS MENACED.

New York, July 8.

With regard to the placing of dynamite on board vessels leaving New York it is announced that bombs were put on board the British steamers Bankdale and Lord Erne, which left New York for Havre on May 7 and April 29 respectively.

ARRESTS IN NEW YORK.

New York, July 8.

The authorities are endeavouring to ascertain whether the late Franz Holt, alias Erich Muenster, had accomplices in putting dynamite bombs on board British steamers when leaving this port.

Several individuals have been arrested on suspicion.

VESSELS WITH MUNITIONS

TO BE ATTACKED OFF AMERICAN COAST.

New York, July 8.

It is reported from London that the British Admiralty has received information from which it appears that before long a German submarine may appear on the American coast to attack the ships of the Allies which convey munitions to Europe.

BOMBS ON BRITISH STEAMER

KIRKOSWALD'S LUCKY ESCAPE

New York, July 10.

A telegram from Marseilles announces that while the British steamer Kirkoswald was discharging her cargo there nine unexploded bombs were discovered in the bags.

The vessel left Brooklyn on May 2 last with a cargo of sugar for Marseilles.

THOUSANDS OF MINES

PLACED BY AUSTRIANS IN THE ADRIATIC.

London, July 9.

A telegram from Geneva to the International News Agency states that the Austrians have launched thousands of floating mines into the Adriatic from the naval base at Pola, which are being carried southward along the Italian coast.

A sailing ship sighted one of these mines yesterday off Bari and exploded it by firing rifle shots at it.

The telegram adds that the Austrian military authorities are seizing all the printing presses and type and converting them into war munitions.

LOSS OF THE FALABA

CREW AND RESCUERS PRAISED.

London, July 8.

The inquiry by the Board of Trade into the sinking of the Falaba has concluded.

Lord Mersey has pronounced the finding of the Court that the Falaba was sunk by a torpedo fired by a German submarine; that the measures for saving passengers and crew were promptly taken by the officers of the Falaba; that perfect discipline was maintained; that the Falaba was unarmed and unprovided with the means of either offence or defence; and that the responsibility rested exclusively with the officers of the submarine.

Lord Mersey stated that he was satisfied that the witnesses who stated that the lifeboats were rotten were mistaken, and that the damage suffered by some of the boats was not due to negligence. Officers and crew, as well as the men in the boats which came to the rescue, were praised for the courage and kindness they displayed.

SUNK BY THE SEA HUNS

LOSS OF A WILSON LINER

London, July 9.

Yesterday a German submarine sank the Wilson liner Guido, bound from Hull to Archangel, all the crew being saved.

The steamer Muskoge, from New Orleans to Gothenburg, has been detained by a British warship and taken to Kirkwall for an examination of her tanks. The steamers Pinore and Polaris have been released.

It is reported from Copenhagen that a submarine in the North Sea set fire to the Danish schooner Ellen, bound from Danish ports to Liverpool with planks. The crew succeeded in reaching land.

NEUTRAL VESSEL SUNK

DEPREDACTIONS BY HUN PIRATES

London, July 10.

Information has been received that the Italian steamer Clio and the Norwegian Nordaas have been sunk by German submarines. It is believed that the crews have been saved.

BOAT TOWED BY SUBMARINE

London, July 10.

The crew of the Italian steamer Clio is now being landed at Liverpool.

The crew of the Norwegian steamer Nordaas were towed in a boat twenty-five miles by the submarine which sank their ship, and are expected at Aberdeen.

BOMBS ON BRITISH SHIPS

MULE VESSELS IN DANGER.

New York, July 12.

The Navy Department has received information that bombs were placed on board two British ships which left New Orleans for England on the 8th instant with mules. Attempts are being made to warn the vessels by wireless.

R. M. C. A.

EXCHANGE OF MEDICAL-STAFF PRISONERS.

Paris, July 9.

The Governments of France and Germany have agreed to an exchange of prisoners who are either doctors, chaplains, druggists, nurses, stretcher bearers or administrative officers of the Medical Corps of either army. Only sufficient will remain behind to attend to their wounded comrades in the hospitals.

NORWEGIAN NEUTRALITY VIOLATED?

ALLEGATIONS BY THE HUNS.

New York, July 9.

A radiogram from Berlin says:

"According to the latest reports the German steamship Pallas, of Flenberg, was attacked by an armed British trawler which fired twice at her. The British auxiliary cruiser Victoria contributed further to this violation of neutrality until a Norwegian guardship arrived, securing the release of the steamer and eleven men from her who had been arrested by the British.

"The Norwegian Government is protesting to Great Britain against the violation of international law."

BRITISH SUBMARINE'S VICTIM

GERMAN WARSHIP LOST IN THE BALTIC.

London, July 9.

The British Admiralty announces that according to an official communication from Petrograd, the submarine which attacked and sank a German warship in the Baltic on the 2nd inst. near Gothland island, was British.

DECORATIONS FOR BRITISH OFFICERS.

London, July 13.

The officers of the British submarine which sank a German battleship of the Deutschland type in the Baltic Sea recently have been decorated by the Tsar with the Cross of St. George.

UNDERSEAS WARFARE

ITALIAN SUBMARINE SUNK IN COLLISION.

Turin, July 12.

The "Stampa," referring to the report that the Italian submarine Medusa was sunk by an Austrian submarine, says that the Government, having ascertained where the sunken boat was lying, sent two vessels to examine her. She was found to be in shallow water near the coast; and not far away was lying another submarine, evidently an Austrian. The inference drawn is that there had been a combat and that the Medusa was sunk by a collision instead of by the enemy's torpedo. There are hopes of raising the vessels.

BATTLE IN MID AIR

MACHINE GUNFIRE DESTROYS GERMAN AEROPLANE.

Petrograd, July 12.

A battle in the air has been fought by a German and a Russian aeroplane on the Dniester, the Russian using his machine gun effectively. The German replied, piercing his opponent's aeroplane five times; but finally the German pilot was killed and the observer on board wounded. The machine thereupon fell to the ground and, catching fire, was destroyed, while the observer was killed.

WAR'S GHASTLIER SIDE

CORPSES LYING TEN FEET DEEP

London, July 9.

A correspondent in the north of France reports that a French officer who has recently arrived from the front states that the sunken road between Ablain and Angres is so thickly covered with dead bodies that in some places they are lying ten feet deep, presenting a horrible spectacle.

The officer also declared that in the German trenches the French found seventeen women who had been prisoners of the Germans.

"EVVIVA ITALIA!"

ITALIAN COMMANDER GOES DOWN WITH HIS SHIP.

Rome, July 9.

The bulletin published yesterday by the Italian Admiralty announcing the loss of the cruiser Amalfi was as follows:

"Last night one of our naval divisions made an excursion in the waters of the upper Adriatic. When returning, the armoured cruiser Amalfi was attacked this morning by an Austrian submarine which succeeded in hitting her with a torpedo.

"The Amalfi immediately heeled over to port. The commander gave the order for all hands to form up on the after deck, which being obeyed, he took off his hat and shouted 'Evviva Italia! Evviva il Re!' to which the officers and crew responded with enthusiasm. Still maintaining perfect discipline they plunged into the sea, the commandant being the last to leave the ship, which he did by sliding down the port cable.

Soon after this the vessel disappeared under the water. We were able to save almost all the officers and seamen by our own means."

Other reports say that the Amalfi floated half an hour before sinking. It is estimated that over five hundred of the crew were picked up by other ships of the squadron.

IDOLISED BY HIS TROOPS

VICTOR EMMANUEL'S HEROISM.

London, July 9.

Another incident illustrating the sangfroid displayed by King Victor Emmanuel when under fire is related by the correspondent of the "Evening News," who reports from the Isonzo front that an Italian soldier, writing to his family, says:—

"The King came to visit the advanced post where I was stationed. The Austrians must have learned of his Majesty's presence from some spy, as in a few moments they opened fire with their big 305 guns on the spot. Sixteen shells were fired, some of them falling not more than a hundred yards from where the King was standing.

"His Majesty coolly counted the shots until the fire ceased, and then observed as though speaking to himself: 'How the Austrians waste their ammunition in trying to kill one man!'

The correspondent says that the King is always to be found where the bullets are flying thickest, talking and joking with the men. His courage, simplicity and powers of endurance are such that it is no wonder that the troops idolise him. He frequently sleeps in an ordinary camp stretcher, rising at 4 o'clock when he goes to the front with his two aides-de-camp and spends a long time there taking observations.

Often the King is to be seen coming back loaded with letters which the soldiers have confided to him in the belief that thus their relatives and friends will get them more quickly and surely. In many instances, when a man has been uneasy on account of not having heard from those he left behind him, the King has personally sent a telegram and has obtained immediate and reassuring news in reply.

1,504,523

PRUSSIA'S LOSSES IN THE WAR.

New York, July 12.

A despatch from Berlin to the "Evening Post" states that the last sixteen Prussian casualty lists contain the names of 4747 officers and soldiers killed or wounded, giving a total since the commencement of the war up to the end of June of 1,504,523.

This does not include 164 Saxon lists, 196 Bavarian, 211 Wurtemberg and 36 naval lists.

Out of 40,000 German National School teachers under arms 4900 have been killed in battle.

DIOCESAN SYNOD

BISHOP'S CHARGE TO THE DELEGATES

The proceedings of the second triennial Diocesan Synod of the Anglican Diocese in Argentina and Eastern South America opened with a Quiet Day for the clergy at St. George's College, Quilmes, on Tuesday, July 13. Twenty-two clergy from various parts of the Republics of the Plate and also from Brazil were present. No spot more fit than St. George's, Quilmes, with its extensive grounds, buildings and chapel, could be imagined for such a purpose and gathering. The gratitude and appreciation of the clergy were tendered in warm votes of thanks to Canon and Mrs. Stevenson for their liberal hospitality.

The business side of the Synod began at 11.30 yesterday, preceded, as only fit on such an important occasion, by a choral celebration of the Holy Communion in St. John's Pro-Cathedral, in which the clergy and laity representing many church centres of the Diocese united. This great service was most solemn and impressive. The clergy walked robed in procession, "Onward Christian soldiers" being sung as the processional hymn. Archdeacon Hodges was the celebrant, assisted by the Bishop of the Diocese, Archdeacon Blogg, of Brazil, and the Rev. H. W. Brady, Chaplain to the Bishop.

The Bishop in his charge welcomed the clerical and lay delegates present and said that the Synod had justified its existence. The various committees had done good work and the Diocese had gained in order and efficiency. The difficulties of organisation were intensified by the constant changes. Since last Synod, out of a total number of thirty clergy three had died, one had returned to Missionary work in Chile, six had taken up work in home dioceses, and one, the Rev. A. Karney, was serving in the North Sea Battle Fleet. Referring to the war, he quoted with approval the following:—"It is no ordinary war, which can come to an end when one side or the other is weary. . . . it is a war of opposing ideals, which have their root in the natures and deep convictions of the peoples engaged in it. On the one side stand the Germans with their gospel of war as the supreme good, and their arrogant claim to impose culture of their own peculiar kind on an unwilling world. On the other side are those to whom freedom and justice and truth and humanity are precious, and who cherish a belief in the right of small nations to exist. It is impossible for those who care for these things to stand aside and allow Germany to impose her will upon mankind. These two opposing ideals cannot exist side by side. We are fighting not only for our lives, but for things more precious than life: the ideals which make life worth living." Yet out of the furnace of suffering there was good hope that a more Christian civilisation would emerge. The war was God's call to our race to dare and suffer in a great cause; hence they rejoiced that the response from the Republics of the Plate and Brazil had been so prompt and generous. He referred principally to the four thousand lives offered from Argentina and the hundreds from the smaller British communities in Brazil, Uruguay and Paraguay. "God guard and bless them and make their sacrifice fruitful." Referring to the Kikuyu controversy, the Bishop said that the Archbishop of Canterbury's decisions might be received with thankfulness, not as closing the question at issue (for Lambeth was not a final court of appeal like the Vatican), but as giving the best and most responsible opinion, upon which the Church authorities would probably act in the future. The distinctive Anglican position seemed to be safeguarded, while there was a relaxation of the barriers which shut them off from their Protestant brethren. He observed that his own ruling as to the admission of others to Holy Communion, under certain conditions, had been fully upheld. Also no "obligatory principle of Church order" was contravened by the admission of other ministers to Anglican pulpits, so long as the authority of the Diocesan Bishop was maintained. But this was not a practical question with them. In any case the decision rested with the Bishop, and no clergy should take action on the basis of the Kikuyu decisions without consulting him. In his review of the Diocese, the Bishop spoke with gratitude of the structural improvements of St. John's Pro-Cathedral and its corresponding usefulness as a living centre of work. The six chaplaincies in Brazil had grown to seven and had been formed into a separate Archdeaconry under the Ven. Oswald Blogg, Chaplain of Rio de Janeiro. He had dedicated no less than six new Churches or Church Halls, viz., St. George's College Chapel, Quilmes and Cordoba Church Hall, in Argentina; St. Mary's, Pará, and St. John the Baptist's, Morro Velho, in Brazil, and St. Andrew's, Asuncion, and St. Peter's, Chaco Mission, in Paraguay. He referred warmly to women's work and especially commended the effort on behalf of the Missions to Seamen's Institute in Buenos Aires. Their new link with the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel was greatly valued, and they were more indebted than ever to their old friends, the South American Missionary Society and the Missions to Seamen Society. After speaking of schools and religious education, and briefly mentioning the special subjects which would be brought before the Synod, he concluded with an earnest appeal for unity, and that the Diocese, with its Bishop, clergy and laity, might be regarded as the Church's fighting unit in its battle with the world.

Immediately after the celebration, the congregation assembled in St. John's Hall, where the preliminary session was held under the Presidency of the Bishop. After prayer, his Lordship alluded in touching and appropriate terms to the able work done by the late Rev. A. Jules Dubourg as Secretary of the Synod, and the loss to all brought about by his death. The Rev. H. T. Morrey Jones was then unanimously elected as Secretary in his stead.

After the signatures of the clergy and lay delegates had been subscribed to the Declaration of Assent to the authority of the Synod, a summary of the acts of the last Synod was read and adopted in place of the minutes in detail. The various reports of the Standing Committee, Diocesan Finance Committee, Board of Missions, Religious Education Committee, Special Committee on ministrations to Spanish and Portuguese-speaking people and Statutes of the Chapter were read and adopted, not, however, without considerable discussion, especially with regard to the subjects of Foreign Missions and the Ministrations to Spanish and Portuguese-speaking people. With reference to the former, while appreciating the progress made in the mission fields in the Diocese and the local support given in particular to the Paraguayan and Argentine Chaco missions, the Synod deplored the apathy shown by the churches and congregations in general to this most important branch of the Church's work. It had been found necessary to insert a clause to this effect in the report of the Diocesan Board of Missions. The feeling of the meeting was that a more general interest would be aroused and support given to the Indian missions through more frequent visits to Church centres by deputations from the mission fields.

The many difficulties or ministering to the Spanish and Portuguese-speaking people were discussed at length, and the importance of this work in the future was not lost sight of. It was felt that the difficulty of the language question might be overcome, and that many children of British origin who did not understand the English language might be saved to the Church by means of religious teaching in the schools, and of services in the language known to them.

The proceedings concluded with the Blessing pronounced by the Bishop.

The following delegates subscribed the declaration:—Messrs. Arturo W. Boote, Dr. J. L. Mulcahy, Leonard Cooper, R. D. Christian, A. A. Savage, Walter Lamb, J. C. Hall, J. F. E. Green, H. G. Mackie, Godfrey Pope, A. Guppy, James Oldham, C. R. Hughes, A. W. Bannatyne, Wilmot Blomefield, Chevallier-Bouffell, Alfred Lovett, Louis Lacey, J. Harvey, and Walter Fleury.

After the morning session, the members adjourned to the Phoenix Hotel, where they enjoyed the kind hospitality of Miss Mitchell and Miss Greyson, who provided luncheon.

The afternoon session was followed by a reception given at the Phoenix Hotel by the Bishop. Only a general invitation was issued, but a large gathering assembled, which included the British Minister, Sir Reginald Tower. A short but enjoyable musical programme was listened to, and the pleasant proceedings terminated at 6.30.

The following are the signatures of the clergy and lay delegates to the declaration of assent to the authority of the Synod:—

Edward F. Every, Bishop; W. Herbert Hodges, Archdeacon; Oswald W. C. Blogg, Archdeacon, Rio; J. T. Stevenson, Hon. Canon; C. F. Mermagen, Hon. Canon; C. K. Blount, Hon. Canon; Charles Pepys, Hon. Canon; Albert G. Fenn, Hon. Canon; W. A. Waller, Bahia; W. H. T. Blair, Los Cocos; I. Meredith Bate, Diocesan Chaplain; H. T. Morrey Jones, Flores and Christ Church; J. A. Rickards, Alberdi and Talleres F.C.C.A.; C. E. Newbould, Morro Velho; H. Westby Brady, Missions to Seamen; F. O. Spanton, Belgrano; J. Sanderson, Bahja Blanca; Cyril Moore, Cordoba; Ronald A. Bevis, Paraguayan Chaco Mission; Arthur W. Allen, Santos; F. Middleton, Paraguay; G. H. Knight Clarke, Quilmes; C. R. Bassett, Quilmes; John D. Morrow, Lomas; F. H. Somerville, St. John's, Buenos Aires.

MR. THOMAS RAYSON.

A veteran of the Chinese War of 1860, who served under the late General Gordon of Khartoum fame. Mr. Rayson handed in to the French Minister at Montevideo on the 14th inst. the following:

"A message of sympathy to France from an old English soldier who served in the Chinese Expedition of 1860 along with the gallant French troops."

Long live France!!

—Thomas Rayson.

The tired captain descended the gangway stairs and addressed the terrified passengers huddled in the saloon of the storm-tossed vessel.

"Friends," said he, "we have done all that sailors can do, all that men can do. We are now all in the hands of the Almighty."

"Oh, captain!" piteously cried a clergyman, "don't say it's as bad as that!"

GOVERNMENT PREVENT STRIKE OF MINERS

London, July 13.

It is announced that the miners of South Wales have rejected the arrangement proposed by the Government and threaten to declare a strike on Thursday.

The men are asking for higher wages on account of the extra labour due to the increased work in making munitions. The movement will affect over 45,000 men in Cardiff alone.

MUNITIONS ACT APPLIES.

London, July 13.

The President of the Board of Trade announced in the House of Commons to-day that the Government had decided to apply the Munitions Act to the miners' strike in South Wales, on account of the injury to transports, production and supply of war material which such a strike would produce.

BRITISH WAR LOAN

645 MILLIONS STERLING SUBSCRIBED.

London, July 13.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Mackenna, announced to-day in the House of Commons that the subscriptions to the new war loan amounted to over 600 million sterling. The fact, he added, gives an idea of the economic potentiality of Great Britain and showed that she could face the course of events with calmness.

1,097,000 SUBSCRIBERS.

London, July 13.

In announcing the total subscriptions to the new war loan in the House of Commons to-day the Chancellor of the Exchequer said that the figure of 800 million sterling mentioned in the newspapers was neither expected nor required by the Government. Had the subscriptions reached that amount it would have been necessary to close the lists.

The total subscribers through the Bank of England numbered 550,000, whose contributions aggregated 570 millions. Through the Post Office up to the present there have been 547,000 subscribers, representing further contributions of 75 millions sterling.

AERIAL TORPEDO

ADOPTED BY THE GERMANS

London, July 12.

A despatch from Rotterdam to the "Daily Mail" gives a description of a new aerial torpedo invented by the Germans.

The missile is said to be about seven feet long and resembles the submarine weapon in appearance. It is composed of two cases, one being of thin chrome-nickel, and the other and inner one being of a material similar to that used in Zeppelins.

About a sixth of the space in the rear of the weapon is occupied by an electric accumulator at the bottom and an electric motor-generator secured to the top. The machinery is controlled by Hertzian waves acting on a Telefunken system.

The torpedo is inflated with water-gas or compressed air-gas, but as it is heavier than air, two lifting screws work under the body to keep the torpedo in the air, while the motive power is supplied by two propellers.

RAID ON EAST ANGLIA

London, July 12.

Some German aeroplanes appeared this morning on the East Anglian coast but were chased away by the British airmen after having dropped a few bombs which did no damage.

CORDOBA NEWS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

July 12.

American Tennis Tournament.

The second in the series of Mixed Doubles American Tournaments (Handicap) took place at the Cordoba Athletic Club, on July 9. Play was started at 9.30 a.m., and continued throughout the day, an excellent cold luncheon being served at Club Pavilion at midday. Miss Lily Robinson, Mrs. S. A. Parker, and Mrs. L. G. Babb presided at the tea table. The tournament which was won by Miss Gladys Guppy and Mr. L. G. Babb, was a most enjoyable one. The several teams made the following scores: Miss Gladys Guppy and Mr. L. G. Babb 75 games, Miss Phyllis Symonds and Mr. A. D. Dunbar 68, Miss Gladys Symonds and Mr. Scriebler 63, Mrs. George Lang and Mr. K. Struthers 61, Mrs. Harris Smith and Mr. G. E. Morton 58, Miss Florence Morton and Mr. S. T. Harris Smith 57, Miss Blanche Guppy and Mr. S. A. Parker 53, Miss Glancy and Mr. Monico 52, Messrs. E. W. Marks and Mr. R. J. Cochrane 52, Miss Doris Robinson and Rev. Moore 44, Miss Brumleu and Mr. P. P. Schultz 32 games. The prizes will be presented a week from the coming Sunday (July 25), at 4 p.m. It is the intention of the Tennis Committee to hold a team match of mixed doubles during the month of August, the Captain's team against the Vice-Captain or Secretary's team. Now that so many new members are joining it is the intention to lay out the new tennis court at once.

Caruso at the Rivera Indarte Theatre.

Last night the Rivera Indarte Theatre was crowded to hear the world-famous singer, Enrico Caruso, in the opera "Manon." The great tenor was in excellent voice, and was obliged to respond to several curtain calls during the evening. The majority of the audience had never heard Caruso sing before, and his wonderful range was greatly appreciated by all those privileged to hear him. Miss Gilda della Rizza, who impersonated the part of "Manon," made a fine impression, and her singing and acting met with hearty approval. The orchestra in charge of Prof. C. Armani was also one of the features of the performance. The company will give four operas during their stay here, "Tosca" being billed for to-night.

Festival at General Paz Hippodrome.

The Festival arranged under the Presidency of Señora de Barros, which took place at the General Paz Hippodrome on Sunday afternoon, was a very successful function. In conjunction with the festival the Jockey Club arranged several races which resulted as follows:—

Premio Charo.—1 Rodante, 2 Charo, 3 Otario, 4 Gaitina.
Premio Fulmen.—1 Dardanelos, 2 Gesta, 3 Chelita, 4 Porotita, 5 Alborada.

Premio Fanatico.—1 Capelina, 2 Catafelto, 3 Claymore.

Classic Roque Saena Peña.—1 Clearing, 2 Lehmann, 3 Gleusman, 4 Filosa, Montesuma, Stelita, and Lady Love also ran.

In the latter race an accident happened when Filosa threw her jockey, L. Giménez, and Montesuma collided with the fallen rider, fracturing his left arm and rendering him unconscious for a long time.

The automobile race was won by Sr. D. Juan Bagnis, who piloted a Ford against five competitors.

Football.

The match in the first division between General Paz Juniors and the Central Cordoba team was postponed, as was the match in the third division between Juniors (B) and Central Cordoba.

The second division game between Alta Cordoba v. Central Cordoba resulted in a win for the latter by the score of 3—1.

NOTES FROM PARAGUAY

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

Asuncion, July 11, 1915.

The Weather.

The last few days have been so mild that the tourists who came up here to avoid the cold in Buenos Aires and found it so cold here about ten days ago, will be sorry they did not wait, instead of taking the first steamer back to the Argentine. The weather is perfect now, neither hot nor cold. It is true the hotels are not built with an idea to comfort during the cold weather, but these spells never last long, only a few days at the most.

The Ninth of July.

On the 9th of July the Argentine Society gave a picnic to celebrate the day. Last year it was a great success, and this year it was no less. It took place in the grounds belonging to the "Auto Club, Paraguaya," on the Rio Negro. The ride over in the naphtha launches was very delightful. The scenery on the Rio Negro reminds one of the Tigre. Some day it may be like that famous place. Now there are only a few mud huts here and there, with the exception of the large building belonging to the "Auto Club," which is built of wood. Here the tables were laid, and after lunch dancing was indulged in.

Croquet, lawn tennis, and other games were kept up until sunset, when a great rush took place for the home-going launches. The return ride, with the lovely sunset, was even prettier than the ride out in the morning.

The Argentine Minister was there, Señor Merio Ruiz de les Llanus; the Argentine Consul, Señor Diaz Valdez; a number of the Government officials, and many of the best Paraguayan families; also many of other nationalities.

The lunch was excellent, and the "Sociedad Argentina" is to be congratulated on the success of their "Almuerzo Campestre." The municipal band was present, and the only drawback was that it was not very generous with its music. The rests were too frequent, and lasted too long.

News in Brief.

Th lawn tennis fever still keeps high; all the clubs are in a flourishing condition.

Last week Mrs. John Hessenmuller returned from Buenos Aires with her children, for a holiday.

Miss Campbell returned by the same train.

A number of tourists have come in search of warmer weather. The hotels are fairly full, and a number are in San Bernardino, but not so many as in former years, owing to the crisis or the war, perhaps.

Several interesting matches were played in the third and fourth divisions.

News in Brief.

The Democratic Party have nominated Dr. Juan F. Cafferata as their candidate for Governor of the Province of Cordoba, and it is said that this gentleman will also be supported by the Independent Party.

Señor Jeronimo Pistonato, engineer and college professor, died on Friday last, after an illness of some weeks. Señor Pistonato was the founder of the old Gas Company of this city, and at the time of his death was the proprietor of a lead and solder manufactory. The deceased will be greatly missed by his host of friends in this city.

The tennis courts of the Agricultural College were the scene of some interesting tennis on Friday last, when a number of matches took place between the younger set of Cordoba society.

A meeting of the Cordoba Athletic Club committee will be held on Wednesday night, July 14, at the English Club, General Paz, when several matters of importance will be discussed.

MISS HUGHESDON-SMITH'S CONCERT

A GREAT SUCCESS AT THE SEAMEN'S MISSION.

An expression which has become familiar, and which reads "one of the best concerts we have had within these walls," can, with perfect accuracy, be varied to "the best concert ever heard, etc.," when the entertainment arranged by Miss Hughesdon Smith, and given last evening at the Seamen's Mission is the one under consideration. It would, indeed, be difficult to state whether the audience or the artists most enjoyed the performance, because to the artist nothing appeals so much as genuine appreciation, and to the audience nothing so much as a series of first-class items. There were both these in abundance last evening.

From start to finish the concert went with a swing, and what was more there was a larger audience present than has been the case for many weeks. Both these facts make the adjective "exceptional" a most fitting one to describe the evening.

There was an amount of talent quite unusual when heard on a single programme, and the marine audience were indeed lucky in being catered for in such a manner, but it must be said that they showed a splendid appreciation of what was provided for them.

Mr. Furness Williams and Mr. Cynlais Gibbs, from the Coliseo Theatre, were included in the original programme, but the former was unfortunately absent owing to severe cold.

Mr. Gibbs' singing was received with loud applause, and indeed it was worthy of it. He possesses a beautiful voice, which was heard perhaps, to greater effect in his encore, than in his first choice.

Another special feature of the programme was the dancing of Miss Vasquez and Miss Villamil, both the castanet dance in the first half of the programme, and the Early Victorian dance in the second were deservedly encored. Their dancing was perfect, both young ladies being perfect artists. The first dance in full Spanish costume was in complete contrast to the second, a stately dance in the attractive dress of the period, in which Miss Vasquez fulfilled the duties of cavalier. It was an item duly appreciated.

Miss Lucy Gordon opened the concert with a pianoforte solo, and throughout an evening of repeated encores, Miss Gordon hardly ever left the instrument for a moment's rest.

Mrs. Alfred Drysdale, Mrs. Marie Eidelberg, Mrs. H. R. K. Richards, and Mr. T. F. Bideleux, were the other artists, which in itself shows the concert to have been exceptional. They were one and all in good voice, and chose the songs most suitable for the occasion.

In no single instance were they allowed to leave the platform without a recall.

Mrs. Richards was called upon to sing no less than six songs, although she has not yet fully recovered from her recent attack of bronchitis.

Mrs. Eidelberg was perhaps best in her singing of "Comin' thro' the Rye," which she chose as her encore to "The Temple Bells are Ringing." "Bird of love Divine" brought from Mrs. Drysdale an encore in which she sang "Down Vauxhall Way," but most pleasing of all her songs was "The Nightingale of Lincoln's Inn." Mr. Bideleux was in great form, and in the "Yeoman's Wedding Song" was at his best.

The concert closed with the singing of the "Marseillaise" and the National Anthem, and although the hour was late, there was a tendency to demand more. Miss Hughesdon Smith and Miss Gordon are deserving of congratulations on having arranged an exceptional concert.

The programme was as follows:—

Part I.

- 1 Piano selection, Miss Lucy Gordon.
- 2 Song, "The Admiral's Broom"

CONDEMNED BY THE POPE

GERMANY'S VIOLATION OF BELGIAN NEUTRALITY.

Paris, July 13.

The Catholic organ "La Croix" announces that Cardinal Gasparri, Secretary to the Holy See, has placed in the hands of the Belgian Minister to the Vatican, Mr. Van den Heuvel, a letter containing very explicit declarations in regard to the violation of Belgian neutrality by the Germans.

In effect, Cardinal Gasparri states that on August 4, 1914, the German Imperial Chancellor, von Bethmann-Hollweg, recognised openly in the Reichstag that Germany had violated Belgian neutrality despite international laws. By this confession the invasion of Belgium is brought directly into the category of deeds condemned in the Consistorial pronouncement of January 22 last, wherein the Pope deeply censures any injustice, no matter by whom or for what motive committed.

EFFECT ON ROMAN CATHOLICS.

Rome, July 13.

In diplomatic circles of this city it is believed that the outspoken condemnation by Pope Benedict XV of the violation of Belgian neutrality by Germany will have considerable effect, not only among the Catholics of the allied Powers, but among those also of the neutral and Central Empires.

BRITAIN'S "FIRST VICTORY"

GERMAN COMMENT ON SURRENDER OF SOUTH WEST AFRICA.

London, July 13.

A telegram from Rotterdam says that the German Colonial Office commenting on the surrender of the German forces in Southwest Africa, says that if it has actually taken place it is due to the overwhelming superiority of the British officers, and occurred under the most honourable circumstances. It is the first victory gained by the British, and that under a Boer General. It will in any case have no effect on the final result of the war.

BRITAIN'S NEW MACHINE GUN

WEAPON OF ENORMOUS DESTRUCTIVE POWER.

London, July 13.

The War Office is experimenting with a new machine gun from which great things are expected. It has already been proved to possess enormous destructive power.

LAND OF LILLIPUT

Conducted by Egeria

My dear Lilliputians,

I suppose most of you read something about the different countries which are at war. In times of peace we take little notice of the manners and customs of other nations after we have left school, unless we have the good fortune to be able to travel. But when I went to school—which is certainly a long time ago—we had to learn why certain places and rivers and mountains were given their names—probably you have to do likewise.

Now, although many of you are familiar with European names, I expect there are few of you who know many Turkish ones. As you know, the British are fighting against the Turks and on Turkish soil, so naturally many of the geographical names will be used in our literature and history after the war, and maybe you will be pleased to become acquainted with a few of them beforehand. And so I will this week explain a few, and if you be interested you will soon learn them and remember them.

The word "Bahr" means sea or ocean; and the name "Sedd-el-Bahr" is in English the "Ocean Barrier"; while the name "Kalid Bahr" is "Key of the Ocean." "Kaleh" is the word for "Fort," and "Kum Kaleh" is "Sand Fort," "Kaleh Sultanieh" being, as you may see from the introduction of "Sultan," "Royal Fort." "Tepeh" means Hill, and they have in Turkey a place called "Gaba Tepeh," or as we would say "Shapeless Hill." "Shehr" is the Turkish word for "Town," and "Eski Shehr" is "Old Town," while "Yeni Shehr" is "New Town"; and I believe these two words are used so often in Turkish geography that the students of it become quite bewildered when learning it. "Hissar" is the name for "Castle," and "Eski-Hissarlik" is "Old Castle Town" as "lik" means place. "Burun" means "Cape," and "Dereh" means valley; "Koj" means "Village" and the word for European is "Rumili." There are a large number of these words given in the article where I saw them; but I think those I have told you about will be enough for you to remember at one time.

Now I'm going to tell you about a city called Petra which was known in the time of Moses, and which has, it is believed, been visited by eight American travellers only. At one time about 500,000 people lived in Petra, but for fourteen hundred years nobody knew about it in the civilised world; and so it is now called "The Lost City." It is built in a colossal gowl of pink, and its palaces, temples and tombs are carved out of solid rock; and some of its carvings are 6,000 years old. But to-day it is inhabited by about thirty people only, who are half-clothed and half-starved, and indeed almost half-beasts. They live in temples and palaces, but are most miserable, and they keep a few goats and do a little trade in the desert with the caravans. It is in the neighbourhood of "Petra" that the children of Israel are supposed to have lingered for twenty years when they were on their way from Egypt to the Promised Land. In Petra, there is a beautiful building known as Pharaoh's Treasure House, where Pharaoh is supposed to have hidden much treasure. The word "Petra" means rock, and the rock city seen from the hilltops is said to glisten in the sunlight and its cliffs and peaks seem to be gigantic prisons of pink spplire, but are found to be honeycombed with "buildings" carved in the rock. To get to Petra it is necessary to go along the "sik" a three-mile rent in the rocks of the bowl, not more than two or three yards in width, and beyond the "sik," in the desert is a spring, which supplied the people with plenty of water, even for baths and swimming pools. Fancy these in the midst of the Arabian desert! It has an altar, and an amphitheatre—so the people evidently had their religious rites and ceremonies and their games. But the drifting sands of ages are slowly covering the rock of ages; and it is possible that the city of Petra may remain forgotten by man, and be only a memory in history. But what an unique spectacle it must be, don't you think so, my dear Lilliputians. I wonder if any one of you will one day visit Turkey or Arabia, and even perhaps the rock city "Petra." I had meant to tell you about how the bees change the nectar they gather from flowers into honey; but that must keep until next week, otherwise your brains will refuse to assimilate so much information at one time. So I say goodbye for this week while sending you another story to read.

With love from

EGERIA.

THE ORIGIN OF THE AEROPLANE

The story this week is about the man who studied the birds and pointed the way to the aeroplane. Indeed you will admit that he was the pioneer of "flying"; and the French people—themselves masters of the air—call Louis Mouillard the father of aviation although he never flew.

Mouillard was a theorist. It is admitted to-day that his theories were sound, although he never put them into achieving form. Mouillard wrote two books: "The Empire of the Air" and "Flight with fixed Wings." Only the first of these works appeared during his lifetime, and that had a small circulation. But he pointed the way to fly, and ten years after his death the Wright brothers, following principles he set down, proved that he had solved the problem.

Mouillard explained that to seek to fly by imitating the beating of a bird's wing was error; that, instead of trying this impossible feat, man should imitate those birds which soar with steady wings and avail themselves of air currents. If Mouillard had possessed money there is little doubt that he would have demonstrated his theory, as it has been successfully proved. The life of this remarkable man seems, on superficial view, to have been a failure. But his compatriots, recognising his real worth, set up a monument to his memory at Heliopolis, Egypt. He died in 1897. The story of his life is pathetic.

Mouillard was the son of a dyer of Lyons. From boyhood he was fascinated by the flight of birds. He managed to buy an eagle, which he secreted in the family garret and studied with an avid interest whenever he could escape from his books or work. He watched the bird's movements, measured its wings and studied it with infinite pains. And when he had mastered the secret, with the aid of his admiring sisters, he built an aeroplane with cotton and corset bones and determined himself to fly.

Going to a hill crowned with a church, with a sheer cliff on one side, the young inventor was about to trust himself to his contrivance, when the beadle rushed at him, boxed his ears, confiscated his machine and sent him home in disgrace. This was the only attempt Mouillard ever made to fly, but his studies on the subject never ceased.

He showed such aptitude at drawing that it was decided that he should make his living by this talent. He won a scholarship and, going to Paris, studied under Ingres. Yet while he drew and painted his mind was always on flight. He would climb the towers of Notre Dame, watch the startled birds take flight and study their movements.

Mouillard's father died, and his artistic career suddenly closed. He went to Algeria as a colonist and made a failure in that, but the birds again were his teachers. He noted that the sea birds rose, turned and flew against the wind without a movement of their wings. He weighed the bodies of the strongest, calculated wing space and advanced in his theories toward the truth.

Castig about for a vocation, for he was poor, Mouillard secured a place to teach drawing at the Polytechnic school at Cairo. Here he had another opportunity. He would study the vultures of the desert, and almost daily he sought them inland. He finally called the vulture "the master of flight," adding: "In the perfection of the result and the simplicity of the movement, their flight is so splendid that it overcomes the watcher. Every time you look at it you are amazed that none has tried to reproduce it. It is so simple, so exactly what we want. What could we ask more than that steady flight and those immense circles which carry the bird into the heavens. They are all our desires realised." By degrees he formulated his theories of air currents. He observed that birds rose and hung motionless and moved without beating their wings. He ruminated on the air forces caused by the rising of hot air from the desert and their effect on the flight of the birds. He had solved the mystery.

Stricken with illness, Mouillard could no longer teach drawing. He managed to publish his "Empire of the Air," knowing its scientific value, and to reach Paris, where his theories were well received. The Society for Aerial Navigation made him a member, but no one was ready to advance him money for a practical demonstration of his theories.

Discouraged, Mouillard returned to Cairo, where he acted as cashier in a shop, his wife being employed in another place. They together earned but little. By degrees he finished his work on "Flight with Fixed Wings." Just before his death Chanute, the American, corresponded with Mouillard on the subject of aviation. It is said that from Chanute the knowledge passed to the Wrights. But ten years before they had conquered the air Mouillard died.

Now you ought to understand what "theories" are after reading this; and don't you think it would rejoice Mouillard's heart if he could see Garros, for instance, performing some of his wonderful feats with his machine?

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

War has its influence on women's dress in Paris, and the "Times" states that the silhouette of this winter's Parisienne is quite charming, in spite of the sober note which is the rule. A very small hat in a modified form of a Belgian military cap, the khaki service cap, or the Glengarry bonnet, worn with a veil shaped like a half-moon. A coat buttoned up to the throat and full in the long basques, a straight, short skirt, and the very neatest of shiny boots with high antelope tops. Fur is worn as a high collar behind the ears or in the form of a wide stole, which looks like a small hearthrug.

In leap year it is said that a woman is given the right to propose to the man she loves. How is it she came to have this privilege some of us may ask? Well, its origin is to be traced back long ago to the 13th century. For it was about that time that the Scottish Queen Margaret was ruling over that country, and during her reign a very extraordinary Act of Parliament was passed. This Act gave every woman in the land the liberty "to speak to the man she likes." Not only so, but if the man refused to take her to be his wife, he was to pay £100 or less, according to his position, unless he could prove that he was engaged to another woman.

WOMEN SPIES AND THE WAR

The Press Bureau in London has warned us that spying by women is playing a large part. Women spise have been caught, and secret female agents have been found at railway bases observing entrainments and detrainments. During the great battle of the Aisne, a woman was caught in a village signalling to a German patrol by means of an electric flash lamp from a window. No little satisfaction has been expressed by French and German officers on account of the capture of a certain woman motor spy who had provided invaluable information to the Germans. This woman, who is extremely pretty, travelled about in a powerful car driven by an Italian chauffeur, and was furnished with passports and papers bearing the forged signatures of General Joffre and Lord Kitchener. She was ultimately caught not far from Verdun, and will probably stay in prison until the end of the war.

Germany relies very largely on its women spies in war and peace. They adopt all sorts of roles. There is the professional beauty, who uses her charms and powers of fascination to worm secrets from foreign admirers. The domestic servants, the seemingly innocent proprietress of a small café, sweet shop or millinery establishment, the barmaid, the governess, the teacher—all are engaged whenever possible in Germany's secret service, and are paid according to the information they are able to gather.

Some of these women, the prettiest and most fascinating, are furnished with the means of setting up luxurious establishments in the principal cities of Europe and spreading the net for indiscreet attachés and military and naval officers.

"I believe you were trapped by a woman who is the agent of some foreign country. Because I believe that, I am going to show some sort of leniency for you; but it cannot be much—the crime is too great," said Mr. Justice Darling in sentencing a gunner in the Navy to four years' penal servitude for communicating naval secrets to a foreign Power.

This gunner made the acquaintance of a woman at a music hall, and immediately became one of her most ardent admirers.

In May sensation was caused in Berlin by the sentencing of Rosa Langstein to two years and six months' penal servitude for admitting betrayal of military secrets.

A Bohemian by birth, she was employed as a lady clerk in business houses in Frankfort, Berlin, and other cities, and, being in need of money, endeavoured to raise it in Hamburg, Cologne and Paris by espionage.

At the end of 1912 she endeavoured to sell Austrian military secrets to the French and German Consulates in Berlin. Ultimately she made the acquaintance of a dockyard locksmith in Hamburg, who stole and gave her drawings of some machinery in a German warship. One of her letters fell into the hands of the German police, who enticed her to Cologne by means of a trick and there arrested her.

Germany also had a shock last year when it was discovered that a beautiful young woman named Marie Petersen, who had been living at Kiel, was really a French spy. Occasionally a teacher of languages, she had made use of her great beauty to entrap a non-commissioned officer named Dietrich, connected with the German explosives department. So madly in love was he with her that when she told him she would have to leave him unless he helped her he gave her plans of the situation of mines in certain ports and the formula employed in making Germany's smokeless powder. But Marie brought suspicion on herself by the fact that, although she was supposed to be earning her living by teaching, she always had plenty of money and wore beautiful jewels. Inquiries were made by the authorities, and the whole plot frustrated.

BRITISH WOMEN'S PATRIOTIC ASSOCIATION

The monthly meeting of the Association was held on Thursday morning last at the Plaza Hotel, Mrs. James Dey in the Chair.

The two pictures donated by Mrs. Corry-Smith to be raffled for were won by Mrs. Boadle and Mrs. Jewell with numbers 23 and 75 respectively and realized $200 for the Officers' Families Fund.

Mrs. Boote organized a raffle for a fruit dish which had been donated by an English firm and was won by Mrs. H. Russell with No. 138.

Mrs. C. S. Edye and Miss Stubbs have undertaken to organise at the Plaza Hotel on the afternoon of July 31, an entertainment consisting of tableaux vivants, etc., in aid of the Officers' Families Fund. Details will be announced later, and in the meanwhile the date should be noted and kept free.

A vote of thanks was passed by the meeting to Messrs. Kidd and Co. for printing circulars in connection with the Cinema entertainment at the Petit Palace organised by Mrs. Boas.

The result of the cinema entertainment was $730 for the British Red Cross Fund.

The Bridge Tournament arranged by Mrs. Pearson at the Plaza Hotel was another successful function and resulted in $708.40 being handed over for the benefit of the Officers' Families Fund.

The same Fund benefited to the extent of $231.20 as a result of the Bridge afternoon held by Mrs. Boote.

The proprietors of "Misterio" cigarettes will shortly announce details of a competition which should appeal to a large circle and by which the patriotic funds of the Association and the Missions to Seamen will jointly benefit.

PATRIOTIC WORK IN URUGUAY

LETTER FROM THE FRONT.

The following letter has been received by the Hon. Secretary of the Uruguayan Patriotic Fund:—

June 4, 1915.

Dear Sir,—I had the pleasure of meeting Jack Masters the other day and in course of conversation he mentioned that he had received a letter from you in which you asked very kindly for all of us. He and Byrne are the only members of our party whom I have had the pleasure of meeting since we arrived in England, and now that we are on active service, the chances of meeting any of the others are very remote although I am eagerly looking forward to the day when we shall all meet again and be able to exchange experiences.

Since writing you I have transferred into the Royal Field Artillery, and should you want to communicate with me, please address your letter as follows:—C. Battery, 46th Brigade, 14th Light Division, British Expeditionary Force.

I take the opportunity of thanking you for your offer of assistance either to myself or dependents, but I am glad to say that I have everything I need excepting that if it is at all possible you might have some South American cigarettes forwarded. We do miss them here.

Again thanking you for your offer, I remain, yours respectfully,

P. M. CALLENDER.

No. 88731.

The sum of £241.14s. 9d. has already been remitted to the Over-Seas Club Tobacco Fund from Uruguay through the Patriotic Fund. In addition to this considerable sums have been forwarded from private parties and institutions in Uruguay. Steps are being taken with a view to having the volunteers from Uruguay provided with South American cigarettes.

BELGIAN RELIEF FUND.

About 140 cows have been donated and $600, Uruguayan gold, subscribed in response to the appeal which was made by the Uruguay Patriotic Committee, up to the present. As many as 15 cows and 12 cows have been individually donated by British and native estancieros. Camp sub-committees are now actively working specially mapped out zones throughout the country.

RAILWAY WORK FOR WOMEN

GERMANY DENUDED OF MEN BY THE WAR.

Paris, July 12.

It is reported from Lausanne that on the German railways the work of keeping rolling stock and stations clean, and the loading up of goods, is being done by women.

The Brandenburg Chamber of Commerce has opened an office for the registration of primary schoolboys and students who are willing to work as farm hands in getting in the harvest.

The Basle newspapers state that German soldiers whose families are living in Switzerland write home complaining of insufficiency of food at the front and asking for provisions to be sent.

Ladies' Work Competition

IN AID OF BRITISH WOMEN'S PATRIOTIC ASSOCIATION AND MISSIONS TO SEAMEN GENEROUS OFFER BY 'MISTERIO' CIGARETTE MANUFACTURERS

(To the Editor)

Sir,—We the undersigned on behalf of the above mentioned Societies, should feel greatly indebted to you if you would make known to your readers and the public generally, through the medium of your very valuable columns, the details regarding "A Ladies Work Competition" which is being organised for the benefit of the funds of the above institutions.

The nature of this competition is as follows: Special arrangements have been made with the Manufacturers of the "Misterio" cigarettes who offer various cash prizes to a total of $500 c/l. for the best designed articles in which shall be employed for their decoration the silken emblems and coats of arms as at present given away in the 30 cent packets of the "Misterio" cigarettes.

The inaugurators of this competition propose to have a special stall at the "Fancy Fair" to be held on the 1st. and 2nd. of October, at Prince George's Hall, where will be exhibited all the work sent in, which will be disposed of by sale or auction.

To the total proceeds realised from this stall, the Manufacturers of the "Misterio" cigarettes, have very generously offered to add as a gift a further $500 c/l. and then the grand total thus obtained, will be divided in two equal parts and presented to the funds of the two Societies referred to.

Full particulars can be obtained from any one of the addresses appearing at foot.

With regard to the $500 prize money, we should like to point out that it has been agreed that the donors shall have the right of reducing this total sum in such a form as they may decide in the event of there being less than two hundred (200) entries with the corresponding work sent in for the competition. On the other hand, the gift of $500 c/l. for the Societies, will not be affected by the number of competitors.

We would like to call the attention of competitors to the following points:—

1. Every competitor should give notice in writing of her intention to enter for the competition, at the same time giving an address to which communications can be sent.

2. Should a competitor be desirous of not disclosing her identity, she is free to enter under a nom-de-plume.

3. Specimens of the silk Coats of Arms and Emblems, as well as samples of the methods in which they can be employed for decoration purposes, will be placed on view in different parts of the city.

4. No article will be eligible for a prize, if less than 30 silk emblems shall have been employed in its decoration, those used however, need not be all different.

5. Each of the Emblems and Coats of Arms of the series to be used, are made in eight different colours. In order to assist competitors who may be working on a colour scheme, arrangements have been made for facilitating exchanges which can be effected at the Show Rooms of the Compañia Nacional de Tabacos, Avenida de Mayo 961.

6. The closing date for sending in the work, will be announced in due course.

7. The list of the prizes (given that the minimum number of 200 entries are received and their work sent in) are as follows:—

1st	1 prize of $100	$100
2nd	1 " "	75
3rd	1 " "	50

TELEGRAMS TO THE SOUTH.

LINES IN ORDER TO COMODORO RIVADAVIA.

The latest information from the southern districts of the Republic state that but little progress has been made towards repairing the telegraph lines, which were so badly damaged during the late heavy fall of snow.

Communications have been re-established up to Comodoro Rivadavia, but past this point it has been found impossible to repair the lines. Every effort is being made, and it is stated that the end of the present week will see communications fully re-established.

WEDDING

KIERNAN — MacCABE.

An interesting wedding took place on July 7th, in the Parish Church of Belgrano, when Miss Bridget Kiernan was united in holy matrimony to Mr. John B. MacCabe, of Acevedo. The church was beautifully decorated, and brilliantly illuminated.

The bride wore a handsome dress of white silk with trimmings of Irish lace, and a lace veil with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley. She was given away by her cousin, Mr. Patrick Byrne, Mrs. Patrick Byrne acting as "Madrina" and Mr. Thomas MacCabe as best man.

The officiating clergy were the Rev. Father Nicholas MacCabe, brother of the groom, assisted by the Rev. Father Victor, and after the wedding ceremony a Nuptial Mass was celebrated with orchestral and choral accompaniment. In conclusion, Father Victor, in eloquent and well-chosen phrases, addressed a short discourse to the newly-wedded pair, expressing his satisfaction that they had chosen to be wedded in the morning, according to the full ritual of the Catholic Church, and adverting somewhat critically to the prevailing custom of getting married at night.

The wedding breakfast offered by Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Byrne, was held in the Confleria Carlos Pellgrini, in Avenida Cabildo, and was attended by a numerous and joyous party of friends, by whom an excellent menu and enjoyable music were duly appreciated.

Mr. and Mrs. John MacCabe left the same evening for a destination understood to be Cordoba.

The presents were numerous and handsome.

SCANDAL IN MISIONES

SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST THE GOVERNOR.

The Governor of Misiones Territory, Colonel Lopez, is accused of grievous crimes and misdemeanours,—that is to say: A journalist at Posadas publicly accuses His Excellency of usurpation of authority, falsehood in a public document, malversation of funds, (anglicé, Theft) and annexation of property belonging to the State, and finally of the fault which is so popular in some states that it is scarcely a crime, wholesale cattle lifting. The charge terminates with an imperative call upon the Federal Power to inflict condign punishment upon the guilty. These accusations are very explicit and exceedingly serious. They may be unfounded but, so public a charge demands an investigation so that if true the offender may be properly dealt with and if false that the slanderer may be choked with his own falsehoods. It is pointed out that the Government of Misiones cannot, with dignity continue to brook these attacks and that if it does not notice them, it will be necessary for the Central Power of the Nation to step in and enquire out the truth or otherwise, of the allegations.

VIOLET ASQUITH ILL

London, July 13.

The eldest daughter of the Prime Minister, Miss Violet Asquith, whose engagement to Mr. Asquith's private secretary, Mr. Bonham Carter, was recently announced, is laid up with typhoid. It is believed that Miss Asquith must have contracted the malady during her recent visit to Egypt.

OBITUARY

MR. LANCELOT H. BAKER.

Great regret is felt at the death of Mr. Lancelot H. Baker, which took place yesterday afternoon in the British Hospital as the result of a very short but severe attack of pneumonia. Mr. Baker was in charge of the ferro-concrete constructions on the New Port Works under Messrs. C. H. Walker and Co. Although quite a young man, he had already distinguished himself in his profession, and his loss will be sincerely deplored by all who knew him.

MR. E. GRAHAM DEWEY.

The death of Mr. E. Graham Dewey at the British Hospital after a long illness creates a gap among local journalists, although the deceased gentleman had not recently taken an active part in his profession owing to health failure which induced him to resign his post of night Editor on the Standard about a year ago. He was exceedingly well known and popular, and was a remarkably well informed man. He was a native of Boston and had experience of newspaper work on the "New York World" and in London. Subsequently he acted as Local Correspondent of "The Times" and "Daily Telegraph." He married about three years ago, and leaves a widow and one child.

MR. WILLIAM H. R. NICHOLSON

Yesterday morning, after a painful illness, Mr. William Harris Rule Nicholson died at his residence, 3113 Calle Rivadavia, at the age of 68 years.

His death removes another member of a large family which for so many years has formed a prominent and honoured part of the British community, and it is only just over a fortnight since his sister, Mrs. Adela N. de Casá, passed away.

Mr. William Nicholson for the past twenty years occupied a Government post as Inspector of "Impuestos Internos," where his services were highly valued, and for some time he was a Director of Messrs. M. S. Bagley and Co., Ltd.

For a considerable period he had charge of the music at St. John's Church (now the Pro-Cathedral) and in his younger days took an active part in the Buenos Aires Glee Club. But Don Guillermo's name will doubtless be most closely connected in the public mind with the post of Hon. Musical Director of the Buenos Aires Choral Union which he so ably conducted for many years and where he made so many friends both on the committees and amongst the members; all those who have taken part in performances under his baton, whether of Oratorio, Cantatas or Comic Operas, will always remember him with warm affection.

In the year 1906, he found it necessary to retire from the arduous duties connected with the Choral Union, and on that occasion the committee and members took the opportunity to present Mr. Nicholson with a handsome album with their signatures attached to a dedication, expressing their esteem and appreciation for his unselfish and successful work for the Society in presenting the Oratorios "Messiah" and "Elijah," comic operas "The Mikado," "Pirates of Penzance," "Geisha," "Gondoliers," "Pinafore," "Yeoman of the Guard," "Runaway Girl," "The Sorcerer," etc.

Mr. William Nicholson leaves a widow, and two married and three single daughters, besides several brothers and sisters, to whom "The Herald" proffers sincere sympathy.

The funeral will leave 3113 Rivadavia at 10 a.m. to-day for the Chacarita cemetery.

THE TENNYSON TRAGEDY

Murder by a Peruvian

CRIME DUE TO JEALOUSY AND DRINK

Details are now to hand of the deplorable occurrence on board the Tennyson, briefly referred to last week. Mr. Cooney was an intimate friend of the Ives family, and his frequent conversations with them and with Miss Gertrude Ives appear to have given the greatest umbrage to Cesar Bravo, formerly Peruvian military attaché at Washington, who desired to pay his attentions to that lady. It is not stated that Miss Gertrude Ives had encouraged Bravo in any way. She and her parents were returning from Buenos Aires to their home after a tour. Bravo, on whom the beauty of Miss Ives seems to have made a strong impression, became savagely jealous of Mr. Cooney, and while the steamer was lying in Bridgetown Bay, Barbados, the Peruvian's savage temper prompted him to actually open threats. On July 3 after his pretensions had been rebuffed, he had the insolence to say "Don't dare to land at Bridgetown to-morrow with Cooney." Nevertheless the family naturally went ashore next day with that gentleman, the Peruvian "caballero" remaining sulkily behind. Mr. Cooney is said to have observed "Bravo is annoyed because I said I would not drink with him." Miss Ives replied that Bravo was no gentleman. At 6.30 Miss Ives was walking the promenade deck with Mr. Cooney when the Peruvian, who had been drinking, rushed out of the smoke room, and seizing the arm of Miss Ives, dragged her violently away. Enraged at this piece of disgraceful and drunken violence, Mr. Cooney struck him a severe blow. The Peruvian reeled, but recovering himself burst into a laugh and darted into his cabin. He had resolved on murder. In his berth he took another drink and armed himself with a savage .38 automatic pistol. Hastening along the deck he found Miss Ives and Mr. Cooney still commenting on his outrageous behaviour. It is indeed a pity that he was not put in irons at this point, for without a word the brute raised his pistol and fired twice at the terrified girl, who fled and was miraculously unhurt. Mr. Cooney bravely attacked the armed assassin and a desperate hand to hand fight ensued; both fell upon the deck fighting fiercely. Unhappily Bravo was able to fire again, and his bullet lodged in Mr. Cooney's brain, killing him instantly. Alarmed by the shots, the watch came running along the deck and it became evident even to the Peruvian officer and gentleman that his game was up. He shot himself through the body. He was carried to the hospital, but died there the next day. Captain Symons, of the Tennyson, is said to have stated that Miss Ives looked upon Bravo with an indifference that bordered on repugnance, and he appears to think that Bravo was not normal, he having been injured in an explosion some years ago which had affected his nervous system. He bore deep malice towards Cooney for refusing to drink with him, and is said to have shouted as he fired the fatal shot "Take that, that will teach you to drink." He seems to have been an offensive and dangerous lunatic. General sympathy will be felt with Mr. Cooney's family and friends.

MORAL AVELLANEDA AGAIN

Drunken and Obscene Police

HOW A DETECTIVE DISCHARGED HIS DUTY

Avellaneda, which its Intendente assures us is noted for virtue, has recently had the misfortune to suffer much depreciation as to its police. There were seven burglaries in one night and nobody captured. It was suggested that the police might be either reorganised or abolished. After reading the under-noted, many will agree that something of the sort is necessary. Last Friday night, a policeman and a detective determined to vary the dry course of duty a little, and proceeded to get very drunk; the record says beastly drunk, but, as they could speak, this seems unjust to the beasts. To show what they could do when inclined, they raised Hades in an almacén at the corner of Roca. Having exhausted their extensive vocabulary of swearing foul language and obscenity, they drew their pistols and fired in various directions, evidently just "to stir up" the neighbourhood and let the people know what the Guardians of Law and Order were like. By this time they felt quite brave, and unsheathing their cutlasses ran valourously down the streets, dealing fore strokes and back strokes, thrusts and down cuts at all and sundry, including walls and lamp posts. This disgraceful exhibition of the class of armed ruffians who "police" Avellaneda and protect its dens of infamy, has caused great indignation, and it is hoped that the Provincial Government will stop this kind of thing once for all. But will it? The Provincial Government is singularly blind, deaf and feeble sometimes, and its record in this direction is not encouraging.

SHOT THREE SNIPERS

TESTAMENTS IN THE TRENCHES

An interesting letter, dated June 9, from "Somewhere in France," has been received from the brother of a well known Buenos Aires business man. Writing to his mother, he says:—

Just a few lines to let you know that I am all right. Just about ten minutes ago I saw and shot three German Snipers so we shall be a little quieter tonight. I got each one first shot. They were all in different places. I was very glad to get the Parish Magazine and with regard to the article at the end "Is it worth while to supply the troops with Testaments and do they ever read them?"—after our attack the other night I came across one of our men dead, and in his hands he held a Testament. He had evidently been shot in a fatal spot and was reading his Testament before he died. You can tell (Rev.) John Powell this and also tell him to write to me in answer to my letter to him. Nothing new. Love to all. Ever your loving son.

LLOYD GEORGE AND HALDANE

PREMIER STIFLES DISCUSSION IN THE COMMONS.

London, July 13.

More questions have been put in the House of Commons which were designed to bring about a discussion on the munitions controversy and the differences between Mr. Lloyd George and Lord Haldane; but the Prime Minister has firmly declined to satisfy the inquirers, pleading that such discussion, under existing circumstances, would be detrimental to the best interests of the nation.

HUNS IN URUGUAY

Object to Bastille Celebrations

FOREIGN MINISTER'S EXPLANATION

Montevideo, July 13.

To-morrow, the 14th instant, being the anniversary of the taking of the Bastille, the Uruguayan Chamber of Deputies has voted the day a holiday as usual, the arrangement of the festivities being placed in the hands of the Foreign Minister.

This action has given great offence to the German community of Montevideo, who have entered an energetic protest against it on the grounds that such celebration would be a breach of neutrality.

The Foreign Minister has explained that it is a simple question of celebrating a great historic event, and there is no intention of wounding German sensibilities; but the explanation has not assuaged the wrath of the Germans.

THE TAKING OF THE BASTILLE

CELEBRATION AT THE AMERICAN CHURCH.

The American Church Hall celebrated last evening in a lecture and in a most interesting display of pictures, the anniversary of the taking of the Bastille. The hall was filled to its utmost capacity when the Rev. Charles J. Turner rose to give his lecture. "Vive la France!" With these opening words the lecturer traced some part of the history of Paris. From the year A.D. 52, when they had their first fight against Labienus, Julius Caesar's first lieutenant, and in the days when the Parisian capital was named Lutetia, to more recent and modern days, the history of the capital of the French Republic was touched upon. Mr. Turner remarked upon the defence made by Camulogènes, of the Clovis founded monarchy, spoke of the second siege in 885, and of those which were to follow in the subsequent years of 1411-29-65, and those in the sixteenth century down to the German invasion of 1870.

"Sovereigns die and sovereignties, how all dies and is for a time only, is a Time phantasm, yet reckons itself real," and again "The siege of the Bastille weighed with which—in the historical balance—most other sieges, including that of Graytown, are gossamer cost as we find in killed and wounded some 83 persons on the part of the besieged"; thus in the words of Thomas Carlyle was the taking of the Bastille dealt with in a most appreciated lecture.

Some seventy odd views were projected on the screen during the lecture, views of Paris, Brussels, Tours, Lyons, Bruges, Antwerp and Ostend, and one of especial interest, that of Rheims Cathedral. Mr. Turner's audience were delighted with all they heard and saw.

The programme of celebration was continued with a series of cinematograph pictures, amongst which was the famous Edison picture "Who goes there?" The others included "The Twin Lovers," "The Signal," "Between Two Fires" and a humorous projection called "Poppy."

The whole entertainment was a great success.

AMBASSADOR ATTACKED

British Diplomat's Adventure in the States

ARRESTS LEAD TO DISCOVERY OF BOMBS

New York, July 13.

A sensation has been caused by the announcement that the British Ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, has been the object of an attempted assault while travelling in a motorcar with Mr. Peirpont Morgan.

All is known at present is that some men tried to stop the car, but the chauffeur refused to obey their orders and continued his progress at full speed.

The police are making active investigations and have arrested several suspicious characters. One result of their search has been the discovery of several "caches" of explosive bombs.

A guard of detectives is watching the British embassy to prevent a repetition of the attack.

STRENUOUS NEUTRALITY

LOUISVILLE'S OPINION OF HERR "DURNBERG."

As a model of style, compression, and "fierce neutrality," we reproduce the full text of the principal leading article which appeared in the "Courier Journal" of Louisville on Sunday, May 16. It runs as follows:—

The Herr Doctor Durnburg's room is better than his company. If an honest man he was a most mistaken man: if merely an organiser of the German colony in America, and an agent of the German Spy System, he was the enemy, not the friend, of his countrymen in America. He could help no cause. He has greatly hurt the cause of Germany. Let him go and be damned to him, and now, as ever, to hell with the Hohenzollern and the Hapsburg!

FRUIT FARMING IN SAN LUIS

AN APPEAL TO THE MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE.

The population of Nogoli, in the Province of San Luis, have approached the Minister of Agriculture, Dr. Calderon, through their National Deputy, Sr. Pastor, with a view of obtaining the assistance of the Government in the development of the fruit growing business which it is considered desirable to foster and increase in that locality.

They request the Ministry of Agriculture to found in that district an experimental station for the purpose of stimulating and assisting in the formation of fruit farms.

It is claimed that both the climate and the soil could not be more suitable for the purpose, and with development could supply at moderate prices all the demands of the Federal Capital. They also request the Ministry's assistance in the arrangement of reasonable railway freight on the Pacific railway. In order that the Government will more favourably view this request, Señora Fermina A. de Ceballos has offered to present the Ministry of Agriculture with 200 hectares of irrigated land for a site for the experimental station.

Dr. Calderon has promised to study the matter and to consider the offer made by Sra. Ceballos. At the same time, through Sr. Pastor, he expresses his thanks for a gift which will be of great assistance to the development of the project.

BEING OURSELVES

More about Organisation

By ARNOLD BENNETT

Said "The Times" on June 7:—"What they want—if we may attempt in one sentence to define the popular attitude towards compulsion—is to volunteer their service in whatever direction the Government require it, and to submit to the enforcement of that service with the willingness with which a boat's crew obey their 'coach,' or a cricket or football team their captain."

Conscription is dead once more, but apparently more than that has happened. The leading member of the Northcliffe team now proclaims that compulsion should only follow upon volunteering. That is to say, before the citizen may receive orders which are not to be disobeyed, he must voluntarily offer himself. The State must not take him by the scruff of the neck as a preliminary to setting him to work. Here is a notable advance which beautifully shows that the Northcliffian mind is not entirely closed to the logic of popular fury and indignation. It is true that copies of the "Daily Mail" can not be burnt until the price of them is in Lord Northcliffe's pocket; nevertheless the resentment of a nation is not good for dividends, and Lord Northcliffe, so famous for his intimate sympathy with the working man, has quickly perceived the fact.

THE CITIZEN AND THE STATE.

The suggestion of "The Times" means two things. It means, first, that the duty of a citizen is to volunteer. Secondly, it means that the citizen, having volunteered, shall do what the Government asks, where, when and how the Government asks, at the price which the Government fixes. If the citizen wants to choose his own work, or if he wants to name his own price, the thing becomes a farce. Equally, if he wants to set his own principles of action against the Government principles, the thing becomes a farce. Volunteering is the first step, and the second step is self-sacrifice, an abnegation of one's individual prosperity and notions for the welfare of the State, because the welfare of the State is the condition precedent to individual prosperity. All this is quite clear. And, indeed, Lord Northcliffe, under various formulæ, has been preaching it to the working man throughout the war.

Unfortunately, a vast number of un-Christian people entertain a doubt whether the excellent Lord Northcliffe cares 2d. about the welfare of the country, and whether he really believes that the welfare of the State is a condition precedent to his individual prosperity. Lord Northcliffe announces himself maligned. He can prove his sincerity and spartan the world by a very simple act. Let him place the "Daily Mail" (I would not ask for all his papers, but only for one little specimen of the multitudinous tribe)—let him place the "Daily Mail" at the disposal of the Government. Let him say to Mr. Asquith: "In so far as regards the 'Daily Mail' I volunteer my service in whatever direction the Government require it. I will submit to the enforcement of that service with the willingness which," etc., etc. The Government represents all three political parties, and the "Daily Mail" could be extremely useful to the Government, even if it only left undone the things which the Government desires it to leave undone. Some sacrifice might be entailed, but certainly less—or not more—than Lord Northcliffe has for many months past been demanding from the working man.

Do you see Lord Northcliffe thus proving his sincerity? It will not have escaped your notice that in "The Times" Lord Northcliffe is careful to say "what they want," not "what we want."

THE MESSAGE OF THE "DAILY MAIL."

Far from behaving to the Government as a member of a boat's crew behaves to a coach, Lord Northcliffe has spent much of his time in catching crabs, with what consequence to the boat's speed we all know. Voluntary enlistment was the policy of the late Government; it was the policy of every previous Government, Liberal or Conservative; it is the policy of the new coalition Government; it is the policy of the nation. Part of the machinery for obtaining voluntary recruits is newspaper advertisement. Lord Northcliffe, utterly unable to prove that voluntary enlistment is a failure, but determined to destroy it if he can, suddenly closes one of the principal advertisement mediums to the Government. (Why a War Official, armed with copies of the Defence of the Realm Acts, did not step into the "Daily Mail" building on that famous day and remark quietly: "Either you print the Government's advertisement or you don't appear to-morrow," I have never understood.) Lord Northcliffe does not give notice. He does not wait until conscription is in force or on the way thereto. He does all in his power to stop voluntary enlistment before any other system has taken its place. He says, in effect, to men in the trenches: "Unless the Government will consent to get soldiers in a manner different from the manner in which they got you, the 'Daily Mail' will do, the 'Daily Mail' is already doing, whatever it can to prevent reinforcements from reaching you." Such is his message to the army in Flanders; such is his method of proving the patriotism which his newspapers are for ever bawling, and the sincerity of his exhortations to his fellow-citizens.

NATIONAL PRODUCTION.

As regards the cry for organisation, the first preliminary to any new process of organisation should surely be to ascertain exactly where the organisation exists. To read the Northcliffian Press, one would imagine that all the war-workmen had stood idle during the last ten months and simply refused en masse to make high-explosive shells. Whereas the indisputable and officially-admitted fact is that the great majority of war-workmen have worked with magnificent industry. Some productiveness has undoubtedly been lost through drink and through the traditional mistrust which separates masters and men. But the percentage of loss is small. I doubt whether, if the whole nation had been federal and Trade Union rules had been wiped out, the total productiveness would have been increased by ten per cent.

The major fault lies, or lay, somewhere in the War Office. I would not underestimate the work accomplished by the officials of the War Office, whose industry and devotion has been stupendous. The War Office has improved; it is immeasurably and marvellously better, thanks to Lord Haldane, than it was during the Boer War. But it cannot yet be acquitted of a lack of business capacity; that is, of a lack of organising power. The course of public events alone demonstrates this. The War Office has not only wasted labour over the wrong kind of work; it has refused labour, and on no mean scale. Firms, and many firms, both able and anxious to produce for the War Office, have not been allowed to produce, except after astonishing delays. The War Office can justly plead excuses for the fact, but the fact remains. The War Office is now being reorganised. It would be well to test the effects of reorganisation before entrusting it with such a gigantic and such a dangerous device as compulsion for war-workmen.

THE WAR-WORKSHOPS.

Mr. Lloyd George's speech at Manchester was to me less convincing than his speeches usually are. The national peril was over-stated, and the sincerity of the whole thing was not so brilliantly apparent as usual. I am sure of this—that if the Government attempts to introduce compulsion in war-workshops before it nationalises war-workshops, there will be trouble which may jeopardise the completeness of victory. I am so sure of this that I am quite ready to prophesy definitely about it. There will be a very serious row. However, I credit the Cabinet with enough political sagacity not to do more than talk about such an attempt. If the war-workshops were taken over, either formally or informally, by appointing accountants and confiscating all profits beyond a given percentage, then I think that the State might assert itself without much risk of publicly humiliating Britain before the world.

But personally I am not at present in favour of the nationalisation of war-workshops. If it be asked: "What are you in favour of to meet the crisis?" I reply that I am in favour of acquiring skill in the use of the existing tool, rather than of trying to reshape the tool. I say also that the crisis is due primarily not to the tool but to the users of the tool, and that measures have been taken to deal with it. And I say further that, though the workmen (who are the tool) are not more perfect than any other human beings, nevertheless the eternal endeavour to shovel all the blame for everything on to the workmen makes me sick.

ORGANISE OR GERMANISE.

A witty writer in "The New Statesman" last week pointed out that when certain people say "Organise, organise, organise," they are only mis-translating "Germanise, Germanise, Germanise." It is very true. How ridiculous to imitate the forms of German activity when it is against our natures to imitate the spirit of German activity! Different nations have different qualities, and though out spirit is not the same as the German spirit, I apprehend that it is at least as fine and at least as effective. How idiotic to multiply tenfold the work of a Government which already has more than it can efficiently do! Nothing could be worse than a national organisation inefficiently administered. And for a national organisation efficiently administered two factors are necessary. We possess neither of them. The first is the traditional first-class power to organise nationally, and the second is the desire to be organised. Britain, just as it is the home of individual freedom, is the home of private enterprise. All the great deeds of British social history have been done by private enterprise. And, by the way, nothing but British private enterprise in trade stands between us and the economic exhaustion of one or more of the Allies at or before the end of the war. Choke private enterprise in Britain, as you must choke it if you obey the Northcliffian behests, and you will produce not a Teutonic machine but chaos, not victory but a miserable truce.

OUR BUSINESS NOW.

If we strive to be ourselves instead of striving to be Germans, there is a much greater chance of our remaining ourselves after the war, as we wish, and a much smaller chance of our being transformed into the Teutonised receptacles of German culture, as we don't wish. What we now have to do is to exercise our genius for compromise—called by the inept "muddling through." We have to initiate reform in high places before initiating it in low places. We have to persuade instead of flagellating. We have to take our faults one by one and cure them separately and individually, rather than experiment wholesale with desperate remedies which are entirely unsuited to our race. The greater part of us—quite as large a percentage as in any other country whatsoever—are sound, capable and industrious. With these men, and the productiveness of the United States completely at our disposal, we ought to be able to perform our appointed task. Assuredly if we do not succeed thus, we shall not succeed by listening to the crazy counsels of fools who cannot see beyond their noses, and adventurers who have only one aim—self-aggrandisement.—London "Daily News."

BRITAIN'S MUNITIONS CONTRACTS

SUBJECT TO CANCELLATION WITHOUT NOTICE

London, July 9.

The "Daily Mail" has published a letter which states that the contract imposed by the Government on Messrs. Morgan and Co. is subject to cancellation by the Government without notice.

All products purchased under contract in the United States are to be shipped to Woolwich Arsenal for firing tests, and payment of accounts will be subject to the results of the tests being satisfactory.

LABOUR AND CONSCRIPTION

THE TRUE SIGNIFICANCE OF COMPULSORY SERVICE

BY W. C. ANDERSON, M.P.

Some there are who look upon conscription as the remedy for everything in warfare, whether an insufficiency of high explosives or a failure to smash wire entanglements. To many others, who do not carry their faith to these lengths, conscription seems the only remedy for the "slacker." "Why should this shirker be exempt when better men are fighting and dying in the trenches?"—they demand fiercely. But the vivid contrast is merely a decoy—the eyes of the conscriptionist are elsewhere. For the genuine Algy would make in different fighting material, and no steam hammer would be needed to crack that particular nut.

With the gospel, ardently proclaimed in new and unexpected quarters, that every man has an obligation to render service to the State (using that phrase in its widest significance), that no man should be allowed to eat bread in idleness, there will be ready and general agreement in Labour circles. It is a lesson which the Labour and Socialist movement long and patiently preached to deaf ears. It was the motive-power behind the right-to-work demand, since it is plain that if the individual has duties toward the State, the State has also duties toward the individual. And the demand was violently resisted by the very people who now insist that the safety of the realm depends upon it.

THE CURSE OF IDLENESS.

Thousands of young men from rich homes have been cursed by their life of useless, extravagant idleness, the poor have been cursed by their poverty; but when Socialists urged that the national life should be organised on better lines, that all should have opportunity to render faithful service, that none who shirked their obligations should claim by right a place (often a chief place) at the national table, the plea was dismissed as the disordered dream of an impracticable visionary. In the strain of a terrible war, this disordered dream, like a good many others, has suddenly become the acme of practical wisdom and inspired statesmanship.

Search out the slacker by all means and deal with him. Impress upon him that he will not be permitted for the future to gorge at a feast to which he contributes nothing. Tell him that if he will not work, he will no longer have the power to command others to work for him. All that is a very different thing either from military service or military law in workshop and factories. If a man goes of his free choice into the trenches, we should do all in our power to see that he is justly treated, his home kept together, his wife and children adequately provided for; but to treat men like sheep, to rob them of their right to decide to drive them against their will, practically at point of the bayonet, into the firing line, is to descend to a form of militarism as vile as anything bred in Prussia, and would be a strange outcome of a war undertaken, it was understood, for the purpose of destroying militarism.

NATIONAL PRODUCTION.

Apart from this, we should look in vain to the vital industries of this country for any considerable stream of conscript soldiers. From the mines 217,000 men have flocked to the colours; from the railways, 72,000; in agriculture labour is so short that farmers are falling back upon children of school age; every branch of industry, every branch of the Civil Services has furnished its quota of recruits. Of the men who remain at work, young and old are toiling harder and longer to compensate in some degree for those who have gone away. The sickness records of the trade unions indicate that many are breaking down under the strain—among railwaymen, for instance, there is an increased rate of sickness of 10 per cent. So far as the working people are concerned, these charges of slacking and shirking do not apply.

Of course, there are exceptions; if numbers of men are degraded and demoralised over long years by casual employment, by spells of enforced idleness, by periods of pauperism and charitable doles, by bad housing, insufficient food, and vile, adulterated intoxicants, it is supreme folly to expect that they will miraculously rid themselves of the past and its evil consequences and rise to a height of noble citizenship because the country is involved in a tremendous war.

If conscription will do so little on the military side, and will be attended with so many dangers and difficulties on the industrial and financial side, why is it being so hotly pressed? On that point there is, I think, no room for doubt. Conscription would form part of a scheme for placing the entire population under military control, and in these quarters in which, unfortunately, public opinion is largely manufactured, it is widely believed that a taste of martial law would be an excellent thing for the working people who in view of the enormous rise in the cost of living and the huge war profits appropriated by certain interests have been restive about wages and conditions.

THE POWER BEHIND CONSCRIPTION.

Let there be no doubt as to the inner meaning of the new campaign. In "The Times" of Monday, May 31, "Our Military Correspondent" makes it clear that "the principle of personal, disciplined, and obligatory service is even more vital in the factory than in the ranks," and proceeds to urge that "we must deal as harshly with strikers who throw down their tools as with soldiers who desert in the field, and it is only by applying to all the principle of personal obligation to serve the State that we can take powers which will enable labour at home to become as disciplined as labour in the field." It is impossible to miss the meaning of so plain a statement.

In the same issue of "The Times" "Coal Exporter," writing to complain that the Welsh colliers at certain pits took the usual three days' Whit-sun holidays, says, "To me it is inexplicable why compulsory service was not brought into force many months ago, and martial law for all workers in any way connected with Government work." Another correspondent, who appears to write feelingly, urges that "the payment of blackmail under the euphemism of war bonus should be made illegal, and those who demand it should, if eligible for service, be marked off for the first lot to be taken."

It is just as well there should be no misunderstanding as to what these people mean by their fine talk about "national service." Many of us believe in national service, but we do not believe in industrial enslavement. We are anxious that strikes should be avoided during the war, and we are certain they can be avoided, but not by the application of martial law to the factories. That way lies disaster.

CONSPIRACY TRIAL IN INDIA

PLAN FOR A GENERAL RISING

A remarkable story of a determined, but utterly futile, effort to subvert British rule in India has been unfolded in the first trial at Lahore by Special Commissioners under the recently passed Defence of India Act. Eighty-one persons were indicted for conspiracy with the object of waging war against his Majesty and overthrowing by force the Government established by law in India.

Amar Singh, an approver, stated that after studying mechanical engineering at Lahore he joined his father, who had emigrated to Canada, in March, 1909. He worked in a saw mill at St. John, New Brunswick, with other Indians, and from Thakur Das, a workman who joined the mill later, they heard that Har Dayal—a former Oxford student, well known as an active seditionist—was at San Francisco. They invited him to St. John, paying his travelling expenses, and on his arrival in May, 1913, he lectured to his fellow-Indians on "Unity, liberty, equality, and human rights," and collected money from them to start the notorious Gadhr (Revolutionist) paper. Accompanied by the witness and others, Har Dayal visited many towns where Indians lived, in prosecution of the propaganda.

The Gadhr began to appear weekly in November, 1913, the staff working at first without remuneration, and Gurmukhi and Gujarti editions subsequently appeared. In March, 1914, following on proceedings for his deportation started by the Immigration Department, Har Dayal left for Switzerland, but other Indians continued to produce the Gadhr.

SEDITIONARY DOCUMENTS IN THE SEA.

When the attempt of Gurdit Singh to force an entry of 400 Indian labourers, brought by the Komagata Maru, into Vancouver contrary to law failed, and they had to return to the East, the Indians at St. John, to use the approver's word, "thought it a good chance to return with them to demand our rights, and if necessary to use force." They visited other places, and at a meeting of 5,000 or 6,000 Indians at Sacramento "it was thought, and it was said, that as the war had broken out in Europe and the troops from India were serving in the war, it was a good chance to demand their rights." The witness was one of a party of 70 Indians who sailed from San Francisco on August 29 last for Hong-kong, en route for India.

Parties of Indians landed at various ports with a view to seditious propaganda among Indians, and they were active among the Indian sepoys stationed at Hong-kong. With other Indians, making a total between 250 and 300, they left that port in the Tosha Maru on October 14 last. At Singapore, said the witness, they landed by resorting to a dodge, and tried to poison the minds of the Indian sepoys there. They stopped at Singapore for three days, and their steamer took on more Indians. (It will be recalled that the mutiny of the 5th Indian Light Infantry there broke out on February 15.) Throughout the voyage there were inflammatory speeches and recitations.

The ringleaders threw into the sea seditious documents they had amongst their baggage, as they expected to be searched on arrival in the Hooghly. It should be remembered in this connection that as the majority of the passengers were working-class people returning from the vain endeavour of Gurdit Singh and others to force an entry for them to Vancouver, the repatriation from the Far East onwards was carried out largely at the cost of the Government of India. The deplorable riot which broke out amongst the party when some of them suddenly fired on the police on arriving at Budge Budge and finding a train waiting to conduct them to their Punjab homes will be recalled.

A RISING IN THREE PROVINCES.

Amar Singh gave details of the activity of the ringleaders after reaching the Punjab, and of efforts to seduce the Indian troops in Lahore, Umballa, Meerut and other cantonments. A general rising in the Punjab, the United Provinces and the North-West Frontier Province was fixed for February 21, one of its features being an attack on the Lahore Cantonment (Main Mir) arsenal. Emissaries were sent in all directions a week in advance, but on February 19 suspicion fell on one Kirpal Singh who had arranged to go and excite the troops at Main Mir. A party of the conspirators was surrounded at a house in Lahore, and the conspiracy was frustrated.

In the intervening months since their arrival, the conspirators had resorted to dacoities (robberies by armed bands) on a large scale to secure funds for the revolution, and it is understood that this action went far to alienate the support on which they were reckoning. Here and there in the evidence, as far as it is available, there are indications of German encouragement. Thus a second approver, Mula Singh, in corroboration of the evidence of Amar Singh, stated that on the return journey he stayed at Shanghai with an Indian from Amritsar, who gave him six automatic pistols and 600 cartridges, saying that a German friend had given these for use in India.

The evidence has borne out the statement of Mr. Bevan Petman, who has charge of the case for the Crown, that the revolutionary conspiracy was for the overthrow of British rule by the following means:—

(1) The seduction of Indian soldiers from their allegiance to the King-Emperor, and to cause them to mutiny and to join in rebellion and to furnish arms and munitions;

(2) The collection of arms, men and munitions, and also money for the purchase of arms and munitions;

(3) The obtaining of money for the same purpose by means of forcing and robbing Government treasuries, and by dacoities, necessarily involving the murder of police and other officials who interfered with the carrying out of the conspiracy;

(4) As soon as the rebellion started, the murder of all civil Europeans, the wrecking of trains and railway bridges, a sudden attack on and the killing of all his Majesty's European troops;

(5) The production and circulation of seditious literature, the delivery of seditious speeches, and exhortations to the rebels.

The desperate character of some of the ringleaders is illustrated by the fact that Nadham Singh, a returned emigrant, who was one of the absconding accused on being tracked and arrested in the Ludhiana district, stabbed one of the policemen who effected his arrest. He was armed with a large double-edged dagger.

The voluminous reports of the proceedings before the Special Tribunal given in the Indian papers are prepared by the official reporter and approved by the President, unauthorised reports being prohibited.

Palestine is a poor country, and its population does not exceed 500,000. The Jews number only about 50,000, most of whom would only be too glad to get away from it. The Jew is a shrewd, smart business man, and, like other races, only settles where the conditions of life are better than in Palestine.

TE AGUILA ES EL MEJOR

COMMERCE & OFFICIALDOM IN ARGENTINA

THE IMPASSABLE CHASM

In the recent speech of the American Ambassador delivered after the annual Fourth of July banquet considerable stress was laid on the similarity between the conditions ruling in Argentina and in the United States, at any rate in so far as government is concerned.

Though criticised in certain quarters, the remarks hold true in their broadest sense, especially when it is borne in mind that it is an ambassador's duty to make himself agreeable to the residents of the land whither he is accredited. But in everyday life the simile between Argentine government and that which prevails in the land of the Stars and Stripes is very far-fetched, especially when matters commercial are in question. Year by year the Argentine people are allowing their popular representation to fall into the hands of a privileged caste, and the politician to-day is usually a term synonymous with a Doctor of Law who has from his youth worked and studied solely in the hope of obtaining a greater or lesser share in the affairs of government.

In the majority of cases these representatives are not even practising lawyers, nor have they ever had any direct contact with the world of affairs. Estimable in many ways, and theoretically chock-a-block with schemes and ideas that are to revolutionise the local world; they cannot perhaps be expected to pay too much heed to the suggestions or complaints of the merely commercial man, who, besides, is always suspected of having his own axe to grind. Hence it comes about that far too many legislative measures of the first importance are placed on the statute book despite the fact that they are calculated to work out very unfavourably for the general trade of the country, and even for the particular section thereof which it is the honest desire of the legislators to assist. It is not necessary to specify any concrete case at the present moment. There are sufficient examples in view for the average man to be able to pick and choose for himself, probably in his won line of business. It is the lack of practical knowledge, rather than the spirit that is at fault, and for this very reason one regrets that Congress cannot have included among its ranks some practical business men.

It is becoming clearer and clearer every day that despite good harvests and other advantages, the official situation of Argentina becomes more perplexing day after day. Far from it being merely a question of getting sufficient funds together to meet the current expenses, that is one of the least important problems looming on the horizon. The two articles briefly paraphrased in these columns under the heading of "Public Opinion" both contain within the facts they mention the germ of very serious economic trouble, trouble that cannot be met by enunciating theories gathered from the schools. No-one knows what the year 1916 may have in store for this or for any other country, broadly speaking. What we do know in Argentina is that if nothing unforeseen happens here, the country will be plunged in the throes of a Presidential election. That issue is at present occupying almost the whole time and thought of local politicians, but, important though it undoubtedly is, the most casual acquaintance with the practical matters of everyday finance and trade in this country is sufficient to show that circumstances may arise which will overshadow even the august event implied in the selection of a new First Magistrate.

THE ESSENCE OF THE CONTRACT

UNTIMELY AGITATION AGAINST MORTGAGE RIGHTS

INADVISABILITY OF A MORATORIUM

The aftermath of the great crisis through which Argentina has been passing for over two years is now being harvested in pain and sorrow. Inflation has been pricked, nay, gashed, by various instruments, the European war being but one thrust among many, and land values, blocks of buildings, rents, and various other matters connected therewith, are literally at rock bottom prices. So much so that to-day much property, both urban and rural, is put up for auction without eliciting a single bid, despite the fact that such property is as a rule only offered because it carries a mortgage that is overdue, and that the reserve is calculated judicially on the mortgage valuation of the estate concerned. It is a sad situation for the unfortunate property owner in almost every case; it is none too pleasant for the grantor of the mortgage; whilst almost invariably it is disastrous for the confiding person who has been prevailed upon to lend money on the security of a second mortgage, since his chances of getting even a part of his money back are nil.

Yet these unfortunate circumstances ought not to be allowed to invalidate the sanctity of a legal contract, which is what an evening contemporary, "La Razon," would fain see brought about. In a recent issue it arrived at the enormous total of $250,000,000 of hypothecary debts now before the courts, and calls upon the powers that be to stay execution until such time as it may suit the borrowers to pay. Be it said at the outset that one is not much afraid of a successful campaign being carried on in favour of any such measure; the handling of Argentina's affairs since August last prevents any fear of that sort. Still, the fact that such proposals can be brought forward by a journal having a large following is of itself warrant for setting forth the other side of the question. Expediency, if we may believe the pseudo-economists of the evening press, is the only test of the inviolability of a contract. It was not expedient to pay up many mortgages due a twelve-month ago, they were therefore renewed. The extension has almost run its course; let them therefore be renewed once more. Why should the proprietor lose his possessions because he has borrowed upon them to the last cent. securable, and has spent the proceeds on unproductive assets such as buildings or ornamental parks, or, as is frequently found to be the case, on luxurious living that leaves no asset at all behind it save a fleet of costly motors and a comprehensive knowledge of the fastest European pleasure resorts?

Given the enormous number of Doctors of Law that decorate every section of Argentine society, one would imagine that even "La Razon" would be informed as to the antiquity of the act of mortgage. Roman law is most precise on the incontestability of the rights of a creditor save by payment of the stipulated debt. In its earliest form the Roman mortgage actually was a conveyance of the property pledged to the creditor, and if for any reason the creditor retained the pledge and refused to accept payment when same was tendered the original owner was compelled to bring an action at law in person, giving full proofs of title. This point might be laboured much further, and at the same time the different variants that have been adopted to meet local requirements might be discussed, but this would be beside the point at issue which is simply this; there is no country in the world where a duly drawn up mortgage, free of all fault in the title and executed without chicanery on either

BIG SUBSCRIPTION BY SANSINENA CO.

Among the subscriptions toward the British War Loan received locally by the British banks was one of £10,000 taken up yesterday by the Sansinena Company, one of the biggest meat concerns.

It is reported that substantial sums have been subscribed generally to the loan from local people.

HUSBAND ARRESTED

BRUTAL ASSAULT ON A WOMAN.

Had it not been for the intervention of some neighbours, a murder would have been committed yesterday afternoon in a house in Calle Andes 181. Part of the house is occupied by a waiter named Jasé Montilla a Spaniard aged 24, and his wife, also of the same nationality, aged 27.

For some two months Montilla has been out of work, and his wife has been earning their livelihood by domestic work. Ultimately he proposed that she should go on the streets for the purpose of earning more money. It was her persistent refusals to do so that led to the brutal assault upon her yesterday afternoon in which she nearly lost her life.

The cries of the woman for help attracted the attention of some passers-by, who ran to the corner of Andes and Cangallo to seek the help of the police. Montilla, who was arrested, preserves a complete silence and has been taken to Comisaria No. 9. The woman, in view of the serious nature of her wounds, is now lying in the Clinical Hospital, under the care of a doctor of the Asistencia Pública. Dr. Llavallol has the matter in hand.

STEAMER IN COLLISION

OSCAR II. REPORTED SUNK OFF NORWEGIAN COAST.

Intimation is reported to have been received that the steamship Oscar II., of the Johnson Line, has been in collision with another vessel off the coast of Norway, and has sunk.

The vessel left Santos with a cargo of 49,000 bags of coffee. No information is to hand concerning the safety of her crew.

part, can be set aside by the State without a direct violation of the law merchant. Therefore to talk of a special moratorium extending over a considerable period for hypothecary obligations is foolish, and at the same time prejudicial to the best interests of the Republic. Bear in mind that it is not argued that any questionable act or treatment accompanied the granting of the loans to which the mortgages relate. Given the fact that there are properties which will not realise the bare mortgage value itself, but a half or a third of the estimated value put on the land when the operation was concluded, it would be almost as reasonable for the grantors to turn round and ask the Government to indemnify them for such loss as they may sustain through taking over estates that to-day do not represent the amount of their original loan. This may appear a reductio ad absurdum, but the principle is the same. Government in any state must uphold the law justly. It cannot, save at the cost of its reputation, wrest the law to the advantage of one party or another among the citizens. Were this not so, then the phrase, "legally binding" would be meaningless. And nothing in the negotiation and transfer of property has hitherto been looked upon as so completely and legally binding both parties in view of a possible contingency as does a mortgage.

THE ARGENTINE LOAN

AMERICAN BANKING COMMENTS.

In a leading article the "American Banker" deals with the recent Argentine loan—a consolidation of outstanding issues—of £10,000,000 for five years at 6 per cent. Time was, says our contemporary, when American financiers were not disposed to invest any funds in Latin-America and when any financial venture like the present loan would find but scant approval in this country. Of course, there was a general desire to develop commercial relations with the southern continent, but this desire did not go to the length of investing money in that part of the world.

It must be noted that this loan is not made for war purposes, but is of a wholly peaceful nature. American financiers are not inclined to participate in European war loans and any attempt to place such loans on this side of the Atlantic is looked upon with disfavour.

But for the war in Europe it is more than doubtful whether Argentina would have placed any part of the present loan in New York City, but would have applied for necessary funds to London alone. For this reason the Argentine loan marks a new departure in American finance and the beginning of an effort to secure the South American trade with this country.

In view of the ready response to the Argentine appeal for capital, it is likely that other South American countries will also come to the New York market with a like object. If this call for financial help from the southern continent meets with a proper response, there is a prospect of a complete revolution in the relations between the United States with the Latin countries and the transfer of the financial centre of those countries from London and the European capitals to New York.

For twenty years prior to Waterloo, England was carrying the financial load of Europe in its effort to crush Napoleon. Similarly to-day, Great Britain is bearing the financial burden of the allies, in the struggle against Germany, and that country is manufacturer, merchant and banker for France and Russia. In this emergency the British nation is not equal to any outside demands and thus the United States succeeds to the South American trade which the European States have been obliged to abandon.

Naturally, Great Britain is not willing to relinquish completely her position in the South American field and for this reason the Government has consented that one-half of the Argentine loan shall be floated in the London market. Reports from London state, however, that only twelve per cent. of the loan was subscribed for by investors, the remaining eighty-eight per cent. being retained by the underwriters.

THE LOST PETREL

SOME WRECKAGE FOUND.

It is now several days since the Brazilian s.s. Santos left Buenos Aires on her voyage to Rio de Janeiro with a cargo of flour and cereals. On nearing a place called Joaringa, on the Brazilian coast, she came upon parts of the vessel Petrel floating in the sea.

The Petrel was also a Brazilian vessel, and disappeared some little time ago on a voyage that she was making to Montevideo. All her crew were reported lost.

The floating hatchway of the Petrel was found some 8 miles south of Joaringa. It is presumed that she became a victim to the storms prevailing at the time of her disappearance, and until this information concerning the finding of small parts of the wreckage nothing has been heard or seen of her.

WIN THE WAR

There is something pathetic, to our way of thinking, about the news received from England during the last day or two, and although we have more than once lately stated our conviction that Britain is at last awake to her peril, and is rapidly organising to avert it, we have our misgivings. Two cablegrams published in our issue yesterday have given us pause. The first referred to Lord Kitchener's speech at the Guildhall; the second to a scandal in political circles over the post of Secretary of State for War. Lord Kitchener's speech we regard as indicating weakness and procrastination on the part of the Government, and the political intrigue revealed over a Cabinet position of first importance, we consider and dismiss as a disgrace to the statesmanship of England.

Lord Kitchener presumably was expressing the opinions of the Cabinet when he referred to the recruiting movement, and the possibility of conscription. Is it possible to conceive anything weaker or more paltering than the conditions under which this possibility was foreshadowed? Britain has relied for her armies upon the voluntary system. It is immaterial for the purposes of our argument to say whether that system is right or wrong. It is necessary, however, to say that it has always been the boast of Britons that they did not need compulsion to do their duty. This boast has been mouthed ten thousand times since war started, and the German system has been abused and ridiculed. Under our voluntary system men have come forward in their hundreds of thousands. It is not the fault of the manhood of the Empire that hundreds of thousands more have not come forward. It is the fault of the very Government speaking through Lord Kitchener, and now chiding that manhood with having failed in its duty. We do not want to go deeply into that fault, except to say briefly again, what we have said a score of times, that had the Government adopted a sane and courageous policy from the first; had it assessed the national danger at its proper value; had it not endeavoured all along to bulldoze the Empire into somnolency, or rather to refuse to arouse it from its slumbers, but had it taken the people fully and completely into its confidence, and given them the truth all along, it would not to-day be wondering where or how it would get the men to make the Empire's cause triumphant.

Still that is not the point. The point is that if voluntary recruiting is a failure, partial or complete, the Government should have enough strength and courage to throw the system aside, and if conscription be the remedy, then introduce conscription and make no fuss, nor apologies about it. To do things; to do them promptly; to do them without consulting every politician and every newspaper, and every individual; to do them because the needs of the Nation demand them, constitute the sum of patriotic statesmanship in a crisis like the present. Fancy the Government which fears the efficacy of our voluntary system for future needs saying:—"It is a failure, and if you do not make it a success, we will introduce conscription?" It is a threat, but about the weakest sort of threat we have ever heard of. You cannot have compulsory volunteering. The very words are contradictory. If the system is voluntary, how can there be any compulsion? If you can compel men to "volunteer," because of a threat of conscription; then in the name of sanity and consistency, why not make conscription a fact?

The British public have been fed on platitudes, and they cannot digest any more. They do not even want to hear about "our glorious traditions of free volunteer armies," because they know that sort of talk will not get us anywhere. They want action, and they want leading. So far they have had very little. In any London newspaper of the last batch received in this country there are to be found letters from all classes of people begging to be shown the way to help their country. They are sick to death of political arguments and of patriotic browbeating, a phrase which accurately describes a lot of the talk emanating from self-appointed saviours of their country. The people know the truth now; they realise the situation, and they are sane and calm and courageous enough to face it. They can accept conscription, which appears to be a bugbear to certain political parties, provided the Government will only say it is necessary, and will have the courage to introduce it. They do not want the thing haggled over in their parliament; they do not want worn-out traditions respected, or political faiths adhered to while the country and they go to their doom. They have the Government, a body charged with the sacred and sublime duty of directing and piloting the Ship of State safely through a terrible war into the haven of an honourable and satisfactory peace. And if the Government wants to introduce conscription; mobilise the workers; hang strikers; nationalise the property of grasping ship-owners; gaul greedy millers and speculators in the people's food, or shoot army contract swindlers, let it do it. The only justification needed for its action, assuming as we do that the Government may be trusted to be fair, firm and straight in all its dealings, is that the cause of the Nation impelled that action.

If Lord Kitchener is the best man for the post he occupies—and it is our belief he is—let him remain there. If he wants conscription let him have it. If private factories are required for the manufacture of munitions, let them be taken. We have said before that in a war of this nature, there is no time for standing on ceremony. Precious months have been lost already. Private interests have no rights, where they conflict with the greater rights of the Nation. This very statement may produce as much argument, as the putting into effect of the principle enunciated would produce, but let those who argue remember that while they argue, and ere their argument be finished, there may be no rights or interests, national or private to conflict. A powerful and capable enemy will have effaced them all. We wish that we had the far reaching voice of a Northcliffe. We would not use it for urging the interests of one man, or many; one party or a group of parties. It would be used to bring home to the people the need for the dropping of all argument, and of all considerations, save the one of winning the war. It would be used through the people to drive the Government on or out. There would be no paltering;

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS

The French infantry have proved experts at hand-to-hand fighting, and have made effective use of all kinds of bombs and grenades in driving the Germans out of their trenches, particularly in what is known as the "Labyrinth," where the trenches and "dug-outs" of the opposing forces run into one another. Our frontispiece shows a French soldier hurling a "bracelet" grenade at a trench 30 yards away. The view of the arsenal and dockyard at Constantinople is interesting in the light of a recent report that a British submarine had entered the port and sunk ships with her torpedoes. The picture of the s.s. Calcutta shows one of the relief ships engaged in conveying food and supplies to the famishing civilian population of Belgium, for which she is guaranteed a safe conduct by the Germans, and is immune from submarine attack. By the drawing given of the fight between a Zeppelin and an aeroplane, a good idea is obtained of the manner in which the late Lieutenant Warneford, V.C., gained his honour, and destroyed a raiding airship. In the other picture the inventor of the Zeppelins is shown with the King of Saxony in the cabin of one of his ships. In the landing at the Dardanelles the Australians and New Zealanders covered themselves with glory. The picture of the foreshore at Gaba Tepe explains why their losses were so heavy. In the thick bush covering the heights which the colonials had to rush, the Turkish snipers found good cover, and poured in a murderous fire on the landing parties. In Flanders the British officers, not actually on duty in the advanced trenches, have made themselves as comfortable as possible in ruined farmhouses. Our last picture illustrates an artist's impression of afternoon tea within range of the guns.

U.S. UNIVERSITY CLUB

FIRST SMOKER OF THE SEASON.

The United States University Club held their first "smoker" on July 8, at the Majestic Hotel.

Mr. R. W. Huntington was in the chair, and the attendance was large, about 80 being present, and Mr. S. A. Haxton improved the occasion to rope in seven new candidates for membership. In the course of the evening Mr. P. P. Phillips related his trip to the Bolivian Andes, and the dance of the Sencomayo Indians as he had witnessed it. Mr. Rodolfo Roth, an Argentine member, referred to his recent visit to the U.S., and the changes he had noticed. Mr. Albert Hale, of the Embassy, spoke on "Optimism," with illustrative examples. Mr. Harold Bingham, who with his one-stringed Hawaiian instrument, has returned on the Vasari, gave some concerted solos on it with orchestral effects, and Mr. Juan B. Sullivan led in the terrifying speciality of College yells.

The initial "smoker" was a great success.

no political intriguing—which at this time means treachery—and no equivocation. There would be consolidation; there would be energy; there would be action; or there would be some one, or several, answerable to the people for the mishandling of a sacred trust. There would be aroused a spirit in the people that would drive the Nation forward and onward, and that is all that is wanted in an Empire like that of Britain, to make it triumph over the world in arms, if that were the dire extremity the Empire faced, which it is not.

OFF TO THE WAR!

THE UNITED CLUB'S FAREWELL TO MORE MEMBERS.

July 10th had been set aside by the United Club as an evening on which to bid good-bye to some of their members who are shortly leaving for the front.

Mr. Wallis acted as Chairman, and he opened the evening with a few remarks explaining that the affair was quite an informal one, and that he would call upon Mr. Blackburn to call the roll of those members who were leaving them to fulfil duty's call.

Mr. Blackburn in a moving little speech did so, and said how he and all their fellow countrymen hoped that they would all do their duty and come back again to Buenos Aires safe and sound.

Mr. Owen then spoke of the past efforts of the Club, and said that they could not really feel sorry to see so few members present, because it was due to so many having left to serve their country, that more were not present. The Club had contributed quite a worthy number to the Empire's forces, and the speaker only hoped that soon they would be welcoming them all back from victory and the fight they were fighting in the cause of humanity.

The members who were leaving were Mr. G. de J. Pegler, L. N. Johnson, A. S. Johnson and E. S. Spain, they leave on July 25. Messrs. Loder and Bleak could not be present last evening as they had already left South America.

Mr. Handley received the best wishes of the Club on his coming departure for Campana, and in thanking his fellow members for their wishes, he said he hoped that he might be able to form a United Club there.

The evening was brought to a close by an informal concert, at which the following artists contributed: Mademoiselle Augusta Drouillet, Mr. Dinwoodie, Mr. White, Mr. Parsons, Mr. Hathaway, Mr. Handley and Mr. Blackburn. Mr. Pegler was at the piano.

The singing of the "Marseillaise" and the National Anthem terminated the concert.

THE IRISH SOCIETY

FAREWELL TO MR. FITZPATRICK

The approaching departure of Mr. J. B. Fitzpatrick, of the Irish Society, to Rosario, is an event viewed with mixed feelings by his numerous friends and fellow members. The latter by way of testifying their regard for the about to be absentee, tendered him a valedictory dinner on July 10, at "The Cabin," 525 Cangallo, which had just opened for business. Some twenty-five members were present, and the dinner served was such as to promise well for the future reputation of the establishment, if an expert knowledge of savoury scents goes for anything. Among those present were Mr. McClenahan, Mr. Ballantine, Mr. Mahon, Mr. Carrol, Mr. McGough, Mr. Fitzpatrick, Mr. Poulton, Mr. Gribbin, Mr. Hamilton-Talbot, Mr. McNally, Mr. Murphy, Mr. McCarthy, and others. The evening was a most agreeable one, notwithstanding the melancholy occasion, and fortunately Mr. Fitzpatrick is not being banished to an immeasurable distance.

The ex-Empress Eugenie, although extremely wealthy, keeps but a very small household, and does little in the way of entertaining. In her grounds at Farnborough, in Hampshire, is the mausoleum where her husband and her son are buried, a spot which she visits every day when she is at home. The ex-Empress gives largely to charity, and is extremely popular.

CONCERT AT THE COLISEO IN AID OF STRANDED ARTISTES

EXCELLENT PROGRAMME : MODERATE SUCCESS

the Teatro Coliseo, on July 10, when the Teatro Coliseo last evening, when the concert in aid of the stranded operatic company was given, under the patronage of the British Society and the British American Benevolent Society, and the excellence of the programme was certainly worthy of a crowded house, although at the beginning the numbers seemed to be slow in arriving before the curtain. The two artists, Mr. Cynlais Gibbs, and Mr. Furness Williams, gave evidence that at least the misfortunes of the company were not due to them, for they sang delightfully, and the audience testified to their enjoyment by undeniable applause for encore items, which were graciously granted. The "star" performer was undoubtedly Signorina Saggese (from the Coliseo), and her beautiful singing was provocative of unbounded enthusiasm, which brought the lady back three times, and lastly she charmingly sang a ditty to her own accompaniment. Signora Galli-Curci (from the Colon) was also the recipient of unbounded applause, and she responded to the recall with that graciousness so usual to all great artistes. Madame de Mello and Mr. Cynlais Gibbs were encored for their duet, "Miserere" from "Il Trovatore" (Verdi), the lady again giving evidence of the possession of a beautifully trained voice, together with that artistic sense which gives so much pleasure to her hearers. Mademoiselle Helen Chalot was recalled after her harp solo, and she kindly gave another selection on that tuneful instrument. Mrs. Rolanda Harding sang "There is a land" so pleasingly that an encore was expected and given; and Mrs. Jesse Pamplin sang a stirring patriotic song on the theme of Belgium's crucifixion as an encore to her number on the programme. Mrs. H. R. K. Richards is always sure of a warm welcome when she appears on the concert platform, and she gave a demure Quaker song very daintily; and in the second part she and Mr. Ramus amused with a duet, "In Society." Mrs. A. H. Davis contributed a violin solo, and Mr. Hubert Waldron, in addition to carrying out the duties of stage manager, gave the stirring recitation, Lord Tennyson's "The Revenge." The dances by "The Great Raymond Trio" were also heartily appreciated and repeated. The arduous duties of accompanying the various numbers were shared by Miss Lucy Gordon, Mr. Griffiths, and Miss Beatrice Mackinnon. The lack of space forbids a lengthy and detailed report of a truly excellent concert, but it is necessary to express gratification at the success, comparative though it was, of the efforts made to assist the artistes who have had such an unfortunate experience in a strange country. The whole idea of organising the entertainment bespeaks a cordial and practical sympathy on the part of the two societies, and considering the short time available for the compilation of the programme, the results are excellent. The kindly action of the Societies found generous support among the artistes both resident of and visiting Buenos Aires. The following is the programme:—

Song, "Nirvana," (Adams), Mr. Cynlais Gibbs.

Song, "I like your apron and your bonnet," Mrs. H. R. K. Richards.

Violin solo, "Ellentanz," (by David Popper), Mrs. A. H. Davis.

Song, "Che gelida manina," "La Boheme," (Puccini), Mr. Furness Williams.

Song, "Aria dei gioielli," (Gounod), Signorina Saggese (from the Coliseo).

Recitation, "The Revenge" (Lord Tennyson), Mr. Hubert Waldron.

NUEVE DE JULIO CELEBRATIONS

TE DEUM AND MARCH PAST

Preparations for the martial parade of yesterday had begun in the small hours, for the sound of bugles and drums could be heard at 3.30 on Friday morning. At 12.15 p.m. they made ready for the Te Deum in the Cathedral. The President arrived at the Casa Rosada about one, in the State coach, with an escort of the Horse Grenadiers. By this time the troops taking part in the ceremony were in position under the command of Brigadier-General Ramon Jones, with Colonel J. E. Belloni as Chief of Staff. Dr. de la Plaza, with the Cabinet Ministers, Judges, High Military and Naval Officers, representative Deputies and Senators and numerous other gentlemen left for the Cathedral, walking through lines of troops, who presented arms while the trumpets sounded fanfares, and the regimental bands played a general salute. Very large crowds had assembled in all the streets, debouching in the Plaza de Mayo, which were held by strong forces of police. The Archbishop, Monsieur Espinosa, conducted the Te Deum of Thanksgiving, which was highly impressive, and the President and his entourage then returned to Government House, ascending to the balcony before which the troops marched past. There were present the Naval School and the Cadets of the Military College, then came a brigade of Marines, followed by a long column of infantry, comprising the 1, 2, 3, 4 and 7 Regiments, and the 1 regiment of Engineers. The Horse Grenadiers, the 2 and 8 Regiments of Cavalry, the 1 and 2 Regiments of Field Artillery, and the 1 Howitzer Battery formed an imposing display. The line extended right up the Avenida beyond Callao, and the march was pursued through the Plaza de Mayo, Avenida Saenz Pena and along Florida, to Santa Fé. Both the physique and military bearing of the troops created a very favourable impression, and the men stepped out smartly.

The illuminations, if not quite so profuse, are not noticeably less, and are certainly in better taste than on former occasions. The blue and white searchlight combination, forming the national colours, was decidedly striking. At Plaza Congreso also there were some imposing effects of red fire. Yesterday morning 4,900 school children assembled at Plaza Constitucion, sang the Himno Nacional, and sang the Salute to the Flag, with the aid of a military band. Altogether the celebration went off very well, and compares quite favourably with those of former years, both in impressiveness and enthusiasm. The array of flags has been remarkable, and was of immense variety in colour and nationality.

Song, "There is a land" (Allitsen), Mrs. Rolanda Harding.

Song, "Aria," Signora Galli-Curci (from the Colon).

Duet, "Miserere," "Il Trovatore" (Verdi), Madame de Mello and Mr. Cynlais Gibbs.

Song, "Vesti la giubba" (Leoncavallo), Mr. Furness Williams.

Song, "Siete, Signor," "Los Hugonotes" (Meyerbeer), Mr. Jesse Pamplin.

Harp solo, "Impromptu caprici," (Btseiser), Mlle. Helen Chalot.

Song, "La fors e lui" (Traviata), (Verdi), Madame de Mello.

Dance, "The Great Raymond Trio."

Song, "O tu che in seno agli angeli" (Verdi), Mr. Cynlais Gibbs.

Duet, "In Society," (Lehar), Mrs. H. R. K. Richards and Mr. R. E. Ramus.

Wise Guy: "Ever see a close race?"

Utter Nnt: "Sure! I spent three months in Scotland." — "Columbla Jester."

BELGRANO ANGLICAN CHURCH

SOCIAL GATHERINGS. PRELIMINARY MEETING.

A meeting was held at St. Saviour's Parish Hall, on July 10, under the Presidency of the Rev. F. O. Spanton, to take preliminary steps towards the inauguration of a social gathering in connection with the church. Considering the raw and unpleasant character of the night, the attendance was good. After some discussion a concrete proposal emerged and a committee of eight ladies and gentlemen, including the Chairman, were appointed to carry out the intentions arrived at. These will act as an executive and reception committee. On Tuesday, July 20, therefore it is decided and resolved that it shall be a conclave, with appropriate joyful noises if necessary, and with the fearful delights of card tables, ping pong, and possibly music. Nor are these the limits, but merely a rough sketch or crude outline of what is proposed. The hour fixed is 8.45, and further particulars will be furnished later. Those who come are invited to bring their friends, as this may form the nucleus of the new organisation, and a good attendance is desired, but it will not certainly be necessary to go out into the highways and hedges (the latter non-existent), as the proposed gathering shows every sign of being a success. It is still called only "a gathering," as it is felt that no undue haste need be shown in sticking on a label until a brilliant inspiration comes along. Therefore, remember July 20.

BARKER COLLEGE, LOMAS

FIRST BIRTHDAY PARTY

Miss Constance Jones, the Principal of the Barker College, Lomas, gave a successful entertainment to her pupils and their parents in the afternoon and evening of July 9. Some 120 children were present at the afternoon's entertainment and thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Games were the order of the afternoon. An excellent dance programme was assured by having Miss Lucy Gordon at the piano. After the first supper interval, Mr. F. F. Bideleux delighted his listeners with a rendering of "Sympathy," the inevitable encore following, "The Yeoman's Wedding Song."

Miss Jones was enthusiastically acclaimed at the end of the proceedings by both visitors and pupils, and everyone was anxious to know if there was a possibility of a repetition. With the pupils, so keen to lend their best services, there is every probability for an encore in the near future.

COMPLAINTS OF THE SUBTERRANEO

LONG WAITS AND WANT OF TRAINS.

According to the afternoon Press, the Subterranean has become so great a favourite with the public that there is considerable difficulty in obtaining accommodation. Apparently the changing of cars at Caballito is the principal source of trouble. Severe criticism is levelled at the Tramway Company because at this point, where large numbers of passengers are obliged to wait for quite considerable periods, no Waiting Room nor even a shelter from the weather has been constructed, and presumably none such is in contemplation. It is further declared that women and children always get the worse of it in the daily scramble for seats on the trams, which only the rude and the pushing obtain. This latter seems to be an evil felt in every large city and to be chiefly remedied by the inculcation of better manners.

A RECORD LOTTERY

269 PERSONS SHARE ONE TICKET

The drawing for the $50,000 lottery in Montevideo has resulted in a record. The winning ticket, so it has been discovered and reported, is divisible by no less than 269 persons.

It appears that there is in the Uruguayan capital a club of persons in humble circumstances, who periodically subscribe towards the purchase of lottery tickets, and it is this club which has won the first prize. In all they subscribed for twenty tickets. The win of each number represents a little more than $180.

CINDERELLA AT BELGRANO A.C.

Last evening the first Cinderella of the season took place at the Belgrano Athletic Club, and was in every way an unqualified success. That it was well attended need not be said, as no less than fifty-five couples took the floor. This is a most gratifying result, and is likely to be continued, as these pleasant reunions are to be held on the first Friday of each month. The exceedingly reasonable charge of $2 per ticket is made. Most of the British families of the locality were represented, and an excellent programme of dances, 10 up till 12 p.m., and 3 extras after, was played by Mr. Huppler, whose time and rhythm left nothing to be desired. As to those who opine that at present we should sit at home howling, rending our garments (an expensive folly at present), and mixing ashes with our luxuriant locks, let them remember that "a merry heart doeth good like a medicine," and that if some things are black, "there is no need to rush out and buy a pot of black paint and put on another coat," wherefore it is well to be merry and wise, and an occasional Cinderella does good to all concerned and harm to nobody.

BANFIELD CRICKET CLUB

DANCE AT THE ITALIAN HALL.

The dance that was held on July 8 at the Italian Hall, Banfield, and organised by the Banfield Cricket Club Committee was a merry and an enjoyable affair and what is much to the point, was a successful function.

Many athletic clubs have suffered from the fact that so many of their members are loyal to their King and country, more loyal than they are to their club and amongst those clubs to be hard hit by members leaving them, is Banfield. Furthermore their exchequer was somewhat depleted in another way, although this accident was also due directly to the war. Banfield C.C. had arranged a concert at the outbreak of the war, which had, of necessity to be postponed indefinitely. At the same time arrangements had gone so far, that, financially, the Club could not draw back and the expenses had to be met. Due to this and to the reason that so many of their best members have left them, the club are organising one or two dances and entertainments to assist in swelling their funds. This was the purpose of the dance last night and the exchequer was appreciably augmented.

It was a wholly enjoyable dance and quite a number of local people were present and the efforts of the committee in their excellent organisation were highly appreciated.

Until the war Belgium, with a population of 7½ millions, was one of the most densely populated countries in the world.

Sports and Pastimes

PALERMO

An almost complete reversal of the form seen at Palermo on Thursday and Friday last, especially on Thursday, was that displayed on Sunday afternoon. Favourite after favourite got home, and in the three races in which this did not occur, the actual winner was by no means an outsider, but was the recipient of fairly strong support. In spite of this, it is doubtful whether the public had a good day, prices were very short, and it was difficult to make money, and the result of the last race took away much hard earned profit.

The course was just on the heavy side, but not sufficiently so to upset form, and its only effect was to add a second or so on to times.

Canora had not the slightest difficulty in annexing the Classic Necochea, and simply ambled in two and a half lengths in front of Floripar, with Diamant a good last. There was nothing whatever to interest in the race, and no necessity to memorise it for future events.

The Premio Alcalá resulted in another win and a lucky win for La Loca. It was only on the post that she managed to get her nose in front of Solicitud, who was all out to win. The verdict was a difficult one, and the head that La Loca won by was indeed a short one. Jolie Fille ran third, but Swallow was a great disappointment.

The two year old race for fillies was won comfortably by Alfana from Obela and Brisca, and this result was an exact reproduction of what the book advised. Pausa, the debutante filly, never showed up at all from start to finish, but should be watched on a lighter course. Obela actually ran the best race of the fillies and it is doubtful if Alfana had not got away first, whether she would have won. Obela was quite a good distance behind all the way round, until she challenged and then she came along strongly and well, wearing down the leader, but the time was poor. Brisca finished a good distance behind the leaders.

Avanti and Leonidas IV, the favourite for the colts' 1100 metre sprint, were beaten in the hollowest fashion by Valenton, the third favourite. He walked away with the race from the very start.

Moderato ran fourth, which was not a bad performance on the whole, although he was some five lengths behind the winner. The start of this race could have been greatly improved, and the event being over so short a distance, this was of all the greater importance.

Shark made no mistake, whatever, when it came to the running of the Premio Alberdi. A length and a half separated him from Alisio second, with Visto Bueno about an equal distance further off. Shark won very easily. Javert made no effort, and Etchechurry was sitting up in his saddle turning round looking where Domodossola, Entrevero and Company were, and this when only 100 metres from home. Of course, he lost ground, and made no run at all. Being on the rails, unless one had been especially attentive to this horse, the incident could have passed unremarked.

The Premio Two Step, when followed the Classic, was the most open event of the day. Inspector and Last Reason shared the honours of being strongly backed, especially the latter. Cheap was not far behind Inspector in this respect, but although so well on the book at the weights, he was not greatly fancied on account of a doubt as to how young T. N. Fernandez would handle him. This point was soon settled, Cheap won without too much difficulty from Redentor and Inspector. The favourite Last Reason being dead last.

Redentor put up a fine race, and after his fourth the other day, it looks as though he is now in good enough form to win if wanted. The favourite ran a poor race.

The Premio Conejo showed that Picacero is the good colt we have always thought him, and the public have at last tumbled to it, although some few were foolish enough to look round for something to beat him. Of course there was very little "stuff" in the race, but what little was the winner made hopeless hacks off. He won by lengths in an easy canter. The interest in our minds lies in this. After Packoy's wonderful race against Ocurrancia, it should be an interesting meeting between him and Picacero, when the time comes. Of course, if Packoy repeated his performance there is little doubt about the result, but will he? And is there any other colt, bar Siete y Medio, who can compare with these two? We shall see. But we know in which box to buy tickets when the distances increase.

The last race of the day went to Facundo III, who claimed his second successive win thereby.

Podesta utterly failed. Rotterdam put up a good race and ran strongly. The winner was only a fourth fancy. As for Folleto, we firmly believe he ought to have won if properly handled. At the start he was kicked, we were further informed he bumped the rails in the run, but this we did not see, but what was apparent was that Folleto, as usual, came too late and could only finish third, albeit only three-quarters of a length behind the winner.

After weighing out Folleto was bleeding badly from the mouth. We make no suggestions whatever as to the reason for this, but in our opinion Folleto properly handled and ridden for home at the proper, instead of at the improper time, would have won, whether with or without a bleeding mouth, is not the point.

This latter is summed up in the result. Folleto ran third.

Facundo III, paid the best price of the day, in returning $16.50 per winning ticket.

LA PLATA

The meeting at La Plata on Sunday provided some excellent sport and good dividends. The course, however, was heavy and times were bad.

Majadero had an easy win in the first event, but was beaten a length when he turned out again a few races later, when Monarch won and paid the highest dividend of the day, namely $18.80.

The results were as follows:

PREMIO ICA, 1400 metres. — 1. Majadero 51, $7.70 and $1; 2. Lincio 56, $9.10; 3. Jolie Jeu 49, $4.70. Won by four lengths; a head. Time 1.28.

SUNDAY'S MATCHES.

RACING (1) v. QUILMES (0).

This match—the second round of the Cup Tie—was played at Avelaneda on Sunday.

The following teams turned out:—Racing.—Arduino; Ochoa and Reyes; Betular, Olazar and Pepe; Canaveri, Comaschi, Marcovecchio, Hospital and Perinetti.

Quilmes.—C. F. Pearson; Scrutti and Brown; Reid, Pollini and Dickinson; Falibeni B Hoare, Raggi, E. C. Pearson and G. H. Dent.

The result, 1—0, in favour of Racing, was a surprise in that it was considered that they would run all round the Quilmes team, who are 22nd on the Division list.

The game was very even, and Quilmes were unlucky to lose. A penalty goal at the close of the game, taken by Ohaco, did the trick. Señor Bergmans was the referee.

TIGRE (2) v. BELGRANO (0).

Played at Belgrano, with the result that the home team were defeated by 2 goals, one kicked by Martinez, and the other by Rubio, to nil.

The latter was a lucky goal, as it was stopped by the goal-keeper, but

PREMIO INDECITA 1200 metres.

the referee judged it as a score. Belgrano played poor football, and missed many chances. The teams were as follows:—

Tigre.—E. J. Calzetta; E. Hammerer, A. de l'Armellini; J. Cervini, E. Calzetta, P. Martinez; E. Hechin, N. Sitas, E. Rubio, H. R. Martini, and J. Bernasconi.

Belgrano.—J. Reddell; C. Morgan, J. B. Brown; H. Cox, A. Mailen, J. Peña; J. Martin, H. Vignoles, A. B. Cullerne, and A. L. Morgan.

Referee, Sr. A. Bilbao La Vieja.

INDEPENDIENTE (3) v. FLORESTA (0).

Played on the ground of the latter on Sunday, an interesting game resulted in the defeat of the home team by three goals to nil. The scorers were Carre, L. Cappeletti, and his brother. Señor Almaydo lined up the following teams:—

Independiente. — Miguenz, Lude, Ferro, Garcia, Sande, Cappeletti, V. Gulochaga, Lopez, L. Cappeletti, Arroyuelo Carré.

Floresta. — Cuomero, Chiappe, Guido Spani, Frascoli, Lopez, Salas, Hortusor, Balbi, Astrume, Flesos, Piola.

BANFIELD (2) v ESTUDIANTES (0)

The Estudiantes ground at Palermo was the venue of the match with Banfield on Sunday, and as in the case with all the other first Divisional matches of the week-end, the visiting team returned victorious. For Banfield the scorers were Alesi and Burton.

Croce played a magnificent game in goal for the home team.

Señor Lambrechts guided the match between the following teams:

Estudiantes.—M. Croce, A. Spinelli, A. Alcardi, M. Madero, I. Ivanisevich, J. Vaccari, R. Vaccari, J. De la Barrera, C. Antequida, A. Saenz, A. R. Miera.

Banfield.—W. Petersen, P. Merrigi, J. Rohm, A. Frumento, L. Nia Foina, T. Lagarreta, R. Brown, A. Alesi, S. Burton, W. Roscoi.

RUGBY

FIRST DIVISION CHAMPIONSHIP.

BELGRANO (11 PTS.) v. GIMNASIA Y ESGRIMA (14 PTS.).

A good game and an evenly contested one was played on Sunday between the above clubs on the ground of the latter at Palermo.

The home XV, won by a goal and three tries to a goal and two tries.

The following teams turned out:—

Gimnasia y Esgrima.—A. Rumbo, C. F. Morton, R. Rioboo; E. Bontemps, L. R. Santamarina; T. Newbery, M. Crespo; A. Buzzo, R. Buzzo, E. Buzzo, P. Alemandri, M. Lagleyze, B. R. Jurado, C. Casado, M. Frattini.

Belgrano.—G. Bush; Fenwick, Hall, Charlton, N. Bush; S. Sampson, Piper; D. Scott, Bourne, Whittington, Van Deurs, Darch, De Meyer, Troncoso, Sampson.

For Gimnasia y Esgrima the scorers were Jurado three times, Santamarina once. Jurado converted the latter's try, and for Belgrano Sampson once, and Fenwick twice. G. Bush converted the former's try. Charlton played a good game for Belgrano, and Rioboo for the "Gim." Hall, a new member of the Belgrano attack, was rather out of condition, but will improve with a few more games and when he becomes less strange to his side.

POLO AT HURLINGHAM

The final of the handicap tournament, which was between teams "D" and "E" was played at Hurlingham on Sunday, and resulted in a win for the "E" team by seven goals to four.

The teams, with their handicaps, were as follows:—

D (Whites).—Capt. Casares 5, Major Quiroga 6, S. R. Holway 5, Capt. Lynch 1; total 17.

E (Waistcoats).—L. Lacey 9, A. Peña 4, M. M. de Hoz 2, J. M. de Hoz 2; total 17.

9 DE JULIO CUP.

On Sunday afternoon the second round for the 9 de Julio Cup was continued, and the semi-finals and finals also played.

The winner was Mr. H. Peña, who beat his opponent, Mr. A. Sansinena by 5 up and 4 to play.

At the close of play the Cup was presented by Doctor Mendez, who congratulated the winner.

Sunday results were as follows:—

2nd Round.

H. Peña (24) beat D. E. Cerboni (16) 1 up.

R. H. Roberts (12) beat C. G. Dodds (6) 4/2.

M. Gonzalez Guerrico (12) beat Dr. R. Halahan (12) 2/1.

A. Sansinena (13) beat R. Sauberan (18) 7/6.

Semi Final.

H. Peña beat R. H. Roberts 1 up.

A. Sansinena beat M. G. Guerrico 4/3.

Final.

H. Peña beat A. Sansinena 5/4.

SAN ANDRES v. SAN ISIDRO.

CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP.

The above clubs met at San Isidro on Sunday afternoon in a match for the First Division Club Championship, and San Isidro had considerably the worst of the encounter.

Several very close matches were played, and four of them in the Singles were only decided on the 18th green. In the foursomes the visiting club only won the odd match out of five. The rounds were thoroughly enjoyed and well contested, although San Isidro had to acknowledge defeat by 10 matches to five, as the following results will show:—

SECOND DIVISION CHAMPIONSHIP

SAN ISIDRO v. SAN ANDRES.

The result of the match between the above clubs at San Andres on Sunday, for the second division championship was even more disastrous to San Isidro than that of the First Division.

In neither the singles nor the foursomes did the visitors succeed in winning a single round, nor in even halving one.

The result was that San Andres ran out the winners by 18 matches to none. The results were as follows:

VICTORIA SAILORS' HOME

SUCCESSFUL CONCERT

The usual Saturday concert took place at the Sailors' Home on July 10, with the same success and appreciation which always meets the efforts of those who organise these entertainments.

Last evening the concert was arranged by the Young People's Institute of the American Church chiefly through their Secretary, Mr. J. W. Adderley.

An audience of considerable numbers enjoyed to the full the various items given and throughout the programme, encores were frequent.

Mr. Edgar H. Wileman officiated as chairman to the following programme:

Part I.—Pianoforte Solo "Polonaise" Chopin, Op. 40, Miss Beatriz Penny; Song "Up from Somerset," Mr. J. Lynn Hazelton, encore: "My little grey home in the west"; Song "My ain folk," Miss Beryl Lovejoy; Recital "Our school board on Elocution," Mr. John W. Adderley, encore: "The swallowed frog"; Violin solo "Serenade" (Pierne), Miss Vera Shaw, encore: "Madrigale" (Simonet); Song "The clang of the forge," Mr. W. H. Philpotts; Song "Melisande in the wood," Mrs. W. H. Philpotts, encore: "The promise of life"; Recitation "The Bishop and the Caterpillar, Mr. Henry Martin.

Part II.—Pianoforte Solo, Selections from "La Traviata," Miss Vera Shaw; Song "King of the forest am I," Mr. W. H. Philpotts; Song "A Request," Mrs. W. H. Philpotts; Monologue "No. 5, Collect Street," Mr. John W. Adderley; Song "Tipperary," Miss Beryl Lovejoy, encore and repeated; Song "Stonecracker John" Mr. J. Lynn Hazelton, encore "Until"; Recitation "Nothin' to wear," Mr. Henry Martin; Comic song "Familiar Choruses," Mr. Percy G. Scott. At the Piano: Mrs. H. R. Storer, and Mr. Stanley Parker.

Chairman: Mr. Edgar H. Wileman.

THE BRITISH FLAG

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—In your paper, under the heading "Strangers Directory," the British Consulate General is stated to be "Office 25 de Mayo 611." I passed the said number on the 4th July and also on the 9th, I saw the front door and also the British coat of arms, but nowhere could I see the flag of the country.

Other Consulates fly their colours over the front door and as a rule over the coat of arms. Why cannot the British do likewise?

I am glad to see the "Union Jack" is much more in evidence in the city than heretofore, but I regret to say that the spurious bunting that is flown over the front of the London and River Plate Bank is a disgrace; it is supposed to represent the red ensign, but the Jack is out of all proportion to the size of the flag, and at the same time has the appearance of being made in—Great Scot, strafe the idea.

There are many red ensigns flown in the city to-day in the same condition, and they should be relegated to the scrap heap.

Let us hope the "Union Jack" will be seen quite to the fore in the Centenary year 1916.

Yours, etc.

LOYALIST.

AUDACIOUS THEFTS

VIRTUOUS AVELLANEDA OVER-RUN WITH THIEVES.

Instead of protesting that Avellaneda is more virtuous than its neighbours (a proposition easier of assertion than proof), the Intendente of that Holy Suburb would do well to bid his valiant vigilantes to "keep watch and ward by night." Because the worshipful brotherhood of burglars have been operating in the municipal area to the tune of seven cribs cracked in one night. Enterprise in one's profession is good, but this is excessive. Moreover, as the police have not made a single arrest, there are not lacking evil minded persons who say that the police force, the pride of the Province, is lacking in energy, vigilance, horse sense, capacity, courage, agility and any other quality, which an ordinary country copper should possess to some degree. The redistributors of property, encouraged by their immunity, have become so audacious that no one knows who will next receive the honour of a visit. Meanwhile the malignant minds before referred to are suggesting actually that the police should be reorganised, that is, organised with an entirely new personnel.

"HUMMINGTOP'S NIECE"

"THE CHORAL UNION AT THEIR BEST."

With staging that was of assistance, instead of being the "usual handicap of amateur theatricals," Sidney Grundy's humorous play, "Hummingtop's Niece" was submitted on July 12, by the members of the Choral Union at the Belgrano Theatre.

There can be little question that for amateurs the play is an ambitious one, the slightest exaggeration could render the humour ridiculous, the slightest element of stiffness could make it absurd, but such difficulties were cleverly overcome and the play was exceedingly well rendered. If a fault lay anywhere, it lay in the stiffness of the audience, who did not dare to see themselves too hilarious, and yet it did not appear, if they wished to see the play at all, why they should not have thoroughly enjoyed the evening's entertainment. It was good; well staged, rendered without exaggeration, and in general as natural as such a play can be.

The "plot" is well known, but in spite of this it is not fully understood. It was written, as so many of Sidney Grundy's plays are written, around a "phase" of London life, which may or may not have gone out of date since the play's conception.

If one is a believer or a sympathiser with the "colour" system of impressions, in sound, sight, or in the impression itself, one will remember during the past quarter of a century the feelings—local London feelings created by the "aesthetic" writings of English playwrights, just at a period when all London was violet, again the play which was designated as risky when London wanted something "electric," later Pinero's "Iris," and such-like plays, some of which had a hue all their own.

Grundy wrote "The Arabian Nights" around another phase, one which was sufficiently colourless, but nevertheless of great penetration for the period, and he humorizes the manner of the relation living on the relation. This point was sufficiently known or sufficiently realised by the audience at the Belgrano Theatre last evening, but the play was a success from each and every point of view.

Mrs. Hogan's idea of her part was perfect, and she played with so much naturalness throughout that she captivated her audience.

Nothing could have made an improvement on the manner of Mr. Waldron's acting. One wondered at his facility for invention, so easy was it.

Mrs. Alfred Drysdale as Mrs. Gillibrand could not have been better.

The most difficult of all characters, that of Joshua Gillibrand, was ably construed by Mr. Grinham, but at times a slight exaggeration was observable, which in such a difficult part cannot possibly be avoided without an immensity of rehearsal or unless one has a fortune in one's pocket as nature's gift, such as Penley had.

Mrs. Grinham, as Mrs. Hummingtop, was good, but hardly strong enough, and both she and Miss Mortlock—as Daisy Maitland—were difficult to hear.

Mr. Norman MacQueen was better than at the Lomas performance, but was still conscious he was on the stage.

The whole entertainment, however, was good. Immensely above the average, and its difficulties as a play were most ably overcome.

A SECRET MISSION

ITALIAN STAFF OFFICER'S VISIT TO PARIS.

Rome, July 12.

General Porro, Second Chief of Staff of the Italian army, is in Paris on a secret mission, believed to be of much importance.

ROSARIO GAOL SCANDAL

PRISONERS STARVED AND INHUMANELY TREATED.

Rosario Prison has lately acquired a reputation which is the reverse of favourable. A rising recently took place among its inmates who declared, on investigation that it was by way of protest against the inhumanity displayed towards them in giving them inferior food and that in scant and small measure. This is no new complaint, and when the Minister, Señor Mosca was last in Rosario, he promised to look into the matter, and have it remedied, but hitherto nothing further has been done. A new Director has recently been appointed and already the complaint is made of him that by placing members of his family in all responsible positions, the oligarchical system is introduced and that a complaint is useless; also that employees of long service and unimpeachable character had been discharged for no apparent reason; a canteen has also been established, without being asked for, at which drink is sold to the prisoners, causing frequent disturbances and disorders.

RESTLESS RIO

VIOLENT MOBS OF STRIKERS. TROOPS IN READINESS.

The aspect of affairs in Rio has suffered a set back and is more serious than before. The striking bakers and chauffeurs have been joined by the carters and the bread delivery vans and mozos in the cafés and hotels have ceased work. Only a few automobiles are running and those, under military guard, so that movement in the capital is paralysed. Moreover the strikers are becoming dangerous and resorting to violence. Yesterday morning they assaulted several bakers, restaurants and Cafés which had the temerity to remain open. Severe conflicts took place and there were many injured. The police are making arrests right and left. Two bakeries were attempted with dynamite bombs but only one exploded. There is fear of the movement spreading. Over 4,000 chauffeurs are out, 20,000 waiters and 5,000 bakers. In spite of police guarantees many restaurants have closed in fear, nor dare any chauffeur take a car into the streets. The stevedores, the tramway men and the employees of the Brazilian Central Railway are giving their support. A man has been arrested issuing seditious bills to the soldiers and police. The troops of the garrison are in barracks under arms and with full cartridge pouches. The war ships also are ready for action and the police watch the streets rigorously. The attempt to come to an agreement has failed. The manager of the Brazilian Central Railway was obliged to leap from his automobile and fly, being attacked by a dangerous mob. The Minister of Interior and the Chief of Police have conferred with the President as to what action shall be taken.

THE NAVAL ANNUAL 1915

THE BOOK FOR BRITONS.

The Naval Annual for 1915 which is just issued and is now on sale is rather smaller than usual, by the amount of information suppressed no doubt, but of the utmost value and interest. Particulars of the new ships are given as far as is possible consistently with public safety and the remarkable manner in which the publication has been kept up to date, may be judged from the fact that even such recent losses as the Triumph and Majestic are noted in the lists of warships, the casualties being in italics. Necessary at all times to the naval student the volume is this year of paramount importance to all. It is produced under the direction of Earl Brassey and edited by Mr. John Leyland, both recognised as being among the first of naval experts.

"THE GLORIOUS FOURTH"

RECEPTION AT THE AMERICAN LEGATION IN ASUNCION

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

Asuncion, July 10.

The 4th of July was celebrated here on Monday, July 5, as it was all over the world—wherever it was celebrated at all. The day was perfect, neither warm nor cold, and the fine mansion of the American Legation was filled with guests who had called to do honour to the American nation and its "simpático" representative, Mr. Daniel Morney. Mrs. Samuel Wiley, wife of the American Consul, assisted by Mrs. Griffith and Mrs. Hessenmuller, received the guests.

An orchestra and the Municipal band played alternately all the afternoon and evening. The house was decorated inside and outside with American flags, and, later on, the many electric lights added brilliance to the scene.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs was unable to be present on account of illness, but sent a very beautiful offering of flowers; otherwise nearly all the principal Government officials and the Diplomatic Corps were present, many of them with their families, besides other distinguished Paraguayans and the English-speaking residents of Asuncion. The American colony is a very small one, and perhaps a half-dozen were present. Besides the host, the Secretary of Legation Mr. Millmore, Mr. Samuel Wiley, Mr. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. John Hessenmuller and family, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. E. Griffith, Mrs. Baines (of Patiños), Dr. and Miss Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Lancaster, Mr. and Mrs. F. Clerk, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Bohm and family, the Misses Vuyk and Miss Browning, Mr. and Mrs. D. Campbell and Miss Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. W. Webb, Mr. Walter Haywood, Sr. Luigi, Mr. More, and many others.

When the champagne was opened Mr. Morney made one of his happy speeches, ending with a toast to the ladies of Paraguay. Dr. Ayala answered in a few words and good wishes to the United States and her people. Very pretty bonbon boxes and souvenir spoons were presented to the ladies before leaving.

COLON

SUNDAY'S PERFORMANCES.

For the matinee performance at the Colon on Sunday last the ever popular "Barber of Seville" figured as the attraction. The charming opera of Rossini, which will soon complete its first centenary was given a fine rendering by the artists Sra. Galli-Curci and Sres. Tedeschi, Titta Ruffo, Niola and Cirino. The singers earned much applause, especially Titta Ruffo, whose "Figaro" was conceived in his own well known inimitable manner.

On account of the continued indisposition of Mlle. Vix "Aida" was substituted for "Manon" in the evening performance. The Verdian opera was given in the same highly satisfactory manner as formerly this season by the same cast, principal amongst which figure Sras. Raisa and Frascani, and Sres. De Muro and Danise. Last evening Sra. Galli-Curci repeated her success in "Lucia di Lammermoor."

Owing to the indisposition of Madame Vix the opera in which that lady was to have appeared to-night has been withdrawn, and the "Barber of Seville" has been substituted for it, in which Madame Galli-Curci and Signor Titta Ruffo will sing.

Madame Vix will appear in the Jongleur de Notre Dame on Thursday.

RUSSIAN SOLDIERS AND POISON GAS

FURIOUS DESIRE FOR REVENGE.

The whole of Warsaw is in a state of furious indignation as a result of the arrival yesterday of the first batch of victims of German poisonous gases from the positions where the enemy first put to the test on a large scale on this front their latest product of Kultur, says the special correspondent of the "Daily Telegraph" writing on June 2. There is still some confusion as to the details of this engagement, but the following seems to be an account of what occurred.

The wind being favourable, the Germans placed quantities of straw in front of their lines along the positions extending from Sochaczew to the mouth of the Rewka, sprinkling upon it a white powder which the soldiers describe as resembling salt. The straw was then fired, giving off clouds of dense smoke, which was carried by the wind in the direction of our trenches. Following closely the volumes of their poisoned air came heavy columns of German infantry. The Russian soldiers remained in their trenches, firing through the smoke until they died from the effects of the gases. The reserves came forward through the belt of poison, men falling at each step from asphyxiation, and with indignation and fury fell on the columns of advancing Germans, inflicting terrible losses on them. They pursued the defeated enemy and actually took many points in their position. The net results of this innovation here was the repulse of the Germans with losses probably three times greater than those of the Russians, and the occupation by our troops of some of the German positions.

SLOW, TORTURING DEATH.

The effect on the Russian soldiers of the use of gas has been extraordinary. Though meeting this new atrocity for the first time, there appears to have been absolutely no demoralization, but the fierce anger that has been aroused has so increased the moral of the men that the whole Russian Army is in a fever of eagerness to attack the enemy and avenge the fate of their comrades. I have spent the morning in the Warsaw hospitals, visiting these cases. The sufferings are indescribable, and though I have heretofore seen much misery in warfare I was never more deeply moved than by the sight of these splendid specimens of young manhood dying slow, torturing deaths as the result of this latest method of German warfare. The faces of the victims were quite purple, and, though perfectly strong in every way, they appear to be dying slowly from strangulation with the most horrible suffering.

The smell of these gases was noticed 20 miles in the rear of the lines, while deaths occurred even in the third line of trenches. If the expectation of the Germans is that they will demoralize the Russians their hopes are doomed to bitter disappointment. Practically every soldier in the hospitals who can talk prays for recovery in order that he may be able to return to the front to attack the Germans and exact retribution for this horrible atrocity. Though the Moujiks do not understand politics, they clearly realize that they have been made the victims of inhuman practices. The new departure will, I believe, prove utterly ineffective to assist the Germans, as their first attempt, when unexpected, failed miserably, and preparations are now being made on an enormous scale to supply the men with respirators.

Experts here do not agree as to the exact nature of the gases, but they are believed to be some easily made compound of chloral.

The Victoria Market.

The Victoria Market has now been closed, and a big difference has been noticeable in the returns. Over 7,000 tons of wool less have been received this year than in 1911-1912, and four thousand less than last year. The diversion of the wool from the Tres Arroyos line and La Madrid has made a considerable difference this year, as it has been the custom to forward most of it here during other years, but last season all the products of the district have been sent to the central market in Buenos Aires instead. In the season of 1913-1914 15,743 tons of wool were received at this market, and 3,010 tons of hides; in that of 1914-1915 there were 11,836 tons of wool and 2,076 of hides.

The Ninth of July.

The town was gaily decorated with flags on the occasion of the Ninth of July fiesta, and the best display was to be seen at the South American Hotel, which on both sides was bright with the different colours exhibited, there being all the flags of the Allies as well as that of Spain. The day was dull but warm, and without any wind. Large crowds were to be seen in every bar, and in the plaza after about 4 p.m. The illuminations of the banks and public buildings were also well worth seeing in the evening. Before sunrise the municipal band played the National Anthem in the plaza, to the accompaniment of numerous bombs, and the bands played again in the plaza in the afternoon and evening. Large crowds gathered in the evening to witness the fireworks display which was held on the waste ground behind the National Bank, and was, although of short duration, well worth seeing. Every place of amusement was well filled that evening also, as well as the hall in which a bazaar was held by the Patronata. The bazaar was finally closed this evening.

Items in Brief.

The Minister of Provincial Public Works has, in response to a request from the Intendente here, sent 1400 plants to be placed in the different streets and plazas of the town. These have come from the experimental farm at General Arias near the station of Cazan, and consist of white acacias, alams, eucalyptus, etc. There are a large collection of plants and trees at the Government farm at Argerich, but these are probably being kept for some other purpose. The contract for the putting down of a surgent well to supply the town with good water is to be signed this coming week, after which the necessary machinery will be brought here and the work started at once. The direction of the work will be in the hands of Señor Hermitte, the director of geology.

The Rivadavia reading room has received from Messrs. P. and A. Hardcastle and Co., a donation of a quantity of red parana spruce pine for the purpose of making new stands for the large number of books now in the possession of this body. The heavy snow storms that have recently fallen in Patagones have done considerable damage to the livestock there.

During the first week of the season 1915-1916 in the Victoria Market here 29 tons of wool and 27 tons of woolly skins have entered.

The price now paid for wheat of 80 kilos and f.o.b. is $12.10, and wheat for exportation, clean, good and dry, $11.60. There is very little demand for wheat of inferior class, and price paid for this being between 8 and 10 dollars. Oats clean and dry, f.o.b., are fetching $6.80. Barley for exportation is being quoted at $5.50 with a base of 60 kilos.

CONCORDIA NEWS

Victoria Park.

A concert and dance were given in the Argentine Social Club on the night of July 3, the profits to go to the Victoria Park. The Victoria Park belongs to the British Community, and was bought for that purpose by Mr. Robinson, years ago a well-known and influential gentleman. During the last few years the Britishers in Concordia were reduced to a few, and in spite of bad times, managed to keep matters going. Now with the advent of a large number of English people, coming with the transference of the Administrations of N.E. Argentine and Entre Rios Railways, the future looks brighter. It is hoped the Concordia Cricket Club will once more make a strong appearance. The Tennis Club already is going in good style. The dance on July 3, however, showed that the newcomers were ready to do all in their power to help. A large number were present and with good music, and a midnight supper to assist, it was near 6 o'clock when dancing was finished.

Tennis Club.

The Concordia Tennis Club will hold their annual general meeting on July 10, in the London and River Plate Bank. Several matters will be brought up for discussion. The most important will be, no doubt, the addition of one or more courts to the already existing two. Membership has increased so much that it is imperative for the club committee to do what is in their power to meet the demand.

Railway Institute.

A great many old members of the Railway Institute are asking themselves when the Institute will be started in Concordia. It was to have been brought from Monte Caseros some time ago but so far no appearance. The want of a Club is keenly felt and it is hoped matters will be expedited.

PREMIER AT YPRES

MR. ASQUITH AND LORD KITCHENER WITNESS REPULSE OF GERMAN ATTACK.

London, July 13.

It is semi-officially announced that Mr. Asquith and Lord Kitchener were present at the repulse of a German counter-attack upon the British positions to the north of Ypres on July 7. Thence they went on to the Belgian front where they had a conference with King Albert.

During the two days' tour along the front, the Secretary for War inspected the whole of the British Expeditionary force and some of the French units.

Tiro Federal.

Although a large number of people attended on Thursday and Friday last at the shooting contests, it was expected that a lot more would have been present. Many were prevented from coming and taking part owing to some alterations being made in the arrangements during the last few days. In the championship for a thousand metres the first group were those of Bahia Blanca, 2nd La Plata, and 3rd San Luis. In the Army and Navy competition the first were the Coast Artillery, 2nd Arsenal of Port Millar, 3rd Seventh Infantry. After the various competitions were over, the competitors marched back to the town, headed by the band, and in the evening the prizes were distributed in the municipal theatre.

THE ARM OF THE WEAK

SUBMARINE ATTACK AND DEFENCE

ITS IMPRESSION ON THE NEUTRALS

Judging by the Italian Press and the comments of Italian residents in Buenos Aires, the loss of the Amalfi has served as a very unpleasant reminder of the fact that they, in common with the rest of the Allies, are exposed to a method of naval attack against which the common sentiment of humanity revolts. Moreover they are evidently realising something of the feeling that permeates British naval circles in view of the inability of our fleets to get at close grips with the enemy. Be it borne in mind however that England has never protested in any way against the sinking of her men-of-war. The spirit of the survivors from the Hogue, Aboukir, Cressy, and many other vessels, shows this very plainly. It was all in the game, so the fleetmen seemed to think, and it was only when the Germans began what is nothing but sheer piracy that the navy felt really "nasty" about their adversaries methods of war. That the German submarines have been fairly well handled is admitted, nor has there been any attempt to minimise the number of vessels sunk through their agency, even though it is well known in nautical circles that many cases of reported loss through submarines were in reality due to floating mines, which are found nowadays right as far south as the Scillies. What one does want to emphasise is the fact that Germany is making a tremendous effort to persuade the neutral countries—America excepted—that their submarines have Great Britain's commerce, and above all her passenger trade, absolutely at a standstill. The losses to small neutral countries such as Norway, Holland and Denmark, have been very heavy, not only in their own shipping, but also in cargoes consigned to British ports, and this loss is being very cleverly used by Germany to strengthen her claims for what she terms complete predominance at sea.

Britons know well that this talk is nothing but bluff from beginning to end, but unfortunately other nations look at the long list of German "triumphs," lists where the ship's name alone figures, her tonnage, class and similar details being omitted as of no importance, and feel that after all there must be something in the claim to supremacy. Why Great Britain will not carry on a counter-propaganda is more than one can say. Even the Times urges that some steps in this direction ought to be taken, whilst the "Herald" may justly claim that from the first it has advocated a fuller exposition of the British position in neutral countries. That however is by the way. What one would like to draw attention to is the fact that even these heavy losses of mercantile tonnage are evidently not giving Germany the results she so earnestly works for. Not a German paper but has specialised in caricatures of Britannia sitting with an iron collar of mines and submarines round her neck, or John Bull, worn to a shadow, the while his food ships go down to Davy Jones' locker. Unfortunately for them, the freedom of the seas is as yet not seriously affected. In South America the fact is self evident, mails and cargo coming and going with exemplary regularity.

Hence the new outbreak of "frightfulness" in the shape of bombs concealed in cargo vessels, incendiary work by concealed fanatics, and other methods that can hardly be called "methods" at all, being rather akin to anarchy. That all this sort of thing adds an ever-present danger to sea travel in wartime nobody denies, but one very much doubts whether it affects either trade in general or the passage of those people who have urgent need to cross from one side of

DOES GERMANY WANT WAR WITH AMERICA?

SEEKS TO DAMAGE HER INDUSTRIAL POSITION.

The sinking of the Armenian may be less significant than it at first sight appears, if it be true that the vessel was a chartered transport employed by the British Government. Such a case can hardly be expected to call for the special intervention of the U. S. Government, though the loss of life strengthens President Wilson's arguments for the stoppage of these unheralded submarine attacks. What one would like to know is whether it is true, as alleged by Mr. John Hayes Hammond, at the World Congress, held in Ohio during May, that the Central Empires are determined to drag America into the strife.

Mr. Hammond, in his presidential address, remarked that diplomacy, by its inherent fatuity, has led the purblind nations into the cataclysm of folly. Diplomacy must now be discarded for a system of international relations wherein there would be no more contemptible espionage and no more secret treaties, but under which all international agreements and treaties would be registered under the custody of a great court of international justice open to the world.

Mr. Hammond suggested that there is a possibility that such a world court could be established before the termination of the present European war, so that it might deal with the discussion of the terms of peace.

The opinion prevails that Germany does not intend that America shall stay outside the war. The attitude, it is suggested, is based upon the fact that if America can remain neutral she will, when peace is declared, hold the trade of the world in the palm of her hand. Therefore, while in the view of some German authorities it makes little difference to the Empire whether the German forces are or are not opposed to her, it would be to the advantage of Germany to force America into the war, in order to compel her to suffer an industrial and economic paralysis parallel to that which must be suffered by the present belligerent Powers.

MURDERED BY AUSTRIANS

FAMOUS CYCLIST STABBED.

Rome, July 13.

It is officially reported that Austrian stragglers purposely killed the great Italian bicyclist Carlaita in the hope of provoking the Italian troops into outrages against civilians in Austrian territory.

Carlaita left his company to drink at a well in a village which the Italian troops had just taken from the enemy. He was found dead, stabbed in the back. The villagers were brought before the military authorities and questioned, then set free.

New orders have been issued to the Italian troops not to harm the civilian population in any way, no matter how great the aggravation.

the Atlantic to the other. In short the Anglo-Saxon races are not to be frightened or to be bluffed into admitting Germany's latest claim for the principle of Deutschland über alles. Her fleet lies safely within its ring of powerful mines, and her merchant vessels lie rusting away in her ports. All the carrying trade of the world is going on without German assistance and in spite of Germany's would-be interference. There lies the best answer to any claim for the potency of the notorious submarine campaign.

Agricultural & Pastoral

CAMP NOTES

(By our Agricultural Editor.)

Rosario agricultural show is due to open on Sunday, August 1. The Governor of the Province of Santa Fe will make the official inauguration.

The grand annual event at Palermo will be officially opened by the President of the Republic on Sunday, August 15. Everything augurs for a very successful exhibition this year.

The 1915 pedigree farm live-stock sales may be said to have commenced in earnest during the week. On Wednesday last, Messrs. Adolfo Bullrich and Co. sold 29 heifers from the famous "San Blas" herd, for close on $30,000, or $1017 a head. On Thursday, the same auctioneers disposed of four imported Shorthorn bulls and 6 that were bred and reared at "La Belen" and "Las Barrancas," the property of the succession of Sr. Manuel José Cobo, at an average price of $3640 each; and during the same afternoon auctioned off 21 heifers from the great "El Inca" herd of Messrs. P. and G. Hughes at a shade over $947 each.

It must have been encouraging to importers of pedigree Shorthorn cattle to view the large attendance at the different sales during the past few days. Demand and prices obtained, both go to prove that good new blood is required in many quarters. Let me again point out to breeders that there will be less than 300 imported bulls available for sale before the beginning of October.

The event of the week in cattle and Cold Storage circles was naturally the inauguration of Armour's new frigorífico at La Plata. There was a very large attendance of interested spectators, representing the agricultural and pastoral interests of this Republic, all being present to witness the beginning of another important factor in the Argentine meat trade. This new enterprise, having at its back what is perhaps the strongest of the North American packing houses, should have a far-reaching effect on prices of cattle ruling here in the future.

The buildings, though not actually complete in all the different departments necessary for the proper utilisation of all by-products, were so far advanced as to permit the slaughter of a considerable number of cattle daily. The cold storage space appears to be vast and will allow for heavy slaughtering, even should the necessary transport not be immediately obtainable, and here is a very important point, as shipping requirements often govern slaughter at the present time. There is no need here to give any detailed account of the machinery and installations, as the system is more or less the same in all freezing establishments. Cattle ascend to a high floor, where they are slaughtered, and the meat dressed, passing through the various stages till it is declared eligible for dispatch to the freezing chambers. The underfloor undertakes the cleaning and handling of the offal, while the hides are precipitated through cylindrical holes to a still lower floor, where they are classified and dealt with according to weight and quality. Slaughter of sheep could easily be undertaken in the commodious building, to which I hope to pay a further visit once the handling of pigs has commenced. The reason so often attributed for the non-success of the pig-breeding industry has been the want of a proper outlet, or market for the supply. Now that one of the most up-to-date plants in the world has been installed, backed up by an efficient management, complete with the services of many experts in the different branches of the industry, it is more than likely that a big impetus will be given to the pig-breeding business, which, strange to say, has been so long neglected in this country.

Quite a number of prominent breeders and camp men graced the city with their presence this week. Amongst seldom seen faces I have noticed Señores Volaz y Castaño, Miles Pasman, Federico Lacau, John E. Stent, Pedro Etchepare, Ricardo Newton, Enrique and Robert Dixon, J. Lopez Lecube, José Maria Imaz, Juan Rivero and Monsieur de Bois.

Many readers will have seen by the telegrams appearing in the local papers during the past few days, that Holland is calling up her reserves and generally preparing her army in case of emergency. Amongst those in Argentina who have received notice to present themselves without delay at headquarters is Mr. A. J. Martin Campos, a nephew of that well-known importer and judge of cattle Mr. Harry J. Poels. Mr. Campos has been engaged for some years in the purchase of sheep for the Smithfield and Argentine Meat Co., and latterly for the recently amalgamated Las Palmas Produce Co. and the River Plate Fresh Meat Co. His sphere of operations has been considerable, but the bulk of his work has been done at Tablada, where he has made himself agreeable to both sellers and his opposition confrères. On Wednesday morning last, after the closing of the sheep market, he was entertained to a "recherché" banquet, provided by close on a hundred admirers and well-wishers, comprising representatives of every firm of consignatarios, local freezing establishments, and attendants at the big Tablada sheep fair. An orchestra from the city of Buenos Aires provided a fine selection of music, and many eulogistic speeches were made. Mr. Campos, who left yesterday by the s.s. Tubantia, carries with him the very best wishes of his numerous friends for a pleasant voyage and a safe return to Argentina, where he may always rest assured of obtaining a hearty welcome.

The Lincoln shearling ewes purchased in the early part of April from Messrs. J. H. Dean and Sons, Norton Heath, Lincoln, England, by Mr. Harry Blunt for the "Sanquico" Cabaña of Señores Rivero Hermanos, were last week at the Royal Agricultural Show of England, held at Nottingham, awarded First and Third Prizes, respectively, in a very strong class, and from their excellent quality and breeding should further strengthen the "Sanquico" flock. The rams which were purchased from Mr. Fred. Ward Sen. were not exhibited.

FOOD FOR GERMAN ARMY

OBTAINED VIA COPENHAGEN.

London, July 12.

The Attorney-General, Sir Edward Carson, has asked the Prize Court to declare the Norwegian vessels Alired Nobel, Kim, Bjornstjerne and Bjernsen good and lawful prizes. They have been taken in the act of conveying cargo which consisted of absolute and conditional contraband from America for the use of Germany.

Sir Edward Carson stated that thirty-eight other vessels had been searched and found to be carrying similar cargoes, consisting chiefly of preserved meat. He added that Copenhagen had virtually been transformed into a store for supplying German troops.

CURIOUS DEATH OF CATTLE IN SANTA FE

SUPPOSED CASE OF POISONING.

At the present time, the stock owner is generally considered as doing well; though owners of animals, are always open to the many risks, to which their stock are exposed. According to information published recently by certain of the Buenos Aires Press, the question of safe transport of store cattle from Paraguay was considered as an accomplished fact, despite the precarious nature of the undertaking.

It has just become known that a mob of some 500 head of 4 to 6 year old steers, obtained in the Paraguayan Chaco, and brought safely by land and river transport, as far as Resistencia and entrained there in wagons, with the Santa Fé railway station as their destination, have met with a serious disaster. At an intermediate station, they were detained for the purpose of undergoing the bathing operation necessary to comply, with the Provincial Sanitary regulations, but prior to the ordeal, were turned out on the only available pasturage. A matter of some 12 to 15 hours feeding was unfortunately responsible for the death of close on half the cattle, the cause being attributed at first, to the severe cold experienced. However from later developments it has been suggested, that the animals consumed some poisonous weed, and such would appear to be the case, as it seems hardly possible that big strong Paraguayan steers, would succumb so quickly and in such large numbers, to a sudden change of climatic conditions. Had the cattle been dipped then it would have been reasonable to presume that they had imbibed, some of the poisonous fluid. It is stated that no dipping had taken place, therefore some other explanation must be sought. The most feasible of all appears to be, the presence of some most poisonous weed in that particular camp, into which the cattle had been let out to graze. Cattle from a different district, especially if hungry, would be quite likely to eat every thing fresh and green; though animals acclimatised to these pastures would ignore the presence of such plants, as is known to be the case, in several parts of the Province of Buenos Aires. Latest reports to hand state, that over three hundred head of these steers, died within 4 or 5 days, causing a grave loss to the enterprising owner, who had the intention, of finishing off these animals on alfalfares in the Cordoba district.

The foregoing experience is not likely to induce Paraguayan cattle breeders, to attempt the evidently hazardous undertaking of placing their steers, on the Argentine market, which up to the present time, cannot be described, as ever having met with very successful results. It is gratifying to hear that veterinary and scientific research is being employed, with a view of ascertaining, the nature of any obnoxious weeds, discovered in the vicinity, where the disaster occurred.

THE CORRIEDALE

THE SHEEP FOR MUTTON AND WOOL.

This breed, is in reality, the result of an effort, to establish the desirable characteristics of the first cross between a long wool ram, and a Merino ewe; and was the outcome of special requirements in certain parts of New Zealand.

The Corriedale has received a good deal of abuse on account of its origin, that is the cross between a Merino and a Longwool; but everything must have a beginning, and there are many now popular British breeds of sheep, that owe their special characteristics, to the blending of two or more breeds. Nobody finds fault with the Border-Leicester because of its Cheviot Leicester origin, or the Lincoln because of its Leicester origin, and though the Longwool mated with the Merino is more a fusion of opposites than either of the above mentioned, the principle is the same in every case, the only difference being that the greater the diversity of types mated in the first place the longer it will take to establish prepotency and uniformity. Regarding the origin of the New Zealand Corriedale Mr. James Little, claims to have originated a half bred flock true to type, on Corriedale Estate, when managing that property for the late Dr. Webster, some time in the fifties. He made this flock by inbreeding the first cross between Romney Marsh and Merinos, and he ran it for over twenty years, with results considered to be very satisfactory. When Dr. Webster died, the estate was sold, and the flock was dispersed. Subsequently Mr. Little, secured a property called Allandale, in North Canterbury, where he continued experimenting with an inbred half-bred class of sheep. In 1879 he put 4000 large framed high class Merino ewes to the best Lincoln rams obtainable, and from 100 of the best ram lambs, a heavy cull was made, only twenty of the best being retained for service. These were mated with the pick of the half bred ewes. In 1890 two half bred Lincoln rams were purchased and introduced.

In 1879, Mr. G. D. Greenwood, of Teviotdale, North Canterbury, started a half-bred flock by mating Teviotdale Merinos, with Border Leicester rams, culling heavily. Later on first class Lincoln Merino rams were introduced, and for over thirty years, no fresh blood has been introduced, the custom being to select the best ewes and rams to mate together to form a stud flock for breeding rams for the general flock, which now numbered over ten thousand breeding ewes. In 1874, an inbred half-bred flock was founded on the New Zealand and Australian Land Company's, Lovet's Estate, 1000 picked Merino ewes being put to high class Lincoln rams. The flock produced its own rams until 1892, when two inbred half bred Lincoln Merino rams were purchased and slightly used. The flock has produced its own sires ever since. In 1888 the late Mr. James Stringfellow of Chertsey, Canterbury, mated thirty Merino ewes, with a Lin-

ALLEN GARDINER HOME

(To the Editor).

Sir,—Would you allow me to thank through your paper those, who in spite of many claims on time and generosity for patriotic needs, have not forgotten those of the "Little Ones" in the Allen Gardiner Homes? Parcels of beautifully made garments have been received within the last week from the G.F.S. members, Talleres, Rosario; the Members of the San Isidro Dorcas Society, and also from a Sewing Guild in Coghlan. All are most acceptable and supply, a want, of which our large family has I fear very many. Quite a serious one this cold weather is stockings; new or worn (the latter can be re-footed). If some of your readers would generously help to supply this, leaving a parcel to be forwarded to us at 252 Balcarce, Capital, we should be most grateful.—Yours, etc.,

BIG SALE OF PEDIGREE SHORTHORNS

LARGE ATTENDANCE AND PRICES GOOD.

There was a very large attendance of buyers and spectators at the sale ring on July 8, when Messrs. Adolfo Bullrich and Co. submitted to auction 39 pedigree Shorthorn bulls and heifers. The first mentioned were ten in number, being sold under instructions from the executors of the late Manuel José Cobo, and included four imported animals that have been in service in the "La Belen" and "Las Barrancas" herds. The other six bulls were bred by the late Sr. Cobo, and the lot were exceedingly well presented.

The top price realised was $7,000, this sum being paid by Sr. Juan L. Lopez for Royal Christmas, a big, heavily fleshed bull bred in Scotland by Mr. J. Duthie Webster, and just rising 4 years old. The next best figure, $5,000, was made by a get of the same bull, out of Brilliant Duchess, a cow of the celebrated Blossom tribe, and his new owner is Mr. Frederick Grobby. Clairvoyant, a nicely fleshed red son of Golden Lityton and Village Clara, went to the bid of Sr. José L. Ocampo, also at $5,000. His pedigree was doubtless responsible for this satisfactory figure.

There was hardly such keen competition in the heifer trade, yet Messrs. P. and G. Hughes sold their draft of 21 "El Inca" products at an average price of $947 and sixty cents. The Messrs. Hughes richly deserve a special word of praise for the excellent breeding condition in which they presented their animals, and furthermore for the lucid manner in which they prepare their catalogues. No bit of information necessary to and required by breeders is overlooked.

The following is the full list of animals sold:—

Bulls:—

Royal Christmas, to Sr. Juan S. Lopez, price $7,000.

Clairvoyant, to Sr. José L. Ocampo, price $5,000.

Minmore Lancer, to Sres. Mujica & Co., price $3,600.

Sea King, to Sr. Abel Ayerza, price $2,300.

Violet Stone, to Suc. Carlos Salas, price $3,500.

Prince Petard, to Sr. Fermin Moyano, price $2,000.

Royal Christmas, to Sr. F. Grobby, price $5,000.

Belon's Pride, to Sr. Patricio Wash, price $3,200.

Prince Charlie, to Sr. F. Meyer Pellegrini, price $3,100.

Proud Man, to Estancias & Colonias Curumalan, price $1,700.

Average: $3,640.

Heifers:—

No. 370, $2,000, to Juan E. Stent.

No. 372, $1,250, to Felix de Alzaga.

No. 375 $1,100. No. 363 $1,100. No. 365 $1,050. No. 19 $1,000. No. 386 $850 and No. 388 $800 to Sr. Juan E. Stent.

No. 396 $1,100. No. 392 $1,000. No. 381 $900, and No. 371 $1,100 to Sr. Felix de Alzaga.

No. 382 $900. No. 407 $850. No. 389 $750, and No. 391 $800 to Sr. Adolfo D'Agliano.

No. 403 $800. No. 401 $700. No. 378 $600. No. 404 $600, and No. 3 $550 to Sres. Antonio Rocca e Hijes.

Average: $947.60.

Total of both sales:—$56,200 m/n.

ERNEST DANVERS

AN APPRECIATION.

In writing of a man so many-sided as was Ernest Danvers, it is a little difficult to know just where to begin. And for one who has worked with him day in and day out for eight years, without a single serious difference, and who has retained his friendship unbroken during more than a score of years, it is hard to write unbiassed by feeling.

Yet his work has been of so definite a kind, and has left so deep a mark, in a community which is neither emotional nor facily appreciative, that one has less than the usual difficulty in speaking of that work.

Now that he is gone, it is not surprising that we should wonder how his place is to be filled—to wonder who will fill his place would be absurd, for it will take half a dozen men to fill his place, and to do the work which he seemed to do with ease. Seemed, alas! For had it been easy, we might not have had to mourn his death at the age of 57.

For his daily job, he had been inspector of electric installations for the fire insurance companies during well nigh a quarter of a century, and secretary to their local Board for a slightly shorter period. He had been called in on numberless consultations besides, for his reputation stood high for straightforward dealing.

But this was not sufficient for his energy. As sub-editor of the "Review of the River Plate" he created its importance as a financial and statistical journal; and since its first editors wearied of their labours, he has been its director and editor in chief for fourteen years, during which it has grown in dimensions and importance. This in spite of the facts that he had no gift of literary expression, and that his handwriting was the despair of proof-reader and compositor alike. I can well recall the humorous deprecation with which he used to receive my suggested amendments to his style, evidently feeling that it did not matter. I do not think he ever wrote a paragraph which expressed exactly and accurately what he meant to say. Yet such was the force and directness of his thought, though acting through so faulty a medium, that I doubt if any one ever failed to grasp his meaning.

What we have mentioned might have been thought sufficient for any two ordinary men. But it was not sufficient for his almost inhuman energy, and his ferocious industry.

There is hardly a good cause other than pure parochialism in our community, which has not at some time or other in this quarter of a century owed much to his co-operation. And yet Danvers—for we all knew him as Danvers, without prefix or adornment of any kind—was no weak-minded supporter of failing causes. He never took on a job unless he was satisfied that it was worth doing; and if he took on a job, you could depend upon him to see it through.

In the long catalogue of institutions which owe much to his help, we may mention the Buenos Aires Rowing Club, the Institution of Engineers of the River Plate, the British and American Benevolent Society, the British Hospital, and during the last year, when we now realise he ought to have been spared new worries, the Foreign Residents' Club.

The many men, now occupying good positions in our midst, who were under his training at the Tigre, will recall the unsparing energy with which he spurred them to their utmost exertions, and the vitriolic vituperation, which they no doubt resented at the time, but to which they now own their indebtedness.

The Institution of Engineers of the River Plate was practically his own creation; and many of us wondered why Danvers troubled about the thing, and others speculated as to what he hoped to get out of it. He got nothing, save an outlet for his restless energy; but though for years now he has had to leave the working to others, the Institution has all along done useful work, and many young fellows have been indebted to it.

The British and American Benevolent Society, our oldest Society, was in a languishing condition when Danvers took the secretaryship—it will be noted that he did not by any means always aim at the show places. A society of this kind, if loosely administered, may easily do more harm than good. Danvers made up his mind that if he and one or two others would but look after the prevention of harm, the remaining members of the committee could be trusted to see that it did the good for which it existed. He braced all of us up, and while some may have thought he was too severe, most of us recognised that in practice he was generally right, and in principle always.

The work which he did for the British Hospital can never be fully told; but we are sure that every one connected with the institution, committee, staff, and patients alike, felt the impetus of his energy, and recognised that underneath what seemed at times a want of considerateness, his actions and words were in reality dictated by the sincerest and most enlightened consideration for the real interests of the hospital and all connected with it.

But this has to be said, and not at any time forgotten, that Danvers never shirked hard work or responsibility. The remark of a workman who helped to build Robert Burns's house at Ellisland regarding the poet, is applicable to Danvers—"he bate us a' when it cam' to a dour lift." A "dour lift" was just the kind of job in which he found delight; and when the word was "Action Front," and "run up" was given, every one of us knew when Danvers spoke a wheel or lifted a handspike. Something had to move then.

He was the champion hurdle-racer for years. He was interested in all forms of athletics. And yet, in addition to all we have chronicled, he had his hobby. In pursuit of that hobby he did as much brain-work as most men do in the course of their daily business. He was a walking encyclopaedia of freemasonry, a friend to all aspiring lodges, and—mirabile dictu! yet the truth must be told—the wisest and kindest of preceptors.

For such was his amazing force of character, his instinct for getting work done, that those of us who have known him for years have wondered at a growing patience with ignorance and incapacity, provided it were but teachable, and an invincible insistence, which yet gave no offence, on getting the work properly done. For one thing, of course, we all knew him better than we had done at first. But even the youngsters and the raw hands knew him, found him easier than he had seemed to them, in his curt brusqueness and his military directness. I remember the time when he had not a good word to say of parsons; yet among them you shall find some of the truest mourners for his loss. A man of another nationality, who attended his funeral, said to us that he would have liked an opportunity to say in public that Danvers was the first man in this country who taught him to do his work properly, and to be "straight."

Like every man who has the roof of the matter in him, he was faced by problems of the hardest, and his life was one continuous struggle.

As became an Englishman, he took his pleasures sadly. Life was no picnic, no happy-go-lucky scramble. Without a divine rage for order and method, he could not have achieved the half of what he did achieve. Had it not been for his unfailing courage, the acute sufferings which were not infrequent might well have caused him to take things easier, and even to recoil from his self-imposed tasks. But his motto was ever—

"If we go forward, we die;

If we go backward, we die;

Better go forward and die."

Salve, frater Ernest Danvers; salve atque vale.

THE POOR OF BUENOS AIRES

(To the Editor.)

I have read from time to time in the different morning and evening newspapers of this City moving stories of the starvation and misery existing in this great city and suburbs, and have had many cases laid before me without our ever seeking for information, giving proof positive of people lacking the most indispensable articles of food, such as bread, tea and sugar.

Again, I think we of the The Salvation Army can truly say that we are constantly penetrating below the surface of things, and are in a position to speak with some confidence as to the extent of the misery existing. I believe there is much more poverty being actually endured, (and no other word than endure can be employed in many cases), by many we know, many the community know, and by many people of whom we and the community generally know nothing, for while there are always professional beggars and "spongers" to deal with, there are those who suffer starvation, or semi-starvation in silence, and gradually waste away until death releases them from the burden of this life, and if foundation causes of death were truly described it would be stated that lack of necessary food had laid the foundation for consumption, and other wasting diseases.

I have been told again and again that the streets themselves in this great City could reveal great evidences of existing poverty, but, having during the last Summer walked through different districts at a late hour on different nights, and not having seen as much as I had been led to believe I was plunged into doubt as to the true extent of the poverty said to exist. A harrowing story of distress and starvation which I recently read of in a morning paper so impressed me that I called my colleagues together. In some cases they were men who are daily and hourly dealing with lower strata, and at times even the very scum of Society. We decided to look round, and make enquiries in different parts of the Central and outlying districts of this City. They usually went in twos, as I wanted evidence supported by witnesses, and now it may interest the readers of your esteemed paper to know a little of what was heard and seen.

In the first place let me say, I personally traversed the Central districts, and I prefer not to mention any particular street, but I can if necessary. On the first night I was accompanied by a colleague, on the third occasion my son accompanied me, and again a fourth night I was alone. The nights were taken in consecutive order, and were from July 2nd to the 5th inst. On the first occasion we walked for four hours, being out from 8 p.m. to 12.20 a.m. the other nights at varying hours. What did we find—here are a few cases. Of course the stories are as given to us by the people we spoke with, I have not yet had any opportunity of investigating them.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

ONE WOMAN: widow, has four children, had baby in arms and was sitting on doorstep, wept, had no work. Some men passing by saw us talking and helped the woman.

A WOMAN: thin face, looking fit for hospital rather than on the streets on a cold night; had baby in arms; said had three children; husband sick—pays $8 m/n. per month for rent.

A WOMAN: had two children; no husband; has $13 m/n per month to pay for rent. Sometimes goes out washing, other times comes to city to beg. The previous night had received $1 in small sums; had young child with her.

ANOTHER WOMAN was seen leaning against a post intoxicated and leisurely smoking a cigar.

Another case was a woman sitting on a doorstep with a child of perhaps four years of age, and she said was waiting to get food from a house opposite after they had finished supper. This was about 11 p.m., she said she had a sick husband, and had him and two children to support.

At 11.30 p.m. and again at 12.15 p.m. we found one of these same women walking about with her child.

Another case was that of a woman who stated she was the mother of two children. Her husband had been sick 17 months, and she had no work, and she shortly expected to again become a mother, this was painfully apparent, and yet on that cold midnight hour she was there carrying a young child in her arms.

Another case was that of a woman with baby in arms, and three children all huddled together on a doorstep.

Then we met two old women sitting on a doorstep with face and head covered with an old shawl. One said she was more than 50 years of age.

MEN.

The suffering man does not appeal to one like the woman and child, and yet there are men who are real sufferers, no matter what the cause may be. I have seen some during these nights, on flagstones, and in porches. On being spoken to they give the same story. I have seen them on corners of doorsteps, and on the open pathway. They are not to be seen on the Plazas, but, we are assured that they are outdoors. The Plazas are wonderfully well watched and these men do not sleep in places where light is brilliant but in dark obscure places. I found a newspaper boy—very young—at 11.30 p.m. kneeling on a stone step, head reclining on his chest, and the top of his head against the stone wall. He was fast asleep, and it was with difficulty he was aroused to receive a coin—poor boy—he was waiting for his brother to finish selling papers.

One of my colleagues reports seeing a woman (with three children all under 6 years of age selling papers at a late hour. I am told in a certain district there are many destitute people, but the intense cold and police vigilance keeps them on the move all night.

Another report reaches me that some of the destitute creep into empty houses, conventillos, old sheds, railway waggons, under archways, etc., etc.

Here are two or three special cases which we have investigated and they are samples of many others:—

A WIDOW—has four children; compelled to send children to beg.

A WIDOW—has seven children; cannot go to work because children too young to leave alone.

Now the all-perplexing question is the remedy. Speaking for ourselves we are doing all we can consistent with the finances at our disposal. We are co-operating with the community in every way possible to us. For instance, we have under our direction in this City two institutions for men. The one receiving 300 and more per night, and the other an average of 200. The Home for Women is limited in accommodation, that is, we can only take in all 70 persons. The cheaper classes are practically full every night. From my experience of things I believe some arrangement more extensive in character is necessary, and not only from the standpoint of shelter accommodation, but of the system of giving. I have been privileged as a Salvation Army Officer during my 32 years in this work, to visit many places, including the principal cities of the British Isles, New York, Chicago, Boston, the Scandinavian cities of Christiania, Copenhagen, etc., and noted problems, social and moral, and from all have learnt much, but I do not think that people give so readily, in the above mentioned places, in small sums, as they do in this and other cities of this great Republic. I have seen again and again the people helped on the streets, and this is done by all sections of the community. But, is this after all the most effective way of dealing with the cancer? For no matter what the cause, the disease exists here as it does in all great centres, proving that notwithstanding the many excellent institutions charitable and otherwise existing, the ravages of the disease are greater than the remedy. What is the remedy?

We of the Salvation Army cannot claim to have found a perfect antidote, but I would humbly suggest that the following might be useful:

- (1) Let the community generally unite more in the investigating of cases first hand as to authenticity, as to actual need before giving indiscriminately.
- (2) Let women and children be helped first, particularly where on investigation it is found the husband won't work.
- (3) Let investigations be made unexpectedly in people's homes. It is safer, and makes a great difference to our sympathies when we see with our own eyes the room with the broken-down bed, and scarcely anything to cover it, etc. Again closer investigation will prevent vagrancy. There are men who will not work, who prefer to beg, and they care not as long as they sponge on a charitable community.

In conclusion permit me to say that I feel one great evil attached to these mothers, sitting on doorsteps and places of public life, particularly on these cold winter nights, is the following:—

- 1.—The physical health of the child is exposed to the cold and frost, and must be detrimental in addition to the drawbacks of the child nursed by anemic and ill-fed mothers.
 - 2.—If the child learns these begging habits then so much the worse for the community in future days.
- The people suffering poverty can be described as follows:—
- 1.—The single people out of work.
 - 2.—Married people out of work.
 - 3.—The mothers and children who have a room, but no regular work or support.
 - 4.—Single people who are workless and entirely without shelter.

Now, I repeat, it seems to me that what is absolutely required on a much grander scale for all needy people irrespective of nationality or religion is:—

- 1.—Temporary relief by way of food, and actual necessities for those living as families, in some central place or places, and temporary relief for rent in absolutely necessary cases, and temporary shelter for single people who are absolutely homeless, but every case should first be investigated.
- 2.—This will cost money, but my point is if the indiscriminate charity could be organised and centralised, more than enough might be found to remedy actual need, and root out the professional beggar and shirker.

We are doing all we can, but are willing to do more if the necessary funds could be provided.

Yours to serve the poor,
WM. B. PALMER,
Colonel.

THE HUMANE STATES

ALLIES OWE ETERNAL DEBT OF GRATITUDE TO NORTH AMERICA

New York, July 13.

A telegram from Rome reports the arrival from Beirut of Dr. Tosti, at one time Italian Consul in New York.

Dr. Tosti states that the United States warships stationed on the coast of Syria and Asia Minor have rendered services to humanity which are beyond appreciation. On many occasions it was only the presence of American bluejackets that prevented fanatical Mussulman risings against the strangers; and the threat of appealing to the American warships for protection was sufficient to stop any such outbreak. The Italians, French and British in Asia Minor owe the United States an eternal debt of gratitude.

HOLLAND AND THE WAR

WILL SHE JOIN THE ALLIES?

SIGNIFICANT HINTS

Slowly but surely the neutrals of Europe are realising that Germany has reached such a state of dementia that no-one is safe from her furious attacks. Near neighbours are in the greatest danger and Holland, whose borders march with Germany, is manifestly growing nervous. In a recent issue of the "Financial Times" it is stated that the number of rumours afloat regarding the causes which have induced the British Government to suspend trade with Holland for the time being was increased recently by the addition of several new ones, while the seriousness of the matter, from the point of view of merchants and traders was accentuated by the growing difficulty of conveying merchandise across the German-Dutch frontier.

As regards the causes which have led the authorities at Westminster to put a temporary stop to all communications between Rotterdam and this country, it would probably be as well to avoid acceptance of any of the "explanations" at present being passed from mouth to mouth and await some official announcement. The impression prevails, however, in well-informed quarters in London that the British Government anticipates some action on the part of Germany which renders it undesirable to allow Holland to import any merchandise just at present. The effect of this embargo has, it is believed, been felt more seriously by Lancashire cotton spinners than by almost any other industry, for the commitments outstanding between this country and Holland in respect of cotton goods are particularly heavy just now, and with the stoppage of further consignments to the other side of the North Sea difficulties of some magnitude are likely to be created in Manchester, for while goods valued at a large sum are awaiting delivery, it is impossible to say when they will be dispatched or paid for. The inference would appear to be that the authorities here are apprehensive concerning the ultimate destination of any merchandise transmitted to Holland, and particularly as regards cotton, which, of course, is useful in many forms for military purposes, among which may be enumerated the manufacture of gun-cotton and the production of certain fabrics employed in the production of aeroplanes. To prevent such valuable raw material reaching the enemy would naturally be worth the expenditure of a good deal of energy on the part of the British Government. It is hoped in commercial circles that trade with Holland will be resumed early next month, and it is certainly very desirable that this should be the case if difficulties and embarrassments are to be avoided of a wholly unexpected character in the County Palatine. Recently the general tendency of the cotton industry has been towards higher prices, but if speculative business is to be checked there will, of course, be a reaction.

Such statements, taken in conjunction with the significant proposal to introduce universal service in Holland, and the delivery of a protest against the sinking of the Lusitania, lead one to believe that Holland is preparing for very grave eventualities.

If she can avoid war she will do so, but there is the ever-present danger of Germany, reckless of all possible consequences and desirous of doing as much damage as is possible in her fall, attempting a coup d'armes that will violate the neutrality of the Netherlands and perchance give her a momentary supply of much needed stores. One cannot forecast anything with certainty, but the fact remains that Holland's warehouses are replete with the very goods that Germany most desires, and that the proportion of German traders in Rotterdam is so large that contraband dealings are almost beyond governmental control.

LIFE IN THE TRENCHES

Argentine Men at the Front

LOSS OF HILL 60

Two interesting letters from Argentine volunteers at the front have been handed to "The Herald" for publication. The first of these is by Mr. Harold S. Stocks, a former member of the Belgrano Athletic Club, to Mr. A. L. Stocks. Containing, as it does, an interesting picture of life in the trenches, the letter should be of interest to Mr. Stocks' many friends in this country:—

Sunday, 13th. June, 1915.

Thanks ever so much for your two letters of the 7th. and 10th., both reached me in good time, and to-day the two parcels containing Sam Browne, toffee, mints, cigarettes, shoes and socks have arrived, also the shoe laces. Many thanks for all these good things which help to make life here very much worth living. Of course, real hardships have not commenced yet, but when we do get properly going, these comforts from home will be one of our chief mainstays.

What a fine encouraging message from....! It is just the knowledge that our friends' prayers and good wishes go out to us that will help us so much when our time for "deeds" comes along.

To go back to the toffee again, you may depend on it the other officers will fairly besiege me when they know I am the fortunate possessor of so many good things. I mean of course A. Coy's officers, for we always billet apart from each other so as to be as near to our men as possible. Farms are used as a rule; the men billet in the barns and the officers in the farm house if they wish, though we always prefer to bivouac. Each company has its officers' mess basket fitted with kettle, tea pots, cups, plates, cutlery, and all sorts of good things to eat, the larder being replenished weekly from the Army and Navy Stores, London. We have our own cook, who has a standing order to buy eggs, milk, butter, bread, cream, etc. daily, and we each have our servant besides, so you see campaigning under present conditions is not at all unpleasant, and our expenses are really very low. Nothing very warlike about all this you'll say: true enough, but it keeps us cheerful and that is the spirit to foster at all costs. The men too are wonderfully happy; we see that plainly enough, and they say so themselves in their letters home which we censor, much to our amusement I might add. The following is an extract from one I read only this morning: "The French girls are fine but it's awful hot out here and I have no tobacco." Others speak of shells bursting all round them, before they have been within miles of one. The imaginations of some are very elastic, and I am wondering how they will express themselves when they have really been through something exciting.

I sent Peg a letter card on Friday just previous to our departure for the trenches. We left our temporary base on Thursday morning for a fairly large town some seven miles distant where we billeted for the night and left the following day for a 24 hour spell in the trenches; this particular district is very quiet and has been so for a long time. These trenches at present are held by men of the regular army, and we were placed amongst these fellows for instruction in the art of this particular kind of warfare. To show you how quiet things are we went into the trenches at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, about one hour's march through the town and a long communication trench from the road brought us to our destination. When we got there shots were being exchanged between the snipers of each side, but one felt absolutely secure in such a well protected position, and it was impossible to feel even nervous. Occasionally we had a look at the German position by looking over the top of the parapet, but this is not a wise proceeding though I saw one of the "regulars" expose himself for quite three minutes during which time he fired several shots. Such risks are unnecessary and very foolish, for there are plenty of loopholes to fire through and heaps of periscopes for lookout purposes.

The German line is about 500 yards from where we were though in front of our B. Coy., the distance in parts is only about 30 yds. No one in A. Coy. saw a sign of the enemy the whole time, though Capt. Russell, Nagle and I climbed to the roof of a ruined farm on our left and looked long and carefully through our field glasses for a glimpse of the grey uniforms, but without success. The snipers aim for the top of the sand bags with the object of keeping their respective foe's heads below cover, and in this they are quite successful.

The trenches are beautifully made and are provided with dug-outs large enough for all the men to sleep in; the floors are either boarded, or paved with bricks, while the neatly arranged sand bags give a finish to the whole and incidentally make them quite secure. The only danger is from shells which might actually fall into the trench itself, but we had nothing so unpleasant as that. True the Boches did send a few 18 pounders into a ruined farm only 50 yds. behind us, but they do that almost daily in hopes of getting any of our men who might be there to draw water, which as a matter of fact they have long since ceased to do. At nightfall the Germans began to fire flare shells, which are really Roman candles on a big scale giving a dazzling greenish flare lighting up the whole place, and this is kept up till daybreak. Between 2 and 4 a.m. the firing becomes heavier; why this is so is rather strange, but apparently it is a matter of nerves on both sides; as the soldiers put it they "get the wind up" and blaze away.

The officers each have a dug-out built just behind, and connected with, the fire trench, where we took turns for a few hours rest. There was also a larger dug-out for a mess which holds four at a time for meals. They "did" us jolly well out of their well stocked larder. After 24 hours we marched back to our billets in the town, and after tea I was sent back here to take charge of the transport and the other details left at our temporary base while Hind takes his turn in the trenches. The battalion returns on Tuesday so I'll be here for a few days on my own with the eighty N.C.O. and men who were left here to guard the transport, headquarters, etc.

I can't help thinking what a pity it is Nip not being with us; the other officers of his Coy. are awfully sick about his being left behind. From what I've heard the officers from the 7th who are now at Colchester are not having a very happy time, and I am anxiously awaiting a letter from Nip to know what he thinks about it.

I haven't mentioned the papers yet; they are also reaching me without any delay. Please continue sending the "Times," for apart from the news of the day, they contain such a lot of other good reading unaffected by age.

I am afraid you will find this a very disjointed harangue; a good letter can't be written if one is continually interrupted to attend to some little thing or other, but you will know more or less what we have been doing lately.

LOSS OF HILL 60.

2nd. Lieutenant H. S. Thompson, R.F.A., who was formerly at Estancia La Belita, Drabble, F.C.O., has written Mr. B. Gough at the said address as follows:—

Sunday, May 30th, 1915

Was delighted to get your letter of April 12th and hear the news from Argentina. You should by now have received another letter from me written about a month ago I think.

There must have been a tremendous exodus from the Argentine, but I believe it is the same from all parts however remote. One meets fellows out here from all corners of the Globe who have hurried home to do something and by Jove they are needed as the casualty list will tell you.

Since the beginning of April we have been up close to Ypres in a very advanced position and it has been one continual scrap ever since we came. Was all through that Hill 60 affair and was the first Artillery Officer to get on to the Hill after we captured it, and when I got there found it was absolutely useless for observation purposes.

Since the Germans have recaptured it and still hold it thanks to their delightful gas.

Every now and then they make an attack when the wind is favourable for their gas and we are not only shelled from one point, but also from our flank and behind; we have had a lot of casualties, and when I tell you that many of our men have been scuppered by rifle bullets you will realise how close the gentle Huns are.

Four times have we had our teams harnessed and brought up ready to limber up and retire and each time it has quieted down a little and the teams have gone back to the wagon lines, the infantry have been able to hold the line somehow.

Last Monday we had a tremendous attack on our left flank preceded by the largest dose of gas they have treated us to so far. It started just at dawn when nearly everyone was asleep and before our fellows could get their respirators on several went under.

It was as thick as a London fog even when it reached our battery position which is about 1600 yards from the Germans; we had a terrible quarter of an hour and then thank goodness it passed over us and gradually the air cleared leaving the whole battery gasping and choking for air, coughing and spluttering; had to send several fellows to hospital and all of us were more or less affected for days afterwards, it gets right into your lungs and what one really dies of is acute bronchitis.

It is so uncanny fighting against this sort of thing, no wonder our fellows were unable to stand up against it at first—now they are becoming more accustomed to this method of warfare and a respirator is part of every man's equipment.

I saw yesterday one of the most remarkable sights I have ever seen. In the afternoon our army chaplain Capt. the Rev. Guinness, D.S.O., who is attached to the Cavalry division holding the trenches on our left, strolled up to the battery and sat down with our gunners by the guns, had tea with them and a little impromptu service, a few well known hymns, talked to the men a little, and finished up with a short prayer.

During the prayer the enemy who had up till then been fairly quiet started to shell our position and a great high explosive shell burst in the air not 30 yards from the group about the Parson and all the splinters whistled all around them.

The Chaplain continued his prayer absolutely unmoved and not a man stirred although this shell was followed in quick succession by several more, ordinarily the men would have dived for their dugouts like lightning, how no one was hit appears to be a miracle and it was the greatest testimony of the efficacy of prayer I have seen.

The Parson was a splendid chap, as a rule they do not come to such advanced positions as ours but content themselves with service well behind the firing line where they can assemble large bodies of men without fear of aeroplane observation.

It is difficult to say how long the war will last but I think it could easily go on for another year unless something unforeseen happens.

There is no doubt we shall beat the Germans eventually but we still have a tremendous task before us. They are not a beaten nation yet but I think they are just commencing to find a shortage of men to keep the

PRISON MUTINY

Outbreak at Santa Rosa de Toay

There have been previous rumours of a rising in the prison of Santa Rosa de Toay, and this has now actually occurred. It has been frequently predicted as a consequence of the interminable delays in bringing cases to trial from that place of detention. While the accused were kept in prison for long periods waiting for their cases to come on, they suffered cold and hunger, the food was insufficient and infamous in quality, and the prison building itself a disgraceful edifice with reeking damp walls and openings through which the cold wind blew at will. Driven to extremities by their miseries, the captives concerted an uprising. They suddenly attacked and burst open the interior doors and rushed upon the soldiers to overpower them at the risk of being blown away by a volley. This almost happened, for the guards drew up at points where they were protected and could pour in a deadly cross fire. They advised the pursuers to keep quiet, and the latter, on promise of better treatment, returned to their cells. The attempt was renewed next day, but again repressed by the Prison Guard and a strong picket of police. Nevertheless, the greatest uneasiness prevails, and the guards are continually under arms. There is a general demand that the Government shall intervene, as the case of these men, many of them untried and uncondemned, is such that greater consideration should certainly be shown. The present treatment is not consistent with "libertad" or "independencia" either.

various theatres of war going; a sign is that they have adopted every unscrupulous means possible; their latest tricks are poisoning with arsenic all streams that flow from their lines into ours (they have caught some of our fellows like this), using explosive bullets, and they are now making their shrapnel bullets with spikes all over them to ensure a bad wound. I have picked up several of their bullets; I think all these are signs that they are getting a little desperate.

It is very sad to see all the fellows that one was with at Woolwich go one by one killed or wounded.

I have been very lucky up to the present, had some near shaves, but a miss is as good as a mile at this game.

We are in action here in the grounds of a large Chateau and when we first came here we used to live and sleep in the Chateau but we don't now, bit by bit they have battered it down and now it is only a ruin with just one room fairly whole, in which we occasionally cook and eat when they are not shelling us, otherwise we live feed and sleep in dugouts by the guns. I have slept underground for 6 weeks in a bit of a hole where you can only kneel upright, not very pleasant but it is safer. When we were occupying the house we had a narrow squeak as a shell burst right in the room where I and two other officers slept.

Fortunately as there was an attack on at the time we were all at the guns and not in the room but all our kits were and they were blown into small pieces. I had absolutely nothing left but what I stood up in, not even a toothbrush which annoyed me more than anything as it was two weeks before I could get one.

I shall be glad to get back to the peaceful life of the camp, I have been out here 4 months now and I find the strain commence to tell on one's nerves. I must close now, I shall be awfully glad to have the news when you can spare the time to write. Recuerdos to all enquiring friends.

H. S. THOMPSON.

Public Opinion as expressed in the Argentine Press.

THE TAXES IN BUENOS AIRES PROVINCE

(La Prensa.—July 8).

Sundry delegates of diverse associations recently listened to a fiery discourse on the state of the finances of the province of Buenos Aires in relation to taxation in general and the territorial tax in particular. It is to be supposed, says "La Prensa," that the committee appointed at the aforesaid gathering will devote all its attention to the problem before it, but inasmuch as no definite lines were laid before the meeting, "La Prensa" ventures to give them a few hints that may be profitable, since it is to the general interest that the work of the committee prove efficacious. To begin with, the administration of the province for many a quinquennium past has turned on the immoderate use of credit and budgets compiled without the slightest foresight.

The natural result has been high taxes, irregularly collected, utter disregard of all complaints made by the interests most immediately concerned, and insistence on the necessity for thus imposing taxation based on the knowledge that further borrowing is impossible. Against such a situation there is a general outcry, itself a proof that the government's methods are wrongly devised. The lack of foresight shown by the government, and its inability to appreciate the general situation of the province cannot be met by merely saying that such a state of things does not exist. Taxes on landed property are undoubtedly high and out of all proportion with what it yields. "La Prensa" points out that rural property in former times met with a certain amount of consideration, and a careful examination ought to be made in order to prove to the government that its present criterion is wrong. In short the administrative incapacity of the government must be demonstrated by facts, not merely made the subject of abuse, which may act negatively in so far as the desired result is concerned. Admittedly the financial state of the province is not prosperous, and the composition of its legislature such as to militate against a proper study of the problems that affect public and private well-being. The meeting of taxpayers, on the other hand, is all-embracing, and is in an exceptional position to carry out an enquiry that will be of real popular value.

THE NATIONAL TELEGRAPH LINES

(La Prensa.—July 9).

On more than one occasion, says "La Prensa," it has drawn attention to the state of the telegraph lines down south, and points out that not there alone, but all over the republic the authorities would do well to pay more attention to one of the profitable services of the state, without however making the question of money getting subservient to the general convenience of the community. However true it may be that the receipts from the post office go to swell the national revenues, in the case of the telegraph service, which calls for capital in the shape of lines and other installations, this capital must be kept up, and if necessary added to as circumstances may demand. The proof of the shortsighted attitude adopted towards the telegraph service is given, says "La Prensa" by the assignation of $14,000 c/ per month for upkeep and renewal expenses. Now the lines date in many cases from thirty-five years back, are some 65,000 kilometers in extent, and run through much desert and scantily populated country.

Thus to allot $2.28 per kilometer

THE RAILWAY NOTE

(La Nación.—July 8).

Dealing once more with the Note presented to the government by the railway companies "La Nación," whilst deploring the weak manner in which their case has been presented, again alludes to the moral aspect of the question, and the doubt that is thrown on the good faith of the nation's decrees. Indirectly the companies allude to this point, by mentioning various legislative measures creating charges on private capital that in their very nature alter the contractual bases upon which the said capital was introduced in this country. And, comments "La Nación," however true it may be that these measures were devised to benefit the common weal, their immediate results are none the less unjust. They all fall on the companies, adding thereby to their financial difficulties. The Pension Law is in this class; the judicial interpretation of the Mitre Law may also be included; whilst to go further back one may cite the unreasonable opposition raised by the government of the province of Buenos Aires to the fusion of the Southern and the Western lines.

In every case the companies could not fail to see at work tendencies adverse to the tranquil development of their affairs. The result was to bring about a reluctance to undertake fresh development, that is now almost irradicable. The fact of the matter is, continues "La Nación," that this country has thought that the railway companies were making fabulous profits, all evidence to the contrary notwithstanding. The gains of the companies, limited as they are by the Mitre Law, are publicly known, and yet it was actually stated in Congress that the companies kept a double set of books, for their shareholders and for the state. "La Nación" castigates such stupendous ignorance as it deserves, and points out that Argentines as a whole have never realised that whilst foreign capital has put 1200 million dollars into railways, local capitalists have not been able to raise a bare two million. The result of all this ignorance and policy of extortion is only too plainly manifest in the shape of a deep crisis that may well lead to the complete suppression of all fresh capital support for this industry. Nor does the harm stop there, because as "La Nación" says, the whole situation may even affect Argentine credit in the financial markets of the world, since it does not only show the deficiencies of our economic situation, but also proves the shortness of our memory when it comes to complying with the terms of a contract, expressed or implied. Careful study is therefore called for in order that this country may regain the path from which it has strayed and prepare its mind to accept the inevitable remedy.

per year for upkeep and renewal shows an administrative lack of comprehension that easily explains the state of the lines. If they were properly looked after, and equipped in such a way as to give a satisfactory service, some millions would be required and the work would take at least three or four years. As things are the so-called "economy" is simply throwing away money. There are lines that call for complete renewal, since posts and wires are alike perished, and fall before the first squall. And if the wish to make the national lines trunk lines, in so far as fresh zones of communication are concerned, is to be translated into practice, the authorities must see to it that they are new and serviceable.

9TH OF JULY

(La Nación.—July 9).

Once more Argentines look back to the work of their forefathers, and, observes "La Nación," it is a work that consoles us for the spectacle offered by their descendants. To recall the work of that great generation to which this country owes her liberty is not merely paying a debt of gratitude, but is at the same time a civic lesson that must and should be renewed for the benefit of successive generations. It is a lesson in idealism, now more necessary than it ever was before owing to the materialistic and mean minded conception of life that is all too prevalent nowadays. If the generation that conceived the idea of independence were able to carry out their plans it was chiefly due to the fact that they were led by a disinterested patriotism. No task ever looked more insuperable, than that which confronted the heroes of 1816, when after the failure of the revolution in Upper Peru, all appeared lost. Yet it was precisely this moment that was chosen by the Congress of Tucuman to declare their faith in the future.

Much progress has been made since those days, not only in a material but also in a moral sense, yet the task that lies before us, continues "La Nación," is precisely the same as that which faced the men of 1816. Just as they placed the supreme interests of the nation above the interests of the individual, so must we do, even when the national interests appear hostile to the latter. Our forefathers had the hardest part, in that they had to break the soil, to establish the liberty that this country now enjoys at the price of blood and battle. Ours be it, "La Nación" concludes, to use our endeavours to make the nation as a whole realise the proud hopes with which our predecessors launched it on its course.

PRISON ACCOMMODATION IN ROSARIO

(La Prensa.—July 10).

Owing to the financial difficulties that prevent the carrying out of the original scheme for building a penitentiary in the Province of Santa Fé there is some talk of reforming the prison accommodation in Rosario, concerning which, says La Prensa it has written on many occasions. As a matter of fact Rosario gaol merely serves to confine evil doers, since the building is good for nothing else, unless it be to increase the number of vices of those interned within its walls. To expect anything in the nature of reformation, given the state in which the prisoners dwell, is absurd, and can only lead to disappointment. Unfortunately this same promiscuity is to be found in the major portion of the prisons scattered throughout the Republic. The manner in which they are built makes segregation impossible, with the result that first offenders live promiscuously with habitual criminals, and prisoners awaiting trial are compelled to resort with those who have already been sentenced.

This prison régime, declares La Prensa, is largely responsible for the steady increase of crime, despite the fact that modern criminology, as applied to prison discipline, seeks always to do away with the idea of expiation, replacing it by a desire to effect a lasting reform and thereby prevent a repetition of the offence. This objective is of the greatest importance to society, and prisons ought therefore to be something more than mere enclosures wherein the convicted must serve out their sentence. In other countries important progress has been made, and common life between the prisoners has been stopped simply because it was merely continuing the habits under which the criminals lived when at liberty. Here the old régime still rules, the case of Rosario gaol being an example very much to the point, hence the absolute need for reforming its existing condition.

WAR AND COMMERCE

(La Prensa.—July 12).

The colossal conflict that has turned all Europe into an armed camp of desolation has naturally reacted in a very considerable degree on the neutral lands, which assist at the dread spectacle and suffer the sad consequences of the general dislocation. And among the neutrals those who suffer most are those who have been most closely linked with the countries now at war. All the activity which foreign capital and immigration brought about in Argentina has been paralysed, and with this paralysis has come the forced cessation of all new public works, and the suspension of many that were in course of construction. That is not however the feature to which La Prensa deems it necessary to draw special attention at the present moment, general commercial intercourse, in so far as imports are concerned, being of more immediate importance.

Shortly before the war broke out traders generally held large stocks, and owing to the crisis it was feared that liquidation would be slow and painful. As a matter of fact everything has found a buyer, down to the remnants, and the danger now is that although Argentina has money where-with to buy the European manufacturers will not be able to supply her needs. This, says La Prensa, is the problem now before her. The American traders, notwithstanding that the war has gone on for close on a year, have scarcely made any entry in this market. Either they are not interested in it, or their goods and their system of sale are not adaptable to local needs. Hence, concludes La Prensa, the Government ought to take steps to secure the entry of the most indispensable merchandise, and no-one could say that by so doing it was breaking its neutrality. The matter might be arranged through the various consuls, they being asked to seek out information and if necessary to act as discreet intermediaries on behalf of the Argentine consumer.

UNJUSTIFIABLE DELAY

(La Prensa.—July 13).

Facts have unfortunately confirmed the predictions made when the Congress of 1915 was yet young, namely, that it would be but a sterile session, absorbed by the problem of the coming Presidency. And among other matters of urgency that have been neglected the question of the Buenos Aires Municipality stands first in importance. In the Federal Capital the authorities must be appointed in accordance with Congressional law, and this doctrine is irrevocable. Hence, since the dissolution of the Municipal Council the responsibility for the leaderless state of the Commune rests directly on Congress. "La Prensa" goes on to point out that two courses are open to Congress: either let it annul the present organic law relating to the Federal Municipality, or comply with its terms.

Admittedly the time is not propitious for a careful and thorough revision of the municipal law, but that is no reason for maintaining the municipality of Buenos Aires in an acephalous condition. Laws are only dethroned by new laws, whence it follows that existing systems must be complied with. The correct solution would be to order the existing Municipal Commission to prepare for municipal elections, and at the same time to administer the affairs of the commune. The incapacity of the legislators is not the fault of the people, and if Congress has neither time nor wish to revise the laws, let it at least carry out existing statutes and thereby conform to the principles of the constitution. Nor does the argument that a call to fresh elections means re-opening the shady chapter of the previous Municipal Council invalidate these facts. It is the legal principle that is at stake, and "La Prensa" concludes by accusing Congress of a neglect of its duties.

THE GERMAN REPLY TO THE STATES

(La Nación.—July 12).

Apparently, says La Nación, the German reply has not satisfied American public opinion, and there is also every reason to believe that it has not satisfied the authorities at the White House. This is but to be expected seeing that the German Note eludes rather than answers the fundamental questions put by North America. Briefly, the German Government limits itself to defending its system of submarine warfare as being but a reprisal for the blockade of German ports by Great Britain, and proposes measures for the protection of American citizens that would deprive the American Note of its character of a protest based not on the laws of war but on the dictates of mere humanity. It is therefore clear that the German intention is to draw out the discussion as long as possible, a method that is apparently much favoured by German diplomacy, judging by the fact that Chile's Note of protest concerning the violation of territorial waters by the late Dresden is still unanswered.

That the German Government should accuse Great Britain of responsibility for the submarine war is comprehensible; as La Nación remarks it is the customary procedure for any wrong that lacks justification to try and throw the blame elsewhere, but the United States is not likely to pay much heed to this claim. For diverse reasons the United States Government has asked Germany to alter her actual system of submarine warfare, the main argument being not the protection of American citizens but the general inhumanity of such acts. The suggestions made by Germany relative to the safeguarding of American citizens are therefore of but secondary importance. Nor can Washington have been pleased at being baldly told that the Lusitania carried ammunition, when they had officially denied this impeachment. Altogether it is readily understandable why the reply should not find favour up north. The precise opinion of the Washington Government is not yet known. There is no need for hurry, nor is there any call for precipitate action, and La Nación believes that yet another effort will be made to bring Germany to her senses and get her to consent to plans that although unacceptable at the moment in Berlin may well be welcome in a very short time.

FRANCO-ARGENTINE COMMERCE

(La Nación.—July 14).

After referring to the recent commercial mission that has just left these shores, La Nación points out that latterly France had lost ground in the commercial strife, statistics showing that French imports in Argentina were reduced to articles of luxury, valuable in themselves but not calculated to build up a big trade, which if it is to show real expansion must be founded on a large demand by the major portion of society. Here is the market that France must seek to satisfy, and it is in this direction that her trade must seek expansion, without necessarily foregoing her finer trade, for which there will always be a good even if limited demand. Personal observation will no doubt have suggested something of this sort to the delegates, and they will doubtless recommend the shipment of large quantities of goods saleable at popular prices.

For, as La Nación remarks, trade must be adapted to national exigencies if it is to create a large demand, whilst in so far as the export trade of the Argentine is concerned it is determined by our agrarian industries, fomented by the heavy demand for foodstuffs in the more densely populated lands of Europe. Argentine interests therefore call for freedom from interference with the importation of her foodstuffs through tariff or other exigencies, whilst it is to the advantage of France to win a prominent place in the general trade of this country, which represents some 20 per cent of its total imports.

THE SOCIALISTIC CONGRESS

(La Nación.—July 13.)

General interest has centred round the recent Socialist Congress, says "La Nación," largely owing to the Palacios incident; but the real importance of the meeting lay in the indication that it afforded of the tendencies of a party whose intervention in public life has been of undoubted importance, tendencies that embodied much more than the mere incident of the right to accept a challenge to the duel, seeing that the question of duelling in so far as it concerns the Socialist party here, is of greater importance than the question of duelling in the abstract. The resolution taken by the Rosario Socialist Congress, suppressing the clause prohibiting personal combat is really very significant. "La Nación" continues. It shows the ultra-Socialist spirit capitulating to local conditions, wherein personal bravery is both genuine and traditional, and shows, moreover, that Socialism is becoming more truly national and at one with the national character.

Hence the resolution of the recent Congress in Buenos Aires appears to "La Nación" as being re-actionary, and proves the preponderance of the anti-national spirit, as does the resolution to consider it legal for candidates who have been affiliated for six months with the party to take part in elections and designation of candidates without their being naturalised Argentine citizens. The importance of this decision, in view of the activity of the Socialists, and the assistance rendered in their recent campaigns by accidental aids, needs, says "La Nación," no insistence. This is the chief point of importance in the proceedings of the congress, but, concludes "La Nación," the antagonism shown by the working class members against the intellectuals, is also noteworthy, showing as it does a state of antagonism that may well affect high ideals, especially when such ideals are translated into the concrete facts of public employment.

THE MORTGAGE QUESTION

(La Prensa.—July 14).

Referring anew to the large amount of overdue mortgages, collection of which is sought by judicial means, La Prensa maintains that given the vast sum at stake, it is permissible to consider the question in other than its strictly legal aspect. $300,000,000 is mentioned as the total of the sums overdue, and calculating that mortgages have been granted on a third of the value of the properties affected, one reaches close on a thousand million dollars as the total involved. La Prensa points out that the crisis has reached a stage at which ordinary remedies are insufficient. The general cry is for a moratorium, but will such a measure relieve the position of the debtors? It would suspend the execution of the debt for a fixed term, but it would not suspend the interest, nor would it prevent the descent in property values. Thus the debt would be growing, and the guarantee on which it was based would be falling in proportion.

This entirely apart from the rights of the creditor, which cannot legally be denied, and the problem gets worse year by year. It is undoubtedly a fact that the enormous amount of hypothecary obligations is the chief reason that prevents the crisis from lifting, since debtors under a mortgage do not benefit to any extent from the improved agricultural position, nor from the general economy that is now being practised. And black though the present may be, the future prospects are still more gloomy, the one outstanding fact being that the debt increases with time, whilst the prospect of fresh capital flowing hither becomes more and more distant daily. Moreover looked at from the creditor standpoint there is an equally

—“You rebels, look to taste the due meet for rebellion.”

Rebels, will be the term applied to those whether they be masters or men, who in any way foment or abet the proposed coal strike in South Wales. This is no time for palterings or polite generalities. If the strike be the result of greed on the part of the coal owners, they must be constrained, forcibly if need be, to recognise that the King's Authority is not a mere phrase and expression, but a living force; if the men are to blame they must be coerced if need be, and those who stand in the way of the country's need for ammunition, whether masters or men should taste the discipline of a gaol. Incidentally the teeth of the greedy and shameless exploiter who seeks to make gain from his country's need, are to be drawn, by a coal prices Regulation Bill in the United Kingdom.

The Sons of the Prophets.

An atmosphere ecclesiastical pervades the British community this week, which is an excellent thing for the community. Such an assembly of Rev. Gentlemen, Canons, Archdeacons, and Chaplains we only see once a year, and it may be the heat, which caused the atmosphere to vibrate and multiply things seen, but they do seem more numerous than usual this time. They have come in from the North and from the South, and from the East, and from the West and from the Isles of the Sea (this is a flourish and not to be taken literally. Falkland Isles are not represented.) Garbed in seemly black raiment they make a sort of island of Theology in the midst of a workaday and profane world. As to clerical costume, even if one possess a knowledge of Historical dress, it is something of a difficulty to discover the origin of the round and round collar which is de rigueur, to say nothing of the problem of gaiters, apron and the Episcopal Beaver with side strings. We live in a time when the Church is at times exceeding militant, and while there are no actual reproductions of Antony Beck, Longshanks' fighting Bishop, there are plenty of "brisk young men" at the front as Chaplains who are frequently under fire, and display the same sang froid as did the Padre of the 24th at Rorke's Drift.

"The Melancholy Days are Come."

Buenos Aires is at present experiencing a spell of weather which reminds one of some of the malignant yet subtle efforts of a British winter. Close, muggy, and heavy, the temperature and windless days are exceedingly trying and, recall the urgent need for a solution. The likelihood of forced sales in large quantities foreshadows a complete collapse of the property market, both urban and rural, and indeed this phenomenon is already noticeable, whilst the lowering of property values also means a reduced level of revenues based thereon. La Prensa is therefore of opinion that relief can only be had from the mortgage companies, who by saving their debtors will also help to save themselves by stopping the steady depreciation in capital values. The position of the debtors is more or less akin to that of a state temporarily unable to meet its engagements, being on a par with that of Argentina in 1890, or that of the Province of Buenos Aires some time ago. Hence a consolidation scheme drawn up by the companies would help to improve the situation, and La Prensa leaves its suggestion to the consideration of the financial world.

GAMBLE WITH DEATH

HOW A WAR CORRESPONDENT
FACED DANGER.

One of the survivors of H.M.S. Majestic has related to the "Daily Telegraph" the following story of the coolness of the well-known war correspondent Mr. Ashmead Bartlett, who was on board the battleship when she was torpedoed off the Gallipoli peninsula.

"I saw Mr. Ashmead Bartlett standing on the quarter-deck. Without the least dramatic show, Mr. Ashmead Bartlett glanced at his wrist-watch. He took up a position close to the port bulkhead door, right in a line with the aft turret gun, looking around calmly for his loophole for escape, then glancing again at his watch, then at the men who dashed past him in their hopeful race for life.

"There he stood, reminding me of a 100 yards race in the rôle of time-keeper, watching the whole bunch of competitors speeding on to the tape, looking at the men, then at his watch. There he stood gambling with death. He was there when seconds only divided him from the Majestic's last plunge. Then at the last moment he took to the water, and was rescued. I never saw a cooler, calmer man. I felt proud of him. I think the world ought to know he gambled with death to let the world know the final scenes as the Majestic went to her doom."

AUSTRALIANS FOR EUROPE

ANOTHER 50,000 IN TRAINING.

London, July 13.

A cable message from Melbourne announces that more large contingents of troops are on the point of sailing for Europe, while another 50,000 are in training. The recruiting campaign has yielded excellent results.

old Scots saying that "A green Yule makes a fat kirkyard." The "flu," that "fell disease on every side stalks forth and grips the breath," cough mixtures and pastilles are at a premium, cod liver oils are firm, and the Doctor entereth in, with a good bedside manner affably enquiring "And how are we to-day?" It is "a sickly season" and we have also the "bloody war" usually associated with it in the wicked old Regimental toast, the grasshopper is a burden, we perspire excessively, a gray haze covers the sky, and man was made to mourn. In short this weather is exceeding beastly, and nothing less than the destruction of many thousand Germans, a "Hecatombe" (lovely word) can make one feel any way cheerful. And Thursday is St. Swithun's Day too!

The Rear Guard.

"La Razon" publishes an article severely reflecting upon the manners and behaviour of Tramway employees in general, and of guards in particular. The article gives specific instances of rudeness on the part of the guards with the numbers of the offenders but, it must be granted that notwithstanding these black sheep, the tram guard in B. A. is usually a very decent fellow. Some of them are excellent fellows, and perhaps their chief failing is a slackness towards those gentlemen who refuse to notice the intimation "Es prohibido escupir en el suelo." It were certainly better if this were rigidly enforced but, it is an imperfect world, and the poor guard has a hard life and long hours, wherefore let us be as pleasant with him as may be, say "gracias" when he hands the ticket, and make his task as easy as we can by not insisting on standing a dozen deep on the rear platform.

BRITON.

ROSARIO NEWS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

July 13.

Golf. The Fisherton Cup.

Play for the Fisherton Cup took place at the links of the Rosario Golf Club on Sunday, when T. H. Taylor secured the trophy with a net score of 74, R. C. Higginson being the runner-up with a net score of 75. There were 21 entries, and the play was followed with keen interest. The competition was three rounds medal play, with choice score of holes to complete two rounds—in other words, it was an eclectic competition. The course was in fairly good order, though the greens were a bit rough on account of the prolonged dry weather.

The July monthly handicap play for ladies took place on Saturday, the 3rd instant, with the following results: Mrs. Crouch, first round, minus 3; second round, all square; total, minus 3. Mrs. Van Horne, first round, minus 1; second round, minus 3; total, minus 4.

The play in the gentlemen's monthly handicap took place on the following day. Results: Mr. Van Horne, minus 5 and plus 1, total, minus 4. Mr. T. H. Marston, minus 2 and minus 3; total, minus 5.

The next big contest is for the F.C.C.A. Cup, the date being August 15th, this, one of the best cups in the country, always puts players on their mettle. The next monthly handicaps will take place on the first Saturday and Sunday in August, for ladies and gentlemen respectively.

Roldan Tennis Club.

Once upon a time few clubs could compare in vitality and enthusiasm with the Roldan Tennis Club. An energetic president devoted time and money to the courts and their surroundings, and everything went well. Of late, the interest has abated, and the club premises have spread their nets in vain; partly owing to the war, probably. The other day a meeting was called, and the only surviving members of the committee—the President, Mr. Marsh, and the Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. Seddon, made up the entire muster. The business of the meeting was to decide whether the club could be revived, or whether it should, to put it succinctly, "snuff out." It was proposed by the Secretary that the President should "see what he could do." This was carried nem. con., and Mr. Marsh hopes to interest some of the leading residents in the direction of making good use of the exceptional facilities for tennis which the club affords.

Alberdi Tennis Club.

The members of the Alberdi Tennis Club also conferred amongst themselves on a recent occasion, and decided to make active propaganda in furtherance of increased membership. I hear that there has been a welcome influx of recruits as an immediate result.

New Alberdi Athletic Club: Forthcoming Tournament.

The committee of the Athletic Club of the Stores Department of the Central Cordoba Railway have decided to organise their Athletic Tournament at New Alberdi on Saturday, July 24. A programme is appended.

So far donations of silver cups have been received from the Chief Engineer, Mr. A. Jack, the Traffic Manager, Mr. R. Stuart, the Chief Accountant, Mr. R. Montgomery, and the Treasurer, Mr. A. J. Knight, besides a number of useful presents from many of the local business houses. All details can be obtained from Mr. Gerald V. Cumberbatch, the Hon. Secretary of the Sports Committee.

The events include: Kicking the football; throwing the cricket ball; 100 metres races in series; long jump; tug-of-war; 120 metres hurdle race; high jump; 220 metres flat race; 100 metres for ladies; 50 metres, children under 10; thread-the-needle race; costume race, 200 metres; 100 metre sack race; 100 metres three-legged race; 100 metres veterans' race; 800 metres flat race; 200 metres obstacle race; 200 metres consolation race.

The prize distribution will follow.

The Markets.

Wheat has been absolutely a dead letter as far as export trading is concerned, and little better as regards any trading, for nothing has been done beyond a few small lots to local millers. Neither has there been any trading in the speculative option or futures market—prices being entirely nominal. Spot value is $11.60 to $11.80 for 78 kilo quality.

Maize has been, on the contrary, quite an active market, and a free business has been done at $4.60 to $4.70. The week under review began with value $4.55 to $4.60, and improved under large buying orders, supposed to be for Scandinavian and Dutch a/c. This caused prices to advance to $4.70, but the demand appears to have been satisfied, and the market is again quieter with sellers at $4.65 and possibly $4.60.

The small proportion of English steamers now loading here calls for attention. To-day there are only 4 or 5 against 8 to 10 neutral boats, Dutch, Norwegian, etc. It would appear as though the demand which up to a month or so ago was for Italian ports has been transferred to the northern European ports.

Freights have fluctuated tremendously. Last week as low as 55s. was done, usual open charter. Market firmed up and a steamer for July loading was reported fixed at 62½ on Saturday, whilst to-day (Tuesday) London advices report a weak market and quote 52½ as value.

Linseed has been a quiet market.

The Great Raymond.

I asked Mr. Clark what was the Great Raymond's star turn. He replied: "They are all star turns; each trick is better than the last!" Certainly the visit of the world-famous illusionist is creating great interest, and the effective poster campaign has filled the city with speculation as to whether anyone will be able to bind this slippery gentleman. If, as alleged, he once got out of a garotter's chair, there is little hope of "coming over him."

Alberdi School Sports.

Alberdi High School was favoured with glorious weather for the Annual Sports, which were held on July 9, in the High School grounds. There were a number of onlookers, chiefly parents of the pupils and small brothers and sisters. The Rev. J. A. Rickards acted as President, the Vice-Presidents being Miss Gillbee and Miss Searle. Miss M. G. Starkie, Miss Jessie Watson, Mr. G. H. Ransdale, and Mr. C. H. Taylor acted as judges. The starter was Mr. A. A. Gordon Grace, who also acted as sports manager, along with Mr. C. H. Taylor. The O. P. G. Committee consisted of Miss Ruth Browning (Hon. Sec.), Miss M. A. Unwin, Miss E. Watson, Mr. A. A. G. Grace, Mr. G. H. Ransdale, and Mr. C. H. Taylor (Hon. Treasurer).

Throwing the cricket ball (open), prize presented by Mr. G. H. Ransdale.—Won by Dorothy Unwin.

100 yards handicap (under 10), prize presented by Miss A. M. Gillbee.—1st James Fowler, 2nd T. F. Rosenbaum.

High jump (open).—1st, Florence Beane.

60 yards (under 9), prize presented by Miss M. G. Starkie.—1st Rosie Fones, 2nd Eitel Rosenbaum; last (booby prize), Maggie Brunton.

Egg and spoon race (open).—1st Florence Beane.

Thread the Needle (open).—1st Linda Castella.

Obstacle race (open), prize presented by Mr. H. J. Ransdale.—1st Doris Garside.

Long jump (open), prize presented by Mr. C. H. Taylor.—1st Florence Beane.

120 yards handicap prize, presented by Mr. S. G. Burch.—1st Margaret Fowler.

Three-legged race (100 yards handicap).—Won by Kathleen Edwardes and Edith Fones.

Potato race (under 12).—James Fowler.

Potato race (under 9).—Robert Brunton.

Sack race (100 yards handicap), prize presented by the Misses Watson.—1st Gladys Nixon; last, Robert Brunton.

Bun race (under 8).—1st Eitel Rosenbaum; 2nd Robert Brunton.

220 yards handicap, prize presented by Mr. A. A. Gordon Grace.—1st Margarita Rosenbaum, 2nd Florence Beane.

Tug-of-War.—The teams were captained by F. Beane and D. Garside. Won by Garside's team.

100 yards visitors' race, under 16.—Erica Sarghel.

Old Pupils' Guild race (120 yards handicap).—1st G. H. Ransdale, 2nd E. Unwin, 3rd A. A. G. Grace.

Consolation race (for all competitors not having won a prize in the first 15 events).—1st Perey Ryberg, 2nd Leslie Pumfrett.

Parents of present pupils.—Mrs. Hosford.

The enthusiasm was well maintained until the end, and at 5.30 the prizes became the centre of attraction. The Rev. J. A. Rickards, as President, thanked in the name of all who had so enjoyed the afternoon the committee of the Old Pupils' Guild. They had devoted much thought and time and certainly their efforts had been rewarded in the success of the afternoon. It was a cause of much pleasure and satisfaction to himself and Miss Gillbee that the Old Pupils' Guild were taking so keen an interest in their school. He then called upon Mrs. Rickards to present the prizes. The pupils showed their appreciation of all that had been done for their enjoyment and benefit by giving three ringing cheers for the committee of the Old Pupils' Guild, three more for Miss Gillbee, and the Rev. A. J. and Mrs. Rickards. The proceedings terminated with the National Anthem.

The committee of the Old Pupils' Guild wish to thank the following persons for donations received on behalf of the school sports: Mr. and Mrs. Guilding, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Unwin, the Misses Watson, Miss A. Gillbee, Miss R. Browning, Miss M. G. Starkie, Mr. and Mrs. Hosford, Miss M. R. Searle, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Ransdale, Mr. and Mrs. Rosenbaum, Mr. and Mrs. Dolbey, Mr. and Mrs. Pumfrett, Messrs. Miles, G. Ransdale, A. Watson, jun., C. H. Taylor, A. A. G. Grace, W. H. Watson, and S. G. Burch.

DAY BY DAY IN ROSARIO.

(From Our Correspondent).

July 13.

The wedding of Miss Erne Erickson, daughter of Mr. Edward Erickson, of the Stores Department (F.C.C.A.), to Mr. Eliot Carr, of R. del Sels y Cia., a son of Mr. Carr, of the Carriage and Wagon Department, took place at St. Bartholomew's Church on Saturday, Canon Pepys officiating. The civil ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, 3534 Calle Salta.

The marriage of Mr. B. Robins, who has been in the correspondence section of the Stores Department of the Central Argentine Railway for some years, to Miss B. Lehmann, is to take place at Carcaraña on Sunday next the 17th inst. The occasion is to be marked by the presentation of a set of cutlery, subscribed for amongst the bridegroom's fellow employes.

The great Raymond arrived yesterday, and opens at the Colón to-morrow night. Mr. Harry Clark has been here for the past week or so making the multifarious arrangements necessary.

On Thursday of last week the marriage of Miss Dora Lopez Zamora to Mr. Salustiano C. Torres was celebrated by Pastor José Ignacio Yari in the house of the bride's parents. After the ceremony a reception was held which was largely attended by friends and relatives from Rosario and Cordoba.

There was a large turn out of members of the Plaza Jewell Tennis Club at the weekly meeting last Wednesday when tea was provided by the Misses Pinasco. This week Miss Chiesa will give tea.

Mrs. Perkins and Miss Daisy Perkins arrived in the city this morning from Buenos Aires.

The recent concert at Roldan in aid of the Red Cross Fund (per Mrs. C. H. Pearson) realised, I understand, something over $200.

A son has been born to Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Christie, of Fisherton.

The Rev. Canon Pepys is in Buenos Aires, where he is attending the session of the Anglican Diocesan Synod which is being held there this week. The lay delegates of St. Bartholomew's are Mr. T. G. Russell and Mr. J. G. Van Oppen.

I regret to learn that Mr. A. C. Lacey, Manager of the Banco Británico in this city, is laid up with pleurisy.

The wedding of Miss Lucia Miles, eldest daughter of Mr. E. E. Miles, of "El Trebol," to Mr. Orti, is to take place on the 31st.

Mr. S. H. Harris, formerly of Funes, has been promoted Lance-Corporal of "C" Company of the London Rifle Brigade. He belongs to the Contaduría Department of the Central Argentine Railway. Messrs. C. J. Coombes and T. H. Nichols, of the Stores Department, have also joined the London Rifle Brigade, and letters from them report that they are both "in the best."

Several American citizens in Rosario were able, thanks to the arrangement of the dates, to follow on the celebration of the 3rd and 4th here by a visit to Buenos Aires in time for the big festivities on the 5th.

Friday's sale of work at the Methodist Church, aftermath of the Grand Patriotic Bazaar in aid of the Prince of Wales's Fund last November, realised a sum of just over $200. Mr. De la Haye won the rocking-horse. The committee desire to thank the public most heartily for their support on both occasions; and in turn congratulations are due to the committee, and especially to the President, Mr. A. Mactavish; the Secretary, Mr. A. Mitchell; and the Treasurer, Mr. W. C. Crease; for their part. It will be recalled that November's effort realised $4,000.

A debate is to be held at the Methodist Church shortly by members of the Epworth League, the sides to be married v. Single. A subject has not yet been chosen.

The Rev. G. A. Werner has received a cable from New York stating that Mrs. Werner has embarked on the s.s. Verdi en route for this country. A warm welcome from many friends awaits her.

After an absence of 15 days leave, Mr. M. E. Victory left this morning for Puerto Militar to join the Moreno. He speaks in glowing terms of his trip to the United States and his voyage on the Moreno. The officers were everything that could be desired in their attention towards the conscripts.

One of the largest subscriptions from Argentina to the British War Loan was that of Messrs. P. A. Hardcastle and Co., of Bahia Blanca, a firm which has frequently demonstrated its patriotic sentiments in matters affecting the interests of the Empire. Through their bankers, Messrs Hardcastle subscribed £10,000 toward the loan.

By the "Amazon," there will shortly arrive Mr. Montague Eddy to act as lieutenant to Mr. R. de Candolle, as Manager to the F.C.S., who finds the demands of work and supervision of 4000 miles of line, and many additional activities, more than one man can cope with. Mr. Eddy has previously held the post of Mineral Traffic Manager to the L. and N. W. Railway, so his experience has been obtained in the best of schools.

DAY BY DAY IN BAHIA BLANCA.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

July 8.

On Monday last Mr. Cowan, of the firm of Messrs. Cory Bros., left here en route for Brazil, where he is going to take up a position in the company's offices there.

Mrs. Jordon and family are expected to arrive back here next week from England. News has already been received of their safe arrival at Rio.

The christening of the son of Mr. and Mrs. Potter took place last Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Field, who has just returned to this district with his wife from their honeymoon, has now been transferred from Rio Colorado to Saavedra.

Mrs. Marrs, of Ingeniero White, is expected out here again in about a month's time, and is sailing on the "Bogota," which calls here. Mr. and Mrs. Marrs will afterwards take up their residence in Bahia Blanca, and have taken a house in calle La Plata.

July 11.

Mr. R. Barker, of the firm of Messrs. Macadam and Co., is leaving on Friday for Buenos Aires in order to go to England as a volunteer.

Mr. Bulmore, who was to have gone to Australia on the C. 4 left here for the Capital on Thursday last.

Mr. Queenie and family are leaving here for England on July 25.

Mr. McCombie is in town for a few days and staying at the South American Hotel.

On Friday, a noche de moda was held at the South American Hotel, and was very well attended. The cinematograph held in the bar there will in future start at 5.30 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays, in accordance with a request made to the management.

On Wednesday next the concert in aid of the French Red Cross is to be held in the Municipal Theatre. Nearly all the seats have already been sold, and the programme promises to be exceptionally good.

DAY BY DAY IN CORDOBA.

(From Our Correspondent).

July 12.

Mr. MacDonald from Devoto (B.A.), spent the week-end in our city on a business trip.

Mr. Scribner has returned to town from a trip to the interior.

The first Fancy Dress Ball which has occurred in this city for a number of years will take place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. F. Lindemann, Alta Cordoba, on Saturday next.

Mrs. G. E. Morton has recovered from her recent indisposition and her many friends are pleased to see her around once more.

Among the young folks indulging in a little cricket practice at the Cordoba Athletic Club on last Sunday were noticed Miss Dorothy, Jack and Donald Lewis, Miss Violet Dunbar and the Boyd children.

Mr. S. A. Parker expects to leave for Buenos Aires on Tuesday night on a short business trip.

Mrs. Talbot Wright and Miss Bessie Hughes were visitors at the Athletic Club on Sunday afternoon.

The progressive Bridge Drive held at the English Club last Thursday night in aid of the Prince of Wales Fund, was a decided success and a very satisfactory sum was realised for the benefit of the families of the soldiers who are serving at the front.

Mrs. V. R. Sadleir who has been ill is now much improved in health.

Professor and Mrs. Bigelow, Mr. and Mrs. Rector, Mrs. Wyatt Smith and Miss Randall were present at the American Tennis Tournament held at the Athletic Club courts on Friday last.

The Rev. Cyril Moore leaves town to-morrow night on his regular two weeks trip to the camp and will return on July 29.

ALLIES' WHEAT CROP

SHORTAGE IN FRANCE;
SURPLUS IN RUSSIA.

Paris, July 9.

"Le Temps" estimates that owing to the shortage in the French wheat harvest this year it will be necessary to import about 25 million quintals, most of which will probably come from America. On the other hand, the yield of wheat in Russia will be above the average.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION

OF KING OF BULGARIA.

London, July 13.

The "Daily Mail" has published a telegram from Sofia which states that two men who attempted to assassinate King Ferdinand have been executed.

This is the first intimation that has been received in London of any attempt against the life of the King of Bulgaria.

OUR WAR

AND WE MUST WIN IT

The German war-cry, the greeting when two Germans meet, is "Gott strafe England!" (God punish England!). It is not "God punish Russia" or "France," but our country "England." The hates, hopes, and efforts of 70,000,000 Germans have but one centre and object, the wiping out of Great Britain; and all the spluttering venom with which the German professors and journalists overflow is directed against ourselves and our "contemptible little Army." The moral is that, without abating one jot of confidence in our splendid Allies, we must more and more, as the war goes on, realise the duty of relying upon ourselves.

Our soldiers at the front understand what it is to be fighting a Power that has gathered up all its energy and skill to crush and annihilate them. We at home do not yet understand it. Our women and children are not being mutilated, nor our towns levelled to the ground, nor our farms and fields churned by shell-fire into craters of mud and ashes. As a nation we simply cannot conceive what Belgium, Poland, and Northern France are like at this moment. Nor are we a hating people. It might be better for us at this juncture if we were. Nothing then would be tolerated that stood for a single instant between the concentration of our national will and resources upon the single purpose of defeating those who are doing their utmost to destroy us.

One sign that we really grasp the crisis will be forthcoming when we cease to expect other people to help us out of our troubles. For a long time we were counting extravagantly upon the Russians. Fables of Russian armies passing through England roused the most childishly sanguine anticipations in the popular mind. The Russians, as a matter of fact, have played and are still playing an heroic part in the great drama under almost insuperable difficulties. But at no time was it ever possible for them, hard pressed as they have been, to think for a moment of detaching any of their forces.

Then people began to talk of the assistance we might look for from Rumania, a country with a population about the size of Greater London, and from Bulgaria, which has had nearly as much war as most nations can stand. After that it was Portugal's turn. Then Greece appeared on the scene as a possible ally. To-day it is the Americans. People ask, "What are the chances of America declaring war?" These are matters entirely and exclusively for the determination of the Americans themselves. Should they resolve to throw in their lot with us it would be a very welcome and a very significant development. But they will make their decision, as every nation must, in the light of their own needs and interests, which are far better known to them than they possibly can be to us. From the Russians, the Serbians, the magnificent courage of the Belgians, and the incomparable vigour with which the French are teaching the Germans that the France of 1915 is not the France of 1870, we in Great Britain have already received a wealth of assistance that must always remain a precious national memory.

Our duty meanwhile is plain. It is to go straight ahead. It is to trust to ourselves and our present Allies. It is to dismiss from our minds all pleasant calculations that are based merely on possibilities that may or may not become actualities. It is to remember, what a study of the casualty lists should make it impossible for any of us to forget, that this is a war against us and that our Empire, our sea power, our commerce are the prizes for which Ger-

PRESIDENT WILSON AND THE COUNTRY

(From the New York "Evening Sun," June 9.)

All that is loyal in the country will be stirred to-day to new fervor and resolution in upholding the President. When false friends—watery hearts and minds of divided faith—fall away from him and proclaim their moral support of the nation's adversary, all that is manly and true in the citizenship will see its duty and find its pride in standing fast with the man who is not afraid to defend the country's rights and vindicate its honor.

There is not, there never has been, anything extreme or extravagant in the President's demands upon Germany. He has protested in the name of humanity against methods of warfare which violate the international code and which are inconsistent with civilized standards. But all that Mr. Wilson has actually insisted upon is an assurance that the American flag shall not be outraged through high handed and unlawful practices, that American ships and American citizens shall remain in full enjoyment of their right to navigate the seas in safety as against abnormal and reckless acts of war which are wantonly aimed against neutrals as well as belligerents.

This is a minimum demand that the President makes. To ask any less would be to confess that the American people had no rights which Germany was bound to respect, no freedom upon the seas which was not subordinate to the German will to win. The demand embodied in the President's earlier notes and presumably in the new one is a mere declaration of America's equal place in the family of nations and of her citizens' equality of right to the common possessions of mankind.

We say no less could be demanded; it is equally plain that no delay could be tolerated in pressing the demand, in urging compliance with it on the part of Germany. To allow our protest and our declaration of rights to degenerate into a process of palaver while submarines went on sinking our ships and killing our men, women and children would be a cowardice and a folly only short of a complete surrender. Altogether too much injury has been suffered already. To endure any more in the name of an abstraction of peace would be to make us a shame to ourselves and a laughter to the world.

The President is right. He has been right throughout this entire difficulty. He has said or done nothing that sane and temperate men may not approve and assist with clean conscience and pure heart. To-day more than ever it is the duty of all to show that he truly represents the people of the United States in the position which he has taken up and that they will back him up in it to the last extremity.

many is striving with all her might. If we acted, as we should, on these simple precepts there would be a speedy end of our haphazard, indiscriminate and uneconomical methods of recruiting and we should begin to organise the entire country, and every man and woman in it, on a war basis. At present by not organising or taking fore-thought, and by trusting to bad news to stimulate recruiting, the authorities are draining some of the best men from the ammunition factories, are filling the ranks with an undue proportion of married men, and are passing over hundreds of thousands of young "possibles" who declare they will not go until they are "fetched." Such a muddle would be impossible in a nation really aroused and resolutely bent on welding all its power into a single thunderbolt.—"Daily Mail."

ENVER BEY IN COMMAND

YOUNG TURK DICTATOR REPLACES GENERAL VON SANDERS.

London, July 9.

A despatch from Mitylene reports that Enver Pasha has taken the place in the defence of the Dardanelles of General Liman von Sanders who has been wounded.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE OR ASSASSINATION.

London, July 9.

There are various rumours in circulation as to how General Liman von Sanders came by his wounds. One report says that he was attacked by the Turks themselves, while another maintains that he tried to commit suicide when he found that it was impossible to check the advance of the Allies.

TURKEY'S HARVEST

EXCELLENT YIELD REPORTED.

New York, July 10.

A despatch from Constantinople reports that the Turkish Minister for Public Works has received official reports announcing that the harvest in the Empire is yielding excellent results everywhere. The Ottoman Government has provided the agriculturists with machinery in order to expedite the reaping of the crops.

AN IDOL DEPOSED

VON HINDENBURG SUCCEEDED BY VON MACKENSEN.

London, July 12.

News from Germany via Copenhagen state that Marshal von Hindenburg, recently the popular idol of Germany, has fallen into disfavour and has been replaced by Marsaal von Mackensen in this respect.

Marshal von Hindenburg is held to be responsible for the mistakes and miscalculations which have cost the nation so dear in men and material.

BULGARIA INVADED

BY TURKISH IRREGULARS.

London, July 12.

Telegrams from Sofia report that bands of Turkish irregulars have crossed the Bulgarian frontier at several points and are committing all kinds of outrages. One party attacked the village of Kavack and killed two Bulgarian officers.

150,000 VOLUNTEERS

ITALY'S SONS ANSWER HER CALL.

Rome, July 9.

The "Nuovo Giornale" estimates that the Italian reservists and volunteers from the United States, Brazil and Argentina arriving in Italy will add 150,000 men to the army invading Austria.

BRITISH TROOPS FALL BACK

TURKISH PROGRESS NEAR ADEN

London, July 10.

It is officially announced that on the 5th instant a Turkish force supported by a large number of Arab troops with light artillery crossed the Aden hinterland near Lahey, obliging the British forces to fall back upon Aden.

SOCIALISTS AT LOGGERHEADS

EDITOR OF THE "VOLKSTIMME" DOES NOT DESIRE PEACE.

New York, July 10.

A radiogram from Berlin says that the editor of the Socialistic paper "Volkstimme," published in Chemnitz, has written from the fighting line where he is serving in the German army a letter to the newspaper he controls, saying that the recent Socialistic proclamation demanding peace which was published in the "Vorwaertz" is nothing less than suicidal insanity. He declares that the proclamation is not a political measure, but a weapon in the hands of Germany's enemies to be employed against her.

THE MUDDLE IN MEIXCO

CARRANCISTAS ENTER THE CAPITAL.

Washington, July 12.

The American Consul at Vera Cruz announces that the city of Mexico has been occupied by the Carrancista forces under General Gonzalez, after having defeated the Zapatistas in a battle in the outskirts of the city and inflicted a loss of 3,000 men.

UNITED STATES AWAITING A DEFINITE TURN IN COURSE OF EVENTS.

Washington, July 13.

In view of Carranza's decisive defeat of the adherents of Zapata and his triumphal entry into Mexico where he is forming a Government, the Department of State has stated that no definite consideration has yet been given to the question of recognising such Government; but it is admitted that the conditions are always more favourable when one party is dominant in the country. The United States has been waiting for one of the factions to obtain the control and establish a provisional Government; but in any case nothing can be done for some time.

BRITAIN TO FOLLOW ANY DECISION OF THE STATES.

Washington, July 13.

The British Ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, has informed the United States Government that Great Britain will follow the decision of the United States in regard to the recognition of any Government in Mexico.

FIRES IN SILESIA

VILLAGES ABANDONED BY INHABITANTS.

New York, July 12.

A telegram from Berlin states that the "Tageblatt" announces tremendous fires raging in the forests and moor country of various parts of Silesia. About the district of Witschenau several villages have been abandoned by the inhabitants. The prisoners are working with the firemen in an attempt to localise the fires.

"I AM GLAD"

MR. BRYAN'S VIEW OF GERMANY'S NEW "REPLY."

San Francisco, July 12.

The contents of Germany's reply to the second Note from the United States has been communicated by telephone to Mr. Bryan, the ex-Secretary of State, who is staying with a friend at Santa Cruz. His only comment was:—"I am glad that Germany indicates a desire to reach a satisfactory understanding of the situation."

HUN COMMERCE IN PERU

DIFFICULTIES OF GERMAN COMMERCIALS.

It is reported from Lima that Germans endeavouring to do business in Peru are unable to find ready means of transport for their goods or samples. British vessels refuse to carry them under any pretext whatever, naturally as not only would such action be trading with the enemy, but experience has proved German shipments to be often a cover for treacherous bomb attempts.

AMERICAN SHIP USED AS A SCREEN

TO MURDER RUSSIAN SEAMEN

Liverpool, July 13.

The captain of the American steamer Normandy who has arrived at this port declares that he was stopped along the coast of Ireland by a German submarine which, concealing itself behind his ship, surprised and sank the Russian barque Leo. Eleven of the crew of twenty-five men on board the Russian perished.

EXCITEMENT IN NEW YORK.

New York, July 13.

The report of the affair between the German and the American ship Normandy off the coast of Ireland has caused some excitement here. It is considered that if the report be confirmed it will prove a serious matter.

GOVERNMENT INQUIRY ORDERED

It is known that the Government has ordered a strict inquiry to be held into the case, and that, if proved, energetic steps will be taken.

AMERICA ASKED TO EXPLAIN

BRITAIN AND HER RIGHT TO HER VOLUNTEERS.

Washington, July 9.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador at Washington, has requested the Department of State to explain what distinction is made, for the purposes of enforcing the neutrality of the country, between the reservists of the European Continent and the volunteers of the British Empire.

The question has been put by the Ambassador in view of the fact that permission is given to the reservists of Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey to return to their respective countries, while legal action is taken against the shipping companies and others concerned in the despatch of volunteers for the British army.

AUSTRIAN GENERAL KILLED

EFFECT OF ITALIAN SHELL-FIRE.

Geneva, July 12.

The "Tribuna" reports that a shell fired by the Italian artillery has destroyed the Austrian general headquarters at Malborghetto, killing a general, a colonel, and many other officers.

The paper states that since the entry of Italy into the war 1800 Slavs and 5300 men of Italian origin belonging to Trent or Trieste have deserted the Austrian army and passed over to the Italians.

OUTBREAK IN BOSNIA

AUSTRIA'S DIFFICULTIES INCREASING.

Paris, July 12.

A letter from Cetinje says that since the withdrawal of the Austrian garrisons from Bosnia and Herzegovina the situation there has become very serious, revolutionary movements having broken out in the towns of Serajevo, Banjaluka and Travinki.

AUSTRIAN VANDALS

DESTROY CATHEDRAL BELFRY.

New York, July 12.

A report received from Venice says that before retreating from Grado the Austrians destroyed the magnificent belfry of the Cathedral which was built in the sixth century.

GERMANY'S LOST COLONIES

OVER A MILLION SQUARE MILES.

London, July 14.

It is officially announced that during the present war the Allies have captured 450,000 square miles of German colonial possessions.—

(Note.—The area of the German colonial possessions captured by the Allies appears to be incorrectly stated, as will be seen from the following table taken from the Statesman's Yearbook:—

In Africa—

Square miles.

Togo 33,700
Kamerun 191,130
German S.W. Africa . . 322,450
German East Africa . . 384,180

In Asia—

Kiauchau 200

In the Pacific—

German New Guinea . . 70,000
Bismarck Archipelago . . 20,000
Caroline and Pelew Islands 560
Marianne Islands 250
Solomon Islands 4,200
Marshall Islands 150
Samoan Islands 1,000

This does not include the 107,270 square miles conceded by France but does include the 6,450 sq. m. conceded by Germany to France.

The area at Kiauchau is exclusive of the Bay with an area of about 200 more square miles.

The total of the above possessions, exclusive of the territory conceded by France, is therefore 1,027,820 sq. miles. With that area it amounts to 1,135,090 sq. m.)

GERMAN PRESS COMMENT.

Amsterdam, July 14.

The German newspapers, commenting on the British official announcement that the Allies have captured 450,000 square miles of German colonial possessions, declare that Germany's losses in that direction are more than compensated for by the territory she has gained in Belgium, France and Russia. If a balance were struck at the present moment, Germany would be exchanging territory in Africa for nations in Europe.

IMPORTANCE OF TRIESTE

AUSTRIA'S GREAT MUNITIONS ARSENAL.

Rome, July 12.

An engineer from Trieste says that that is the only arsenal where the 305 projectiles and mortars are made. By capturing Trieste Italy would deal a deathblow at her opponent.

BYLES M.P. CALLS FOR PEACE

Mr. Asquith's Unyielding Reply

WILSON'S WARNING TO GERMANY

Further Endangering of Lives of U.S. Subjects to be Regarded as an "Unfriendly Act"

London, July 21.

In the House of Commons to-day, Sir W. P. Byles, Liberal M.P. for Salford, requested that the Prime Minister would re-state more definitely the essential objects for which the nation is fighting, in the hope that peaceful influences might result in those objects being attained by other means than warfare.

Mr. Asquith, unmoved, said:

"I stated those objects with as much definiteness as I am capable of at the beginning of the war, and at Guildhall; and I am unable to add anything to those statements."

Pressed to take under consideration the peace movement undertaken by the German Socialists, the Prime Minister reiterated: "I have nothing further to add to the statement I have already made."

BELGIAN INDEPENDENCE

ENTHUSIASTIC CELEBRATIONS IN LONDON.

London, July 21.

The anniversary of the independence of Belgium was celebrated to-day with much enthusiasm. A religious service was celebrated at Westminster Cathedral and was largely attended.

A deputation from the Belgian community in London presented the Lord Mayor with a message of gratitude for the generous hospitality lavished upon them by the English. The Lord Mayor replied that England would do all in her power to restore the prosperity of Belgium.

SEVENTY MILES OF SCRAP IRON

KAISER GRANTS 344,749 IRON CROSSES.

Amsterdam, July 21.

The "Koelnische Zeitung" publishes an official announcement that since the beginning of the war the Kaiser has conferred 344,749 Iron Crosses upon soldiers in the German army.

It is estimated that these, laid side by side, would make a line seventy miles in length.

GOLD FOR NEUTRALS

BRITISH GOVERNMENT'S PREPARATIONS.

London, July 21.

The House of Commons has passed a war credit of 150 million sterling. This is not a new loan, but refers to expenses to be met out of the available funds.

In moving the resolution the Prime Minister stated that during the first seventeen days of the current month the war expenditure was 54 millions, with a tendency to increase. It was also probable that the loans would be increased which it would be necessary to make to the Allies when those nations which have hitherto remained neutral should adopt the cause of the Entente. He expected that 100 millions would suffice to cover war expenditure until September next; but the amount had been placed at 150 millions in order to meet unforeseen events.

Mr. Asquith called the special attention to the alteration in the wording of the resolution, which now runs to the effect that "the British Parliament empowers the Government to make use of the funds voted in loans or advances to foreign States, that is to say, which do not belong to the category of dominions or protectorates of His Britannic Majesty, nor to the Allied Powers.

The Prime Minister explained that the resolution appeared in its amended form because the Government deemed it desirable to have ample facilities in regard to countries and states to which it might possibly be necessary to make advances, and he hoped that Parliament would recognise the convenience of leaving the Government full liberty of action.

GARIBALDIANS' OATH

TO DEFEAT AUSTRIA OR DIE.

Paris, July 21.

A telegram from Udine announces that Peppino Garibaldi with his four brothers and a number of other officers who were with him in the fighting on the Argonne have reached the Cadore region, where they have been attached to a brigade of Alpini.

In a solemn ceremony at headquarters the Garibaldians have sworn to defeat the Austrians or die in the attempt.

THE THIRD NOTE

Firm Stand Taken

ENDANGERING LIVES OF U.S. SUBJECTS AN "UNFRIENDLY ACT"

Washington, July 21.

It is stated in official circles that President Wilson's third Note to Germany will state that any further attack by German submarines endangering the lives of American subjects will be regarded as an unfriendly act.

SARCASM IN BERLIN.

New York, July 21.

A radiogram from Berlin says that the German newspapers insert without comment the letters and despatches received in reference to the next Note from the United States. One of the papers observes that the world is gradually becoming accustomed to the attempts of the British to act as America's mentor and prescribe for President Wilson the tone of the text of his Notes.

STRIKE AT KRUPPS

3000 MEN DEMAND HIGHER WAGES.

London, July 21.

A telegram from Amsterdam says that three thousand of the men employed in Krupp's works at Essen have struck for higher wages. The authorities have threatened them with imprisonment if they do not resume work before the end of the week.

MORE PAY; LESS WORK

WELSH MINERS' GREAT GAINS.

London, July 21.

It is stated that the concessions made to the miners of South Wales are of much importance, and include higher wages and shorter hours of work.

Mr. Lloyd George, who has received numerous messages of congratulation on the success of his mission, says that the satisfactory conclusion of the dispute was due to the goodwill of both mine owners and men.

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS

ARRANGEMENTS BETWEEN RUSSIA AND GERMANY.

New York, July 21.

It is reported from Berlin that the efforts of the United States Ambassador in that city, Mr. Gerard, for an exchange of crippled prisoners between Russia and Germany have been successful.

FRANCE'S NEW BOMB

MOST POWERFUL EXPLOSIVE KNOWN.

London, July 21.

Mr. Arthur Lynch, National M.P. for Clare, stated in the House of Commons to-day that an explosive bomb of greater power than anything hitherto used in war is being investigated by the greatest scientists in France, and if found practical it will be invaluable to the Allies.

"GIVE US BREAD!"

DEAR FOOD RIOTS IN COLOGNE.

Amsterdam, July 21.

It is reported that riots have broken out at Cologne in consequence of the high price of articles of food. Men and women stormed the market place and destroyed the windows of a number of shops, crying "Give us bread! Give us cheaper meat!" The mob defied the police, and much property was destroyed before it was dispersed.

The Government is attempting to popularise concentrated foods composed of chemical extractions of vegetables and meats.

AUSTRIAN COAST BOMBARDED

BY 20 ITALIAN WARSHIPS.

Rome, July 21.

A squadron of twenty warships of the Italian fleet of large tonnage has commenced the bombardment of the fortified ports and positions on the Dalmatian coast north of the entrance to the harbour of Cattaro, including Ragusa, Gravosa, and Ragusa-Vecchia. All Government buildings within sight of the sea were destroyed, and there were several explosions and a large number of conflagrations.

The soldiers' barracks opposite the port of Ragusa were among the buildings destroyed, and the oil tanks were also effectively bombed.

While the guns of the fleet was silencing the shore batteries a number of torpedo boats approached the land and surveyed the harbour, apparently with a view to a subsequent landing of troops.

A SEPARATE PEACE?

RUMOURED DEPARTURE OF TURKISH DELEGATION.

Salonica, July 21.

A despatch from Sofia says that Ublah Effendi, former Turkish Minister of Instruction, is on his way to Switzerland accompanied by Fassoun Effendi, to broach the question of a separate peace between Turkey and the Quadruple Entente.

FRENCH SUCCESS IN THE VOSGES

German Defence Works Seized

GERMAN CONFIDENCE IN BULGARIAN NEUTRALITY

Rumoured Plans for Partition of Turkey

Paris, July 21.

To-day's official communiqué from the War Office reports:—

"In the Artois region, last night was marked by a cannonade in the vicinity of Souchez from Neuville.

"Soissons was again bombarded during the night.

"In the forest of Apremont the enemy attacked our positions at Tete de Vache and Lavauxfery, and were completely repulsed.

"In the Vosges district there were lively infantry actions yesterday afternoon and night on the heights overlooking the eastern side of the Fecht. From the north we obtained possession of part of the German defensive works, progressing particularly to within a short distance of the crest of Lalienque.

"Thirty-eight aviators yesterday bombarded the station of Conflans in Garnay and an important railway junction. Three shells of 155 mm. and 90 mm. fell directly on the station. The engine shed was struck by a 155 mm. shell. Three of the enemy's aviators were put to flight by our scouting aeroplanes accompanying the squadron, and one of the enemy's aeroplanes was compelled to land.

"Two of our aeroplanes yesterday afternoon again bombarded Colmar station. Four 155 mm. shells and four of 90 mm. fell on the track."

RHEIMS AGAIN BOMBARDED.

Paris, July 21.

The War Office officially reports as follows:—

"At Artois there have been artillery engagements, but the infantry remained inactive.

"The Germans have again bombarded Rheims with heavy guns. The bombardment continued a long while and several civilians were killed.

"Between the Meuse and the Moselle, in the region of Les Eparges, Fayenhayes and the forest of La Pretre, there were violent artillery duels.

"Last Monday night one of our dirigibles dropped twenty-three bombs on the military station and ammunition depot at Vigneulles, returning safely to the lines."

TYPHOID IN SERBIA

NOW BEING SUCCESSFULLY COMBATTED.

New York, July 21.

According to a telegram from Berlin, a despatch to the "Vossische Zeitung" from Bucharest says that the American Minister to Rumania, Mr. C. J. Vopicka, has returned from a visit of inspection to the prisoners' camps in Serbia. He says that Serbia continues to receive grain from Rumania and Russia. Transports up the Danube have free passage to Serbia.

He also states that the Serbian authorities have done everything possible to exterminate the epidemic of typhoid, and that notwithstanding several victims among the prisoners the sanitary missions from abroad are successfully fighting the malady. In Serbia friends and foes are treated alike.

TURKISH VESSELS SUNK

MATERIALS FOR CAUCASUS ARMY CAPTURED

London, July 21.

A telegram from Sebastopol announces that a squadron of Russian torpedo boats met and destroyed sixty-nine Turkish sailing vessels making for Trebizond laden with materials for the army in the Caucasus, the crews of the ships being made prisoners.

CAPTURE OF NAZYK.

Petrograd, July 21.

An official report issued to-day says:—

"On Sunday our torpedo boats destroyed sixty-nine Turkish sailing ships in the Black Sea. One of our patrol boats captured a big sailing vessel laden with corn only.

"In the region of Transcaucasia there have been infantry actions. Fighting has developed in the district of Mush. We captured the Turkish village of Nazyk."

PROMPT INTERVENTION

WILL FOLLOW VENIZELOS TRIUMPH IN GREEK PARLIAMENT

Rome, July 21.

A telegram from Athens announces that the opening of the Greek Parliament has been postponed until August 18.

M. Venizelos presided at a meeting of the Liberal party, of which he has been constituted leader. They look for a speedy triumph over the present Government and the prompt intervention of Greece in the war on the side of the Entente.

BATTLE IN THE BALTIC

BELIEVED TO BE IMMINENT.

London, July 21.

Despatches from Stockholm announce a rumour, since confirmed, that a squadron of German warships has been sighted in the Baltic near the gulf of Riga, and a naval battle is believed to be imminent.

RUMANIA AND THE WAR

AUSTRO-GERMAN CAUTION.

London, July 20.

A telegram from Bucharest says that the belief prevails in the Rumanian capital that notwithstanding the successes obtained by the Germanic forces over the Russians, the situation of the Central Empires is such that they both desire to avoid complications in the Balkans, whose entry into the arena as allies of the Entente would more than counterbalance the victories gained by the Austro-German armies.

BULGARIA'S ATTITUDE

Pro-German Optimism

HOPE OF BREAKDOWN OF THE ALLIES

Amsterdam, July 21.

Statements contained in an interview with a Bulgarian diplomat, supposed to be the new Bulgarian Minister to Germany, Dr. Rizow, are reported by a despatch from Vienna to the "Nieuwe Journal" to the following effect:—

"If the Dardanelles are not forced before August 1st. it may be considered impossible to force them, as early in that month Turkey will be fully equipped for the manufacture of sufficient munitions for all purposes.

"Bulgaria will hardly go against Turkey; on the contrary she will seek an understanding about the boundary and railway questions.

"The establishment of a treaty for a union between Bulgaria and Serbia is impossible, and the talk about a new Balkan League is nonsense. The German and Austrian armies in Poland are now deciding the fate of the Balkans.

"Russia already needs peace, and the sentiment in favour of it is rapidly growing in that country. France will not be able to stand another winter.

DISMEMBERMENT OF TURKEY.

New York, July 21.

Prince Hohenlohe, Langenberg, the German Special Ambassador to Turkey, has arrived at Constantinople from Sofia, according to a despatch from the Ottoman capital. It is stated that while at Sofia the Ambassador had important conferences with King Ferdinand and the Bulgarian Premier, M. Radoslavoff.

It is believed that the Ambassador was really acting for Turkey, and that an agreement is being formed by which Bulgaria will profit at the expense of Turkish territory in Europe by remaining neutral.

CHAOS IN CONSTANTINOPLE

CONFLICTS BETWEEN POPULACE AND THE TROOPS

Rome, July 19.

A steamer has arrived at Naples with a large number of Italians on board from Constantinople and other cities in Turkey.

The passengers, who are still under the impression of the numerous adventures they have passed through and the sights they have witnessed, state that the situation in Constantinople is tragic. The price of food is enormous, and there are frequent shocks between the starving and desperate populace and the armed forces of the Government, in which much blood is shed.

YOUNG TURKS' PLOT

TO MURDER VENIZELOS.

London, July 19.

According to a telegram from Athens, the plot which Greek agents in Constantinople discovered was being matured by the Young Turk party was directed not merely against the life of M. Venizelos but against leading politicians in other countries of Europe, Asia and Africa who are opposed to the policy of that party.

The public of Athens are indignant but not surprised at the news in view of the fact that the Turkish Cabinet includes several persons who have achieved their positions by the assassination of their political rivals and their superior officers in the army.

SUBMARINES OFF MAINE

SENSATIONAL RUMOURS IN THE STATES

Washington, July 20.

The Departments of State, Treasury, Navy, Justice and Commerce had under consideration to-day reports that submarines, presumably German, are operating off the coast of Maine. The story looked doubtful, and Mr. Daniels said that nothing had been officially placed before him, but it is known that the officers of the Navy have received a hint to keep the matter in mind and report promptly any evidence which they may come across.

In naval circles it is said that it has been believed for some time that Germany had laid plans for establishing a submarine base in American waters, but the officers believe that this has not been done yet. The opinion is that the Caribbean rather than the north Atlantic was the zone the Kaiser had in view.

The attorneys and special agents of the Department of Justice are investigating the charge of the British Government that German sympathisers in the United States have violated the neutrality of the States. Although they are under orders to report as soon as possible, nothing has been received from them yet. The inquiry is being conducted independently of any evidence that the Embassies of the Allies may collect.

CHOLERA IN VIENNA

AUSTRIAN CAPITAL DECLARED AN INFECTED CITY.

London, July 20.

The British Foreign Office has received a message from Christiania which states that Vienna has been declared infected by cholera.

ATTACKED BY ARABS

ITALY'S TROUBLES IN TRIPOLITANIA.

London, July 16.

It is reported from Cairo that large bands of Arabs with Turkish regular forces officered by Germans have attacked the Italian troops in the detached outposts of Tripolitania. The attacking forces have field guns and machine guns worked by German artillerymen.

CAPTURED BY RUSSIANS

61,000 TEUTONS ARRIVE AT PETROGRAD.

Petrograd, July 20.

A telegram from Kieff to the "Novoye Vremya" reports the arrival of 141 Austro-German officers and 60,840 soldiers who have been taken prisoners by the Russians. Of these over 10,000 are Germans.

CAPTURED AUSTRIANS

20,000 SAID TO BE IN ITALIAN HANDS.

Rome, July 21.

The papers publish a telegram from Paris which states that the Austrian Governmental organs announce that the number of prisoners taken by the Italians since the beginning of the war is about 20,000.

The Roman newspapers estimate the number to be considerably higher in view of the constant arrival of trainloads of prisoners at the frontier cities; but the exact figures are being kept secret by the military authorities, who consider that the matter has no important bearing on the results of the campaign.

VON HINDENBURG'S "GREAT DRIVE"

Austro-German Armies Closing-in on Warsaw and Riga

RUSSIANS AVOIDING THE TEUTON NET

Abandonment of Polish Capital in Accordance with Previous Plans

LONDON, JULY 21.

THE RUSSIAN FORCES HAVE SHOWN INCREASING RESISTANCE TO THE TEUTONIC "DRIVE" TO WARSAW DURING THE LAST TWENTY-FOUR HOURS. THEY HAVE DEVELOPED A STRONG OFFENSIVE ALONG THE DNIESTER NEAR THE BUKOVINA AND GALICIA BOUNDARY LINE.

IN SPITE OF THIS ACTIVITY ON THE PART OF THE TSAR'S TROOPS, IT IS BELIEVED THAT THE FALL OF WARSAW IS A QUESTION OF ONLY A FEW DAYS. ALL THE INDICATIONS POINT ALSO TO THE ABANDONMENT OF RIGA.

DESPATCHES FROM BERLIN STATE THAT THE GOVERNMENT ARCHIVES, ALL THE MONEY HELD BY THE BANKS, AND THE MILITARY STORES, HAVE BEEN REMOVED TO PETROGRAD.

GERMAN STRATEGY IS APPARENTLY DIRECTED TOWARD PREVENTING THE RUSSIANS FROM MAKING GOOD THEIR RETREAT FROM WARSAW SALIENT.

THE PRESENCE IN THE BATTLE FRONT OF GERMAN LANDWEHR AND LANDSTURM TROOPS DEMONSTRATES THAT THE KAISER IS EXTENDING EVERY OUNCE OF HIS MILITARY STRENGTH IN A GREAT EFFORT TO CRUSH AND DESTROY THE ARMY OF THE GRAND DUKE.

ADVICES FROM CZERNOWITZ TO BERLIN PUBLISHED IN THE "LOCAL ANZEIGER" STATE THAT THE RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE ALONG THE DNIESTER FAILED; BUT THE DESPATCHES ADMIT THAT AT ONE TIME THE RUSSIANS SUCCEEDED IN BREAKING THE AUSTRIAN POSITIONS.

NO INFORMATION HAS BEEN RECEIVED FROM PETROGRAD WHICH WILL THROW LIGHT UPON THE GRAND DUKE'S SCHEME OF CAMPAIGN. IT IS, HOWEVER, ASSUMED HERE THAT HE DECIDED, PROBABLY SEVERAL WEEKS AGO, TO ABANDON WARSAW AND RETREAT FAR TO THE EAST OF THE CITY UNTIL HIS ARMIES CAN BE REORGANISED AND RE-SUPPLIED WITH AMMUNITION, WHEN HE WILL RECOMMENCE THE OFFENSIVE.

FIELD-MARSHAL VON HINDENBURG.

FIELD-MARSHAL VON MACKENSEN.

MASSACRE OF RUSSIANS

TERRIBLE ALLEGATION AGAINST GERMAN ARMIES.

London, July 21.

A despatch from Petrograd announces that news has been received that five thousand Russians taken prisoners by the Germans have been shot at Ravavisska.

MINISTRY OF MUNITIONS

TO BE CREATED IN RUSSIA.

Petrograd, July 21.

A Bill will shortly be submitted to the Duma authorising the creation of a Ministry of Munitions similar to that in England, with power to mobilise all the industries for service for the Government.

AWAITING MUNITIONS

GERMANS' STEADY ADVANCE

London, July 20.

A telegram from Buda Pest to the "Morning Post" says that the Russians have ordered the gradual evacuation of Warsaw.

GERMANS OCCUPY TUCKUM AND DOBLEN.

Petrograd, July 20.

It is officially announced that the Germans have occupied Tuckum and Doblen and are advancing on Hofzumberge and Benen.

COUNCIL OF WAR SUMMONED.

London, July 20.

It is reported from Petrograd that the Tsar will probably call another Council of War at Warsaw to consider the advisability of abandoning the Warsaw-Ivangorod line at present held by the Russians and withdrawing further east, thus avoiding being compelled to accept battle with an enemy numerically superior and well equipped with all the elements of war.

RUSSIANS RETIRE TO SECOND LINE DEFENCES.

Petrograd, July 20.

An official bulletin announces as follows:—

"The enemy gained possession of Krasnostav on Sunday and crossed the Vleprz. We retired to our second line of positions.

"Our troops repulsed four attacks upon Graboverz.

"Between Genervcha and the Bug last Saturday we drove the enemy out of all the trenches he had previously occupied.

"On Sunday the enemy crossed the Bug on the front Skonoiskhy-Sokol.

"The battle on the Dniester is continuing."

REAR OF VON MACKENSEN'S ARMY THREATENED.

London, July 20.

Telegrams from Petrograd state that the Teuton forces attacking the Russian lines along the whole front consist of forty-one army corps, or about two million men.

Official despatches say that the approaches to Warsaw are already strongly fortified against attack, and that every advantage offered by the natural configuration of the country has been taken with the object of preventing the enemy mounting his siege guns for the bombardment of the city. The original entrenched camp round the fortress also has been considerably enlarged and strengthened.

It is reported that the rearguard of Marshal von Mackensen's army is being threatened by Russian forces near Zamasc.

GERMANS CLAIM TO HAVE CAPTURED WINDAU.

London, July 20.

News of German origin has been received from Copenhagen which states that the town of Windau has been captured by the Germans.

TWO MILLION GERMANS CONCENTRATING SOUTH-EAST OF WARSAW.

London, July 20.

The "Daily News" has received a despatch from its correspondent at Petrograd announcing incessant activity to the south-east of Warsaw, where Marshal von Mackensen has concentrated new large armies for a general engagement between the Vistula and the Bug. He says:—

"Approximately two millions of men are engaged in this operation, while another 600,000 with 100,000 mounted troops have commenced an important advance to the north of the Narew in order to induce the Russians to move their forces to that point.

RIGA MENACED

Grand Duke Countering German Plans

RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE IN BUKOVINA

New York, July 21.

Radiograms from Berlin report the arrival of despatches from the eastern front announcing that the German artillery is bombarding the outer defence works of Warsaw, and that some of the fortresses have already been destroyed by their fire. The fighting in the direction of Novo Georgievsk is becoming increasingly strenuous.

It is stated that the Kaiser and the Crown Prince are present and intend to enter Warsaw with Marshal von Hindenburg.

GERMANS CONTINUE ADVANCE ON RIGA.

Paris, July 21.

A telegram from Petrograd reports that the advance of the German army in the Baltic provinces on Riga continues.

Beyond the Niemen, near Gluboki, the Germans retook the trenches which the Russians captured yesterday.

The fortress of Novo Georgievsk which protects Warsaw from the north has shelled the head of a German column with much effect.

The enemy continues his attacks on the Russian positions near Krylow and Sokal on the Bug river.

There has also been heavy fighting on the Dniester where the Russians captured 600 prisoners and five machine guns.

EXCITEMENT IN BERLIN.

New York, July 21.

A despatch from Berlin says that the "Vossische Zeitung" estimates that since the commencement of the new advance against Warsaw, the Germans have captured 175 Russian officers and 66,790 soldiers, adding that this is magnificent for a start.

Berlin is reported to be wildly excited over the triumphs of the German army. Since the advance upon Paris the multitudes have not read with such avidity the bulletins and announcements in the newspaper offices. The popular opinion in Germany is that a tremendous blow is being struck which may bring a speedy ending to the war.

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

GRAND DUKE'S TRIBUTE TO RUSSIAN SOLDIERS.

Paris, July 21.

Despatches from Moscow report that Grand Duke Nicholas to-day received a deputation from the Municipality to whom he spoke with enthusiasm of the fine spirit displayed by the soldiers. He said that all of them were confident that a final and complete victory would be theirs.

A commission of investigation reports that the Germans have been using shells with cast iron tips filled with prussic acid.

A NEWSPAPER "DEAL"

RUMOURED PURCHASE OF THE PARIS "JOURNAL."

Paris, July 21.

It is rumoured that the well-known Parisian newspaper "Le Journal" has been purchased by a syndicate of which the member for the Meurthe et Moselle district, M. de Wendel, is the head, for the sum of 22 million francs.

ROUT OF THE AUSTRIAN ARMY

Italians Victorious in Battle on the Carso Plateau

TRIESTE WITHIN RANGE OF ITALIAN GUNS

Important Successes Follow Desperate Struggle

Rome, July 21.

Despatches have been received from the front concerning the battle which has been raging for the last twelve hours at Doberdo in the direction of Gorizia.

The stubborn resistance of the Austrians was broken down by the fiery attack of the Italians who, after a searching bombardment, attacked and captured at the point of the bayonet six kilometres of trenches inflicting heavy losses upon the enemy.

Before the Italian troops had time to consolidate themselves in their new positions the Austrians counter-attacked with large reinforcements, but were repulsed. Nine times they returned to the assault, but every time they were driven back with enormous losses in killed, wounded and prisoners, besides field and machine guns. The Italians still hold the position, which forms a point d'appui for the advance.

TENSE BATTLE ON THE CARSO PLATEAU.

Rome, July 21.

A telegram from Udine to the "Messaggero" reports that the great battle on the Carso plateau continues to be waged with the utmost violence by both sides. All the available troops have been brought up by the Austrians, who have also sent great quantities of materials of war to strengthen the fortifications and entrenchments. Several batteries of heavy guns have been mounted on the heights.

In spite of great difficulties and heavy losses the Italians have made themselves masters of the majority of the enemy's positions, and now command the heights to the east of Monfalcone and the town of Gorizia on the north and south, on which they have emplaced guns of large calibre which keep up a tremendous fire upon the enemy.

GREAT TRIUMPH FOR THE ITALIAN ARMS.

Rome, July 21.

The afternoon newspapers announce another triumph of the Italian arms on the Isonzo by the capture of the Marogna bridge, the possession of which enables the more rapid development of offensive manœuvres on the lower Isonzo.

The bridge was defended by strong contingents of troops and important defence works; but though, strategically and numerically, the enemy had the advantage, the Italians, after three attacks, succeeded in taking the position by dint of a tremendous bayonet charge.

Reinforcements were immediately sent forward to hold the place and guns were mounted with which a heavy fire was opened upon the Austrian batteries on the heights commanding the bridge, dismounting several of their guns.

ROUT OF THE AUSTRIAN ARMY.

New York, July 21.

The following items of news have been telegraphed from Milan to the International News Agency respecting the progress of the Italo-Austrian campaign:—

Fourteen hundred refugees from Gorizia have arrived at Milan. They report that the city has been almost completely evacuated. The Italian troops have taken by storm Podgora hill dominating the city.

The latest news from the Isonzo front confirms the report of the complete rout of the Austrians from the Carso plain. The battle is still raging fiercely along the Isonzo river front.

By the occupation of the upper plateau of the Carso beyond the river the Italian big guns now have Trieste within range. Military experts however do not expect that the city will be shelled, as the Austrians have already fled from it.

ITALIANS TAKE ROWS OF TRENCHES.

New York, July 21.

A telegram from Turin to the "New York Express" reports:—

"The great battle, the most important in the Isonzo sector, appears today to be nearing its culminating phase. A general assault is going forward all along the front from Tarvis to the Adriatic.

"From Malborghetto to Caporato the giant task has been confined chiefly to the bigger artillery. There, as well as in the central tract down to Gorizia, the Przemyśl of the Isonzo, greater progress has already been realised.

"I am not permitted to specify the number of points where the Italians have cleared the way for a rapid and decisive advance. Such partial and isolated advances are being withheld lest they should lead to the formation of an insecure salient, which, without immediate support, could not perhaps be held even at the cost of a heavy sacrifice of life.

"The most pronounced victorious Italian advance has been lower down the Carso plateau east of Sagrado. Here a terrific onslaught lasted the whole of Monday, during which a coördinated movement between the advance of the largest masses of infantry yet employed, and the continuous support of the heavy guns worked out to perfection. Before the sun had sunk below the horizon, the Italians had carried row upon row of trenches on rising ground thickly sown with barbed wire entanglements and studded with armoured and bombproof shelters."

MINIATURE WATER STERILIZER

ITALIAN ENGINEER'S INVENTION.

Rome, July 20.

The Press devotes considerable space to a recent invention by a Milanese engineer, Signor Ravizza, which consists of a small instrument six kilos in weight, with which 200 litres of water can be sterilised in five minutes. The inventor has placed the instrument at the disposal of the military authorities.

BRILLIANT ITALIAN VICTORY

New York, July 20.

A telegram from Rome announces that a great battle has been fought east of Sagrado between Gradišca and Monfalcone, where the Austrians attacked in great force with the object of driving the Italians from their positions.

At the commencement of the combat the Italians contented themselves with remaining on the defensive, inflicting severe punishment on the enemy every time he attacked. Finally, when it was seen that he was weakening the Italians took the offensive and attacked with great vigour, routing the Austrians and driving them back beyond the positions they had formerly occupied.

Another telegram reports that the Italian forces operating against Gorizia on the western side delivered an attack upon the enemy's advanced trenches and fortifications which resulted in the capture of the heights of Podgora. The position was immediately strengthened and the emplacement of heavy artillery commenced. From this position the Italian artillery commands the fortifications on the west of Gorizia.

ANOTHER AUSTRIAN REVERSE

New York, June 20.

A telegram from Rome to the "Evening Sun" reports that the Austrian troops have been defeated with heavy losses in a furious all-day battle east of the Isonzo near Sagrado.

Unofficial despatches of this afternoon reported the enemy's losses in killed, wounded and prisoners as nearly 10,000.

The fighting on the Carso plateau is now raging more fiercely than at any previous time. Report says that the retreat of the Austrians is now but a matter of a few hours.

The Italians are concentrating over 2000 prisoners at Cividale.

It is admitted that the Bersaglieri suffered severely.

AUSTRIANS DRIVEN BACK FIVE MILES.

New York, July 20.

Despatches from Geneva to the "Evening Post" says that, according to the "Tribune," large gains have been made by the Italians since July 16. The advices received say that the Austrians have lost more than five miles in Cadore, as well as at Carnia, and the heights of Hochspite, Gradina, Boderio, and Kellerwald on the Isonzo.

The Austrians have recaptured two positions, near Tolmino and north of San Lucas.

AUSTRIAN BLOCKHOUSES CAPTURED.

Rome, July 20.

An official report issued by the Italian Government says:—

"In the Valley of Ausici our forces captured three of the enemy's blockhouses.

"On the Carso tableland we captured various trenches with numerous prisoners and a large amount of booty."

ITALY'S WAR LOAN

950 MILLION LIRA SUBSCRIBED.

New York, July 20.

A telegram from Rome published by the "Evening Post" says that the amount subscribed at the Banca Italia to the National Loan up to Monday last was 950 million lire. This sum has also to be increased by the subscriptions received by the Institutes of Commerce, which have not yet come to hand.

SUNK BY THE SEA HUNS

London, July 20.

The Russian steamship General Radetsky was torpedoed by a German submarine on July 17. The crew of 22 men were saved.

ULTIMATUM TO TURKEY

Italian Government's Threat

TURKS DETAIN ITALIAN SUBJECTS

Rome, July 21.

It is stated in political circles that the Italian Government is preparing to send an ultimatum to Turkey if that nation persists in putting obstacles in the way of Italian subjects returning to their country. If that has no effect, the Italian Ambassador at Constantinople, Marquis Garroni, will at once be instructed to leave for Rome.

ROSENTHAL EXECUTED

SPY'S DEATH IN THE TOWER.

London, July 17.

It is officially announced that the German spy Robert Rosenthal was tried by court martial on July 6, found guilty and sentenced to death. The sentence was carried out in the Tower of London yesterday.

ZEPPELIN HANGAR BOMBED

BRITISH AIRMEN'S RAID ON BRUSSELS.

London, July 20.

A number of British airmen have visited the Zeppelin hangar erected by the Germans near Brussels, and bombed it liberally. The damages caused are believed to have been of importance. The airmen returned to their base without misadventure.

BRITISH STEAMERS IN COLLISION

THE LOWTHER GRANGE DAMAGED.

London, July 20.

The British steamer Polish Prince has been sunk by a collision with the Lowther Grange. One man was drowned, the rest of the crew of the Polish Prince being landed at Barry by the Lowther Grange which is damaged about the bows.

GERMAN COMMERCIAL ESPIONAGE

ACCUSATION AGAINST GERMAN BANKS.

Among the witnesses called before the Federal Trade Commission which sat last month in New York was Mr. Calvert Townley of the Westinghouse Company. This gentleman who recently made an extensive tour in South America, declared that he discovered an immense German system of commercial and financial espionage, the object of which was to kill American competition. All invoices and other communications of American manufacturers with South American merchants which passed through German banks were carefully copied and turned over to German manufacturers making similar products.

FIRE ON EMIGRANT STEAMER

AUSTRALIAN LINER'S CALL FOR AID.

London, July 21.

A cable message from Durban, Natal, reports that a fire has broken out on board the British steamer Benalla with 800 emigrants on the way to Australia. The steamer Omaki received a wireless call for assistance from the Benalla and has gone to her aid. She is stated to be 800 miles from Durban.

SUBMARINE ATTACKS LINER ORDUÑA

VESSELS FLIGHT FROM GERMAN PIRATES

New York, July 17.

Passengers by the British steamer Orduña state that during the voyage they were attacked by a German submarine, which made several fruitless attempts to torpedo the ship, and then fired six shells without effect.

EARLY MORNING ATTACK

New York, July 17.

It appears that the submarine attack on the British liner Orduña took place at 6 a.m. on July 9, when only a few passengers were on deck. Baron Posenkranz, of Denmark, reached the deck as the Orduña was fleeing from her assailant and witnessed the attack. The submarine chased the steamer for a considerable time and finally abandoned the pursuit.

PASSENGERS' TRIBUTE TO ORDUNA'S COMMANDER.

Next day a meeting of passengers was held in the saloon when the following resolution was adopted and handed to Captain Taylor:—

"The first class cabin passengers desire to express their heartfelt appreciation and admiration of the masterly manner in which you manoeuvred and handled the steamer during the sudden and deliberate attack by a German submarine."

VALUE OF BERNSTORFF'S ASSURANCES.

Washington, July 17.

The attack on the Orduña has caused a shock to official circles, and has completely nullified the good effect of the assurances given by the German Ambassador, Count Bernstorff, to the Secretary of State that he was confident that there would never be another Lusitania tragedy.

LUSITANIA JUDGMENT

SUBMARINE'S PLAN TO "BLOT OUT THE LIVES OF THE PASSENGERS."

London, July 17.

A little throng composed almost entirely of the survivors and relatives of those who perished in the Lusitania, listened to-day to the brief finding of Lord Mersey in regard to the loss of the great Cunard liner.

Lord Mersey stated that the vessel was lost as the result of the act of a German submarine which not only intended to destroy the ship, but planned to blot out the lives of the passengers.

The report says that the explosion of the first torpedo broke No. 5 lifeboat into splinters, while a second, fired almost immediately after, struck the ship on the starboard side. The two torpedoes struck the ship almost simultaneously.

The report was a disappointment to the American survivors, who expressed indignant surprise at that portion of Lord Mersey's finding, which exonerated Captain Turner and the Cunard Company from all blame, and commended the discipline of the ship. The court held that no blame for the tragedy attached to either Captain Turner or the Company.

POISON GAS MACHINERY

MANUFACTURERS REPORTED TO PRESIDENT WILSON.

New York, July 17.

A White House official has sent President Wilson particulars of an advertisement published by the Automatic Machines Company announcing that they have for sale machinery for making asphyxiating bombs for the belligerents in Europe. The details of the case will be laid before the President on his return from Cornish.

BOMB OUTRAGE IN THE STATES

GRAIN ELEVATOR DESTROYED

ATTEMPT TO STOP SUPPLIES FOR BRITAIN.

New York, July 15.

A grain elevator on Dock 7 at Weehawken, N.J., has been blown up. Apparently the cause of the explosion was dynamite. The whole building was wrecked, three men being injured.

Many of the grain ships for the Allies load at this pier. The police are uncertain as to the origin of the explosion.

The steamship Baltic has left New York to-day with a full load of munitions, including aeroplanes, motorcars and auto-trucks.

There are 312 passengers on board, all of whom were closely scrutinised at the moment of departure.

ATTEMPTED STOPPAGE OF MUNITIONS SUPPLIES

IN THE UNITED STATES

New York, July 20.

The trouble with labour appears to-day to be spreading to nearly all the industries which are supplying European customers. With the great Walkout arms factories in Bridgeport it is only a matter of an hour for a strike of 5,000 men to be declared; while at the great Standard Oil plant at Bayonne, N.J., disorder began early this morning, and the indications are that other industrial firms will be affected.

The International Labour Leader has announced at Bridgeport that the strike would spread throughout New England, and that within a week twenty or more plants which are manufacturing war supplies for the Allies will be tied up.

A report that a call will be made upon the seamen to strike in order to prevent the loading of merchant vessels bound for Europe is another rumour which has added to the anxiety of those whose business depends upon getting goods to Europe without delay.

BREACH OF NEUTRALITY

BY GERMAN CAPITALIST IN THE STATES.

New York, July 20.

The British Government has informed the Department of State that proofs have been obtained that a German capitalist in Detroit has been providing money to certain persons at Windsor, Ontario, to destroy the property of the Canadian Government. The British Government asks whether this case does not constitute a breach of neutrality.

TO SAVE THE SITUATION

ENORMOUS SUPPLIES OF AMMUNITION VIA VLADIVOSTOK.

New York, July 20.

Telegrams from Vladivostok announce that 20,000 trucks and 400 locomotives are expected from the United States to hasten the transport of the immense amount of war material that is arriving daily from Japan, the United States, England and France. The docks are insufficient to accommodate all the material and it has been necessary to construct others.

In Petrograd it is recognised that the Russian retreat in Poland and Galicia has been due to the want of munitions; but now great quantities are arriving from various sources, and the Russians will soon be in a position to resume the offensive.

BRITAIN'S GREAT WOMEN

OFFER TO MAKE MUNITIONS

London, July 17.

A monster demonstration was held in London to-day by the women in favour of petitioning the Government to make use of women in the making of munitions.

A procession, described as one of the most picturesque and interesting witnessed in the United Kingdom, marched to the offices of the Munitions Minister headed by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the suffragist leader. Groups of women were dressed to represent France, Russia, Japan, Serbia and Poland, each respective group wearing the distinctive costume of the women of the nation represented, giving a gay and lively aspect to the gathering.

Arrived at their destination a petition was presented to Mr. Lloyd George setting forth with urgency that the women begged the Government to avail itself of their services in any of the work relative to the making of munitions that they were capable of performing. The Government was also petitioned to appoint women in the place of the men employed in certain branches of the Post and Telegraph Offices so that the men could be sent to the front.

The Minister promised that the matter should receive the utmost attention, and he sincerely thanked them in the name of the Government and of the nation for the patriotic demonstration.

Mrs. Pankhurst delivered a fervent harangue which was received with prolonged applause.

The evening papers effusively applauded the women for their action in offering their services to the country. They say that the common peril has proved that this is in fact as well as in name a United Kingdom. They recall the fact that Mrs. Pankhurst, who is now placing herself at the orders of Mr. Lloyd George in the desire to work for the defence of the nation, was not long ago the leader of an attack upon the then Chancellor of the Exchequer.

"SUFFRAGISM IS FORGOTTEN."

London, July 17.

This afternoon forty thousand women dressed in tricolor garments and preceded by a band of seventy-five musicians marched from the Thames to Trafalgar Square.

A tremendous outburst of cheering greeted a group of beautiful women dressed appropriately to represent each of the allied nations.

Leading the pageant were numerous banners bearing inscriptions such as "Let women work," "Down with sex prejudice," "Shells Made by Wife may save Husband's Life," and so on.

A commission formed by Mrs. Pankhurst and other leaders visited Mr. Lloyd George and presented him with statistics which showed that 40 per cent. of the munition workers in Germany are women, and that 75 per cent. of all food canned for the German army is packed by women.

Mrs. Pankhurst declared that in the present moment suffragism is forgotten. The women are ready to do their bit for England, to work in the factories, relieve the men in the trenches, and do any work given them by the Government, whether by night or by day.

TITLED LADIES VOLUNTEER.

London, July 17.

Messrs. Vickers, Sons and Maxim have arranged for trains of volunteer women of the educated and leisure classes to replace, during the week-end, the working women employed in making munitions. They will work in three shifts of eight hours each. Among the first batch are Lady Gathorne and Lady Gertrude Crawford.

ALLIES' AIR RAIDS

BRITISH AND FRENCH SUCCESSES

Paris, July 20.

Despatches from the front report that the Germans have been making further efforts to get a footing in the Labyrinth in the Neuville Saint Vaast region, but in every case were repulsed with loss. At certain points they got almost to the trenches but the attack faded away under the fire of the French machine guns.

After the attack was abandoned by the Germans a counter-attack was delivered by the French, who reached the first line of trenches and took a number of prisoners and some machine guns.

Fighting is still going on along the greater part of the front.

THE REMNANTS OF TWO REGIMENTS.

London, July 20.

A British correspondent in the north of France describing the recapture of the trenches south of the Sonvaux ravine, says that the French had hardly any casualties in this affair.

The Germans counter-attacked, discharging streams of burning liquid upon the French and following this up by a violent attack. The French had machine guns concealed at certain points with which they opened fire on the enemy as they approached, causing terrible ravages in the German ranks. The advance of the enemy being checked, the Senegalese troops then leaped from the trenches and dispersed the survivors.

The remnants of the two regiments of the Crown Prince's army were afterwards incorporated in other regiments, having lost over half their effective.

FRENCH AIRMEN RAID COLMAR.

Paris, July 20.

An official bulletin reports:—

"A squadron of five French aviators made a raid on Colmar and dropped a number of bombs upon it, returning without mishap."

"Near Souchez and Neuville Saint Vaast there were great artillery duels during the day."

"North of the Chateau Carleul there were combats with hand grenades and explosive bombs."

"Along the valley of the Aisne there have been prolonged cannonades."

"The Germans again bombarded the town of Soissons."

"The attacks by the Germans in the Calonne region were repulsed."

DAMAGE TO RAILWAY STATIONS.

Paris, July 20.

It is officially announced that four French aviators to-day dropped forty eight shells on the railway station at Chillerange junction, southwards from Voursins.

The other squadron of six aviators that raided Colmar dropped eight shells of 150 millimetres and eight of 90 millimetres on the railway buildings and trains. It has been established that substantial damage was done to the main and freight stations. None of the shells fell in the city.

V. C. IN A LION'S DEN

WONDERFUL RECRUITING INCIDENT IN WALES.

London, July 20.

A remarkable recruiting incident occurred at Fishguard to-day. Sergt. Fuller, a V.C. man, was telling the men that if they were not fit to die they were not fit to live, when one of them challenged him to enter a cage containing two African lions attached to a menagerie in the town. Fuller calmly entered the cage and stroked the lions. Many of the men enlisted as a result of the incident.

BRITAIN'S LOST OFFICERS12,000 SINCE WAR COMMENCED.

London, July 19.

The latest list of casualties to officers in the British army shows that for the fortnight ending July 6, 254 were killed, 489 wounded, and 33 missing.

This gives a grand total since the war began of 3,865 killed, 7,662 wounded and 1,115 prisoners or missing. Total, 12,642.

NORTH OF ENGLAND REGIMENTS LOSE HEAVILY.

London, July 19.

The casualty list for the fortnight ended July 5 shows 254 officers killed, 489 wounded and 33 missing. Losses were heavy in the Lancashire regiments which had 10 killed and 36 wounded; the Manchester regiments 15 killed and 12 wounded; the Scots Fusiliers none killed and 22 wounded; the Yorkshires 10 killed and 15 wounded; the Cameron Highlanders 11 killed and 16 wounded. The Indians lost 22 killed and 28 wounded; the Australians 3 killed and 18 wounded; and the Canadians 15 killed, 30 wounded.

BRITAIN'S DARDANELLES LOSSES42,434 KILLED, WOUNDED, AND MISSING.

London, July 19.

The Prime Minister has announced in the House of Commons that the British casualties in the Dardanelles hitherto have been 42,434 officers and men killed, wounded and missing.

HEAVY LOSS IN OFFICERS.

London, July 19.

The Prime Minister stated that the casualties at the Dardanelles in killed, wounded and missing to date include both the naval and the military branches of service.

The Prime Minister added that out of an aggregate of 8,084 casualties among the officers, the killed numbered 1933.

270,000 PROJECTILES A DAYALLIES' OUTPUT OF MUNITIONS.

London, July 19.

Mr. Lloyd George announces that since the meeting with the French Ministers at Calais, the output of ammunition has risen to 270,000 projectiles for field guns in the day, and that this could be doubled if the exigencies of war needed it. France and Great Britain have all the raw material for an unlimited increase in the production of munitions.

TRIBUTE TO LORD HALDANESIGNED BY 200 MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT.

London, July 15.

An address, signed by over two hundred members of the House of Commons, has been presented to Lord Haldane expressing appreciation of the great services he has rendered the public. The presentation took place in the House of Commons, about a hundred of those who signed the document being present.

In thanking the deputation for this mark of esteem Lord Haldane carefully abstained from any reference to the recent incident between himself and Mr. Lloyd George, his speech being devoted to commending the work performed by the Liberal party after the outbreak of the war, and the advancement of ideals in regard to education and national efficiency.

DUBLIN CORPORATION AND HOME RULE

Dublin, July 15.

The City Corporation has refused by 30 votes to 23 to endorse a resolution in favour of demanding that Home Rule be put into operation throughout the whole of Ireland on September 17.

By the same majority a resolution was carried expressing confidence that the Government would select the speediest means at the proper moment to bring about a settlement of the question.

It is stated that when the result of the voting was known disorder arose among the Councillors, some of whom had to be prevented by force from engaging in fist-cuffs.

EXPULSION FROM IRELANDFOR MEMBERS OF SINN FEIN*END OF ANTI-RECRUITING CAMPAIGN.

London, July 16.

The British Government has ordered three members of the Sinn Fein, viz. Ernest Blythe of Ennistimon, William Mallows of Athenry, and H. J. Pin of Belfast, to leave Ireland owing to the campaign they have been conducting on public platforms against recruiting.

BRITAIN'S WASTEFUL GOVERNMENTWAR LOAN WILL BARELY LAST UNTIL CHRISTMAS.

London, July 16.

To-day Lord St. Aldwyn, presiding at an address on economic endurance delivered by Mr. Harold Cox, said that he was unable to understand why the Government did not, a year ago, take some steps to curtail the great civil expenditure. He thought that the country had had enough of speeches on the necessity of economy, and wanted the Government to practise what they taught without any delay.

Mr. Cox expressed the opinion that the war loan would barely last until Christmas.

BRITAIN'S AERIAL NAVY600 CRAFT CONSTRUCTED IN TEN MONTHS.

London, July 15.

Particulars published by the Press regarding the construction of aeroplanes in the United Kingdom show that the increase in this arm has been equal in proportion, if not greater than that of artillery.

The British aerial fleet is being increased at the rate of a hundred aeroplanes for every Zeppelin built by Germany. Since the war commenced it has been increased by the addition of over six hundred new machines, as compared with the six Zeppelins constructed in Germany.

HENDERSON, THE PROPHETCRITICISED BY BRITISH PRESS.

London, July 19.

The Press criticises the utterances of the President of the Board of Education, Mr. A. Henderson, who has prophesied that the war would last another year and that we must be prepared accordingly.

The general opinion is that such statements are imprudent. What Ministers have to impress upon the people is the necessity of being prepared for war while the war lasts, or in other words to carry it on until victory has been won and the terms of peace imposed on the enemy.

BRITISH AUTHOR MISSINGLOST IN DARDANELLES OPERATIONS.

London, July 15.

It is reported that the British author, Mr. George Calderon, is on the list of "Wounded and Missing" among the forces at Gallipoli. He was twice wounded on the western front, where he acted as interpreter, and was afterwards given a commission with the expeditionary forces in the Dardanelles.

COMPULSORY REGISTRATIONACT RECEIVES ROYAL ASSENT.

London, July 15.

The National Registry Bill providing for the registration of all British subjects in the United Kingdom between the ages of 18 and 65 has received the Royal assent.

EARL OF ORKNEY THREATENEDSECRET DEPARTURE FOR CANADA.

Paris, July 19.

A telegram from Chicago states that the Earl of Orkney who is one of a British commission which went to America to buy horses for the army has received several anonymous letters threatening him with death unless he desisted from making purchases.

The Earl handed the letters over to the police and left secretly for Canada.

POCKET WIRELESSMARCONI'S NEW INVENTION.

London, July 17.

The "Evening Post" publishes a telegram from Milan reporting that Signor Marconi has left for London on a secret mission. He is stated to have perfected a new pocket wireless system for the use of the Italian forces in the field, by which the officers can keep in touch with headquarters all the time.

LAND FOR FIGHTING MENNEW SOUTH WALES PROVISION FOR RETURNING SOLDIERS.

London, July 19.

A telegram from Sydney reports that the Government of New South Wales has reserved 25,000 acres of land fit for growing wheat, and 250,000 acres of irrigated land on which to establish the soldiers who return from the war.

AUSTRALIAN CRUISER IN COLLISIONNORWEGIAN STEAMER SUNK

London, July 15.

A telegram from Singapore announces that the Australian cruiser Brisbane which was in the harbour rammed and sank the Norwegian steamer Bibat early this morning. All the Europeans on board the steamer were saved, but several of the coloured crew were drowned.

PRIEST AS SPYARREST AT GIBRALTAR.

Madrid, July 19.

Information has been received from Algeiras that a priest, who, it appears, was secretary to the Bishop of that town, has been arrested at Gibraltar. In his possession were found documents showing that he belonged to an organisation for espionage and was in communication with the Germans.

ITALY AND HER ALLIESAPPROVAL OF BRITAIN: ADMIRATION OF FRANCE.

London, July 15.

Sir George Trevelyan, formerly Secretary for Scotland, writing from Rome, says:

"The munitions campaign in Great Britain and the Tsar's spirited manifesto on the same subject are the theme of much comment in Rome. It is believed here that something of the spirit which pervaded Russia when the country was invaded by Napoleon in 1812 has been aroused.

"The attitude of England and Russia at the present moment is being observed and meets with approval but no regard is being paid to that of France as all Italians know the tragic determination of every Frenchman to die rather than fail.

"England is well beloved here, but she is distant, and relatively she is a stranger. With France Italy has had more quarrels, but the two are more allied in kin and kin, and France's ways are more understandable in Italy. Also deep feeling has been aroused in Italy by the enormous sacrifices that the men of France

CAUGHT IN A SNOWSTORMEXCITING ADVENTURES OF A DETACHMENT OF ALPINI.

London, July 15.

A description of the capture of Monticello by the Italians received from Rome relates the adventures of a detachment of Alpini who, during the advance on the enemy, were caught in a midnight hurricane of snow and wind.

The men waited where they were for three hours, tied together to avoid being swept away by the force of the gale, finally retiring by a pathway that was obliterated by snow.

"By dawn of day they were back again and joined in a successful attack at the point of the bayonet. When the roll was called only one man was missing, and was not found after three days' search. Five days afterwards the missing man crawled into camp wounded."

ITALIAN CRUISER SUNKLOSS OF THE GARIBALDI

New York, July 19.

A wireless message from Berlin announces that the Government of Austria-Hungary has officially reported the sinking of the Italian cruiser Garibaldi by an Austrian submarine.

(Note.—The Giuseppe Garibaldi was an armoured cruiser of 7,294 tons displacement and was launched in 1899 at Sestri Ponente. Her armour was of 6 inch Krupp steel, her speed 20 knots, her armament one 10 inch, two 8 inch, fourteen 6 inch and other smaller guns. She had four submerged torpedo tubes and her complement was 540 men).

SANK IN FIFTEEN MINUTES.

London, July 19.

Advices received from Vienna by way of Berlin report that the Italian armoured cruiser Giuseppe Garibaldi was attacked and torpedoed by an Austrian submarine just north of Ragusa, and that the vessel sank in fifteen minutes.

EXPULSION FROM ITALYWIFE OF DON CARLOS OF BOURBON ACCUSED OF TRAFFICKING WITH AUSTRIA.

Rome, July 17.

The Italian Government has decreed the expulsion of the wife of Don Carlos of Bourbon who has been residing in the Loredan palace at Venice. The lady is accused of having been mixed up in political intrigues with Austria against Italy.

DESTROY ART TREASURESADVICE OF HUN PRESS*GERMAN HATRED OF ITALY

London, July 17.

The "Morning Post" publishes a despatch from Berne stating that an arrival from Brussels says that when General von Bissing prohibited the wearing of the Italian colours, everyone instead wore a little piece of macaroni.

The German Press is beginning to educate the public in the ruthless destruction of the art treasures of Italy. The "Dresden Nachrichten" devotes a leading article to the subject, declaring that no consideration whatever will be paid to the country that attacks Germany from behind. The papers say: "If the Italian statesmen imagined that the art treasures of the country are a species of insurance against the too energetic conduct of the war, they will experience very soon a bitter disappointment. The last significant German is of more value than the most magnificent jewel of ancient or modern art."

"When the monuments, cathedrals, statues, pictures, churches and palaces of Venice, Milan, Florence and Rome feel the sharpness of the German sword, it will be, God knows, a just judgment that overtakes them."

GERMAN TROOPS' BRAVERYRECOGNISED BY UNION FORCES.

New York, July 15.

A telegram from Berlin says that the conditions under which the German forces in South-west Africa surrendered to the troops of the South African Union make it clear that the Germans numbered 204 officers and 3,004 soldiers, a little more than a regiment of regular infantry on a war footing, with seven guns and 22 machine guns. This force, after a prolonged warfare and terrible fatigues, was matched against 20,000 men.

The bravery of the Germans was admitted by the English (sic), who even permitted the non-commissioned officers and privates to keep their side arms or guns.

IN THE TRACK OF THE HUNWHOLESALE DESTRUCTION IN BALTIC PROVINCES.

London, July 17.

According to despatches to-day from Petrograd, a trail of desolation has been left by the Germans all along the shores of the Baltic between Memel and Libau. The Germans destroyed private property ruthlessly, razing palaces, villas, hotels, casinos, and cottages alike. The only building of importance left standing was the palace of a Polish nobleman, which the Germans seized to use as military headquarters, Prince Henry von Hindenburg occupying the palace.

In this northern battle front the Germans are developing a great aggressive campaign with the object of capturing Riga.

TROOPS SENT TO ESSENGERMANY PREPARES TO COPE WITH STRIKE AT KRUPPS.

Basle, July 16.

It is reported that several regiments of troops have been despatched to Essen to guard the Krupp works in view of the rumours of a threatened strike by the workers. The men demand more wages and less work in consequence of the high price of food and the pressure of work.

It is also reported that the "Frankfort Gazette" recommends that the men's demands be granted.

GERMANY'S ARMIES DOOMEDOPTIMISM OF GRAND DUKE MICHAEL.

Petrograd, July 16.

In the course of an interview with the war correspondents Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch said that Germany's armies are doomed to ultimate catastrophe, despite their having gained some temporary successes. He observed:—"The Germans thought that they could crush us in two or three months and impose their conditions of peace; but in spite of long preparation and perfection of military technique, they failed. It was a cruel mistake, for which they have suffered a mortal blow."

VON MACKENSEN'S ARMYCOMPOSED OF LANDSTURM.

Paris, July 13.

Information supplied through the Russian General Staff states that the greater part of the army commanded by Marshal von Mackensen consists of troops of the Landsturm or second "Ban," consisting of men of over 39 years of age.

KAISER'S APPEAL FOR VICTORY

It is further stated that the Kaiser, when making a farewell speech to these troops at Frankfurt, said:—"We must risk everything, as, with the enemy victorious, Germany will cease to exist. It is possible that the war may have been a mistake on our part; but the present moment is a time for deeds, not words, and the Empire must be saved."

NO AID FOR THE HUNSGOVERNMENT'S FIRM STAND IN EGYPT.

London, July 19.

That the Government is determined to deal promptly and effectually with any attempt to assist the Teutonic allies is made evident by a proclamation issued in Cairo to-day to the following effect:—

"Every person having knowledge of the existence of a plot against established order, or of the identity of any persons guilty of any offence against the Government, must communicate without delay with the nearest authority. Failure to comply with this order will render the person liable to being dealt with by martial law."

BETHMAN-HOLLWEG BLAMEDPRINCE VON BUELOW ON CAUSES OF WAR WITH ITALY.

New York, July 16.

A telegram from Rome states that Prince von Buelow is about to publish a book describing the negotiations which took place through him between Germany and Italy.

The blame for his lack of success is laid on the German Imperial Chancellor, Bethman-Hollweg, and the peremptory orders sent by him to the German Ambassador; while the shortsightedness of the Austrian diplomats is also declared to have made it impossible for the Prince to continue the negotiations.

MARTIAL LAW IN GERMANYTO STIFLE ANTI-WAR AGITATION

Copenhagen, July 16.

It is reported from Berlin that martial law is to be declared in the whole of Germany in order to suppress the Socialist agitation in favour of the termination of the war.

MOKE PEACE RUMOURSGERMANY REPORTED TO HAVE APPROACHED THE UNITED STATES.

London, July 16.

The "Financial News" publishes statements by persons who are in a position to speak with authority, to the effect that Germany is making tentative proposals of peace through the United States.

Information from the same source states that Germany is impelled to this course through her economic exhaustion.

KAMERUNS TOWN CAPTUREDALLIES OCCUPY NGAUMDERE.

London, July 16.

It is officially announced that the Allied forces operating in the Kameruns have occupied the central town of Ngaumdere, the place being captured on June 29 with the loss of 5 men killed and eight wounded.

HOW TO LOOTAUSTRIAN SOLDIERS' VADE MECUM.

London, July 20.

A despatch from Milan says that some of the Austrian prisoners captured by the Italians had in their possession a little book containing sentences in Italian for use when the Austrians invaded Lombardy and Venice. The following are examples of the sentences:—

"Where are your valuables?"

"Where is your money?"

"Tell me the truth, otherwise I will have you shot."

"Call me the master or mistress of the house."

"I am hungry. I want chicken, soup, rice, a bottle of old wine."

"Prepare me a better room."

GERMAN OFFICERS SEIZEDWHILE TRAVELLING ON GREEK STEAMER.

Paris, July 19.

A telegram from Athens reports that a British warship detained the Greek steamer Epirus bound for Salonica and arrested three German officers who were on board travelling to that port.

DISEASE BACILLI IN WEAPONSAUSTRIA EMULATES GERMAN INHUMANITY.

London, July 20.

A correspondent reporting from Milan on the progress of the campaign of the Isonzo river, states that on one occasion a body of sixty-five Dalmatians came out of their trenches and threw down their rifles shouting "Italia!" The Austrians in the trench behind fired into the backs of the Dalmatians, killing thirty-seven of them. The rest reached the Italian lines, where they were received fraternally.

The Austrian aeroplanes have thrown innumerable darts as well as bombs on the Italian camp hospital. In their trenches have been found glass tubes containing the bacilli of infectious diseases, and small shrapnel balls smeared with grease containing infections and toxic minerals. They are continually using dum-dum or explosive bullets and abusing the white flag.

KAISER, THE CHOSEN OF ALLAHSEDITION ORGANISED BY GERMANS IN MOROCCO.

Madrid, July 17.

It is reported from Algeciras that German officers in Morocco are organising and training forces of natives with a view to furthering the interests of Germany in the country.

The officers incite the Moors to commence a holy war, telling them that the Kaiser is the chosen one of Allah, sent to drive the infidels out of the country and restore the throne of Hafid.

PARISH PRIEST IMPRISONEDBELGIANS ASSISTED TO ESCAPE FROM GERMAN RULE.

Paris, July 17.

Information has been received that the parish priest and the Commissioner of Police at Destrin in Belgium have been condemned by the Germans to imprisonment for ten years with hard labour for assisting the young Belgians to get out of the country and join the Belgian army.

BARI BOMBARDEDRAID BY AUSTRIAN AIRMEN.

Rome, July 17.

It is announced that three Austrian aeroplanes passed over the port of Bari in the Adriatic this morning and dropped eight bombs, killing six persons and wounding several others.

"TRENCHES DE LUXE"GERMAN ARMY'S UNDERGROUND CITIES.

Rotterdam, July 20.

"Trenches de Luxe" are described by a newspaper correspondent named August Spanuth, who has been visiting the German front in the north of France. He says that there are whole cities underground inhabited by many thousands of soldiers. These subterranean quarters are equipped with running water, electric lights, telephones, stoves, and the mail is delivered three times a day.

Supplies are brought in great quantities. The Germans have established big smelting and forging works for the manufacture of ammunition and other necessary supplies at the front. Barbed wire, armour, bombs, and horseshoes are produced, the plants being operated by the soldiers, and kept running in full blast night and day.

Other plants produce blankets, uniforms, underclothing, and a rough textile substance used for lining the trenches.

A thousand soldiers are doing dam work in France and Belgium, and harvesting the enormous crops. Cattle are said to be more numerous than before the war. Everything is splendidly organised, and the Germans are prepared to continue the war indefinitely, thanks to this efficiency.

TURKISH OFFICERS EXECUTEDFOR ANTI-GERMAN PROPAGANDA

Athens, July 19.

It is reported that five Turkish officers were executed at Adrianople for plotting a campaign against Germany and in favour of peace.

TURKISH COLLIER SUNKBY RUSSIAN SUBMARINE.

Petrograd, July 19.

It is officially announced that the Russian submarine Nerpa has sunk a collier in the Black Sea.

"BELGIUM'S DAY"

Celebrations at the Coliseo

A GREAT DEMONSTRATION

The Allies' demonstration on Belgium's Day at the Coliseo was a great success and closed amid thunders of applause and the greatest enthusiasm. A packed house witnessed the beginning of the programme at 9.20, and to put everyone in a properly patriotic frame of mind a neat Belgian "bandera" 8 in. by 5 in. was placed on every seat of the theatre. At 12 consequently the Coliseo vomited red-yellow-and-black flags by the thousand and must have greatly hurt the feelings of belated Huns going home from their bierkellers. The management of the affair deserve warm congratulation on the manner in which everything went without a hitch throughout and the entire absence of "watchful waiting." The stately strains of the Himno Nacional were, as always, received with enthusiasm, and before the audience could sit down the orchestra struck up the brisk clear notes of La Brabançonne, which brought a roar of applause that drowned it. Belgium was near the hearts of all the large gathering in the palkos, the upper circles and the spacious densely populated platea. In the central box, over the arms of the Republic, sat Sir Reginald Tower, Monsieur Charles Rénz, Monsieur Eugène Stein, Monsieur Jullemier and Commendatore Cobianchi. All these gentlemen repeatedly received and acknowledged the enthusiastic homage paid to their individual and collective flags; in fact, the feeling of international solidarity was throughout the theatre delightfully strong and much in evidence. There followed the majestic Russian Imperial Hymn, to which British, French, Italians and Belgians hastened to give salutes of fraternal applause. Two hymns which are unfamiliar, the Serbian and Montenegrin, were then played, and both are very pretty lively airs and worthy of the brave peoples they represent. Mesdames Galli Curci and Gilda Dalla Rizza sang some operatic airs in the most charming manner and were both recalled. Subsequently Mademoiselle Jeanne de Frezia recited with emotional and tragic power a monologue in French on "La Guerre," the all-absorbing subject. While the well-deserved applause still lingered, the orchestra broke with a hoarse crash of kettledrums into the bold light-hearted swing of the Royal Italian March. Our latest ally was hailed with a roar of welcome which again drowned the music, so it was played twice. During the interval which followed many resumed their outer integuments, as the bitter cold penetrated the theatre but not the minds of the, by this time, thoroughly warmed up audience. The second part of the programme was entirely devoted to Mlle. Felyne Verbist, the Belgian danseuse. In the first dance, Sylvia (Delibes), she appeared with the Belgian scarf. Fine though it was, it was surpassed by La Mort du Cygne (St. Saenz) which was repeated by request. It is a beautiful, pathetic and intensely moving creation. The sorrowful effect was erased by the Italian peasant dance La Monterrina, in which the executant was saucy and piquant, bringing down the house. "The Vision of Salome," the final dance had in it something wonderful, something weird and an element of the terrible and pitiful. So might a damned soul appear rehearsing the acts of its age long dead wickedness. There was no bloody head, "horrendum referens," but the effect was intense, as was proved by the moment of dead silence at the end. Then followed a storm of applause. After the orchestral symphony which introduced the third part of the programme, Se-

LINER'S ADVENTURE

Stopped Several Times by Cruisers

ON VOYAGE TO ARGENTINA

Madrid, July 21

It is reported from Cadiz that the steamer Infanta Isabel, after having been stopped several times by British cruisers, has again left for Buenos Aires. She has 900 passengers on board for Argentina.

AN ARMISTICE LIE

DENIED BY RUSSIAN COMMANDER.

Petrograd, July 21.

To the last report issued by the Commander-in-Chief, Grand Duke Nicholas, the following note is attached:

"The enemy is sparing no effort in spreading unfavourable statements about us invented by himself and of a barbarian character, attaching special importance to the appearance of these inventions in the neutral Press. Thus the Swedish organs, in the reports which they publish from the correspondent in Berlin, state:— 'Owing to their enormous losses in Bukovina and on the Dniester the Russians were compelled to ask the Austrians for an armistice for four hours in which to gather their dead and wounded, which was granted.'"

"It is added that during the armistice the Austrians were able to note the alleged enormous losses, which had forced the Russians to retire several kilometres. These communications are totally untrue. There never have been any overtures for an armistice, and we never felt the need for one."

ñor Joaquín de Vedía stepped forward to pay the homage of Argentine intellect to Belgium and the good cause. Possessing a fine presence and a rich and vibrant voice, the speaker, in a short but eloquently fiery oration profoundly moved his hearers, even the stolid Britons. He referred to Belgium unconquered though covered with ruins, blood and tears, spoke of the allied Nations and in scathing terms of scorn of the German crime and its villain perpetrators, and voiced the feeling of Argentina, in spite "of the cold attitude of official neutrality." Señor de Vedía had to re-appear and bow to his enthusiastic hearers. Señores Cirino, De Muro and Lazzaro sang delightfully, airs from the operas and were repeatedly recalled. After this, followed two fine recitations by Madame Coemme Cestier. The British National Anthem was played afterwards, and some people tried to sing it, but respectability quickly choked the effort. However, in the excellent Presentation of the Flags by members of the United Club, arranged by Mr. R. H. Morgan, there was full scope for enthusiasm. The Union Jack, the "Fiery Tricolour," the Russian standard, the Italian, and last, but not least, the Belgian were carried on by detachments of their respective troops "in their habit as they lived," and prodigious was the enthusiasm when all the flags laid their heads together as they were lowered and crossed. The apotheosis showed Liberty triumphant amid shattered arms, fallen soldiers and wrecked aeroplanes, and the curtain fell to the triumphant swell of the Marseillaise sung by—all who knew it; it had volume, so they were many. The arrangement of the tableaux was excellent. A great night that sent one away feeling better and warm at the heart.

CORDOBA NEWS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

July 19.

News in Brief.

Mr. Arthur Tughes expects to make a trip to the Capital this week.

Engineer Stuart is said to be leaving B. A. for England during the current week.

The "Great Raymond Company" will make their debut in this city on August 28. Raymond is recognised as one of the foremost performers in his line in the world, and has appeared in all the large cities of Europe and America.

Señor Ferruccio Castelfranchi, who lives at Calle Colon 429, reports the theft of a gold watch and chain, gold ring and medal from his house on Saturday night. The police are working on the case.

Off to the War.

Last Thursday Señor Humberto Quadretta left Cordoba on the night train for Buenos Aires accompanied by his wife and child, where they will embark for Italy on the "Tommaso de Savoia," the boat on which Señor Quadrotta served two years as wireless operator. Upon arrival in Europe he will take up his post as operator on one of the warships of the Italian Navy. Señor Quadrotta leaves his position as bookkeeper for the Singer Sewing Machine Company of this city and his fellow employees and many friends here wish their old companion the best of luck and a safe return.

Help for Families of Soldiers.

The private school "Silvio Pellico" situated on Rivera Indarte 458, directed by Prof. Filoreto Fondacari, and his wife, has been engaged in making a collection in aid of the families of Italian soldiers who may suffer through the war. The sum of $51.80 was realised and the money duly handed over to Señor Francisco Sala, who is in charge of the Italian Red Cross in this city.

Farewell to Caruso.

Tuesday night was Caruso's farewell appearance in Cordoba, and the Rivera Indarte theatre was crowded with an enthusiastic audience who applauded the world famous tenor to the echo. "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci" were the two operas presented. The former was perfectly rendered, but "Pagliacci" was the play the vast audience were more anxious to see. Not only was Caruso's singing up to the marvellous standard which he himself has set; but his acting was admirable and compared very favourably with and best efforts of celebrated actors who have visited this city in the past.

14th of July Festivities.

The French residents of Cordoba held a musical festival on the night of the great French holiday, the 14th of July, at their ball in calle Rioja. The hall was handsomely decorated with the flags of the allies. During the evening several young ladies were busy selling medals in aid of the French Red Cross. The function was brought to a close by the rendering of the Argentine and French Anthems, "Brabançonne," the Royal Italian March, "God Save the King," and the Russian National Hymn. Many flags were hung out throughout the city in honour of the occasion.

Prince of Wales's Fund.

The Cordoba Committee for the Prince of Wales' Fund have received the following acknowledgment of their second remittance of £275, making a total of £575 in all remitted to date. The Committee have already $1,982.45 in hand towards a third remittance, making a total collected to the 16th of July of $8,578.81. All residents in the Province of Cordoba wishing to participate in this should send their donation to Mr. A. D. Dunbar, Banco de Londres y Río de la Plata, Cordoba.

"I have to acknowledge with sincere thanks, the receipt of your letter of the 12th ult. enclosing a draft for £275, which has been so kindly contributed to the Fund raised by the Cordoba Committee on behalf of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales' National Relief Fund.

It may interest you to know that His Royal Highness' Fund to-day amounts to the magnificent total of £5,290,076, of which £2,165,000 has been allocated to the relief of distress, which happily is much less widespread than had been anticipated.

There is still a steady drain on the Fund, and money is being paid out mainly on behalf of Naval and Military distress faster than it comes in. When the war is over and the Government contracts are completed, it is certain that much distress will arise amongst those who return from the war and others, unless measures be taken in advance and funds be available to meet all necessities. It is important therefore that the Prince of Wales' Fund should continue to be built up as a great reserve from which the suffering which otherwise would arise hereafter may be alleviated.

LAND OF LILLIPUT

Conducted by Egeria

My dear Lilliputians,—

I suppose very few of you trouble, when you receive a new toy, to read the inscription on it, or on the box or case in which you received it. But for many years that inscription has been "Made in Germany," as so many other things have also been branded with that inscription.

Now the war has changed all this; and England is making her own toys and household requisites. And the United States of America are coming to the fore with their toy industry among others; and as all Lilliputians are more or less interested in toys, I will tell you something of what the Americans are doing in this direction, a friend having kindly supplied me with the information.

I learn that the toy industry of the Kaiser's dominion has been practically swept out of existence since the war, because the men who made the toys have had to go and fight, and as others could not be found to take their places, the factories were forced to close down. So the people of the United States of America realising their opportunity are doing their best to secure the toy trade not only for the present, but for the future. Because, after the war, where will those men be who used to make the toys? Alas! many of them will be dead; and many of them who have not given their lives for their country will have given their arms or their health, and in any case will not be able to return to the places they left behind them; and it takes a long time for workers to become skilful. Another reason why Germany had the monopoly of the toy trade was because of the cheap labour in the "Fatherland." Now since everything will cost more in Germany, as elsewhere after the war, it is probable that the United States will keep the trade it has secured while other nations have been fighting. Celluloid dolls, for instance, are more expensive already; but perhaps that is rather a good thing, for celluloid is not the best plaything for Lilliputians, as it is so easily set alight. But most of the new toys have been "Made in U.S. of A.," such for instance, as the Teddy Bear and the Kewpie Doll. The former is the best-beloved of all inhabitants of the Land of Lilliput, and "Dollie" has had to give place to "Teddy" in most nurseries, for there is something about a "Teddy" that every child loves. I know a little Lilliputian who has had a little "Teddy" since she was a wee thing less than a year old, and also she has had many dolls; but the Teddy is her constant companion, and quite "good" still after 4 years, while many dollies have come and gone in the meantime. Perhaps the furry coat of "Teddy" has an attraction, and besides he does not get broken like dollie does. Anyway the "Teddy" is a "Yankee" idea, although of course Europe has copied it until now. For the older Lilliputians, too, the "Yanks" have made many more original games than any other country, including card games, game-boards and puzzles. Now I will give you the exact words which my friend sent to me about this matter. They are:—

"Something of those same qualities of temperament and mental daring, which enable the citizens of the North American Republic to excel in conjuring up new games and puzzles, enable them to lead the world in the production of mechanical and automatic toys. But then when you come to think of it, isn't it right and proper that the nation that gave to the world the first successful telephone, talking machine, aeroplane, submarine boat, telegraph, steamboat, sewing machine and armoured warship should have the right of way in putting forth the miniature counterfeit presentments of such inventions for the education of the rising generation. Assuredly, however, this is a very important line in the toy field, for boys of all ages are manifesting nowadays the strongest preference for mechanical toys.

And many toys teach both girls and boys so much. They are well made and consist first of metal units capable of being fashioned into an endless variety of forms, and which give free rein to any mechanical or architectural bent you may have. Some of them have die-cast gears, key-seated shafting, double plates, and a large number of interchangeable parts, and by means of these units a boy with any ingenuity can build skyscrapers, and bridges and wireless telegraph towers etc., just as the younger Lilliputian can make crude monuments and pyramids from building blocks.

An old toy in a new form, which the North Americans are responsible for is the magic lantern, but a glorified edition indeed, which is known as the radiopticon and which gives fine results. And for the girl Lilliput, there are dolls that represent by costume and otherwise familiar characters, such as cowboys and policemen; and the "unbreakable" dolls are also from the "U.S. of A." market. And my friend's article continues thus:—

"In preparation for a demand that is expected to extend over the next few years, American doll makers are now bending their energies to the production of character dolls representing the soldiers and naval sailors of all nations. Such dolls are, of course, correctly garbed in the proper uniforms, showing the national colours of the respective countries. Red Cross Nurse dolls are likely to have a heavy sale, and there is a "Peace Doll" and brand-new dolls that are known as "Eugenic Babies." It is interesting to note that the so-called "German Doll" is now being produced in quantities, in the United States, and the Yankees are producing dolls with wigs, dolls with sleeping eyes, dolls that will talk, and, with characteristic up-to-dateness, dolls with electric eyes that glow at night. After all, however, the permanent, steady demand will probably be for the newly-designated "American doll" of bisque or wood, double-jointed, feather-weight washable and indestructible.

Not only are manufacturers in the United States reaching out for all the world's doll trade, but they have also taken up the manufacture of all the indispensables for milady of doll-dom—doll beds and other toy furniture, doll buggies, doll clothing, doll dishes and kitchen equipment, and all the other incidentals dear to the youthful feminine heart. Closely akin to dolls as good sellers are the stuffed animals and specialities such as walking elephants and creeping babies, and woolly sheep, etc. Ever since the success of the "Teddy Bear" American designers have been seeking for a successor that would duplicate the bear's vogue. Now the popularity of the marching song, "A Long, Long Way to Tipperary," has inspired the introduction of the "Tipperary Pup," an Irish terrier made of composition material, painted in natural colours and fitted with glass eyes. Then again there will be all the weapons and paraphernalia of warfare. Toy cannon, pistols and guns, toy forts, toy armoured automobiles that will really run, toy warships that actually travel, and toy aeroplanes that do not suggest an everlasting Peace, will be for sale, and will for awhile only, let us hope take the place of the toy piano and other dwarf musical instruments. And now to finish I will quote again from the original. "The United States has the largest plants in the world for the production of toy books, blocks, puzzles and games, and the United States easily leads the world in the quantity and quality of paper books, linen books, board books and cloth books for children. As for American toy production in general, it may be stated that at the present time there are in the United States more than three hundred firms operating factories for the production of toys and playthings, and the day is not far distant, if it is not now at hand, when the show rooms and sample rooms of Yankee manufacturers will succeed the "Leipzig Fair" as the foremost toy market of the world. The story for you this week has been found in the "Children's Encyclopædia" and is entitled "The March of the Ten Thousand."

Of all the successful struggles against overwhelming odds that history relates, few can compare with the great march known as "The Retreat of the Ten Thousand." Famous in ancient times as a wonderful military achievement, it remains to this day a stirring record of courage and endurance.

In 401 B.C., Cyrus, son of Darius, made war against his brother Artaxerxes, who had succeeded to the throne of Persia. By various pretexts and deceptions he secured the services of about thirteen thousand Greeks, who marched with the rest of his army into Asia. At Cunaxa, near Babylon, Cyrus was defeated and slain, and the Greeks found themselves alone in the heart of a hostile continent. They endeavoured to come to an agreement with Tissaphernes, the victorious general, to allow them to return safely. Tissaphernes met them with fair words, but when he had won their confidence he invited their leaders to a magnificent banquet, and treacherously slew all who came.

We may picture the plight of the unfortunate Greek army, deprived of many of their leaders, thousands of miles from home and kindred, and surrounded on all sides by hostile forces. It was impossible for them to push into the unknown country; it was impossible for them to remain where they were. There was nothing for them but retreat, and retreat involved a long and terrible march through rough lands peopled by savage races. For the moment they were in the depths of despair.

In the perilous moment, when all seemed lost, a leader was found—a man who had joined the army as a simple volunteer for love of adventure. As the soldiers lay about, listless and dejected, Xenophon, an Athenian knight, asked himself: "Why do I lie here? The night is creeping on. The morning will probably bring the enemy, and defeat will be followed by insults, torture, and death. Am I to wait and do nothing until some officer comes forward to give counsel and to act? To whom am I to look for this; and am I not old enough for the task?"

He arose and summoned the captains. To them he explained the danger of their position, and showed them that their only hope lay in their weapons and right arms. He himself, he said, was willing either to follow or to lead. His eloquence won them over. They acclaimed him as their leader, and at once preparations were made for the retreat.

The wonderful march began. All the baggage that could be spared was turned, in order to leave as many soldiers as possible ready for action. Their course was marked out for them—they could only strive to reach the coast. They crossed a broad river, and encountered the first attack of the enemy. Slings and mounted bowmen, whose weapons carried further than those of the Greeks, hung on their rear and flanks and harassed them. Xenophon tried to repel the attack, but was defeated with great loss. To restore the spirit of his men, the leader took the blame of the defeat on himself, and reorganised his forces.

The Greeks marched on. Soon they came to a country which presented enormous difficulties to their retreat. Their hearts sank as they saw the terrible rocks and narrow ravines of a land inhabited by a fierce fighting race of hillmen. Had they once been caught in the narrow passes of this country, they would have been overwhelmed. They could only escape destruction by moving with almost incredible swiftness from height to height before the enemy could reach them.

Day after day they made their gallant marches till wild Armenia stretched before them. This country was swept by great winds and heavy snows, making it almost impassable. Moreover, the Greeks were crossing it at the most terrible season of the year—the winter.

Buffeted by tempests, drenched and blinded by raging snows, they struggled along. Their wonderful spirit urged them on; and not only they did repel the attacks of their foes, but they assumed the offensive, stormed the camp of the ruler of the province, and carried away much booty.

Then they crossed the Euphrates near its source, and encountered a wind of piercing coldness, while they forced their way with dogged persistence through snow that lay six feet deep. On they pressed, hampered by the presence of many sick and wounded soldiers. Behind them were the enemy, ready to fall upon them at any moment. A feigned attack drove these away, and the Greeks began to approach the plains.

Their way was now impeded by a river, which they crossed, only to find that the pass leading to the open country beyond was blocked by the tribesmen of the district. Although hampered by their ignorance of the country, and fighting in the darkness of night, they carried the pass and emerged victorious into the plain.

Another river lay in their path. They crossed it, and neared a large town, the inhabitants of which sent a guide to direct them. For five days they followed the guide, and then they saw before them Mount Tcheches. The tired and sorely tried warriors climbed painfully to its summit, and there in the distance lay before their gaze the blue waters of the Euxine Sea, which we now call the Black Sea.

The pent-up emotion of the long march burst forth, and the men, crying "The sea! The sea!" threw themselves into one another's arms. Then, with a sudden impulse, they set themselves to gather stones; and where they first gazed upon the sea they raised a mighty monument. The remnant of the ten thousand had forced their way to safety!

Even now their troubles were not ended. They had reached the sea, but transports could not be found for all them, and the fearful prospect of being compelled to march along the shores of the Black Sea made them discontented and almost mutinous. The sick men and those men over forty years of age were taken on ships, while the rest of the army marched to the nearest port.

Here a review was held and it was found that about six thousand men still survived. About three thousand men had been lost at Cunaxa and nearly four thousand on the grim march. This number was small indeed when the terrible forced marches they had undergone and the dread regions they had passed through are considered.

Their fame spread from one Greek city to another. Their exploit left a wonderful impression on the Greek world, but although their monument of stones at Mount Tcheches has long been levelled to the dust, the memory of the gallant and laborious march lives wherever bravery and courage are honoured.

With love from

EGERIA.

OLD GEORGIAN'S "GRIT"

A FATHER PROUD OF HIS SON.

A Montevideo correspondent writes as follows:—

"Jack Hopwood, of Mendoza, and St. George's College, Quilmes, was on the Antofagasta Railway when war broke out.

"The enclosed private note is a credit to both father and son.

"Mr. Hopwood was for many years Leco. Supt. on the Argentine Great Western, and his son was born in Mendoza.

"My son Jack arrived home early in February. He travelled via the Panama Canal, had a very interesting journey, tinged with a little excitement in expecting an interview with the "Dresden." To reduce that risk, they anchored by night in some port or other while they were in the Pacific Ocean. He was very much interested in the Canal and works which he had time to examine, and also took a run across the Isthmus and back on the old railway line. After spending a few weeks "Whitehalling" with letters of introduction to several of the War Office officials, he got a bit impatient, as he never appeared to get any forwarder. So he joined the Artists Rifles as private and is now finishing his training in camp at Roshampton, where the London Scottish, Queen's Westminsters and Hon. Artillery Compy. are also encamped. Quite a big affair, 8000 men. When he came home, I asked him what made him throw up a good situation to come home and join the army when there are so many fellows in England who could join if they would, and he replied that being a young man without any tie of any kind, he would not care to be alive after the war was over, unless he had done his bit in helping it on to a successful termination, and if he should not come through it all right, well, he would have done his best all the same. So I made no further remark but felt proud that he had shown the grit he was made of."

BRITISH PATRIOTIC FUND URUGUAY

VISITS OF H.M. SHIPS TO MONTEVIDEO.

The following details of fresh fruit, vegetables, etc., were supplied to the units of the South American Squadron on the occasion of their recent visits to Montevideo:—

H.M.S. Glasgow, May 18. — 2,500 oranges, 1,000 lemons, 15 bunches bananas.

H.M. Transport Macedonia, May 25. — 2,500 oranges, 1,000 lemons, 15 bunches bananas.

H.M.S. Glasgow, June 4.—Gramophone Records.

H.M. Transport Macedonia, June 12. — 2,500 oranges, 1,000 lemons, 15 bunches bananas.

H.M. Transport Edinburgh Castle, July 2, 1st call.—945 kilos cabbages (250 head), 250 kilos carrots, 250 kilos turnips, 1,000 lettuces, 1,000 tomatoes, 5,000 oranges, 1,000 lemons, 10 cases apples, 10 bunches bananas.

H.M.S. Glasgow, July 11.—5,000 oranges, 1,000 lemons, 10 bunches bananas.

H.M.S. Transport, Edinburgh Castle, July 14.—5,000 oranges, 1,000 lemons, 8 bunches bananas.

In connection with the gifts of fruit and vegetables above mentioned, Mr. Marston of Rosario contributed $20 worth on each occasion.

The ships received a plentiful supply of reading matter, thanks to the kind co-operation of the British Society in the Argentine Republic, "The Buenos Aires Herald," the Patriotic Committee of Rosario de Santa Fé, and local residents.

A parcel of underclothing made by the Talleres Ladies' Working Party and other friends of their in Alberdi, despatched by the Patriotic Committee of Rosario de Santa Fé was delivered to H.M.S. Glasgow.

H.M.S. Macedonia,
At Sea.

Sir,—I have to thank you most heartily in the name of the officers and ship's company of H.M.S. Macedonia for your kind and generous gift of fruit, vegetables, and cigarettes. I can assure you that your kindness has been much appreciated by all on board.

I remain, Sir,

Yours most sincerely,

(Signed) B. S. EVANS,
Captain R.N.

To the President,

H.M.S. Edinburgh Castle,
July 2, 1915.

Dear Mr. Moor,—Please express to your Committee our gratitude for their most munificent gift which took the most acceptable form which could have been offered to our men, and assure them from me it was most highly appreciated.

Many thanks for your good wishes and we join you in wishing speedy success to the British arms.

Yours faithfully

(Signed) J. M. MARSHALL,
Captain.

H.M.S. Glasgow

July 12, 1915.

Dear Sir,—I have once again to thank you for your great kindness to the officers and men of this ship in sending them a quantity of fruit, the value of which both to the health of the men and the general efficiency of the ship I have pointed out before.

The entertainment of the men yes-

Townshend, Private Taylor, S. W. G. E. Tremayne, Lieut. P. Vyvyan, Lieut. H. D. Wrinch, Private James White, Private E. E. Wood, Lieut. V. R. Westcott, F. Williams, Lieut. F. R. Watson, Lieut. A. S. SERBIAN RELIEF FUND.

The following letter of acknowledgment has been received of the £100 remitted to the above Fund:—

1, King's Bench Walk,
Temple, London, E.C.

June 16, 1915.

Dear Sir,—As Treasurer of the Serbian Relief Fund, I desire to express the grateful thanks of my Committee for the handsome gift of £100 which you have sent us from the British Patriotic Fund, Uruguay.

Our funds are administered in Serbia by responsible English representatives, and are allocated according as the necessities of the moment appear to require between the up-keep of our four hospital units, grants in aid to the various Serbian organisations and relief to the refugees from the areas devastated by the war, who have flocked into the mountainous region of Central Serbia.

In expressing our cordial acknowledgments to all the donors for their generous sympathy, I would beg also to convey to you personally our thanks for the interest and trouble you have manifested on behalf of the Serbian Relief Fund.

I am, dear Sir,

Yours very faithfully,

(Signed) EDWARD BOYLE,

C. W. Bayne, Esq.,
Montevideo.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT FROM THE OVER-SEAS TOBACCO FUND.

General Buildings, Aldwych,
London, W.C.

June 19, 1915.

The Hon. Secretary,
British Patriotic Fund,
Uruguay, S.A.

Dear Sir,—The Central Committee of the Over-Seas Club desire me to thank the members of the British Patriotic Fund most cordially for their very kind donation of £16 12s. 9d. towards our Tobacco Fund, which they will doubtless be interested to hear, amounts to nearly £40,000.

We are sending under separate cover 50 Tobacco Collecting Lists, 50 Aircraft Lists, 6 copies of the King's Letter, and 6 copies of Lord Kitchener's Letter, which we trust will reach you safely.

Yours faithfully

(Signed) G. C. PLAYER,
Chief Clerk.

Lists referred to in the above letter can be obtained from the Hon. Secretary Patriotic Fund.

URUGUAY VOLUNTEERS. TWO AVIATORS.

The following letter has been received from Mr. J. Sykes, who has enlisted in the Royal Flying Corps. Mr. Sykes was a mechanic on an Uruguayan estancia. R. C. Cook, formerly a mechanic in the Central Uruguay Railway some time ago, enlisted in the Royal Flying Corps.

South Farnborough,
Hants.

Dear Sir,—As a volunteer from Uruguay I beg to inform you of my enrolment in the Royal Flying Corps. The headquarters are at South Farnborough, where I am at present going through a course of drill. From here we are transferred to various depots at home or abroad. I enlisted on June 7, at Bradford Yorks.

It is quite probable that I shall be transferred from here within the next three weeks.

With best wishes, I remain

Yours sincerely,

(Signed) JOHN SYKES.

IN THE SPECIAL RESERVE

ENTRE RIOS VOLUNTEER'S APPOINTMENT.

Friends of Mr. Hugh S. Lister, who recently left Entre Rios for England, will be pleased to learn that he has obtained a commission in the 3rd Dorset's Special Reserve, which is supplying officers to the various regiments at the front. Being in this regiment he has a better chance of getting out at once to the fighting line than if he had joined any other regiment.

LIEUT. L. L. MORTLOCK

Mr. L. Leasome Mortlock, son of Mr. Lionel Mortlock, of Buenos Aires, has secured a commission as second Lieutenant in the 2nd Battalion of the Kings Royal Lancaster Regiment. Lieut. Mortlock secured his military training as a conscript with the Argentine Army, and it speaks well for his training that he secured his commission a month after presenting himself in London as a volunteer.

BOOKS FOR THE SAILORS

Yesterday, thanks to the kindness of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. and Mr. Pedro Furlong of the Expreso La Plata, "The Herald" was able to dispatch another six packages of reading matter to the British Patriotic Committee at Montevideo for the use of the officers and men of the British warships calling at that port.

This makes the fourth consignment of books, papers and magazines which our readers have generously donated.

ITALIAN RESERVISTS SAIL

LARGE CONTINGENT FROM LANUS.

Another party of Italian reservists left yesterday by the s.s. Luisiana. These formed the second contingent from Lanús and its neighbourhood. The party was very large and was despatched by the Consular Agent at Lanús and many other prominent members of the Italian community. The vessel sailed amid scenes of the greatest enthusiasm.

MUNITIONS FOR THE ALLIES

AUSTRIAN PROTEST TO THE UNITED STATES.

London, July 15.

The London newspapers reproduce the text of a protest directed by the Austrian Government to the United States against the exportation of munitions to the Allies.

The protest, which is made with the object of preventing a rupture between Germany and the United States, says that such rupture would signify also the suspension of relations by the United States with Germany's allies, Austria and Turkey.

BRITISH RED CROSS WORK

NECESSITY OF PUBLIC SUPPORT

PROPAGANDA IN ARGENTINA

It is intended to form a Chief Branch of the British Red Cross Society in the city of Buenos Aires for the purpose of concentrating the assistance of the British community in favour of an organisation that must appeal to everyone of British origin and descent. At the same time it is to afford practical training in three sections which will qualify every member to render first aid and skilled assistance in case of need. It is further intended to establish branches throughout the country so that every facility may be rendered to those who are far away from the centre and equal benefits may be obtained. It will be remembered that the British Red Cross Society is the outcome of the fusion of the two existing bodies, the "British National Society for Aid to the Sick and Wounded" and the "Central British Red Cross Council," the "St. John Ambulance Association" working in combination. The Patrons are Their Majesties the King and Queen, the President being Her Majesty Queen Alexandra. The Chairman of the Executive Committee is the Hon. Arthur Stanley, M.V.O., M.P., etc., and the British Admiralty and War Office have accorded their official recognition of the Society as the organisation responsible for the Red Cross movement throughout the Empire, and have agreed, that in time of war all voluntary offers of assistance shall reach them only through the channel of the Society. It is a further object of the Society therefore to examine and co-ordinate all offers of help, and by preventing over-lapping to render them of the utmost possible value.

Regarding the Chief Branch to be formed, here in Argentina, H.B.M. Minister Sir Reginald Tower, K.C.M.G., C.V.O., etc., has kindly consented to act as Honorary President, and H.B.M. Consul General, Mr. Mackie, has in like manner agreed to act as Vice-President, and for the present Mr. F. H. Chevallier-Boutell will occupy the position of Honorary Secretary and Treasurer, until such time as the Chief Branch is placed on a working basis, the members who come in being able to elect their own Committee for the future development.

It is hoped therefore that those who are interested will come forward and enrol as members of the Society, so that immediate steps may be taken for the purpose as indicated, and that other branches will follow at an early date. All the expenses in connection with the formation have been donated and also the working expenses of the Chief Branch for the first six months every dollar therefore will go nett to the Society and materially assist in the great work that has to be done. Some time must elapse before complete arrangements can be made for holding classes, adjusting lectures, and examinations, etc. The first step is to establish local support and then provide for the demand. Classes for instruction in First Aid, Hospital and Home Nursing, Hygiene and Sanitation, will be the three sections for instruction. The Lecturers and Examiners will be officially approved, and the British Red Cross Certificates issued from headquarters, will be given to successful candidates at examinations, these certificates being the only documents recognised by the British Admiralty and War Office in case of desired qualification.

Under the unfortunate existing circumstances the work of the British

Red Cross Society is all important, and its humane efforts are so entirely recognised, everything should be done to assist the greatest British institution that is struggling hard for the general good of humanity. It is believed therefore that there will be a general response, and that the Society's existence will be placed on a solid and lasting basis in the Argentine Republic, so that good work can be done without loss of time, and the means provided for improving the utility of every member of the community. The very fact of becoming a member is a help, and is all-important at the present moment, so that the larger the list at the commencement, the quicker will be the obtaining the official certificates of membership that in each case has to be applied for.

For further information, membership, subscription, enrolment, etc., the Hon. Secretary should be addressed at Calle San José 364, Buenos Aires.

Mr. F. H. Chevallier Boutell intimates that it would facilitate following the generous efforts of the community if the receipts from subscriptions, concerts, entertainment, and other forms of money were sent in to him, so that the total effort might be better controlled and remittances made through one channel.

It is Mr. Boutell's intention to give a lecture at Prince George's Hall at the end of the current month. He proposes to demonstrate the good work of the British Red Cross Society by lantern slides depicting scenes in the Great War. The actual date and fuller details of the lecture will be published later. In the meantime Mr. Boutell appeals for support in the completion of arrangements and the sale of programmes. He also states that he has received, with gratification, the following contributions to the Society's Funds:—

W. H. Neilson, $50; Miss Florence Ralls, 11.45; result of lecture at Quilmes, gross takings, $322; expenses donated, $30.

Collected by Mr. W. H. Neilson: From Captain Courtney, s.s. Harewood, $10, Capt. Dodd, s.s. Volga, 10; Capt. Couch, s.s. Rosalie, 10; Capt. Symmers, s.s. St. Kilda, 10; Capt. Armstrong, s.s. Suruga (American), 10; Capt. Lightfoot, s.s. Breynon, 10; Capt. Clark, s.s. Dunbar, 10; Capt. Moss, s.s. Kelvindale, 10; Capt. Francis, s.s. Elvaston, 10; Capt. Stopher, s.s. Glenfinlas, 10; Capt. Vernon, s.s. Brodstone, 10; Capt. Jolly, s.s. Indralema, 10; William Neilson, 10; Capt. Lloyd, s.s. Winnfield, 10; Capt. Stubbs, s.s. Valencia, 10; Capt. Westcott, s.s. Okement, 10; Capt. Howe, s.s. Nailsea Ct., 10; Capt. Marvchurch, s.s. Cardiff, 10; Capt. Cafferata, s.s. St. Leonards, 10; Armstrong Fancy, 3; Capt. Isdale s.s. Rochdale, $12; Capt. Torney, s.s. Tiverton, 10; Capt. Baker, s.s. Dowgate, 10; Capt. Jenkins, s.s. Bertrand, 10; Capt. Tinn, s.s. Eastwood, 10.—Total: $628.45.

Further donations will be most thankfully received by the Hon. Treasurer, from whom lists for the purpose may be obtained.

ISSUE OF FORGED NOTES

During the past three weeks the police have received a number of complaints concerning the issue of false notes, especially those of the value of fifty dollars, which are reported to have been put into circulation in considerable quantities.

According to statements made by the police, the notes have been manufactured in Santiago, Chile, and the forgers arrested in their flight in Peru. This information having been given to Section No. 16 of the police of Buenos Aires, a special order has been issued that all notes of this value which are forgeries should be stopped and be liable to confiscation by the police. With the information which they possessed the police have arrested one Luis Gellarini, alias Gelly, and Rosa Kelly, both of whom they say are complicated in the affair. Dr. Jantus is dealing with the case and making the necessary investigations.

SPY WHO WAS M.P.

"English" Liberal a German Agent

PLOT TO DESTROY BRITAIN'S FLEET

Amazing Story from U.S.A.

A plot devised by an ex-M. P. to lure part of our Fleet to its destruction in the North Sea forms part of an amazing "confession" which has come to hand by the latest American mail.

The individual who is responsible for this revelation in the New York "World Magazine" is Mr. Ignatius Timotheus Trebitsch-Lincoln. He is a native of Hungary, a converted Jew, and has been successively a Presbyterian and an Anglican minister in Montreal, a curate in England, and became M.P. for Darlington during the General Election in January, 1910.

In the course of his "confession" Mr. I. T. T. Lincoln says, after announcing that he became interested in English politics:—

"I decided to reduce the handicap against my effectiveness attached to a foreign name. In 1905, then, I added to my own name (Trebitsch) that of Lincoln. In 1909 I took out naturalisation papers in the name of Trebitsch-Lincoln. When the poll was declared on the election night I was elected by the small majority of 29. It was a difficult task, yet I accomplished it."

In the following election of the same year, Mr. Lincoln did not seek to return to the House of Commons.

"I devoted myself to my business interests in Roumania and Galicia, intending to return to the House of Commons at some later time. But the war upset all my intentions and plans, and forced me into an attitude of hostility to the policy of England, which eventually led me into the dangerous but highly fascinating sphere of secret service work."

Mr. Lincoln then goes on to weave a tissue of childish falsehoods as to the origin of the war, and adds, "I myself was several times insulted in my club (the National Liberal), although everyone there knew that I had been an M.P. In short, it became more and more evident that life in England for me or any other foreigner, whether naturalised or not, was becoming impossible."

After this comes a passage that shows the author has missed his vocation as a writer of melodrama.

"Slowly but steadily, under the cumulative effect of all these barbarities, I had made up my mind to shake England's dust off my feet. But I did not want to leave it without getting even. I knew that what I was going to do was technically high treason, but my blood was boiling in me at all the calculated barbarities of the race upon innocent people."

"It should be borne in mind that I set out with an unflinching determination to deceive the English in order to harm them. That I do not deny, nor will I attempt to justify my actions. I was fully cognisant that for an ex-M.P. to do this would be considered by most men unconditionally wrong. But then I did not care what people thought of me. People always judge one wrongly under deceitful influence, preconceived notions, and conventional precepts. The plan I mapped out was nothing less than a decision to find out important military and naval secrets and betray them to the Central Powers, and, having achieved that, to quit England for ever if still alive."

AN APOLOGY.

"The deception as to the British authorities I constantly kept up until I saw the paragraph in the "Evening World," on April 29 (account of the trial of Kuepferle, the spy who hanged himself). Indeed, that very day I sent a cable to Mr. Churchill. When, however, I noted the British Government's boast regarding Kuepferle's arrest, I made up my mind to reveal all through the columns of the "World."

"Here is the plain story:—On Aug. 18 last year, while sitting in the smoke-room of the National Liberal Club, London, I received a telephone message to ring up a certain number in the War Office. Having done so, I was requested to come across and ask access to a certain room. Once there, I was taken to Lieut.-Col. Belamy, who asked me whether I would be willing to undertake to censor all Hungarian and Roumanian correspondence, telegrams, cables, etc."

"I readily consented. I began my duties on Aug. 20. Sometimes I worked at the War Office, but most of my hours of service were in the Mount Pleasant Post Office. I continued to act as censor four or five weeks, during which time the systematic persecution and insulting of 'aliens,' even though they were naturalised, assumed definite and systematic form. I, myself, had to submit to many personal insults."

I resigned as censor. I now determined to leave England, but before so doing I felt compelled by an irresistible force, born of disgust and thirst for revenge, to hit back in some form or other. After carefully considering various schemes I finally decided to find out important military or naval secrets and to present them to Germany."

TO LURE THE BRITISH FLEET.

"I had highly-placed friends everywhere, and occasionally obtained information of great importance. I knew, for instance, of the first raid on the Bight of Heligoland two days in advance—and so did the Germans. But I was not satisfied with occasional tit-bits. I wanted to make a big scoop in the most thorough fashion. As will be seen from what follows, I had to try many avenues before I finally succeeded."

"I offered my services in turn to the Home Secretary, to Sir Edward Grey, and to Mr. Churchill, whom I knew personally. But they were not accepted. Next I attempted to get into the Counter Espionage Department (M. O. 5) at the War Office. As an ex-M.P. I was cordially received."

"Now my aim really was nothing less than to lure part of the British Fleet into a certain quarter of the North Sea on a certain day, and to have the German fleet within easy steaming distance. In order to procure this, I proposed just the reverse to Captain Kenny and laid before him a carefully prepared scheme, the ostensible purpose of which was to destroy part of the German navy."

Mr. Lincoln thus describes Captain Kenny: "He is, so to speak, the acting chief of the Secret Service at the War Office, or, rather, of the military Counter Espionage Service. Captain Kenny is an officer of rare intelligence and ability, and is one of the best linguists I had met in England." The plan to lure part of the British Fleet—or perhaps the German fleet—to its destruction appears to have miscarried.

"The Acting Chief of the Secret Service told me that my plan, though most wonderful, could not be accepted, as it would necessitate the disclosing to me the whereabouts of the British Fleet or part of it, which could not be disclosed to anyone. I was balked. However, by my plan and other factors, I had evidently gained the confidence of this officer, who told me of the possibility of sending me in a few weeks' time to a neutral country for uncertain purposes."

On December 17 Mr. Lincoln was sent to Rotterdam to find out how much cocoa and other foodstuffs was exported from Holland into Germany. "Once there I had to devise means to gain the confidence of the German Consul, for it was evident I might prejudice my case if I should straightaway offer my services to him. No matter how sincerely I wished to help him as head of the German espionage service for England—he might consider me an emissary of England. Now my object was to obtain important secrets from the Germans, which I would use as a means to get into the confidence of the English and find out and use things to their harm."

SPIES IN ENGLAND.

Mr. Lincoln induced the Consul by December 30 to place in his hands "the absolute and unquestionable power and means to hunt down most, if not all, of the German spies in England—had I wished to do so." He then describes two codes used by the German Secret Service operating in England for sending plain language messages to Germany, which would seem so innocent as to pass the British Censor.

"I can state," he says, "as an absolute fact that the British ships transmitted wireless messages giving exact information of the number and type of warships, and the longitude and latitude and direction in which they were steering, not knowing that they thus reported their own Fleet's movements. This code was used frequently, until one wireless spy was caught by the British."

One of these codes was known as the "family code" because it used Christian names and affectionate messages. The other was known as the "Lagenscheidt" code. As an illustration, the German agent at Belfast sends a telegram, "Best prices I can give are 14 pounds 2 shillings 3 pence," meaning page 14, word 23 of the dictionary of the lexicographer mentioned.

Mr. Lincoln returned to London from Rotterdam on January 2 and gave his information unconditionally to the Acting Chief of the Secret Service, whom he represents as "beside himself with excitement" on getting codes, a list of spies, some addresses to which telegrams and letters were being sent by spies, and disclosures of how they were being financed and through what channels and "a document which would show what the Germans do and do not know of the British Army."

The Secret Service official promised to tell Lord Kitchener of Mr. Lincoln's achievements, which would "immensely please" him, and agreed to give him further employment. An appointment was made with "a naval officer who is and has been for ten years the chief officer of England's Secret Service," but whom Mr. Lincoln only knew as "C."

When they met "C." thanked Mr. Lincoln profusely and promised to let him have matter which his department would ask him to transmit to Rotterdam to deceive the Germans. This was on Jan. 4. Up to Jan. 7 nothing happened. Then Mr. Lincoln complained to the Acting Chief of the Secret Service. He got unsatisfactory explanations of the delay and, growing more and more anxious, he enlisted the interest of Sir Henry Dalziel, who "promised to take up the matter with Lord Kitchener himself," and called on Mr. Churchill, whom he did not see.

"THE GAME WAS UP."

On Jan. 25 Mr. Lincoln got an interview with the Director of Naval Intelligence. "It was evident from this conversation that things were not proceeding according to my wish or in my favour, and I then decided to leave for New York by the first American liner sailing. On Jan. 27 came this official telegram, "Please call and bring your passport.—Director of Intelligence."

When he called, "Captain Hall, the director, put an innocent-looking question to me. This showed me that the game was up. I expected to be arrested at once. However, I kept up the play, and after a clever tactical conversation left the room unmolested. Next morning I left London, and sailed in the steamer Philadelphia the following day, Jan. 20, for New York. I arrived in New York on Feb. 9, and within a few hours of my landing I had a conference with a certain personage. Notwithstanding the English Censor we did send a cable to Berlin telling them all that had happened. A few days later we had news from Berlin that our intelligence had reached them. Captain Hall will now be surprised to hear that his dummy messages in the name of Kuepferle were taken at their true value and the replies he got were meant to mislead him."

SPY'S ROVING RECORD.

The record of the ex-M.P. is amazing reading. There is no doubt, says the "Star," which writes of him with considerable knowledge, that I. T. T. Lincoln is one of those "natural-born wrong 'uns" of whom the world produces an adequate supply. He is a plausible rascal with an ingratiating manner and seven languages.

Lincoln's real name is Isaac Trebitsch. He was born at Paks, the son of a Hungarian Jew.

After an adventurous career as a clergyman of various denominations, he became a teacher in a Quaker school at York. This, backed up by a recommendation from the vicar of Appledore, led him to the notice of Mr. B. Seeborn Rowntree, who employed him for three years as investigator of social problems in Belgium, France, Germany, Switzerland, and Hungary, and lent him large sums of money later. He was employed because he was a linguist, and he did the work so well that he was three and a half years in Mr. Rowntree's employment.

Then he heard that a Liberal candidate was wanted for Darlington. Mr. Pike Pease had been so long member that the average Liberal candidate thought the fight hopeless, and there was some difficulty in getting a candidate.

Mr. Trebitsch, who had by this time become Mr. Ignatius Trebitsch Lincoln (he was naturalised in 1909) went off to Darlington, addressed the Liberal executive, hypnotised them, and was adopted at once.

He was returned by a majority of twenty-nine, to the stupefaction of outsiders and the disgust of Mr. Pike Pease.

The Darlington people learned that their candidate was a man with a past. Before the General Election of December, 1910, they firmly intimated to Mr. Lincoln that he must withdraw. He did so, and devoted himself to the oil business in Roumania and Galicia. There was a meeting of his creditors in 1911 at York, when a composition of 5s. in the £ was arranged, and no further funds have since been available for the discharge of his liabilities. Mr. Rowntree was the chief creditor, claiming over £7,000.

Lincoln admits in his "confessions," that he was outwitted by the British, and the whole of this wonderful mountain of "confessions" ends up in an anti-climax. According to his story, he had to bolt for America, where he is now telling what a dreadful spy and traitor and villain generally he is.

AT GABA TEPE

Landing Amidst Hail of Lead

Queen Elizabeth's Wonderful Gun-fire

EX-ROSARIO RESIDENT'S VIVID STORY.

One of the most vivid descriptions of personal experience in the great war is that which has come to "The Herald" through the kindness of Mr. Wallace W. Wheeler, of Rosario, who has sent us a letter received by him from an old friend, who was wounded at Gaba Tepe on the occasion of the famous landing of the Australians on the Gallipoli Peninsula.

The writer of the graphic account of the landing of the colonials is Private Thomas Sinclair, of the 4th Battalion (New South Wales) Infantry. Private Sinclair is well-known in Buenos Aires, Rosario and Cordoba. He was a resident in Argentina from the beginning of 1908 until the middle of 1912. Writing of him Mr. Wheeler says "A nicer fellow you could not meet. He is much esteemed among his friends here, and will not be forgotten."

A coincidence connected with our receipt of Private Sinclair's story is that only last week Mr. Wheeler himself wrote to us, asking us if we could give him any information regarding Private Sinclair. We were able to ascertain from an Australian paper, which contained the list of casualties in the Dardanelles operations, that the name of Private T. Sinclair was among those who had been wounded. We gave this information to Mr. Wheeler, who strangely enough received a long letter which we publish below on the very same day as our letter, advising him that his old friend was wounded, reached him.

Mena House Hospital,
Cairo.

24.5.15.

Dear Wallace.—I have written you a number of letters recently and sent you several photographs, but so far have not received from you any acknowledgment of same. When one comes to consider the difficulties attendant on the passage of mails these days, perhaps it is not so surprising after all. Perhaps my letters have been censored or worse still they may be resting peacefully in "Davy Jones' Locker" after an adventurous trip culminating in an encounter with a chivalrous Hun submarine. Let's hope they've had better luck and reached you safely, if for naught else than to remind you that your old friend Sinclair had not forgotten you and the many happy days of friendship of long ago. As you will have noted I am now in hospital, wounded in the left arm and chest, "over the heart," but I expect to return to the front sometime this week if possible, as I am now almost cured.

The Australian forces went into action on the Gallipoli Peninsula on April 25. It didn't take me long to get wounded. I landed at 10.30 a.m. went into the firing line at 4 p.m., and was wounded at 5 p.m. Quite a short run for my money, you see! When I was hit, I was under the impression that I was on my final trip to "Kingdom Come." As a matter of fact, I thought I had been hit through the heart and had only a few seconds to live, so I said "Good-bye" to my Corporal who had bravely, in face of a murderous fire, run over to attend to my wounds. He, also, thought I was dying, because I blanched—through loss of blood—and got agonizing pains, cramps, in the stomach and thighs; he searched in my chest for the bullet and found it sticking out over my heart—it had been stopped by my leather pocket-book. The wound in my arms was a horrible gaping affair, the bullet first having struck the ground, and spinning past this through my arm, on to my chest. I am now all right again and one would not guess I was wounded unless I showed them my arm, thanks to the careful attention bestowed upon the wounded by the hospital staff.

Dear Old Boy, it was a great battle and I would not have missed it for a pension. It knocks all the pleasures of cinematographs into a cocked hat! It was the greatest sight of my life. I often thought of you and how this kind of life would have appealed to you, that is, of course, before you were married and settled down, and many times I have longed to sit down, in imagination, and in the old corner at Don José's restaurant, tell you all my adventures. It is so different to writing about them. I suppose Berger is now with the Austrians fighting in real earnest against me and without the gloves either. How you laughed at our glove fight! Do you remember? In after years I have often thought how ludicrous it all was.

I suppose you get fairly reliable

PRIVATE THOMAS SINCLAIR.

news in the newspapers, but some first hand information, very little though, may not be amiss.

After leaving Alexandria (Egypt), our transports and war-ships concentrated on the small island of Lemnos in the Grecian Archipelago, so that when our ship sailed through the steel net protecting the entrance of the natural harbour, we found already collected there hundreds of vessels, French and British, full of soldiers. After remaining there a week, we sailed out of the protected harbour on the afternoon of April 24 (1915), and concentrated again on the north of the Island. You see, only one vessel could pass through the opening in the steel net, at a time.

At about 11 o'clock at night we all steamed off, the whole fleet in complete darkness, no lights showing. The French fleet sailed towards Asia Minor; the British towards the southern coast of Gallipoli, and the Australians towards the northern coast in the Gulf of Saros. We chose as our landing place a short strip of beach north-east of a small promontory, heavily fortified, designated Gaba Tebe. We arrived off this point at about half-past three on Sunday morning, April 25, and with the first streak of dawn in the Eastern sky, the British battleships opened up their bombardment. Their primary objective seemed to be the fortification on the point of Gaba Tebe, and here a large stone building was reduced to ruins in a few seconds with a couple of well-aimed shells. This did not stop us from being shelled from Gaba Tebe however, for as we afterwards discovered there were 13 large disappearing guns placed at intervals right along the ridge, commanding the beach. They were finally silenced after having done considerable damage.

Our battleships came right up within 200 yards of the beach and blew little "Hell" out of the place. It is no exaggeration to say that they simply changed the topographical features of the country, and nearly blew Gaba Tebe off the map. The Queen Elizabeth did splendid work and created terrific havoc among the enemy. She stood off the coast just about 500 yards from where our transport was anchored, and we had a fine view of her in action.

There would be a dull boom as a thin tongue of flame and dark smoke spat out of the muzzle of her 15 inch guns, followed by a sort of wailing shriek as the shell started off; then for the space of some twenty seconds, there was a tremendous roar like that of an express train travelling over a steel bridge at top speed; then far off in the distance, the dull crash of the explosion as the shell burst; followed by peal upon peal of loud rumbling thunder as the hills re-echoed with the din.

This was the effect of one gun; to describe to you the effect created when about a dozen battleships, dotted all over the sea-front, opened up, firing broadsides as fast as shells could be fed to the gunners, would be impossible. This happened several times throughout the day when, after the enemy had got our range with the shrapnel, they were spotted by our aeroplanes, who sent wireless information to the fleet, who in order to save us from being wiped out, concentrated the fire of the whole fleet there upon the enemy's batteries, who in a few minutes would be silenced for ever, blown to atoms.

Disembarkation began between four and five in the morning, the troops landed in destroyers, or in lifeboats towed by naval pinnaces. Many men were killed before ever they reached the shore, as the enemy shelled the beach with shrapnel, intermittently throughout the day. Shells were also fired at the transports, and a number of them landed quite near, giving us anxious moments. My Company did not land till 10.30 a.m. as we were reserves. My first job was to carry ammunition to the firing line; not such an easy job as at first sight might appear. The country was one maze of precipitous cliffs and high hills, and our journey was one long climb, sometimes on all fours, and many times we had to hang on to the branches of the bushes of the cliffs to prevent dropping down some hundreds of feet into the ravines below. It was fairly raining bullets upon the left flank and it was little short of a miracle that we got through.

When we had finished our job, we were ordered to join our own Battalion. I have heard recently that the chap who helped me—we went in pairs while carrying the heavy ammunition boxes—a chap of the name of Coutts, and who was a very good friend of mine, has since been killed in action. After having some lunch—biscuits and water—we got the welcome order to reinforce the firing line. We did another series of climbs, passing over two hills about 600 feet high, and coming on to our first firing line lying flat on the crest of the third hill, a perpendicular precipice having stopped their progress. Before going over the crest, we were ordered to fix bayonets, which we did with great gusto and high glee—after all it's the most satisfactory way of fighting—especially when one is feeling fit and simply spoiling for a fight, as we all were. You can imagine our disappointment when we came up to our firing line and found the cliff preventing us going any further, and no sign of Turks in the vicinity, although they were concealed just across the ravine at about 100 yards distance, and were peppering us with bullets.

I took my place about a couple of yards from the cliff-edge and stretched myself flat in the firing position ready to pick off the first target that presented itself on the opposite side. The weather was beautiful, the sun shining and a nice cool breeze blowing from the sea. Despite the shot and shell, especially the shrapnell, which was flying around even in more profusion than the bullets it seemed, and which was doing considerably more damage, I felt very comfortable, and it was just lovely to lie stretched out on the soft grass, with the daisies and buttercups all around and smell the fresh grass and country air, and think of stinking Cairo which we had left so recently.

After what I've seen of a battle, I've come to the conclusion that all this talk of coolness under fire is so much rot, as there is really nothing to get excited about and everyone is "naturally" cool, without effort, without even thinking of it. If may be different of course under other circumstances. For instance, lots of our fellows during the bayonet charges went like mad after the Turks, and when these were started on the run, I could hear from my position on the hill-top, the cheers and yells, battle-cries and war-whoops of the Australians as they warmed up towards their job. As I lay there I felt a bit weary, and had stray thoughts of a siesta but was too much interested in the bombardment to take my eyes off the panorama in front. The Queen Elizabeth had again opened fire, and after transforming some peaks about nine or ten miles inland—somewhere about Kri-thia I think—into smoking volcanoes, she started to shell a field, some 2000 yards in front of my position over which large bodies of Turkish troops were advancing to reinforce their firing line. I had a remarkably good view of this lot, but hesitated to use my rifle at such long range, preferring to use my ammunition for better and nearer targets, although several times I lifted my rifle to my shoulder, decided to chance a shot for luck. This was finally my undoing, I think, in attracting attention to my position.

Bang! Bang! and two shots from the Queen Elizabeth travelled up the valley in the manner described previously, i.e., like an express train, and burst right among a crowd of them. A dense column of thick black smoke hid the scenery for a few minutes, and when it had cleared off there wasn't a soul to be seen, while the beautiful green meadow, for some 200 square yards, had changed into a black ploughed field. I had been lying there, watching such scenes as these—the aeroplane with Commander Samson overhead, casually flying out and in through bursting shrapnel shells, as if he were doing a circus turn,—the Indians on the left, standing chatting beside their little mountain guns, while mules with wheels, gun breeches, ammunition, etc., toiled up the steep slopes with spines curved out, and muscles straining as their fierce looking little Ghurka drivers urged them on—and had passed a most interesting hour, when seeing some Turks again advancing at 2000 yards I decided to have a go at them.

I had just put my rifle to my shoulder and glanced along the sights, taking very, very careful aim at one running figure, when, Crash! I felt my arm stiffen and got such a blow on the chest as took my breath away. I thought an overgrown elephant had sat down on me by mistake. The thick warm blood was pouring from me in gallons.

"Louis, I'm hit," I called to my Corporal, who was just about a couple of yards away, and with whom I had been exchanging views regarding the beauties of the landscape but a few minutes previously. He rushed over to me immediately, and asked "Where?" As he came over, the enemy spotted him and a terrible hail of lead poured all around for the next few minutes chucking soil, branches and leaves all over us. He lay flat beside me, while my blood pumped up in a miniature fountain over his face and drenched his tunic. As for myself, I was wallowing in a bath of gore. He pulled out my field dressing bandages, etc., but I told him not to bother as I was dying, as I was shot through the heart and had only a few minutes to live!

"Good God, Tom! It's not so bad as that, is it? Tom! Tom!"—then a few execrations levelled at the Turks—"Good Lord, Tom, it can't be true. Oh! I am sorry, Old Man, Good-bye!"—and he clutched my right hand and held it tight for a few seconds. "Good-bye" said I. "Don't bother, Louis, it will soon be over, I'm done for, finished! Good-bye! Here I fell back too weak to hold my head up. I took cramps in the stomach and thighs through loss of blood, and doubled up with pain. Here Louis opened up my singlet and found the bullet sticking out of my chest.

"You're not dead yet, Tom," he shouted, "Here's the bullet," and he chucked it away, unfortunately, for I should like to have kept it, as a souvenir. Still, as I explained afterwards, I may get another one through me, so I can look better after the next one. As soon as he discovered that the bullet had not passed through my body, he hurriedly dressed my arm and took off my tunic, placing me in a more comfortable position. As it was impossible to take me away under such a fusillade of rifle fire, I lay in the firing line for two hours after being wounded. About 7 p.m. it began to get dusk and so, with the help of my comrades I rose to my feet and staggered over the crest of the hill. Exhausted, I again lay down for some time, until the blood, which had again started to flow in torrents from my arm as a result of my exertion, had subsided somewhat. Later I was assisted from one place to another by comrades—how fearless they were,—and after traversing, it seemed, miles of trackless bush and jungle (something similar, but denser than the bushes of the "Isle of Parana"), we arrived at the Battalion Red Cross Post. Here my wound was re-dressed and I was given morphia by the doctor, who inserted it under my tongue. In a few minutes I was off to sleep.

During the night I awoke several times to find it raining. It was also a bit cold, although I felt quite warm as the blood oozing over my body made me, strange to say, feel quite comfortable. I had to be moved out of the way once or twice to make way for the ammunition mules and mountain guns of the Indian Batteries, and so I would keep dropping off to sleep and waking up. About 11 p.m. it came round my turn to be carried off, so when the stretcher bearers came, I felt I would soon be all right. However, it was only the beginning of a terrible journey, in which the poor lads worked like horses, apologising to me at every halt for the way they were shaking the stretcher, but there was no road, no track. Snipers did not forget to pay them attention, and on the way we were shot at many times. At last we reached the beach, and I was taken aboard the waiting barge, and later aboard the improvised hospital ship. This was reached at 1.30 a.m. on Monday. From 5 o'clock I had lain on the Sunday night, and was not on board the hospital ship until half-past one on Monday morning.

The Army Medical Corps and the Company stretcher bearers did magnificent work, and behaved splendidly. Everybody did, even the enemy, except when we get near them with the bayonet; then their work was principally leaving the dust behind them as rapidly as possible. I will

YOUNG FOLKS' DANCE

AT THE PLAZA HOTEL

IN AID OF THE WOMAN'S EXCHANGE

The Committee of the Woman's Exchange having organised a dance for young folk, it was duly held at the Plaza Hotel, on July 17, between 4 and 10 o'clock, many hundreds of tickets being sold, and about three hundred people being present.

This social function for young people; but entered into with enthusiasm by old and young alike, is an annual arrangement; and this year the success has been as complete as on previous occasions. The object is the benefit of the Woman's Exchange, whose work is so well-known among the British community of Buenos Aires. The excellent arrangements of the Plaza Hotel are always without reproach, and the large dining-room, arranged as the ballroom; and the winter-garden for the refreshments were perfect for their respective purposes. Palms and potted plants added to the ever beautiful appearance of both salons and the orchestra played its tuneful music to the accompaniment of merry, flying feet.

The lady members of the committee wore distinguishing badges of blue and white ribbon bows; and were seated at the entrance to the Winter Garden to greet the visitors. Mrs. Boote wore a handsome toilette in black silk and tulle, black velvet toque with smart osprey; Mrs. T. Bell was gowned in a smart dress of black charmeuse, the bodice being richly embroidered in gold, smart black velvet hat with ospreys; Mrs. Lisowski wore black tulle over silk handsomely beaded with jet and gold, and relieved with beautiful cream lace; Mrs. Wigg also chose black for her toilette, with which was worn becoming black hat with plumes; Mrs. Dickinson wore an all-violet toilette, the hat showing ostrich tips of shaded violet; Mrs. Hope Gibson charmingly gowned in black and white; Mrs. Dodds black toilette; Mrs. Manifold, black and white toilette; Mrs. Herbert Humie handsome gown of black and white lace flounces over blue silk. Other members of the Committee, to all of whom congratulations must be tendered for the unqualified success which attended their efforts, includes Mrs. Raynes, Mrs. J. C. Bell, Mrs. Krabbé, Mrs. Coulon de Menron, Mrs. Van Deurs, Mrs. Leng, and Mrs. Lockwood.

Many very handsome costumes were worn and the little ones were admired as they danced orgvated around the ballroom. Two little boys wore exquisite suits. One was of white satin in Court costume, the other in black velvet with Irish point lace collar and cuffs. A little girl, sister to white satin Courtier, looked pretty and quaint in an old-world frock of many frills and dainty mob-cap. Another little girl was like a big doll with her yellow curls, pink cheeks and dainty white tulle frock. A little boy blue was seen, and a charmingly pretty little girl wore blue silk with lace frills and pink rosettes, her hair being encircled not say anything of the atrocities said to have been committed by the Turks. They are dreadful and revolting if true, as some undoubtedly are.

I was taken to Mena House Hospital in Cairo, and remained there one month, when I was discharged cured. I am as right as a nail, and am expecting to leave any day for the front. The weather in Egypt is now too hot to be pleasant, and Turkey is such a nice country.

With best wishes I remain

Your affectionate chum,

THOMAS SINCLAIR.

with pale blue and pink tulle. But the tots all looked sweet, and if all be not specially mentioned it is only because they flitted like gay butterflies too quickly for a pen picture to be recorded, or were in further corners of the big ballroom. The "older" young folk also were beautifully frocked. One young girl in blue taffetas with a large black hair-bow was particularly smart, a young lady of 'teens was dainty in tulle and rosebuds; another wore white taffetas, with smart pink bow and posy, and was charming, two sisters chose white toilettes, one was of taffetas and silver with waist-line of green, the other of silver beaded net smartened with emerald green. A ciel-blue afternoon dress of charmeuse with deep band of velvet was worn by a charming matron, the velvet hat having aigrette. A pale blue having rose-buds for waistline, and filmy lace was lovely on a young girl, a rose-pink tulle over white silk with lace finishings was another admired costume. A little boy wore Highland dress with much aplomb, and so lent further variety to a gay scene.

Mrs. Stevenson elegant toilette of black with headed trimmings; Mrs. Gilderdale, black taffetas veiled in a net; Mrs. Burr handsome toilette of black lace; Miss Stella Boote, white taffetas with pink bow and posy; Miss Anita Wigg white taffetas with silver finishing and green at waist; Miss Dorothy Wigg, white veiled in silver headed net, emerald green sash; Mrs. Mackenzie Murray terra cotta silk, showing the new many-frilled skirts and lace finishing; Mrs. Dr. Kenny handsome gown of black velvet; Miss Lomax white lace over pink silk; Mrs. McDonald black velvet toilette; Mrs. Dan Duggan black velvet gown; Miss Stockdale tulle frock edged with pink over white silk; Miss Huntingdon, white dress with blue finishings; Miss Huntingdon white with pink trimmings; Mrs. Chantrill, black silk with touch of pink; Miss Chantrill white lace overdress on silk relieved with blue; Miss McDonald, white tulle over white silk; Mrs. Bideleux, handsome black toilette; Miss Reyband blue taffetas with black bow on hair; Mrs. Douglas King, black silk veiled in lace, black picture hat with white and black ospreys; Mrs. Austin, elegant toilette of black velvet, toque of black with ospreys; Miss Thays, pretty pink toilette; Miss Nuñez, dainty pink frock of ninons; Miss Lett pink taffetas with large bow at back; Master Trillia Bell, white satin Courtier's costume; Miss Estellita Bell, blue frilled taffetas frock, quaint cap of lace; Miss Dorothy Boyd blue gauze with fur finishings; Mrs. Samson, black chiffon, the frills edged with black velvet over silk, with lace finishings; Miss Tassie Paton white tulle frills over silk; Mrs. Alfred Dickinson black toilette; Miss Samson dainty toilette carried out in violet tulle and velvet over white silk; Mrs. Smart peacock blue charmeuse; Miss Widdington, pink frock; Miss Hurdy very pretty frock of Luttercup yellow tulle over side, black chiffon sash; Mrs. James Corbett black net and velvet over silk; Miss McCullough pink net over pale blue satin, with chinchilla trimmings; Miss O. Hughesdon-Smith, toilette carried out in mignonette shades with green velvet sash, and finishings of lace; Miss A. Peard black silk and tulle with red bow; Miss Peard black net over white with ermine trimming; Miss Corbett, black silk and net with posy; Mrs. Hinds white taffetas, black lace butterfly bows; Mrs. McKinnon blue mervilleux silk with gauze and lace finishings; Mrs. Piere brown silk toilette; Señorita Vasquez blue mervilleux with tulle and silk frills, white lace and red flowers; Señorita A. Vasquez rose chiffon and cream lace; Señorita Nuñez dainty toilette of white taffetas and tulle overdress.

VICTORIA SAILORS' HOME

SUCCESSFUL CONCERT

The last concert to be held at the Victoria Sallor's Home, before the departure of the late superintendent, Lieutenant Commander Harvey, for England, was given on July 17 by Mr. T. A. Frontroth.

The programme was an excellent one and comprised a series and a variety of items that were greatly appreciated and which varied from a ventriloquial to an orchestral selection. Amongst the numerous items special mention must be made of the piano playing of Master Frank Burke, who at thirteen years of age finds no difficulties in the "Faust Fantasia" and such like musical arrangements, apart from this he possesses a pleasing delicacy of touch and his gift will surely develop itself.

Another item on the programme which attracted particular attention was the orchestral selection.

Mr. Frontroth, clarinet, Señor Oporto, violin, together with Lieut. Harvey and Mr. Lavers opened the concert with an overture.

The singing of Mrs. Pepper, of Miss Grinrod and of Miss Kathleen Knight was received with volumes of applause, which called for repeated encores.

An item which was unusual was presented in the first half of the programme, by Mr. Gibson Taylor. This was a clever ventriloquial sketch. It was well done, as were the subsequent and little known recitations after the interval.

Miss Knight was in very good voice and her fine songs were charmingly sung.

Señor Oporto gave two solos on the violin, for which he was recalled.

Mr. Frontroth is to be congratulated on his selection of artists.

Before the singing of the National Anthem at the evening's close, Lieut. Harvey called upon the audience to give three cheers for the new Superintendent Mr. Stanley Parker, who for the first time at one of these concerts was present in his official capacity.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Harvey sail immediately either on the s.s. Darro or on the next Nelson liner to leave this port. Last night they received the sincere best wishes of their many friends present. To-night is the last occasion on which Mr. Harvey will be present to say a few words at the service, which will be held at 7.30 p.m.

The following was last night's excellent and varied programme:—

Part I.—Overture, March "Elena" Orchestra; Song "When they ask you what your name is," encore "Empress of the Sea," Miss Grinrod; Violin Solos "Czardas," Sr. Oporto, Encored for a repeat, Mrs. Pepper; Song "Woodland thoughts" with clarinet obligato by Mr. Frontroth; Piano Solo, "Tarantella Brillante," Master Frank Burke, encore "Grand March"; Variety "Ventriloquial Sketch," Mr. Gibson Taylor, encore; Song "Try again Johnny," encore "My Hero," Miss K. Knight; Trio, "Dreams of Ragtime," encore "The Spooks Parade," Messrs. Frontroth, Oporto, Harvey and Lavers.

Part II.—Overture "Gipsy Love," Orchestra, encored, Mr. J. A. Frontroth, Mr. A. Lavers and Sr. Oporto; Song "Swallows," encored "Up from Somerset," Miss Knight, encored "My little grey home in the West"; Violin Song "Romance et Bolero," Sr. Oporto; Song "Just like the Ivy," Miss Grinrod; Recitation "The clown's Baby," encore "Jimmie Shaw," Mr. Gibson Taylor; Song "In tears, sweetheart," Trombone obligato by Mr. Pepper, encore "Because I love you," Mrs. Pepper; Pianoforte Solo "Faust Fantasia," Master Frank Burton; Selection "Snake charmer waltz" Orchestra.

God Save the King.

THE WELSH STRIKE

There seems to be no prospect of an immediate settlement of the strike among the Welsh coal miners, and already we are being told by cable of the unfortunate effects of the cessation of work upon the output of munitions, and shipping. The usual amount of discussion appears to be taking place, and the customary appeals from consequential and inconsequential persons are being made to the recalcitrant miners. Mr. Hall Caine for instance has urged the workers to resume their toil, and has assured them that if the employers and the Government do not give them justice the people of England will not stand it one day. It might be asked what guarantees Mr. Hall Caine can give the workers? If the Government itself does not give them justice, then we do not know how the people at large are to show their disapproval. And in any case it is rather late in the day to expect the people to take any sympathetic interest in the cause of the miners, seeing that already the strikers have been well branded as scoundrels and traitors as black as the coal they hew.

There is no doubt Mr. Hall Caine means well, and has a kind and patriotic heart. He simply does not know what he is talking about. That's all. The only interesting thing about his appeal is that his argument presupposes some need for justice on the part of the miners. No doubt this is so. If it be not so, then the only alternative proposition is that the miners are following precept and example, as we pointed out before, and are influenced by the same mercenary and unpatriotic motives as other gentlemen who see in the war a fine opportunity to enrich themselves at the cost of the Nation's best interests. It must be obvious that the miners have not struck merely for the sheer pleasure of being nasty, and creating a lot of inconvenience. They are not opposed to the war, and probably sing patriotic songs with as much gusto as other people. The fact that the coal output has already been seriously reduced—as pointed out in an article which we reprinted from a London exchange last week—through the heavy recruiting of miners for the army, is also some testimony to their patriotism. Therefore, we repeat it is obvious that they are either striking for justice, or for profit.

The British Government is reported to be considering the situation and the operations of the various pieces of war legislation are likely to be put into force. What effect this will have no one can say but it strikes us as being simply ludicrous to talk of fining men £3 a day. In the first place how are the men going to pay it? Secondly, if they can pay it, how is it to be collected? And thirdly, how much better off will the Nation be when the law has imposed a fine of £3 a day on 150,000 miners, and its coal mines are still idle? We presume that in default of payment the miners will be imprisoned. That also will not help the Nation win the war, and really from a national point of view the strikers would be better left on strike and paying for their own maintenance, than for the Nation to maintain them in overcrowded prisons.

No, the same old muddling; the same old fallacy that a piece of legislation settles everything, are responsible for a situation that would be ludicrous were it not serious and almost tragic. It should be quite obvious to the Government and to the British public that neither the miners nor the owners care one jot for the Nation's interests where their own are concerned. If they really did care they could soon settle the trouble by a policy of give and take, each party being swayed toward an amicable settlement by patriotism and a determination that the Nation should not suffer because of their private dispute. The fact that they do not consider the Nation, should be quite sufficient to warrant the Nation in considering itself in this crisis. The farce of imposing fines that cannot be paid, or of attempting to imprison an army, should not be gone on with. The Government should say simply, "You cannot agree; we cannot argue. We want coal. It is there in your mines. There are the men to work it. This is the price at which it should be sold. Here is the price at which it should be mined to leave a reasonable profit. You owners will not sell at this price because you are greedy and unpatriotic. You men will not work because you say you don't get justice. We will take over the mines; sell the coal at our figure; and pay for labour at our price. Martial law is declared throughout the district." The effect of this policy would be that the owners would be forced to take a reasonable and fair profit, and the miners would get reasonable and fair wages, or defying military instructions would be shot. We have an idea there would be little call for firing squads.

We may be told that industrial disputes have never been settled before in this way. What does that matter? This is not an ordinary situation. It is an extraordinary one and it calls for extraordinary measures, not the old conventional, tiresome, and interminable arguments. We are at war, and war means action. Let there be action, prompt and effective.

UNCLAIMED LETTERS

AT THE AMERICAN CONSULATE.

Letters, addressed as under, are lying at the American Consulate-General. They will be handed to the respective addressees on application: W. E. Ames, S. Battias, Jack Benson, J. W. THE IRISH SOCIETY

CONCERT AND DANCE

AN IMMENSE SUCCESS

Some organisations, like many individuals, are never satisfied. It is to this category that the Irish Society belongs. Not content with the success achieved at the opening function of the season, the Society, on July 17 "went one better"; and, commodious as their Florida quarters are, they were barely large enough to contain in comfort the throng which filled them until the early hours of this morning.

The concert with which the proceedings opened was a dainty little entertainment. The programme was nicely balanced and, in the main, artistic. Whether one applauded the beauties of Mrs. Eidelberg's vocal work or laughed at the mesmeric influences of Mr. E. D. Triggs, it was always possible to find something to entertain. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Eidelberg was once more the "star" of the evening. In the ever-popular "Waltz Song" from "Tom Jones" she sang with refreshing charm and was called upon for another number. She obliged with "The Rocky Road to Dublin."

Mrs. C. Bowditch and Mr. David T. Neill, also of "Geisha" fame, were each entirely successful. Mrs. Bowditch gave Tosti's "Good-bye" in pleasing manner, and, when recalled, sang "Rose in Bud." Mr. David T. Neill, in "My Dreams" and "Thora" proved that old favourites do not pall, if ably rendered. This point was also emphasised by Mr. M. Murphy, who gave new life to "Little Grey Home in the West" and "Viollets." In pleasing contrast was Srta. Constancia Carrouche, whose efforts were operative. "La Favorita" and "Dolores" provided her with two excellent numbers, of which she took the fullest advantage.

Apart from the vocal items, the programme was replete with variety. Sr. Ireneo Bringas recalled old memories of a dying art—that of step-dancing. Professor D. Harrington gave a pleasing rendering of Dvorak's tuneful "Humoresque" on the violin, and Miss Dorothy Stuart-Smith, who, unfortunately, was unable, through indisposition, to dance—contributed the well-known monologue "When the Minister comes to Tea." Mr. W. A. Scannell recited in that which is known locally as "the best Scannell manner," and Miss Freda Rendall reminded one of the Society's raison d'être by giving a selection of Irish airs on the piano.

Probably the weirdest "turn" of the evening was that of Mr. E. D. Triggs, who rivetted the attention of the audience by placing a number of "subjects" into trances. There was something uncanny about this portion of the entertainment, and it is perhaps unnecessary to state that no one accepted the hypnotist's generous invitation to come up and be treated likewise.

Subsequent to the concert, a dance was held. Ample though the floor space of the salon is for normal attendances, its capacity was last evening taxed to the utmost. To music provided by Mr. G. W. Huppler's orchestra, a representative gathering of the local Irish community spent several enjoyable hours. The success of the venture was sufficient to ensure it being repeated.

Naturally, the various officers of the Society were in the main responsible for the eminently satisfactory arrangements. Mr. W. A. Scannell had no light task in the supervision of the concert details, and Mr. J. J. McNally was a busy M.C. The President, (Mr. E. J. Sullivan) and the Vice-President (Mr. G. P. McClenahan) were also in attendance.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS

The most terrible fighting of the war is that which has taken place in the maze of trenches and tunnels constructed by the Germans opposite the French lines north of Arras. The French have named the place the "Labyrinth." The picture on the first page of our illustrations shows a section of the "Labyrinth" captured by the French and the dead Germans in it. Some idea of the formidable nature of the defences can be gathered from this picture. To help the Allies on Gallipoli Peninsula heavy naval guns have been landed. Hundreds of men are employed, as the picture shows, to haul these monsters over the sand and get them into position on the heights. Long after the British forces landed at the Dardanelles they were subjected to heavy gun fire, shells dropping continually on to the beach and among the mass of impedimenta which had to be landed. The cliffs fringing the shore only offered protection to those who gained their shelter in the manner shown in the picture. A big shell has just exploded, and the troops are seen hugging the cliff walls, or running from danger. One reason why the Russians abandoned Przemyśl was that the Austrians left the forts of the town in no condition to be defended. The photograph given shows what a confused ruin the forts were after the Russian bombardment, and the deliberate explosions made by the Austrians before they surrendered the town. The whole of German South-West Africa is now in British hands, thanks to the brilliantly successful campaign of General Botha. The loyal Boer troops did magnificent work. One of the burgher commandos is shown in the picture parading before the Commandant-General. Our illustrations this week include two remarkable photographs of shells in flight a fraction of a second after they have left the guns. The photographs were taken in 1/5000th of a second, by means of electrically-operated cameras connected with the guns.

THE BRITISH SOCIETY

BOOKS, MAGAZINES AND CLOTHING FOR THE SAILORS.

The British Society dispatched by the R.M.S.P. "Avon" to Montevideo on July 16, six cases containing reading matter and articles of clothing for the sailors on the British cruisers in these waters. In addition to the books and magazines the cases contained: 25 pairs of socks, 19 mufflers, 3 pairs of tennis shoes, 6 shirts, 4 pairs of mittens, cigarettes and soap.

Among those who contributed to the above and to whom the best thanks of the Committee are due, were: Mrs. C. A. Shaw de Bell, Miss F. S. Baker, Mrs. Bell, M. Besson, G. H. Billson, J. B. Buchan, C. Wentworth Cumming, Mrs. Cotman, H. H. Dandridge, Mrs. Edmonds, Mrs. Elias, Mrs. Flint, Mrs. R. J. Farran, Mrs. A. Grant, Miss M. Graydon, Miss Edith J. Hawkes, Miss Imlach, Mr. Kimber, Mrs. Albert Knight, Mrs. Charles Knox, Mrs. Morris, the Rev. W. C. Morris, A. Mackintosh, "M. E. N.," J. Stewart, C. Plowright, S. A. Rogers, Walter Russell, Mrs. F. Soady, Mrs. Sotham, Mrs. W. E. Seward, Mr. Stuart, Mr. Tregelles, R. J. Wrightson, A. V. Scroggie, Mr. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wells, Miss White and the Young Men's Social Club.

The thanks of the Society are also due to Mrs. Morris and Mrs. Borges for a parcel containing two dozen pairs of socks, 17 scarves, one dozen suits of underwear, two dozen mittens, and two dozen cholera belts. These gifts were sent to Mrs. Morris by a friend in England for the use of the British sailors serving in this part of the world, and were forwarded to Montevideo several days ago.

CIGARETTES AND TOBACCO FOR THE SOLDIERS.

An order was also sent forward by the British Society yesterday for 89 parcels of tobacco and cigarettes to be dispatched to soldiers on active service.

FALLACIES ABOUT THE FRENCH

What the War Has Taught Englishmen

THE GREATEST ILLUSION

An Englishman is a man who lives on an island in the North Sea governed by Scotsmen; that is why it is called self-governing. His occupations are simple, but absorbing. In the intervals of earning money he practises (or preaches) the family virtues, reads (for the duration of the war) twenty-five newspapers in the week, and regards his weather, his relations, and his Government with a settled disgust. As the result, possibly, of an indifferent climate, he is a person of somewhat slow perception (writes Phillip Guedalla in an English exchange). With regard to persons of importance, he makes it a rule never to notice them until they are dead, and with regard to countries his practice is, thanks to his classical education, much the same.

Thus in the eighteenth century any gentleman could tell you all about the Greek Republics and the Roman Empire, but nobody in England, except Edmund Burke and the Earl of Chatham, was aware of the existence of its thirteen North American colonies till they were pardonably revolted in order to remind the Englishman that they were still where he had put them. He had not noticed in the nineteenth century that he possessed a considerable Empire overseas, until the fact was discovered for him by Lord Beaconsfield and emphasised by Mr. Chamberlain.

And, so recently as last August, he made the startling discovery that he lived next door to Europe. It may be that, as we discovered the British Empire in the last century, so in the twentieth century we shall discover Europe. In this age of science all things are possible.

THE DISCOVERY OF EUROPE.

To the Englishman his island is a piece of land entirely surrounded by foreigners. The majority of these people are believed to live in a continent lying off the mouth of the Thames, and known as Europe. Certain parts of it, as, for example, the Swiss mountains, the French Riviera, and the Italian picture galleries, are reserved for the holiday of Englishmen; but the remainder is entirely given up to foreigners. These foreigners, it has been observed by Englishmen who have ventured among them, differ in degree but not in kind. They are united in every instance by an obstinate refusal to converse in English. This unreasonable objection compels the Englishman to toy lightly (or painfully) with the various absurd languages which they use among themselves.

Before the war the Englishman recognised several distinct species of foreigners. There were the Germans, a peaceful people devoted to music, philosophy and wood carving, who were reported recently to have directed their energies into the path of commerce; these could be distinguished by an inability to pronounce the letter "w" and the universal wearing of spectacles.

Then there was the dark-haired foreigner of the Mediterranean; if he was playing the guitar, fighting bulls or asleep, you knew him for a Spaniard, but if he divided his time between the tenor parts in opera and the precarious art of eating macaroni he was an Italian. Then there was the Russian, whom you could always tell by his knout, his fur hat, and the cigar-cases which were apparently attached to the outside of his clothes.

But above all three was the Frenchman, who was the foreigner par excellence."

THE GREATEST ILLUSION.

Five centuries of Anglo-French hostility had gone to the making of our imaginary Frenchman, before the Lansdowne Convention of 1904 ended him once and for all. He was a magnificent creature. Because in the eighteenth century beef-eating England fought India for the control of India and North America, and noticed that its enemy was a trifle unorthodox in his hors d'œuvres, we were all brought up to believe that Frenchmen lived exclusively upon frogs. And because at the end of that century France crusaded against Europe in the high name of the French Revolution, every Englishman was given to understand that every Frenchman was a gesticulating jackanapes with a farcical falsetto.

The generation of the late Prince Albert regarded the generation of Napoleon III. as a shocking blend of Popery and the gay life, and because the sporting England of Queen Victoria could never understand the unathletic France of President Thiers, we have all in our time conjectured up delightful visions of legions of little Frenchmen in flat-brimmed silk hats going fox-shooting with packs of poodles. No picture of life in Calais was too ludicrous to be believed in Dover; that is one of the advantages of being an Island Race.

MUTUAL MISTAKES.

It is almost impossible to analyse the causes of such national mistakes; when a whole race goes wrong it is not simple to find the first blunder. After all, nobody ever did understand his neighbours; one misinterprets the proceedings of the man next door simply because he is the man next door.

England was at fault in its reading of France because from 1360 until 1904 it regarded France with the eyes of an enemy. This hostility was interrupted by an interval in the reign of Elizabeth, a second interval in the reign of Charles II., and a third interval under the Government of Walpole. But in the main it is true to say that England and France had been enemies from the reign of Edward III. to the reign of Edward VII. There were periods when the exigencies of foreign policy dictated an entente and diplomacy did its best to unite the two countries; but it was a friendship of Governments, and the individual Englishman was never the friend of the individual Frenchman. Now you never understand your enemy; possibly that is why he is your enemy.

But it must not be thought that England alone was guilty of errors of this type. France in its time has misread England almost as completely as England misread France. It is like auction at Smithfield. But until ten years ago these stimulating facts as to our climate and habits were articles of faith with Frenchmen of intelligence; that is the French error about England. It is equally untrue probably untrue that on this island we travel through a darkness of perpetual fogs to buy our wives by pub; that France has lived for the past forty years so entirely in the nightmare memory of the "Année Terrible" that French politicians will resent no insult and French soldiers can resist no onset; that is the German error about France.

THE REAL FRANCE.

The British error about France came from two causes: a failure to appreciate the truth about French history, and an inability to observe the truth about the France that is living under our eyes. When British opinion is set right about the past of France, it will be in a position to see straight about its present. But until it can get both of these things into a true perspective, it will continue to make itself ridiculous whenever it thinks of a Frenchman.

The first fallacy about the French is that they are frivolous. This illusion takes two forms, each of which is extremely popular in England: a belief that the French are light-headed in their public life and light-minded in their private life.

Now the whole error with regard to French politics is probably derived from a misreading of the French Revolution. That group of events, which is generally believed to have consisted of an impulsive attack upon the Bastille, followed by an orgy of promiscuous decapitation, was in reality a solemn and progressive movement by which the society and Government of France were reconstructed from top to bottom.

It resulted from the accident that the reformers began at the top that they were compelled to cut heads, but the Revolution itself was an effort of the whole population, directed by men of the professional class, against a discredited system of Government and aristocratic privileges. The solemnity of the Revolution was consistent with the complete seriousness of the nation which has produced the Huguenots and was yet to produce the Third Republic.

THE SOLEMN REPUBLIC.

The Third Republic, by which France has been governed since 1870, is the most serious Government in Europe. It is no evidence of light-mindedness that Frenchmen have occasionally demonstrated their sincere preference for the republican form of Government by dying for it on barricades. There is nothing flip-pant about street-fighting, and Tennyson was never farther from intelligence than when he delighted the subjects of Queen Victoria by a reference to "The red fool-fury of the Seine."

It is true that in the beginning and middle of the last century Frenchmen showed a certain uncertainty as to the precise form of Government which they proposed to retain; but for forty-five years they have retained the Republic.

The French Republic has no meretricious attractions; its army has no dress uniform except the uniform in which it fights; its waiters (and even its head-waiters) wear the same clothes as its politicians (and even its President); and the corps d'élite, which has been the military pride of the Second Empire, was abolished in the first military reorganisation of the Republic.

France, which the good Englishman believes to live perpetual French farces as it revolves riotously round "Gay Paree," is the most serious country west of China. Its Trade Unionism is fifty years ahead of the rest of Europe; its inventors showed us the way to the motor-car, the aeroplane, and the submarine; and its genius is for the organisation of peace.

A LONG ALLIANCE.

But its army is the most modern and the most silent fighting force on the Continent. One found in the little fortress towns of Eastern France little taste for the old shows of war. In the streets, every man was a soldier, because one had to have soldiers; and in the country every hill-top was a gun-platform, because one had to have guns.

That is the military temper of modern France; it does not set much store by glory, and it has changed so much since its armies swept lightly out into Europe on the first wave of the Revolution. Because France is civilised and because it is rich, France is a peaceful country, and when a country fights for peace is makes war with a hope that wins battles.

Modern France is neither a drill-ground nor a play-ground. It is a great economic State alive with the enterprise which has built up the industries of its north and the agriculture of its centre, veined closely with lines of railway and canal, and playing a leading part in the commercial life of Europe.

That is the France which Englishmen discovered with a shock of surprise in the hot weather of 1914. It is a discovery which will affect more than a single war or a single generation, because geography has made the co-operation of England and France in Western Europe as natural and inevitable as the co-operation of Germany and Austria in Central Europe.

The discovery of France is something more than a discovery of an ally against Germany; it is the discovery of a neighbour whom England had not known for six centuries, and by whom England will live in an exchange of all that is most valuable in both countries for more than the time of any man now living.

BRITISH TROOPS IN SERBIA

RUMOUR CONFIRMED

London, July 15.

Mr. Crawford Price who has been accompanying the Serbian forces as British "Eyewitness" in the campaign against Austria, while lecturing here confirmed the statement that British troops are fighting with the Serbians against the Austro-Hungarians. He said that the authorities had given him permission to announce the fact.

PALERMO

It is by no means an easy task to criticise the racing that took place at Palermo on Sunday. There was no doubt about one thing and that was that the public went hopelessly wrong in their selections, and seemed to have completely forgotten some previous results of racing, as was evidenced by the manner in which they allowed horses with prominent chances to pay such large dividends. Truly the majority of the results were unexpected. One could hardly have thought, for instance, that Canipino could give Arvejo 3 kilos and a beating out of sight, or that Vicente Lopez would be beaten by Leonidas IV., and yet both these winners had exceptionally good chances, as their past running indicates, and yet they were comparatively left out in the cold and allowed to pay $37.65 and $35.85 respectively. This was truly ridiculous on the part of the public, and exceptionally so in the case of Leonidas, who was fully entitled to be better backed than Bataclan, Colmenar, Centauro, Polavieja and even Tamandare who have done absolutely nothing, save the latter. If they will neglect the obvious then they have only themselves to blame. Still Sunday was a difficult day and the upsets were truly remarkable.

The Classic event, the Premio General Pueyrredon, provided one of the finest, if not absolutely the finest race seen at Palermo this season. Although there was only Aventurero, Smasher and Dijital in the race, it was, indeed, a grand event. The favourite Aventurero was beaten a head by the outsider Dijital, who proved how very wrong were some people when they stated that the mare in a race the other day arrived home in a weak condition. Even Sunday after her 4000 metre spin done in the most remarkable, no—most wonderful time, of 4.14, was just as fit and good as ever after a 3 minute rest.

Aventurero undoubtedly lost the race by being badly ridden, but credit where credit is due. Dijital put up the race of her career and Arcuri, her jockey, received the most enthusiastic reception heard for many a long day at Palermo, when he turned out in the next race on La Sonambula. It is hard to know what De Lara was thinking about by riding Aventurero as he did, and we incline to the belief that the greatness of the event, and the pitting of his wits against those of Mingo Torterolo and F. Arcuri, was responsible for upsetting his judgment. He never seemed to know quite what to do, whether to take the lead or to hang on to Smasher, and this vacillation was the cause of him losing a race that will live long in the memory of turfites.

The Premio Gay Simon was won by Campesino at the expense of Banderado and Velasquez. Kiron put up a most disappointing race, but did not appear quite fit. He could have easily beaten the crowd that turned out if he had been, so that in spite of the result Kiron is a horse to remember when he runs fit and well.

Cosquilla beat Malona by half a neck in the fillies race, and we are inclined to think that Ardouin might have done better. Brisca is more and more disappointing, and does not seem to have an ounce of "finish" about her.

The interest in the Premio Buchar-do was the very weak running of Avanti, and the feeble show of Winer. There was nothing very surprising in the result, as undoubtedly the first and second colts were the best in the race. Why was Polavieja, ridden by Laborde, at 57 kilos, expected to win? It may be just as well to remember this fact for a future occasion?

La Delfina II. a late heroine from La Plata, came out and won the Premio Olascoaga, with ease from Nove-dad and Casi Nada. It seems that La Plata is determined to attract attention to herself. Not only did Maraschino romp home the other day, but on Sunday La Delfina and Hidrato did the same, although it must be said that the latter was the most logical winner of the last event, if, and when it had been remembered, that he was constantly putting it across Maraschino when they met, and the latter had a Palermo book chance second to none on Sunday. The surprise in this last race to which we are referring was the fact that El Kaiser supported some 24,000 winning tickets, a fact for which there was not the very slightest justification as subsequent events proved. El Kaiser was not even as prominent on the book as Maraschino was, but 25,500 tickets! The public truly lost their heads on Sunday.

It is interesting to note that Shark could not go the distance.

The Premio Mouchette, the race after the classic event, was won by Gerona, with Cortesia second and Chilca third. If we admit that La Sonambula could not give the weights she was called upon to give, then a more reasonable result could hardly have been expected. It reproduced very fairly the past running of these fillies. It seemed to us a mistake that Insula was installed favourite and so it proved.

The Premio Charming was annexed in fine style by Troyano from Stagno and Inspector, with Clinbell nowhere. The winner paid the second smallest dividend of the day, namely $9, and in this lay, perhaps, the most extraordinary feature of Sunday's meeting. Round about the region of $30 was the average for wins which statement alone will show how the poor public was pipped. But in spite of all this the meeting was an interesting one.

ROSARIO

Racing at Rosario on Sunday took place under most lively conditions, and there can be little wonder that the Stewards of the Jockey Club are holding a meeting concerning the various matters which took place.

The meeting on Sunday, July 11, caused the public to grow excited and to protest in a most vigorous manner against the win registered by Sunchales, with the result that, horse, jockey, trainer, etc., were either disqualified or suspended. This, however, was nothing in comparison to the public outcry of last Sunday.

It was the bad starting that was the cause and public excitement reached such a pitch, that ultimately the crowd invaded the track, the private precincts of the stewards, with threats of wrecking the place, until their violence had to be curbed by the police.

The starter had been most unsuccessful in the earlier races, so that in the fifth race he was accompanied by Señor Mendieta, a steward of the Jockey Club, whose authority it was hoped would keep the jockeys in order. This race, however, ended more disastrously than any of the others. The favourite Sandstorm and two others, Tartina and Carita all fell and this from the public point of view was the last straw. It was perhaps just as well the accident happened, because it enabled the police to interfere. Rosario must look to her laurels and should take stringent methods to ensure of the "great game" being played more fairly.

The results of Sunday's racing were as follows:

LA PLATA

Several of the results of the races at La Plata on Sunday caused surprise. The meeting was an enjoyable one and took place in perfect weather, with track just about as good as it could be.

The biggest dividend was paid out by Macherion in the Premio Javotte, who finished a length in front of Fable with Pretty Boy and Octavio, both of them only a short head behind. It was an exciting finish, and the $30 the winner paid was well earned. An immensely tight ending and incidentally the most surprising result of the day was seen in the Premio Juanaco, when Cebada beat the greatly fancied Satyricon, by half a length.

Majadero is a horse that it takes a certain amount of pluck to bet on. He is such a bad tempered and uncertain rogue of a horse. Were it not for this he would win many races, as he certainly has the speed. It was his sulkiness that lost him the Premio Juvenal.

The results of an excellent day's racing were as follows. It should be noted that the improvement in the races at La Plata is very considerable, and a day's sport out there is now quite an enjoyable entertainment.

PREMIO JAVERT, 1200 mts. —1. Normando 54, $5.20 and $3.20; 2. Driada 50, $14.90. Won by 2½ lengths; 1½ lengths. Time 1.13 2/5.

FOOTBALL

ARGENTINE ASSOCIATION (7) v. PLATENSE (2).

One of the best teams was picked to represent the Argentine Association when they travelled to La Plata on Sunday to meet a team chosen from the Federacion Platense.

The game was a good one, but the visitors throughout had the best of matters, and through the efforts of Tua who scored twice, of Costas, who scored four times, once from a penalty, and of Alzua, who added another goal, the visitors won by seven goals to two. These latter were scored by Ruta and Galiano. The following were the teams:—

Association. — Pearson (captain); Bruno and Idiarte; Comaschi, Basurto and Moudotti; Luperne, Hirsch, Costas, Tula and Alzua.

Federation.—Altuve; Scianca and Marucci; Echeverry, P. Rodriguez and S. Rodriguez; Ruta, Socio, Conti, Peraz and Galiano.

SAN LORENZO (2) v. ARGENTINO DE QUILMES (1).

Played at Caballito on Sunday, between the following teams:—

San Lorenzo.—J. Coll, H. Coll, J. Campos, J. Monti, F. Monti, N. Romeo, M. Perrazzo, F. Xaras, A. Etchegaray, G. Urio, L. Giannella.

Argentinos de Quilmes.—J. Bruzan, R. Martinez, J. Ortega, M. Bogliachini, A. Cortona, J. R. Pozo, M. Ginebra, F. Cahana, V. Cincotta, J. J. Pozo, P. Polimeni.

The game, which was rather a rough one, was won by San Lorenzo by two goals to one, chiefly through the aid of Gianelli, who scored twice for the winners. Cabana was the goal-getter for the Argentinos.

PORTENO (3) v. ESTUDIANTES (2)

An excellent game was played on the ground of the latter on Sunday afternoon, before a considerable number of spectators.

The goal-scorers were: For Porteno—Abadia, Isaguirre, and Molteni, and for Estudiantes—Ivanisevich, and Bawlosky. The following were the teams:—

Porteno.—Rithner, Gonzalez, Escarra, Beltrame; Ayala, Uslengui, Abadia; Ressano, J. Rithner, Molteni, Isaguirre, Sarat.

Estudiantes.—Crocé, Krieger, Parkinson; Vaccari, Ivanisevich, Spinelli, Bownas, Bertorini, Antequeda, Pawlosky, Ochandio.

INDEPENDIENTE (2) v. BELGRANO (0).

Played on Sunday afternoon at Avellaneda, this game resulted in a win for the Independiente team by two goals to nil. Belgrano generally had the worst of the game, and were continually on the defensive. They did not play anything like up to their usual form.

Zabaleta and Curutchague were the goal-scorers, and the following teams turned out:—

Independiente.—S. Mignenz, A. Ferro, R. Sande, V. Cappedetti, E. Sande, J. Venturelra, P. Garré, A. Arroyuelo, N. Cappedetti, A. Zabaleta, A. Curutchague.

Belgrano.—H. Reddell, J. Pena, G. G. Brown, H. Cox, A. Mallen, J. Hughes, H. Vignoles, C. Oliva, J. Martin, B. Mallett, A. L. Morgan.

PACIFIC RAILWAY (2) v. LA CARLOTA (0).

This friendly encounter took place at Saenz Pena on Sunday morning, and thanks to the efforts of Moffatt and Morgan, the Railway men won a good game by two goals to nil. The teams which met are given below:—

La Carlota.—E. Lund, J. R. Ross, R. Fernandez, G. H. Browne, J. Morere, I. Gassol, H. Rouch, F. Morere, V. Lund, M. Rodriguez, and I. Luinsden.

Pacific Rly.—J. J. McClew, A. Diaz, F. Salvarezza, P. Bertolini, E. G. Wilson, H. Morretti, M. Miraglia, I. Morgan, B. Mallett, I. Moffatt and G. Davies.

Following is the position of the clubs in the First Division:—

RUGBY

FIRST DIVISION CHAMPIONSHIP.

BELGRANO v. BUENOS AIRES.

After a great game, played at Belgrano on Sunday afternoon, the visiting team, Buenos Aires, were victorious by one try, 3 points, to nothing.

Martin was the scorer.

The game, which was most evenly contested, might have resulted in a different verdict, if Belgrano had scored in the last few minutes of the game, when they were having all the best of matters. Buenos Aires had to do without the services of Gooding and of Cash Reed.

Charlton played a good game for his side, and was perhaps the best on the field. Both full backs were steady and made few mistakes. Mold was the pick of the halves, but Watson worked very hard and was always prominent. Mr. Scott refereed for the following teams:—

Belgrano.—Hearne; Bush, Charlton, Watson and Fenwick; Sinclair and Dessura; Scott, Bourne, Darch, De Meyler, Troncoso, Sampson, Whittington and Paz.

Buenos Aires.—Mackern; Trillia, Martin, Beardmore and Walker; Mold and Smyth; Wigg, Heriot, Gahan, Macadam, McCall, Lockwood, Cox and Etchandy.

POLO

CHAPADMALAL v. HURLINGHAM.

Hurlingham were defeated at Hurlingham on Sunday, by seven goals to four, their opponents Chapadmalal playing a series of very fine chukkers.

The following teams contested seven chukkers.

Hurlingham.—J. Negron, C. C. Smith, Major Quiroga, and R. Willes. Chapadmalal.—L. Lacey, A. M. Peña, J. Martinez de Hoz, and M. Martinez de Hoz.

From first to last play was very fast and immensely interesting, and some excellent riding and hard hitting were the features of the game. Mr. L. Lacey was particularly good.

MATCH AT ESTANCIA LA GERMANIA.

The Germania Estancia had the pleasure of entertaining various members of the Media Luna Polo Club during the week-end, and an interesting polo match was played between two mixed teams as follows:—

White.—Messrs. W. L. Wilson, A. J. Deves, R. Browne and C. E. Poirelle.

Reds.—Messrs. J. H. Gordon Davis, Henry Lacey, J. G. Dodds and D. McLennan.

Eight chukkers were played during the afternoon, and after a strenuous game, resulted in a win for the Whites by 6 goals to 5.

LAWN TENNIS

BELGRANO v. BUENOS AIRES L.T.C.

A most interesting match was played at Belgrano on Sunday afternoon, and resulted in the Buenos Aires Lawn Tennis Club beating the homesters by 10 matches to 6.

The best match of the afternoon was that between L. H. Knight and R. O. Sheward against N. F. Prescott and A. J. Villegas. The former pair won the match, as indeed they won every match they played, but the above mentioned game provided a tight match and some splendid play. Belgrano Club provided their guests with an excellent lunch. The full results were as follows:—

BUENOS AIRES L.T.C.

L. H. Knight and R. O. Sheward beat: J. F. Villegas and A. B. Cullerne 6-4, 6-4.

C. H. Smythe and Hutton 6-2, 6-4.

Ferguson and Rugeroni 6-4, 6-3.

Prescott and A. J. Villegas 6-8, 7-5, 6-4.

G. W. H. Spanton and A. J. MacMorran beat:

Ferguson and Rugeroni 6-3, 6-4.

C. H. Smyth and Hutton 5-7, 6-4, 6-4.

BELGRANO ATHLETIC CLUB.

H. F. Prescott and A. J. Villegas beat: McHardy and Urquiza 6-2, 5-7, 8-6.

Spanton and McMorran 6-3, 6-4.

Leslie and Jenkins 6-4, 6-2.

Cullerne and J. F. Villegas beat:

Leslie and Jenkins 6-4, 5-7, 6-3.

McHardy and D. Urquiza 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

Spanton and McMorran 8-6, 4-6, 6-3.

CENTRAL ARGENTINE v. GENERAL URQUIZA.

The match, which was played at Villa Urquiza, between this Lawn Tennis Club and the Central Argentine, ended in a win for the home club by 5 matches to four.

Thus the Urquiza team obtained their revenge for the defeat they suffered previously when they visited the railway men.

Sunday's match was only won by the closest of margins, and after some really hard-fought sets and matches. During the day the visiting players were entertained to lunch, and later to tea at the Club, which was provided by Mrs. Joyce, Miss Allen, and the Misses Furlong. The matches resulted as below:

General Urquiza L.T.C.:

Lovett and Gould beat:

Russell and Lewis, 6-5, 6-2.

Lang and Morgan, 6-4, 6-2.

Simpson and Babbington, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

Mayne and Gallishaw beat:

Lang and Morgan, 5-6, 6-2, 6-1.

Tyan and Doyer beat:

Lang and Morgan, 6-1, 6-3.

Central Argentine Rly. A.C.:

Russell and Lewis beat:

Tyan and Doyer, 6-2, 6-4.

Mayne and Gallishaw, 4-6, 6-0, 6-4.

Babbington and Thompson beat:

Tyan and Doyer, 6-4, 5-6, 7-5.

Mayne and Gallishaw, 2-6, 6-5, 6-2.

QUILMES v. VILLA DEVOTO.

Villa Devoto journeyed to Quilmes on Sunday afternoon, and after some interesting matches at tennis, had to acknowledge defeat to the extent of 7 matches to 2. The detailed scores are as follow:—

Quilmes L.T.C.

W. H. and G. C. Crispin beat:

Dodds and Colville Jones, 6-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Tebbutt and Holtum 5-6, 6-2, 7-5.

Reece and White 6-4, 6-3.

Bell and Leonard beat:

Tebbutt and Holtum 4-6, 6-2, 6-2.

Reece and White 3-6, 6-2, 8-6.

Hetley and Hoare beat:

Tebbutt and Holtum 6-2, 4-6, 6-0.

Reece and White, 6-2, 6-2.

Villa Devoto L.T.C.

Colville Jones and Dodds beat:

Bell and Leonard 6-2, 6-4.

Hetley and Hoare 6-5, 6-3.

VILLA DEVOTO II. v. QUILMES II.

On the courts of the Villa Devoto Club, the second home team suffered a more serious defeat by Quilmes than did their first team. In spite of this the games were thoroughly enjoyed, with the following results:—

1. E. Cooper and F. Edye lost to E. S. Spain and B. G. Moverly by 6-2, 2-6, 2-6.

P. Marrs and C. E. Lovett by 3-6. R. Veitch and A. W. Woodhouse by 4-6, 6-3, 0-6.

2. S. MacHardy and G. Bruce were beaten by—

E. S. Spain and B. G. Moverly with scores 1-6, 3-6.

P. Marrs and C. E. Lovett, 1-6, 1-6.

R. Veitch and A. W. Woodhouse, 1-6, 2-6.

3. E. Kirby and R. Tarver lost their games against

E. S. Spain and B. G. Moverly by 2-6, 2-6.

P. Marrs and C. E. Lovett by 2-6, 2-6.

R. Veitch and A. W. Woodhouse, by 5-6, 5-6.

QUILMES L.T. CLUB

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

The annual general meeting of the Quilmes Lawn Tennis Club was held last night at the Masonic Hall, Quilmes, with the retiring President Mr. J. F. Recknell in the chair.

Some forty members of the Club were present to receive the report of the outgoing committee which was duly proposed, seconded and passed unanimously. There was no discussion. After this report had been adopted Mr. H. W. Williams, the treasurer, submitted the financial account of the past season, which showed that the Quilmes Lawn Tennis Club were in a reasonably satisfactory position considering the fact that some nine of their members had left for Europe and that their prospects of increased memberships were slight on account of so much of the athletic section of Quilmes having left the country. This report of the Treasurer was unanimously adopted.

The meeting then proceeded to the election of officers for the coming season.

Mr. H. A. Ritchie was elected as President, in place of Mr. J. F. Recknell (retiring) amidst applause. Mr. E. Pite's name as Vice-President was adopted without dissent.

The re-election of Mr. H. W. Williams as Treasurer, of Mr. A. W. Woodhouse as Secretary, of Mr. Barry Hoare, R. J. Buck and B. C. Moverley as members of committee was proceeded with and this business closed the elections of the male section of the club and the general business.

Mrs. H. J. Ritchie was elected unanimously as the Lady President for the coming season and Miss Rogers was duly appointed Secretary.

The meeting, which was satisfactory and a well attended one was brought to a close by offering a sincere vote of thanks to the retiring President, Mr. J. F. Recknell, which was duly seconded amidst applause.

THREE JOCKEYS INJURED

ACCIDENT AT ROSARIO.

In the fifth race on the programme at the Hippodrome Independencia, Rosario, on Sunday, an accident occurred which has caused injury to three of the jockeys who were riding. Shortly after the start Tartina, Carita and the favourite, Sandstorm, all fell, which resulted in Nicholas Marquez fracturing his left leg, in Ricardo Rodriguez being injured about the head and suffering from concussion of the brain, and in Alberto Irueta being bruised and shaken. It is stated that the accident occurred and was solely due to the jockeys hustling each other so as to obtain the lead on the rails. The matter is being dealt with by the stewards of the jockey club and the police are making the necessary inquiries as to who was to blame.

JOURNALIST MURDERED

"La Nacion" Correspondent

BATTERED TO DEATH AT ARRECIFES

A first-class sensation has been created by the brutal and deliberate murder at Arrecifes, or, as it is now called, Bartolomé Mitre, Prov. of Buenos Aires, of Don Santiago Perez, the local correspondent of "La Nacion." The particulars of the crime show that Señor Perez was beaten to death about 11 o'clock on Saturday night and the news of the fact were accompanied by a statement that local officialism was accused of complicity. Señor Perez had been passing the evening at the house of Sr. Daneri, proprietor of a pharmacy and a friend whom he was frequently accustomed to visit. He mentioned that he was leaving by the night express at 2 a.m. for the Capital on business, and left at 10 p.m. for his office, which was about half a square distant. There he packed his bag, and later left for his house. He would have to pass the corner of Arce and Carmen, where he used a pocket electric lamp owing to the darkness and bad road. This, however, projecting only a cone of light, missed his cowardly assassins lurking in the shadows of a doorway and a telephone post. At this point he was suddenly and savagely attacked, for no doubt is felt that as he was courageous and athletic, he could have offered a desperate defence. Having struck him down, however, the murderers vented their brutal fury on their victim and battered his skull with their weapons, an iron bar and a club probably, as it was fractured in several places, and when found by some neighbours his condition was desperate although he still lived. Investigation showed numerous stains of blood at the spot and no signs of struggle. The victim, treacherously surprised, was struck down like a steer in the shambles. The police doctor and Dr. Jauregui have made a careful examination of the corpse and consider that the first blow was delivered on the right temple. The residents near by saw and heard nothing, but the doorway referred to has confused prints of bloody fingers, which have been photographed. Two men, one tall and one short, dressed in black, were noticed by a café proprietor about ten o'clock. Their manner was reserved and both were strangers to the place. A piece of iron bar found near by appeared to have been wiped, but had a few hairs adhering to it. The audacity of the crime has astounded the population of Arrecifes, and the opinion is freely expressed that the murderers were sure of their retreat. The Chief of Police, Don Ernesto Poveda, says that two neighbours passing the spot heard groans, and on advancing were horrified to find Perez whom they knew well, in the shocking state described. On the alarm being given the police instantly hastened to the spot with their doctor Soler Galeano, who, after rendering first aid, had the dying man removed to his own house. Señor Poveda very wisely placed a watch on the spot to prevent any tell-tale marks being effaced, and he also made two arrests. He was a friend of the deceased, and has been much affected. The two men under arrest are said to have been seen by a boy about ten, when one of them was carrying an iron bar.

"La Nación" observes that numerous murders have taken place at B. Mitre, and that all the victims were members of the political opposition, this being about the sixth crime since 1900, when Deputy Esteban Costa was killed. The Judge of Crime has now taken the case up and is proceeding actively with the summary, while Señor Santos Rosa, Chief of the Detective Department, is prosecuting enquiries. It is said that already grave presumptions of guilt have appeared against the men under detention.

DRESDEN'S OFFICERS

Endeavour to Escape to Germany

DETAINED BY R.M.S. GLASGOW

Montevideo, July 19.

The British cruiser Glasgow stopped the Chilean steamer Orion at sea while on her way to Germany with a cargo of naphtha. On board the vessel were four officers belonging to the German cruiser Dresden.

SOCIAL GATHERING

AT ST. SAVIOUR'S, BELGRANO.

A quite new departure in social gatherings was inaugurated last night at St. Saviour's Church, Belgrano. It was the idea of the Rev. F. O. Spanton that something should be done towards enabling persons of the locality to become more socially intimate and with this idea in view an informal social evening was arranged and was celebrated last evening in the Church Hall. Ping-pong, bridge, round games at cards, informal music and the like made the evening pass in a most pleasant manner.

Between forty and fifty people were present and the whole business was the most successful. It was arranged that a committee of ladies and gentlemen should be elected to carry on these social gatherings in the future and under the guidance of Mr. Spanton it was decided that every other Tuesday commencing from Tuesday, August 3, should be set aside for the celebration of a similar evening's enjoyment. The nominal cost is to be covered by members paying $1 per month and no doubt from last night's beginning much can be expected. The three ladies who were elected on the committee were Mrs. Dixon, Miss Whitaker and Miss Marr, and the elected gentlemen were Mr. W. Wikner, Mr. Dixon, and Mr. Darch. In future these evenings will commence at 8.30 p.m., and close at 11 p.m., and all kinds and varieties of entertainment will be introduced. The committee will also be responsible for the refreshments. It is not only members of St. Saviour's whom are expected to attend, anyone who cares to do so, and of any denomination will be made welcome.

At a committee meeting after the festivities of last night closed, Mr. Dixon was elected as Honorary Treasurer, and Mr. W. Wikner as Hon. Secretary. The Rev. F. O. Spanton offered on behalf of all present a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Lee, and to Mr. Laidlaw, who had lent the ping-pong tables, and to the other ladies and gentlemen who had provided cards and games. Judging from last evening, the St. Saviour's social evenings are sure of meeting with success, and everyone present thoroughly enjoyed their evening.

YOUNG MAN SHOT

FATAL ACCIDENT AT A SHOOTING RANGE.

A fatal accident has occurred at the Tiro Federal, Rosario which it should be the duty of the authorities to undertake shall not happen in the future. During the practice at the rifle range on Sunday a young man named Amado Sanchez, 23 years of age, unhappily lost his life. It is not clear how the affair happened, but certain it is that a bullet from one of the men practising at the ranges struck the youth in the left side and passing through his body came out on the other side, killing him instantly. The youth was taken immediately to his home in Calle Ayolas. The necessary inquiries are being made, and the authorities, it will be hoped, will enforce the most stringent regulations which will, in future, render such a sad accident impossible.

BELGRANO WINTER CONCERTSLAST NIGHT'S PROGRAMME AT THE DR. SMITH MEMORIAL HALL.

Among the best of the Belgrano winter concerts at the Dr. Smith Memorial Hall, was the one held last evening. The programme was a particularly attractive one, as was evidenced by the large number of people who filled the hall. It was one of the largest audiences that has attended these concerts this winter.

A study of the programme will show the exceptional amount of amateur talent, which provided the good things of the evening, and will in itself explain the large attendance, and when it is added that nearly all the artists were at their best, it is possible to imagine the excellence of the entertainment.

It was a pleasure to hear the singing of Mrs. Munks, after her recent illness, and although, apparently, not perfectly recovered in voice, her "Flower of Love" was deservedly encored. Mrs. Munks possesses a rich contralto voice, of quality and strength, and she has only to be heard to be appreciated. Miss Kathleen Knight was again a great success, and she is to be congratulated on proving that Gounod's "Jewel Song" from Faust, has no difficulties for her.

It was excellently well done, and exposes qualities in the singer's voice which, hitherto, have been unnoticed. Miss Knight should have no limit to her choice of songs. Mr. Charles Gabb sang four songs, with his usual excellence.

Miss Elsie and Miss Margary Tyson sang with their usual charm, both solos and duets. The former's solo "An April Song," is a melody of considerable vocal difficulty, but was well rendered.

The enthusiasm of the audience in calling for encores in the first half of the programme, presented the possibility of the same in the later items, but late as the hour was the audience were reluctant to leave such a splendid entertainment. Miss Wilkinson played the 'cello with sympathy and feeling, and her choice in the first part of the programme was perhaps the more preferable one.

Mr. H. Waldron, Mr. R. W. Cassels and Mr. W. H. Philpotts provided other items to the great appreciation of all present.

Mr. J. Bradford, assisted by several ladies, had charge of the interval refreshments, while Miss Featherston, Professor Welby and Mr. Laing were the accompanists.

It might be remarked that one or two accompaniments while excellently played, had a somewhat too dominant loud pedal. Not only was the concert a success, but it was one with talent out of the ordinary.

Part I.

Song, "The White Squall," (Barker), Mr. W. H. Philpotts.

Vocal Duet, "Night of Stars," (Offenbach), Miss E. and M. Tyson; encore, "A Song of Sunshine."

Song, "The Valley of Laughter," Miss Kathleen Knight; encore, "Rose in the Bud."

'Cello Song, "Au bord de la Mer," (Dankler), Miss M. Wilkinson; encore "Veronica."

Song, "The Flower of Love," (Sanderson), Mrs. J. B. Munks; encore, "A Sprig of White Heather."

Recitation, "Charge of the Light Brigade," Mr. H. Waldron.

Song, "An Evening Song," Mr. Charles Gabb; encore, "Because."

Song, "An April Song," Miss Elsie Tyson.

Humorous Sketch, "A Village Concert," "Yes—I think so," Mr. R. W. Cassels.

Interval.Part II.

'Cello Song, "The Broken Melody," (Van Biene), Miss M. Wilkinson.

Song, "Sweet Vale of Avaco," (Temple), Miss M. Tyson.

Song, "Mountain Lovers," (Squire), Mr. Chas. Gabb; encore, "Until,"

"HERALD" BELGIAN FUNDTHANKS FROM BEXHILL COMMITTEE.

Mrs. William Reed-Lewis, whose husband is Honorary Secretary of the Bexhill Belgian Refugee Committee, has written to "The Herald" as follows:—

"Dear Sirs,—I beg to acknowledge your favour of May 22, enclosing a draft for £91 in aid of our Belgian Fund. My husband will probably write to you himself on his return next week from the States, where he has been on a "begging tour." We are most grateful to you for your help, and as our subscriptions have been falling off very much of late, owing to the many other funds connected with the war, your cheque has come at a very opportune moment, and we are deeply sensible of the generosity of your readers.

Yours faithfully,

M. B. REED-LEWIS

Bexhill-on-Sea,
June 23, 1915.

PRINCE OF WALES FUNDRAFFLE OF A DOLL.

Mr. J. B. Auld, of the Tienda Inglesa, 52 Maipu, states that the raffle in aid of the Prince of Wales's Fund of a beautifully dressed doll (baby complete), kindly presented by Mrs. Sanderson from Las Toscas, realised the handsome sum of $300. This amount having been handed over to the Hon. Treasurer of the Fund, Mr. Thomas Lloyd, the drawing of the winning number was duly proceeded with by the Hon. Secretary, Mr. Powell-Jones, which resulted in the lucky holder of ticket No. 206 being declared the winner. Mr. Auld will be pleased to hand over the doll on presentation of ticket No. 206, and sincerely congratulates the winner.

A HERO'S DEATHFAMOUS AUTHOR'S MESSAGE TO "THE HERALD."

Mr. Frederic Harrison, the famous essayist, writes to "The Herald" as follows:—

The Lodge,
Amberley, Stroud,
June 25.

Mr. Frederic Harrison offers sincere thanks for himself and family for "The Herald" of 30th May, kindly sent by Editor and friends of the late Lieut. C. R. Harrison. They will be glad to know that his Commanding Officer has sent hearty praise of his courage, zeal, and efficiency, and of his last gallant service in a night attack. He was taken to base hospital, tenderly nursed, and died in the presence of his father, who, with another son, attended the military burial in the cemetery of Boulogne, May 26.

It will be remembered that Lieut. C. R. Harrison was at one time well known locally. The notification of his death at the front appeared in "The Herald" on May 30.

Song, "Flower Song," (from Gounod's Faust), Miss Knight.

Humorous Sketch, in six chapters, Mr. R. W. Cassels.

Vocal Duet, "Carmena," (Wilson), Misses Tyson.

Recitation "The Revenge," (Tennyson), Mr. H. Waldron.

Song, "Ailsa Mine," (Newton), Mr. Munks.

Song, "The Village Blacksmith," (Weiss), Mr. Philpotts.

God Save the King.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S INSTITUTEDEPARTURE OF MR. E. H. WILEMAN.

The monthly social of the Young People's Institute of the American Church, which took place last night in the Hall of the Church, was one of extreme interest. Besides an entertaining programme, the occasion was also a farewell social to Mr. Edgar H. Wileman, who sails tomorrow for North America and England.

Mr. Charles J. Ewald presided, and the proceedings opened with a "watch" competition, wherein the guests (working in pairs) had to answer a number of questions, all of which answers represented some part of a watch. Miss J. Penny and Mr. Jay C. Field were the winning couple.

Miss Beryl Lovejoy then sang "My ain folk." Miss Lovejoy possesses a pleasing contralto voice, which was heard to advantage.

A game, "Musical Arms," followed, and, besides being more novel than the orthodox form of "Musical Chairs," it was probably much kinder to the church furniture.

A monologue by Mr. John W. Adderley came next. It was a "Swiss" gentleman's attempt to tell the "Tale of a Dog," and provoked much laughter. An encore was a revised version of "The House that Jack Built."

A "Polyette" entitled "Marching through Georgia," was the next item on the programme. This was rendered vociferously, if not with perfect "technique," by the "Y.P.I. Male Choir." Mrs. T. Leeds was at the piano.

Mr. Stanley Parker, Chairman of the Young People's Institute, expressed a few words of appreciation of the admirable work done by Mr. Wileman in the formation of the Society, and in the organisation of the Socials as well as the many other duties which he discharges with so much goodwill. He wished him "God-speed" in his journey, a wish that was heartily demonstrated by all present by vigorous applause. Mr. Parker also made statements in reference to the attendances and finances of the Institute, observing in the former connection that whilst the interest and attendance in the religious meetings were increasing to a remarkable degree, still there were some members who did not take full advantage of this side of the Institute's activities.

Mr. Wileman replied suitably.

During the interval that followed, tea and cakes were served, some of the cakes being kindly supplied by various lady friends.

The programme was then continued by Mr. Parker singing "Nita Gitana." He was followed by Mr. Percy G. Scott in a recitation entitled "The best of absent wives," and accompanied by himself on the auto-harp. His efforts were heartily applauded. As an encore followed the song, "That's what the rose said to me."

Mr. J. Lynn Hazelton introduced several interesting charades, which were appreciated.

The lights being lowered, a "shadowgraph competition" took place, wherein eight persons of the party had to pass between a screen and a light, and the remainder had to guess whom the shadows represented. This caused much fun. Mrs. Tom Leeds won the prize.

The singing of a Vesper brought happily to a close a very enjoyable evening.

AUSTRALIA SETTLES DOWN TO WARCRICKET MATCHES ABANDONED.

London, July 20.

A cable message from Melbourne announces that owing to the war the inter-state cricket matches have been abandoned. The Victorian Cabinet has decided to curtail horse races.

RETIRO NEW STATIONTO BE OPENED ON AUGUST 2.

Arrangements are being made for the official opening of the new Retiro Station on August 2.

It is probable that the ceremony will be performed by the President of the Republic, accompanied by the various ministers and members of the legislative bodies. The new Retiro Station will be one of the finest in the whole of South America. The building, which has been erected at considerable cost, will provide every convenience, and facility for passengers, and is one of the most imposing frontages in the city.

LE QUATORZE DE JUILLETCELEBRATION IN MONTEVIDEO.

A Montevideo correspondent sends the following notes regarding the celebration locally of the French national day:—

The leaflet attached, on the postal delivery of which our Hunnish friends have spent quite a sum, was distributed yesterday (14th) as their contribution to the National Feast Day.

Over 18,000 visiting cars were left at the "Legation de France."

The popular manifestation was a notable success. One Spaniard raised his protest as the procession was passing the Cabildo by shouting "Viva Alemania" and what was left of him, was escorted by the Mounted Police in an ambulance to the hospital.

Almost the entire business centre was profusely decorated with flags and the tricolor was everywhere in evidence.

Five thousand street bills in the French colours had been posted on the walls of the city last Monday inviting the public to make a special effort in celebrating the day. The local Hun Committee engaged a gang of several dead beats on the night of the 13th to deface as far as possible these posters, but the plans being detected in time a fresh edition was in evidence early on the morning of the 14th.

Had Montevideo been a French dependency, it could not have shown greater sympathy with "La Belle France" than was everywhere manifested on Wednesday.

KAISER'S LOST CAPITAL.MONARCHS INVOLVED IN GERMAN FINANCIAL DISASTERS.

Paris, July 20.

A private letter received from Berlin via Switzerland states that the Kaiser and the Kings of Wurtemberg, Saxony and Bavaria are all heavy losers through the ruin of the shipping and other industries in which they had invested large sums.

Agricultural & Pastoral

CAMP NOTES

(By Our Agricultural Editor).

Weather during the past few days has been decidedly in favour of camp interests. A further absence of severe frosts, will be heartily welcomed by both estancieros and agriculturists.

Reports from Uruguay state that there is every probability of the forthcoming agricultural show at Montevideo, proving a marked success, and superior to all previous exhibitions.

Mr. Tom Peters, well known in cattle circles in this Republic, came in from Olavarría during the week. He reports having experienced very severe frosts in that part of the country this winter, and says that there is also an excess of water on all low-lying camps. He returns to his estancia to-morrow.

Mr. Charles Duggan returned to Buenos Aires last week by the "Avon," after having spent a holiday in the old country. He is looking exceedingly well, and quite fit to resume his onerous duties as one of the most energetic and progressive members of the Sociedad Rural Argentina. During recent years Mr. Duggan has successfully performed the arduous task of judging the pedigree Hereford classes at Uruguayan and Provincial cattle exhibitions; in fact he is always ready and willing to give a little of his valuable time to helping any deserving object, notwithstanding the fact, that the administration of his own estancias, must occupy him pretty fully.

Visitors from the camp are unanimous in complaining of the shortage of pasture. Severe frosts experienced some weeks ago, burnt up green pasture. Not only did natural grasses suffer in this respect, but best alfalfa camps have failed to support the quantity of stock, which in former years, they had been accustomed to carry. The shortage of pasture in winter time is only to be expected, but to be without a reserve of dry hay; where it is possible to grow alfalfa and other suitable fodder, does not reflect in a very creditable manner on the management or intellect of any camp man. Where it is possible to grow alfalfa, even though on a limited scale, and carefully cut and stack in times of plenty, a reserve of great value is obtained, and when need demands, a supplementary ration is always at hand for the live stock that require it. One case in point where great benefit is obtained is by giving an extra ration of good dry hay, to milch cows that are rearing big calves, which are always liable to get into low condition, if not getting their appetites appeased during the most critical part of the year—and their life.

Owing to the limited space available during the latter part of this month, for cold storage transport by water of chilled and frozen beef, prices for cattle in the local market are likely to be somewhat affected; and I would not be at all surprised to report a momentary check of the high values at present ruling. I have frequently referred, in these columns to the influence of shipping on the prices of cattle here, and how values are affected by the number of boats available. I have never been able to understand why the British Government took over so many of our meat carrying boats, when their services as meat carriers would appear to have been very urgently required, and would have had the effect of steadying prices on the London market. Moreover a plentiful supply of chilled and frozen beef on home markets would naturally counteract the fabulous prices obtained there for locally grown beef and mutton. This has in no small degree been due to the limited supplies, which our many freezing companies are able to ship, owing as I have already stated, to the small amount of cold storage space available on home going ships.

The available supplies naturally rule the market; and though there have been heavier arrivals of foreign mutton, at Britain's ports, the value of home ewes, were reported to have fallen from five to seven shillings, from the high prices formerly prevailing, at the Glasgow market. I well remember the time when heavy arrivals of United States cattle at Yorkhill, used to bring down the market values to such an extent as to make it impossible for dealers in Scottish cattle to realise to advantage. So much affected was the market, that it was no infrequent occurrence to witness the dispatch of special meat trains to London, conveying the surplus, from a lesser consuming centre to one more able to absorb abnormal supplies. The railway companies to facilitate the big wholesale men, used to convey the surplus meat, at a rate very much below what Scottish meat was made to pay. The importation of foreign cattle at this important centre, has until very recently been almost suspended, but the high prices now ruling has relieved this trade, which according to recent mails, is likely to assume considerable proportions, and be the means of placing meat within the reach of the large working population on the Clyde, who have now got so used to the consumption of meat that to revert to the more general use of Scotland's wholesome porridge, would be received by more growls than some of the labour troubles appear capable of producing during this trying and critical war time at home.

Recent papers from Asunción, Paraguay, report the sanctioning by the Senate, of the construction of a freezing establishment near Asunción, and of which Mr. Tex. Rickard, is supposed to be the leading spirit. Mr. G. T. Rickard's progressive spirit in Paraguay, was the cause of his being severely censured in many quarters; but as in other enterprises in the initial stage, he has seen these things through, and his latest achievement has been the successful termination to his proposed Frigorífico in or near Asunción, to handle the many thousands of fat cattle which Paraguay yearly produces, and for which many difficulties have been experienced in marketing them to advantage. Big grower steers, even if slightly rougher than what was formerly considered a saleable carcass on the home markets will nowadays be quite likely to meet with acceptance, as being adapted for some special branch of the trade. The extra good quality of Paraguayan hides, and the big prices paid represents 45 per cent of the total value of the steer. It is to be hoped that the necessary capital will soon be subscribed, and the initial work commenced. Any project supported by Mr. Rickard's tireless energy, is bound to succeed, especially in Paraguay, a country from which Mr. Rickard anticipates great things in the near future.

POULTRY EXHIBITION AT LA PLATA

NUMEROUS AND VALUABLE ENTRIES

COMPLETE LIST OF PRIZE WINNERS.

The fifteenth annual Poultry Show was inaugurated at La Plata on July 9, by the Minister of Public Works, Señor Eduardo Arand, in the presence of other representatives of the National and Provincial Governments, the committee, and a large gathering of the general public. It must be extremely gratifying to those responsible for the production of this show, and to the exhibitors, that sympathetic aid should be given by the Government, and that the above-named Minister should evince the keen interest in the exhibits, and his desire to be of service, as amply demonstrated on the day of inauguration. Accompanied by the President of the Association, Señor A. F. Plot, Señor Arand looked at all the birds, and other exhibits, expressing his admiration of the magnificent specimens shown, and the large assortment of "Minana" poultry foods, medicines, etc.

It is not generally known that almost all of the work connected with the Association de Avicultores de la Provincia de Buenos Aires, and the trouble and care that the exhibition entails, is performed by honorary officials, who are poultry enthusiasts, and delight in the work. Their efforts have been successful in holding this annual show for fifteen years, each one an improvement on the last, and they fully deserve the thanks of breeders throughout Argentina.

THE JUDGES.

The judging at the La Plata Show is carried out in a better way than that at many other poultry shows. Instead of naming only two judges to award the prizes, in dozens of varieties of breeds, as has been customary here, until quite recently, the La Plata Association appointed quite a number of judges—still not sufficient, however—whose names we give below, consequently the awards were given in a painstaking and conscientious manner, without the rush and hurry that must inevitably occur, when one judge has to examine hundreds of birds. Instead of employing local judges for poultry, it is probable that the authorities of the Palermo exhibition will obtain the services of English judges in the future, as exhibitors have often requested that this should be done. The La Plata exhibition cannot bring judges from other countries, as the Association's funds will not stand the expense. The following gentleman acted as judges—For English, North American, and Asiatic breeds: Messrs. F. W. Burgin, A. Philip, and B. Ginocchio.

For Belgian, French, Italian, Spanish, and other breeds: Messrs. J. C.

Guerrero, L. Diaz Sceber, and A. E. Ringuelet.

For ducks, etc., Messrs. Frederico T. Parkes, Enrique Gullino, and Eduardo Starnichia.

For pigeons: Messrs. L. Bargman, Juan Guerrero, and S. Lanfranco.

COMPLETE LIST OF AWARDS.

Gold Medal, Prize of Honour, to the Misses Saavedra Zelaya. Gold Medal, Province of Buenos Aires prize, to Mr. Enrique Hardoy. "Champion," barred Plymouth rock cock, to Mr. Enrique Hardoy. Gold Medal, "Minister of Government," prize to Mr. Juan Richini. Gold Medal, "Sociedad Rural Argentina" prize, for best trio of Orpingtons, to Mr. Enrique Hardoy. "La Plata Municipality" prize, to "Mammouth" Poultry Farm. Propaganda prize to Messrs. Alfred and Oscar Plot. Special Prize, to Mr. H. F. Minana Merness, for poultry foods and medicines.

ORPINGTONS.

Black Variety.—1st prize to Mr. Enrique Hardoy for lots 7 and 8. 2nd prize to Mr. Juan Richini, for lots 21 and 22. Hon. mention to Mr. Enrique Hardoy, for lots 3 and 4.

This variety was very well represented, and the majority of exhibits were beautifully built birds, the hens especially attracting a good deal of attention. It speaks well for this fine breed that the passing years do not diminish its merited popularity.

Buff Variety.—2nd prize to Mr. Juan Richini, for lots 42 and 43. Hon. mention to the Misses Saavedra Zelaya for lots 33 and 34.

White Variety.—1st prize to the Misses Saavedra Zelaya, for lots 47 and 48. 2nd prize to Mr. Juan Richini, for lots 55 and 56. Hon. mention to Mr. Julio A. Bellos for lots 49 and 50.

Jubilee Variety.—2nd prize to the Misses Saavedra Zelaya, for lots 61 and 62.

TUBERCULOSIS

DEALING WITH A BADLY INFECTED HERD

Where the test shows more than half the number diseased, a somewhat different plan is required than the Bang system. His herd is so badly affected that the non reactors cannot be considered healthy. Many of them are sure to have been infected with the disease quite recently, so that the test fails to detect it. These will react at the next test, and in the meantime may develop the disease so rapidly as to infect others. This will repeat the difficulty occurring at the first test, and it would be a long and tedious process of weeding, before even a small but perfectly healthy herd could be established. For these reasons it is better to treat such a herd as if it were entirely diseased, and to begin with the new born calves to build up a healthy herd. The method from this point is exactly the same as the Bang system, except that as there are no healthy cows to act as foster mothers, the calves must be raised on pasteurized milk. At six months old, the calves are tested and reactors are transferred to the other herd. This plan was devised by a German veterinary surgeon named Ostertag, and is known as the Oster-tag system. It is very successful when carefully carried out. While getting rid of the disease by whatever system may be adopted, an animal should never be bought for the healthy herd unless known to be healthy. The tuberculin test should be applied, and if possible the animal should be selected from a herd that is known to be free from tuberculosis. New purchases should be isolated or kept apart from the healthy herd—and if possible from each other for at least three months, when they should be retested, to make sure they are healthy before putting them with other cattle.

SANITATION.

Dark, dirty, crowded byres are favourable to tuberculosis. Under these conditions the disease spreads rapidly, and is only kept out with difficulty. Clean, airy, well lighted byres on the other hand are unfavourable to the development of the disease. If brought into such a byre, it does not spread so rapidly, and is not so difficult to get rid of, as in the first case. A well built, sanitary byre, need not be made of expensive material, or of elaborate design, but should have plenty of light, air and drainage. Light is very important. Direct sunlight is a great destroyer of germ life. Tubercle bacilli soon die if exposed to sunlight. It is a disinfectant always ready to work without cost. Sunlight is also necessary to the health of animals. When deprived of it for any length of time, as prisoners in jail, they become pale and lose the appearance of health. Cattle that are constantly confined in dark byres become lowered in vitality, and are ready to catch any disease, with which they come in contact. For these reasons, the cow byres should have plenty of windows on two or more sides if possible, so that the sunlight can reach every part of the interior, some part of the day. Pure air is also very important. In badly ventilated byres, the air is breathed over and over again, until it becomes more or less poisonous. Animals kept in such conditions become gradually reduced in vitality. This change may not be noticeable to the observer, but becomes apparent if the animal is exposed to the disease. It readily contracts disease, and does not recover from it readily. Byres should therefore have plenty of air space for each animal. This requires the ceiling to be high, the stalls roomy, and the passages inside. In addition to this ample air space, some way of changing the air in a byre must be provided. This is done by suitable openings in the walls and roof, and comprises the system of ventilation.

VENTILATION.

Ventilation to be successful must provide for two things, first the removal of the foul air from the inside and second, the bringing in of fresh air from outside the building. No system is good that fails to accomplish these objects without causing unnecessary draughts. The usual way is to bring in fresh air through open windows, and in cold weather through ventilating shafts, which may be concealed in the walls or beneath the floor. The foul air is removed by open windows and by ventilating shafts from the ceiling to the roof, where they are usually protected by a hood. When both inlets and outlets are proportioned to the size of the building, there should be a constant circulation of air, and no sensation of closeness should be perceptible in the byre.

DRAINAGE.

Drainage removes the liquid refuse from the byres by suitable gutters and drains. It cannot do this unless the floor is watertight; and concrete flooring is therefore recommended. Urine leaking through cracks in the floor, until the soil beneath is saturated is a frequent source of foul odours and unhealthy byres.

CLEANLINESS.

Since the manure of tuberculous cattle often contains living tubercle germs, in vast numbers, the importance of keeping it well cleaned out of the byre is readily seen. Such manure is not only dangerous to other cattle in the byre, but may be the means of carrying the disease to children. Often cows are seen with their flanks encrusted with dry dung. Parts often break off when the cow is milked; and some of it is likely to fall into the milk pail. The larger lumps are strained out; but the smaller particles remain, and also the tubercle germs which are small enough to pass through any strainer. These stay in the milk and make it a fruitful cause of disease in the young. Byres should be cleaned out often, and the manure put where it cannot be picked over by hog or cattle. These animals are easily infected in that way. Cleanliness also includes keeping the walls and ceilings free from dirt, dust, and cobwebs. These are all good resting places for these germs. White-washing the interior of the byre, at least twice a year is a great aid to cleanliness, and also has a distinct effect in destroying disease germs. In many municipalities, dairy byres are required to be whitewashed at regular intervals; and it is a practice that should be universal.

BOY RUN OVER

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE RAILWAY.

A fatal accident occurred yesterday at the level crossing between Avellaneda and Calle Lavalle, in which a little boy, Cirilo Sanchez, 8 years of age, lost his life.

In attempting to jump from a goods train of 31 trucks, he fell, and one of the trucks ran over him. He was immediately taken to the Asistencia Publica, but died before medical assistance could be given him. How the boy came to be on the train is not known, but the police are making the necessary enquiries, and have cited the engine driver as the responsible person.

THE RUSSIAN RESISTANCE

No Cause for Either Optimism or Pessimism

GERMANY'S URGENT NEED FOR A SPEEDY RESULT

(CONTRIBUTED).

The fog of censorship cannot conceal the fact that as was mentioned in yesterday's "Herald," the battle on the Russian front is both terribly severe, and exceedingly important. At the same time, even granting that the Russian line has been pierced in three places and that Warsaw is threatened, it is neither wise nor correct to say that the downfall of this place spells the cessation of Russian hostilities. Far too little attention is paid to the fact that Warsaw has not for many years past been a fortified city, and that its defences now before it have been put up since August. Its chief importance lies in the fact of its being the capital of Poland, an importance that is more sentimental than real, and in its railway facilities. Practically speaking it is the end of the system of strategic railways whereby Germany has been able to move her armies about with such marvellous rapidity, and anyone who remembers the Russian position as traced in the early days of the war will recollect that the true line of the Russian defence lies along the borders of the provinces of Suwalki, Grodno, and Volhynia, on the Eastern banks of the River Bug.

THE DANGERS OF THE RUSSIAN RETREAT.

It appears to be forgotten that unless the German armies are able to enclose a huge Russian army in such a way as to compel it to capitulate, the farther they follow the Russians the more difficult is it for them to maintain their own lines of communication safeguarded. Germany is spreading abroad on every hand her intention to crush Russia utterly, and then, presumably having terrified her into peace, the millions on the Eastern front will be launched like an avalanche on the French, British and Belgian lines. Now if Germany is able to accomplish this fact she will have done what has never been done in history. Napoleon came the nearest to subjugating Russia. He reached what was then her heart, but Russia had retreated, and his apparent victory marked the end of his successes. The Japanese, it is now admitted, were relieved to a certain extent by the signing of the Treaty of Portsmouth. For the fight was in Manchuria, and Japan's resources would never have allowed her to follow up the beaten troops all the way over Asia into European Russia. The immensity of the empires of the Czar and the wonderful population which it contains may not weigh in the offensive owing to the lack of technical training, and the scientific arms with which modern warfare is waged. But on the defensive, with winter coming on, everything fights for Russia. The lands through which the German armies must pass are devoid of railways, almost devoid of roads. Great rivers, often in flood ere the winter frosts come to turn the swamps into treacherous traps for man and beast, heavy snow drifts, no supplies obtainable from the small villages that dot this No-Man's-Land, well may Germany make haste and try to force the fighting ere the winter comes.

GERMANY'S NEED FOR SPEED.

Nearly a year of war has obscured many of the original points at issue. Hence it is not out of place to remind people that Germany has always declared that her greatest menace was Russia. This has been forgotten in the various other issues that have arisen, but whilst Hymns of Hate are sung to England, Italy, and France, the German Government knows that the real and permanent menace to the Central Empires comes from Muscovy. The Russian Empire has been largely under German influence ever since the days of Peter the Great and Catherine; nor has that influence been either gentle or beneficial. Germany must know that, win or lose, that influence will never be regained, and that with the Russian people this war is a truly national war. The German bailiffs and tax gatherers may have acted in the name of the Russian nobles, in whose hands many titles were but empty shows covering mortgaged properties administered for the benefit of German capital, but that the peasant failed to understand. All accounts of Russia agree in describing the intensity of the dislike shown by Russians as a class to German activity and mercenary zeal. The oriental trait in the Slav blood has made him too ready to hand over his affairs to a more energetic race, but business and affection have not gone hand in hand. Hence Germany is feverishly anxious to give Russia such a lesson as shall re-establish her old ascendancy. Completely misreading the signs of the times, she evidently imagines that "frightfulness" will paralyse Russia, hypnotise the Balkans, leave her free to help Turkey, and then roll flat all opposition in the West. From the point of view of the German General Staff it is a sound scheme. Its drawback lies in its vastness, and above all in the shortness of the time available for its execution. Three more months will bring the short days, the fogs, the cold nights, the early snow. There is a great need for haste. If the Russians would but fall into the trap that is ready for them! But they retreat, and retreat, and retreat, yet never can be trusted to go on retreating, since directly the pressure on their front diminishes on they come to the attack, gaining here and there isolated successes that cost the enemy dear.

A STRUGGLE OF ENDURANCE.

If people who talk so glibly of Russia being crushed would but look at the map and measure the distances, it would assuredly cause them to alter their tone. With a population of 149,000,000 spread over an empire that is all in one piece, and that occupies one-sixth of the land surface of the globe, Russia has considerable reserves to draw upon even if she confines herself to the defensive. The Russian people are evidently bearing the terrible pressure of Germany's biggest armies with an imperturbable philosophy. Again and again Germany has tried to make bad blood between the Allies by suggesting that Russia was not united that she would be ready to make a separate peace. These machinations have met with no success, and the least that the English people can do is to have faith in their desire as well as their ability to go on fighting, even in retreat, right to the end. There has been a recrudescence of the "all is lost" talk that on more than one occasion, and notably during the retreat from the Bukovina, has disgraced certain journals, but as the "Times" military correspondent in a recent article remarked: "We must not allow ourselves to be impressed by Russian retreats, or by failures to break through the enemy's lines, whether in Flanders or in the Gallipoli Peninsula, or elsewhere. What we are out to do is to kill Germans, and so long as German casualties continue to number 10,000 a day, we are doing our work and are rendering inevitable our ultimate victory. What we have to avoid are adventures, and particularly the offering to Germany of great strategic successes like Ulm or Sedan. A wearing war of trenches on parallel fronts is deliberately tiresome and the reverse of thrilling. But it must kill Germany in the end if it is continued, so we must ban optimism and pessimism alike and steadily pursue the course which leads to the destruction of the enemy."

And as the "Westminster Gazette" remarked in commenting on the passage: "Those who follow its reasoning will be relieved from a great many scares and panics arising out of a false measurement of operations from day to day."

GREAT SOUTHERN FLOODS

Viedma in Danger

THE POPULATION IN FLIGHT

No sooner had news come to hand from the South of the improvement of the weather conditions and the subsidence of the waters, which have done so much damage by flooding a vast amount of land, no sooner had the outlook become brighter and the population begun to hope for better days, than further news received yesterday completely upsets all hopes and entirely reverses the order of things.

Once more comes the information of the overflow of rivers in the Rio Negro districts, once again stories of the flight of the inhabitants from the capital and reports of the fear that an inundation like that of 1899, which completely destroyed the city of Viedma is threatened.

The Government have done nothing whatever towards endeavouring to construct defensive works, drainage and the like and the population are still completely at the mercy of the rivers.

Telegrams from Viedma report the sudden and alarming rise of the Rio Negro. The authorities, by referring to the records of the disastrous floods of 1899, fear a parallel in the nature and in the rapidity of the rise of the waters and have warned the people, who are fleeing as best they can to the neighbouring hills of Patagones, where emergency dwellings are constructed and reserved for their especial benefit.

The reports continue to state that the exodus of the populace from Viedma is akin to that of the flight of Belgian civilians from their towns on learning of the approach of the German army. Every kind and class of vehicle, of method of locomotion is being employed to enable the people to escape the threatened danger and the sight is reported to be a curious one. The older inhabitants are intensely bitter against the Government and its inaction, stating that the Government have known the dangers ever since the disaster of 1899 and yet during these 16 years have taken no steps to ensure the public safety. They state it will be the ruin of Viedma and if perchance, this present threatened flood damages the town, that the Government will find, no one will return to re-populate the district.

Later telegrams state that the flood is rising rapidly and is threatening the town from four sides and news may be expected at any moment reporting the flooding of the streets and houses. No faith, whatever, is put in the capacity of the recently constructed and half finished defensive works to withstand or direct the flood.

A government engineer, Sr. Schenoni, has requested the assistance of the police, of the prison guards and of every available man the government will grant him in this district to assist in working to avert disaster. The leading persons in and around Viedma are raising public subscriptions for defence and are bringing what pressure they can, to bear on the National Government.

The Minister of Marine has promised to send three or four vessels to the aid of the inhabitants, which will be capable of accommodating some 3000 persons in the case of need.

From Cipoletti, in the Neuquen district, the news is more favourable. The floods are subsiding and the danger is considered at an end.

FLOODS IN CHINA

100,000 DEATHS REPORTED.

Washington, July 20.

A cable message from Pekin received by the Department of State reports that from 80,000 to 100,000 persons lost their lives in the recent floods in the vicinity of Canton.

FIGHT OVER THE THAMES

Exciting Combat in Mid Air

GERMAN AEROPLANES DESTROYED

London, July 20.

An aerial combat was fought early this morning over the mouth of the Thames between twelve British and three German aeroplanes.

The latter were observed approaching, evidently with the intention of dropping bombs on some of the coast towns. The alarm being given, the British flotilla started in pursuit and engaged the enemy in full view of a large crowd of spectators.

The Germans tried to escape, but their retreat was intercepted and a heavy fire opened upon them from the British machine guns. Before long one of the German machines was struck, as there was an explosion and the aeroplane fell headlong to the ground.

Shortly after another was compelled to descend in a vol plané to the ground, landing with such force that it was smashed. The third was chased for a long time until it also was brought down badly damaged.

ROSARIO RAILWAY FATALITY

ENTIRE FAMILY UNDER THE BUFFERS OF ENGINE.

The tragedy at Rosario, where a freight train ran down a coach and killed or injured all its occupants, has occasioned profound feeling in the locality. It appears that Señor Parody had gone to the port to wait the return of his wife, Dona Pilar de Parody, and his sons, Leopold and Joseph, and Sta. Pilar, his daughter, who had been visiting his son Albert at Parana. On the arrival of the s.s. Lambare they took a coach and were crossing the lines of the port railways, when a train of corn wagons bore down on them. It is alleged that the engine did not whistle, but as soon as the shock occurred, the driver put the brakes on. The rails were slippery, however, and the train ran some distance before stopping. The traces were broken and the horses escaped, as did the coach, but the vehicle was broken to pieces. The sons, Leopold and Joseph, aged 14 and 11, sustained dreadful and mortal injuries, and died almost at once. Senorita Parody is also badly hurt, but is expected to recover, and the unfortunate parents, who are the subject of much sympathy, while in great grief, have escaped with severe bruises and cuts. The Federal Judge has taken the case up, and is drawing up a summary. It is pointed out that at the point, which is constantly dangerous, there are neither barriers nor watchmen. The driver and fireman of the engine have been detained.

PRESIDENT VISITS THE ARSENAL

A CAREFUL INSPECTION OF ALL DEPARTMENTS.

Yesterday His Excellency, Dr. de la Plaza, with the Minister of War paid a visit to the Arsenal. The President went through the workshops making a minute inspection and observing the working of the machines and the organisation of the work. Engineer Lieut.-Colonel Mosconi, Sub-Director General, explained very fully the various processes of making war material and made some experimental tests. Dr. de la Plaza showed special interest in the foundry and in the arms factory. He warmly congratulated Colonel Mosconi on the efficiency of the staff and the condition of the Arsenal which, he was of opinion, was excellent basing his judgment on the numerous inspections he has made in European arsenals.

The Rural Society Show.

The fourth show of the Rural Society is to be held at the yards at Villa Borden from October 24 to October 27 next. The zone covered by the products exhibited at the show is 18,000 square leagues. The champion prize amongst the cattle is given for the best Durham, Hereford or Polled Angus, and must be won when there are three or more competitors in the different classes. The reserve champion is given to the best bull in the three classes above mentioned. A champion prize is also given to the best stallion amongst the different classes shown, and the reserve champion to the second best stallion. Another champion prize is also given for the best ram shown. A gold medal is given for the champion boar pig of any breed.

The Post Office Savings Bank.

The branch of this institution in this district is showing excellent results. Up to this week over 300 books have been applied for and issued and the amount deposited is over 7,000 dollars. In the western district of the town it is stated that the greater part of the depositors are either English or employees of the Pacific Railway.

Lions at Large.

A good deal of excitement was caused on Friday morning in the grounds of the Politeama Cassano, when three lions got loose. They were being transferred from one cage to another in order that the smaller cages might be cleaned out. The man in charge of the work very carelessly left the door of the larger cage open and the lions walked out. Everybody immediately began to look for safety. One peon who was skinning a horse which he had just killed in order to feed the animals, hearing something behind him and thinking it was one of his companions asked what he wanted. On looking around and seeing a lion about two yards from him he threw the horse's skin over its head and cleared for safety. The lion returned to its cage with the skin in its mouth. Another of them attacked the horses and received a nasty kick in the neck from one of them, but succeeded in killing a criollo mare. The lion then tried to do the same to another of the performing horses but was driven off by one of the peones, after which it saw the horseflesh hanging up and helped itself to that. The third lion was intending to attack two of the peones near, but luckily one of the llamas happened to come past just then and it was killed in an instant. Meanwhile the peones found safety. By means of long pointed irons and revolver shots the lions were at length got back into their cages without doing any further damage.

Visit of Engineering Students.

The students of the Engineering University of La Plata have been making a tour of the province since the beginning of the month, and on their return from Patagones spent two days here. First they paid a visit to Port Militar where they were very much interested in the pumps of the new dry dock. These pumps have a force of 5,000 H.P. and are able to empty the dock, which contains 120,000 cubic metres of water, in one hour and forty minutes. A visit was afterwards paid to the mole at Arroyo Parejas—where the work is for the present entirely stopped on account of the war—and to the wharf of the Rosario to Port Belgrano railway. On the following day they were taken over the moles of Port Galvan and those at Ingeniero White, and returned to Buenos Aires by the evening train.

Floods in the Neuquen District.

Owing to the heat and the rain, the ice and snow of the Cordilleras has melted a great deal and caused the rivers Limay and Neuquen to overflow again. Special trains have been put on in case the residents are flooded out. Several families have already left for Neuquen, while others have put sheets of zinc and other barricades around their houses to keep off the waters. The stream at the Paso de Indios has already risen in a very alarming manner.

Port Militar.

The Minister of Marine has given authorisation for several repairs to be made to the battleships San Martin, Pueyrredon and Garibaldi, besides which it is proposed to make proper deposits for storing the mines and torpedoes of these ships. There will thus shortly be work again for the large number of men who had to be discharged during the last few months.

The Regional Defence Agraria.

The committee in charge of the Regional Defence have called a general meeting for next Tuesday in the Bolsa de Comercio, with the object of forming several new regulations for the benefit of the farmers and colonists. Amongst these are the creation of a savings bank, so that some assistance may be forthcoming in the event of the total loss of the harvest; and also to study the question of letting and sub-letting of the land, and of the sale or renting of the same, as well as to discuss the formation of an Agricultural Co-operative Bank for the general assistance of the landowners, farmers and stockbreeders.

Items in Brief.

Cattle robberies are of very constant occurrence in the district of Saavedra, and recently some 61 animals disappeared from the "potrero" in which they were kept. Three men who are accused of being concerned in this robbery have been arrested by the local police and are now being detained in the local prison.

At the auction sales held in Villa Borden on Thursday last, fat bullocks were sold at from $136 to 150 each, criollo bullocks for fattening $81, fat steers $107 to 138, steers for fattening $87 to 98, criollo steers for $61 to 69, criollo cows $70 to 84, calves $48 to 50-50. The total amount of the sales was $28,468.

The collection for the Italian Red Cross funds has now reached the total of $1,232,000.

Several complaints are being made from the various parts of the southern district against the lack of doctors to attend to those who are ill or hurt. This gives a big opening to the "curanderos" and other quacks, whose knowledge is only limited. There are scarcely any doctors in the Rio Negro district and none in the towns of Luis Beltran, Lamarque, Darwin, Choele Choele, and numerous other places.

On Saturday last the inhabitants were surprised to find the floods had reached the town of Allen, and the water was shortly afterwards forty centimetres deep. A large number of people left their houses and took refuge in the waggons on the line. Several "chacras" have been inundated, and the train that should have left there at 8 p.m. did not do so until 5 p.m. the following day. That from Bahia Blanca was suspended. According to the last reports, the water is beginning to go down again.

In accordance with the usual customs, the railway are offering reductions on the carriage of animals taken to and from the Rural Show here.

Tennis Club.

The annual general meeting was held on the night of July 10 in the London and River Plate Bank. About thirty members were present. Mr. S. W. Roberts took the chair, and the Treasurer's and Secretary's reports were passed. The reports showed the Club to be in a flourishing condition. There was a credit balance of nearly $500, and the membership at present total some 65, of whom the vast majority are players. The following Committee was elected for the ensuing year; President, Mr. S. W. Roberts; Vice, Mr. R. Mac Kenzie; Secretary, Mr. G. Roberts; Treasurer, Mr. Bell; and Messrs. McCloud, Sketch, Emley and Neville. A vote of thanks having been voted to the Chairman, and also to Mr. McCorquodale, who resigned from the Secretaryship after five years' work, and Mr. Larby ex-Treasurer, who also resigned, the meeting was closed.

Concert and Dance Committee.

Due to the success of the first dance held on Empire Day, a meeting was held in the Imperial Club on the evening of July 12, to discuss the formation of a Committee to arrange concerts and dances once every month or so. A large number of ladies and gentlemen attended. It was decided to form such a Committee and after voting the following were elected: President, Mr. S. Morley; Secretary, Mr. R. A. Colls; Treasurer, Mr. P. Kingsbury; and Messrs. Williams, Todd, A. G. Walton and Neville. If and when there are profits the Committee were empowered to dispose of them as they should decide. The expenses will always be heavier than they would be if the Railway Club were installed in Concordia, but Mr. Kingsbury expressed the opinion that the N.E.A. Railway Club from Monte Caseros would not be open for some months yet. As it is the Committee will have to hire a hall each time they give a dance. Nevertheless the support of dancers, it is hoped, will not be wanting to cover expenses.

The 14th of July.

In celebration of the taking of the Bastille, the French Society hired the Odeon Theatre where the Spanish Operetta Company of Señor Ortiz de Zarate, has been performing for some weeks. The Company produced the operetta "The Holy War" and a full house witnessed good acting and singing. Sra. de Galvan and Sres. Ortiz and Sola on occasions quite carrying the house with them. For the great festival the different representatives of the Allied nations were asked for support as the proceeds will be forwarded to the different Red Cross Societies of the Allies. The Italians were most prominent, but the British also made a strong show, very few being absent. The National Anthems of Argentina, France, Belgium, Russia, England, and Italy were played, and were well rendered by the orchestra conducted by Sr. Lozzi, on each occasion the whole house standing and applauding. It was a most enjoyable function and only one incident was anything but pleasant. After the Argentine National Anthem had been played and as the band was about to commence the Marseillaise, a man,

THE DEATH PENALTY

A DESERVED SENTENCE

Some readers may remember the atrocious murder of an unfortunate girl aged 17, Maria Inés Bilbao, at 375 Colonia last February. The wretched victim was pursued from the house where she lived with her assassin, Juan Benedicto, aged 27, and despatched with a rain of stabs in the presence of the horrified inhabitants of Colonia 375. In his blind and insensate fury, the murderer drove his dagger seventeen times into the writhing body and then fled, but was happily captured. Dr. Racedo, the Criminal Judge, very properly considers this human beast an excellent subject for capital sentence. It is to be feared, however, that it will be commuted owing to the maudlin and overstrained sentiment which protects the assassin but leaves the victims to the ferocity of such butchers to whom imprisonment is little deterrent. The prisoner has passed seven of his last few years in gaol for various bloody deeds, one of which was another savage attack on a child of 17 who refused to submit to his abominable wishes. He has consistently attacked and wounded those who, from age or sex, were least able to defend themselves, and his record is infamously bad. The Judge considers that the crime was premeditated, and that when Benedicto, an hour previously, walked through the streets with his victim, he had already doomed her to destruction and with cynical brutality was considering how he might easily destroy her and escape Justice afterwards. There are no extenuating circumstances, and the death penalty is demanded.

ARMY MANOEUVRES

PREPARATION FOR SEPTEMBER.

For some time past the Ministry of War in this Republic has been making arrangements for the army manoeuvres, which are to be held during the month of September. The Government arsenal and the other army departments have been busy turning out a quantity of material necessary for this purpose. Already a considerable amount of money has been spent which has brought some criticism, because it is considered that this expenditure is out of all proportion to the needs of the case, especially when the general financial situation is taken into account. Expenses are said to have lately been four times as large as usual, and the total amount is assuming large proportions, and this without taking into consideration the late purchase of 1400 horses and 600 mules which the Army department have acquired at the cost of $267,000.

The horses have been purchased for $150 a head, and $95 has been paid for mules.

who ought to have known better, and who is Chief of the Coast Guards here, protested in a loud voice that the French flag, held by Sr. Ortiz, in the middle of the stage with two Argentine flags, one to the right and the other to the left of him, be put on one side, and that one of the Argentine flags be placed in the centre. The surprise created was most notable. Sr. Ortiz did as requested, and thus avoided what might have turned out quite an "affair." The flags were quite rightly placed. However in support of the protester about two people in "the gods" clapped their hands, and one officer of the Army bowed his acknowledgments to the man who so grossly insulted the French Society. Later, however, he seemed to have some difficulty in proving his case to a large number of his compatriots in the hall of the theatre, who took exception to his protest. On the whole the French Society are to be congratulated on the success of their undertaking.

Public Opinion as expressed in the Argentine Press.

THE NEW PORT

(La Nación.—July 15).

The Commission appointed by the Executive Power on September 9, 1913, to study the plans of the Port of Buenos Aires with a view to correct the deficiencies then existent, has advised the authorisation of an expenditure of $195,414, gold, over and above the original estimate for the construction of some of the new large deposits. This expenditure, says La Nación has been found to be unavoidable owing to the necessity of giving a greater depth to the foundations of the buildings in question. $200,000 gold is not a fabulous sum taking into consideration the magnitude of the works, but, points out La Nación, if the commission continues in the future as it has done in the past, this extra expenditure will not be the last. It will be remembered that shortly after its appointment the technical committee commenced to find deficiencies, and one of the first measures it recommended was the modification of the training wall necessitating the authorisation of an additional outlay over the original estimate of $1,052,353.58, gold, notwithstanding that the original amount which had been taken as a base, was $653,356.86, gold. It will also be remembered that the calculations of the Direction of hydraulic works were also at fault, involving another increase in expenditure of some $72,000, gold. It will not be surprising, says La Nación, in view of what has gone before, if the future should discover other costly errors. It is pertinent to ask who are the responsible parties, and to fix that responsibility, before confiding the solution of such important difficulties to the very functionaries who have been their cause, according to the evidence at hand.

THE PAPER INDUSTRY

(La Nación.—July 16).

Congress has been asked to study the desirability of granting a concession whose projects are of vast importance to the country, says La Nación, a concession which has in view the utilization of the large forests which abound in the valleys of the Andes, for the manufacture of paper. For many years the paper making industry has been carried out in Argentina, but up to the present it has consisted in a simple remanipulation of the prime materials which have been imported from Europe. Now, however, a specialist has discovered that the "araucaria imbricata" a tree which exists in large quantities in this country, when subjected to the usual scientific treatment, gives a pulp equal to that hitherto obtained from the trees of Norway and Sweden. The granting of such a concession as that under the consideration of the Government, would, says La Nación, be of inestimable value to the commercial progress of the country. Not only would Argentina have the prime materials at hand thus avoiding the necessity of importation, but the exploitation of the outlying forests and the establishment of factories would attract a considerable part of the population, tending to form future centres of activity in those regions. In addition the industry would be unhampered by the overincreasing price of European wood, and by the effects of strikes and other unfavourable conditions obtaining at present as a result of the abnormal times. Taking everything into consideration "La Nación" sees no possible reason why the granting of such a concession should be opposed in any way.

THE COMING TARIFF WAR

(La Prensa.—July 15).

The latest cables from Paris refer, says La Prensa, to the probability that the war of armaments will be followed by a tariff war, based on a powerful "entente" between England, France, Belgium, Russia, Italy and Japan, wherewith these countries may defend their home markets against enemy imports, whilst at the same time obtaining decided advantages in the neutral lands. Three different tariffs are outlined by M. Thery in the columns of Le Matin; one of close alliance, reducing duties to a minimum as between the countries concerned, and imposing unscalable barriers for enemy merchandise; another will be prohibitive for German, Austrian and neutral goods in cases where neutral countries have made common cause, economically speaking, with the enemy; finally there is to be a third, or friendly, tariff applicable to neutrals who favour the Allies in matters of trade. If this arrangement is carried into practice, says La Prensa, and, given the feelings of bitterness that exist it is more than probable, neutrality, permissible in an armed strife, will be quite out of the question in matters of trade. Indeed it is plain that such is the desired end of the scheme.

The matter is of the first importance, and although one cannot say that the tariff war will take the exact lines traced by M. Thery, it is very certain that the spirit of the battlefield will be carried into commercial life, and the problem demands Argentina's attention, even though it is true that she occupies a powerful position owing to her export of food-stuffs. The future tariff war will fall principally on the manufacturing interests, but at the same time, forewarned is forearmed, and La Prensa is of opinion that the time has come for a thorough revision of the local customs scale. Europe talks of a triple tariff scale, but for a long time past there has been a double tariff used to differentiate between friends and economic rivals. The new suggestion merely spells war to the knife, and Argentina, with her single tariff, ought to be ready for whatever may arise, by amplifying it in order that it may serve as a weapon of offence as well as of defence if needs be. Quite possibly, concludes La Prensa, given the nature of Argentine exports, this arm will not be required, but no harm can happen from having it in reserve.

THE CONGRESS HALL INVESTIGATION

(La Prensa.—July 16).

The latest check that has occurred in the investigation of the Congress Hall scandals corroborates the popular idea that delay is characteristic of all official administration. A difference of opinion that arose between the Minister of Public Works, and the chief of the Architectural Department over an administrative matter has led to the resignation of the latter functionary. Once accepted, and a substitute found, one would have thought, says La Prensa, that the work would go ahead. Unfortunately this is not the case, since the technical committee engaged on measuring the work now applies for funds to the Minister. The late head of the Architectural Department had so arranged the work that it was done by the permanent staff; under the new regime this idea was altered, and now $30,000 are asked for wherewith to carry on the job till December, and a further $30,000 is to be included in next year's Budget.

It is a pity that more money must

THE MEAT TRUST

(La Nación.—July 17).

Under the above suggestive heading, "La Nación" again brings up the possibility of there being private agreements between the freezing establishments, which do away with the possibility of open competition; and although up to the present all these concerns have apparently been completely independent of each other there are, says "La Nación," sundry incidents that are at least suggestive, and mentions that on the outbreak of war the British Government ordered 15,000 tons per month, which was split up among the various concerns in the proportion of 2,100 tons each. Last March this order was increased to 25,000 tons; logically, says "La Nación," the proportions of each freezing works ought to have increased, but as a matter of fact the amount taken from the Samsinena works showed a diminution, presumably because the influence of the trust made itself felt, the Samsinena being the only Argentine concern in the country, and at marked variance with its competitors. It must be borne in mind, too, continues "La Nación," that the tonnage for carrying chilled or frozen meat is supplied by Great Britain; hence if that Government refuses to operate with any particular concern, that concern cannot ship its produce.

Then there is the case of the claim made on the British Government through the United States by the representatives of Messrs. Armour and Co., Swift and Co., Morris and Co., and Sulzberger and Co. Certain cargoes of theirs had been held up by British cruisers on the ground that they were destined for Germany, and according to a cable despatch published by the "Morning Post," the interested parties drew attention to the fact that they not only controlled the United States trade, but also that of South America, and that if England did not allow shipments to neutral countries they would boycott shipments direct to her ports. This information "La Nación" declares to be corroborated by their own agents in Washington, and the interest of the case lies in the fact that there is evidently a well organised trust capable of preventing the shipment of Argentine products to England. Further evidence is also to hand in the shape of the difficulties that the Samsinena Company has met with in the interior of the United States, owing to their inability to get railway facilities for serving their trade, a matter that is now before the law courts. "La Nación" declares the situation, which leaves Argentine industries at the mercy of foreign enterprises, is regrettable, points out that the various societies formed for the protection of the breeders' interests ought to take some initiative, and concludes by admitting that unfortunately lack of initiative is the most distinguishing feature of these concerns.

be spent, but the delay is still more regrettable, and although the matter will have to be referred to the President of the Republic, it is to be hoped that he will give his decision promptly. The committee of the Chamber of Deputies discovered various irregular practices that gave rise to suspicion, and the investigation is designed to restore the dignity of the administration by setting the matter at rest once and for all. Delay goes counter to the root idea of the investigation, which is to clear the honour of the administration, either by proving the exactitude of the accusations and punishing the culprits, or by establishing the correct procedure of all and sundry. Hence the claim for funds advanced by the technical committee offers the government a good opportunity for recalling to the investigators the original intentions under which they were appointed.

DREDGING THE DOCKS

(La Prensa.—July 17).

On days when the river is low, says "La Prensa," one notices the lack of foresight on the part of those who built the port of Buenos Aires and made the depth of the sluices between dock and dock a bare 22 feet. At the same time, justice compels one to add that when the work was undertaken no-one could have foreseen the enormous increase in the movement of the port, now far too small for the work it is called upon to perform. Out in the river, dredging has regularly been carried on, rendering the port available for modern shipping, but when the outside waters are low, these selfsame boats cannot move from dock to dock with full cargoes aboard. True when the new port works are finished these difficulties will not occur, there being no sluices in the new work to determine, through their cement foundations, the workable depth of the water in the docks.

Nevertheless, the authorities will do well to take note that even in the docks themselves the depths are less than they should be, especially in Dock 1, where the overflow of the sand cargoes and the spilling of cereals tends to fill up the dock. There is a dredger working just now in Dock 2, and in due course it will, says "La Prensa," be transferred to dock 1. Unfortunately the economies effected in the Ministry of Public Works touch even this important service. Among other items that have been docked may be mentioned the coal allowance, reduced from 50,000 tons per annum to 20,000. Yet it ought to be borne in mind, concludes "La Prensa," that inasmuch as the movement of the port is now much less than is generally the case, due to the European war, it is advisable to set to work and clear out the docks and sluices thoroughly, thus giving them at least the full maximum depth of 22 feet.

THE MEAT TRUST

(La Nación.—July 19).

The European war, says La Nación has placed Argentina in a most advantageous condition for receiving a vigorous impulse in favour of her principal industries. Notwithstanding these favourable circumstances it is notorious that the advantages, which should have accrued from such a hopeful situation have up to now been practically negligible. The cattle industry, first in importance, has perhaps been benefitted least of all. Ever since the scarcity of meat began to be worldwide, the high prices ruling in the foreign markets have not had the corresponding beneficial effect here. Exportation, instead of increasing, has decreased, and that without any indication that stock in the country has augmented. Does this state of affairs mean, asks La Nación that the favourable situation of the country as a producer of a worldwide necessity referred to above, does not in reality exist? It answers the question by stating that the situation does exist, that everything is favourable to the commerce of the country, but points out that not the least amongst the factors tending to neutralise the advantages hoped for, is the meat trust. It further recommends the adoption of legislative measures to nullify the prejudicial effects of combinations of capitalists, effects pernicious to the interests of the national production.

The meat production of the country is disposed of almost at the whim of the British Government, owing to the fact that on that country depends the maritime transport. If, says La Nación it is not possible owing to the present state of affairs to avoid such impositions, the Government should see that the industry is not further hampered by reprehensible actions here. If the projects already existing in Congress do not present a solution to the question they should be reformed or new laws promulgated, as the question is one of the utmost urgency.

THE PAPER INDUSTRY

(La Prensa.—July 20).

Due to the law passed at the close of the last legislative period reducing the customs dues on printing paper, under which it is proposed to establish the industry of making paper pulp in the republic, and, as "La Prensa" remarks, the idea deserves to be taken in account since its adoption would mean an addition to the list of national industries. At the present moment the republic has no raw material for paper-making; what is done here is to work up material brought from the United States, Sweden, Norway, and other countries. If paper were made here, ab initio, it would exercise a considerable influence on various trades and even affect the national culture. Statistics show that in nine months 38,000 tons of paper and cardboard, and 19,000 tons of wood pulp were imported, figures that of themselves show the economic significance of the new industry.

If paper was made locally suitable for printing purposes very large sums that now leave the country would be retained, and the printeries would be twice as active as they are to-day, and would also be better mounted. The custom of sending books to Europe for impression would cease, and the number of books, reviews, and so forth, would be largely increased. These, broadly sketched, are the results that would accrue from the granting of a concession for the exploitation of 100,000 hectares of woodland in Neuquen where the "araucaria imbricata" grows, the same to be for a period of fifty years as specified in the project. As there is no manner of doubt about the utility of such exploitation, Congress will do well to look into the scheme, ascertaining whether its adoption will in any way affect public rights, technical data being obtained from the Minister of Agriculture. Once this is ascertained it ought to be very easy to find out whether it is advisable or not to go on with the scheme.

SECOND-HAND IMMIGRATION

(La Nación.—July 20).

A few days ago, says "La Nación," there were landed at Fed. Lacroze station some two hundred immigrants who had come overland from Brazil, via Posadas. Slavs for the most part, in the depths of misery, men, women, and children, fever stricken, surrounded by a mass of valueless rags and similar baggage, they presented a pitiable spectacle. None of them spoke Spanish, and only a few could mumble a little Portuguese. The stationmaster, absolutely non-plussed, rang up the various consulates, and eventually the whole assemblage was transferred to the Immigrant Hotel, where they remain, a very complex problem. Nor is this the first group of similar nationality that has thus reached this country from the same regions, and they must know the sad fate that awaits them when once they are forced to leave the temporary shelter where they dwell.

Broken and dispirited, burdened with large families, knowing nothing of local language and customs, they will be forced to join the ranks of the beggars or of the unemployed. This class of immigrant is, says "La Nación," useless to the country, and serves to show up yet once more the unserviceable nature of the present Immigration Laws. The mere presence of such a group shows that the law is ineffective, since whilst the conditions of immigrants who arrive by sea are to a certain extent provided for, absolutely no precautions have been taken against such invasions as those that are now occurring by land. Some definite action must be taken, and that without delay, either by following the clauses of the United States law, which also covers immigration from Mexico, or by insisting on the visé of Argentine consuls for all comers. In any case action is desirable, since such immigration is a charge on public charity and does nothing to improve the national stock.

CATTLE CENSUS IN BUENOS AIRES PROVINCE

(La Prensa.—July 19).

It is stated that the Provincial Government is arranging for a cattle census to be taken which shall serve as a permanent base for the maintenance of a stock record, and, as "La Prensa" says, the idea is plausible, both from an administrative and from a general point of view. The ability to ascertain at any given moment the exact extent of the wealth of the province in cattle will aid the Government in dealing with the problem of its development and control, for the influence of a cattle census is far-reaching in respect to its general effect on the trade of the province and the problem of the public food supply. It has been the misfortune of the province to see cattle stocks that have been improved by over twenty years careful breeding, diminished by drought, by the transfer of herds to other parts of the Republic, and also by the turning of pasturage into tillage. From one cause and another the value of the cattle stocks in the Province of Buenos Aires has diminished considerably of recent years.

As a matter of fact the actual state of the industry could be found from the returns of the national census taken a year ago and not published in their totality for reasons of a bureaucratic nature that were not founded on any idea of sound administration, though "La Prensa" remarks that the details then collected might well be used to serve as a starting point for the new scheme. It ought to be borne in mind that a note of the class of cattle kept and the extent of ground occupied must be the foundation of any scheme that is to be of permanent value, whilst the alteration in capital values, and the average yield must also be taken into account, whilst to ensure full details being given the census must be legally obligatory. Moreover the existence of a permanent register will from the outset have an influence on prices since as a matter of fact at the present time, given the universal demand for cattle, the country does not know what its capital really is largely owing to the lack of charity with which the national census was carried out. Hence for these and for several other reasons "La Prensa" is of opinion that the taking of a provincial census deserves the support of the Government and the breeders alike.

TAXES ON REAL ESTATE

(La Prensa.—July 21).

As was recently announced the Property Owners' League has laid a Memorial before Congress protesting against the heavy taxes that weigh on property in this city, and they propose that the said taxes be reduced to a uniform rate. "La Prensa" is of opinion that this petition embodies the wishes of most owners, for as has often been said the actual crisis is a crisis of property, the value of which has fallen through several reasons, the while the taxes remain at a level fixed when rents were at their highest point. There is moreover another item that has not been taken into account as it should have been, namely the systematic over valuation of rents by the Municipality and the water department alike. Both these departments have done this in order to increase their revenues, and, as "La Prensa" remarks, such procedure is incorrect. Though it must be very firm, having regard to the frequency with which the tax payer tries to get round his liabilities, the collecting authority must at the same time be just.

Cases have been met with where the valuation has been more than forty per cent of the rent actually obtained, houses for instance that never brought more than $300 being rated at $450, and kept at this rating despite the fact that they now only rent for $200. This is well known to the authorities, who pass over the glaring discrepancy since it favours their own interests to do so. The same reasoning does not apply to the direct tax which has always been just and moderate, but in the case of the Obras de Salubridad and the Municipality the manner in which the complacency of the property owner is abused has reached such a pitch that Congress would do well to look into the matter, which implies a slur on the Federal Capital.

MARKET STUFF

(La Nación.—July 21).

The supply of fruit and vegetables in the markets of Buenos Aires is a theme that has for long occupied the attention of successive municipal governments, says "La Nación." Administrative measures have however always been upset by the various trusts that have managed to defeat plans destined to benefit alike the producer and the consumer. Co-operation has been tried, but with little success owing to the lack of a solid base, commercially considered with which to secure its existence and victory over monopolists who, knowing its limited resources, have not hesitated to reduce prices to a level that drove the co-operators out of the market, whilst at the same time they threatened the seller with reprisals, to be put into force when once the co-operative society was dissolved and they themselves were again in possession of the markets.

With these antecedents before him the Intendente has once more tackled the problem, and hopes to surmount it by organising consignments direct to the superintendant of markets, thereby enabling this functionary to fill the place of the co-operative distributing societies. Fruit and vegetable producers will thus have a consignee who will be able to sell their goods at prices fixed by the public demand, without having to submit to the extortions of the monopolists; hence it is to be hoped that both they, and the consumer will benefit by the new move. At the same time, as "La Nación" sagely observes, a sound commercial organisation will have to be built up at the expense of the producer if this initiative is to prosper. The mere provision of places where the goods can be sold through the efforts of the ordinary markets staff will not be sufficient, and the municipal scheme must only be regarded as a preliminary measure. To import fruit and vegetables from Europe in a country such as this, where much land still lies fallow, even in the close neighbourhood of the capital, is an absurdity, but until the monopolist system is done away with and a true demand created, nothing better can be looked for.

QUILMES AID FOR THE BELGIANS

The Committee of the recent Cinematograph Entertainment at Quilmes desire to announce that the proceeds, amounting to $271.20 were handed to His Majesty's Consul-General, who kindly consented to forward the same to the Belgian Consul-General in London. The following acknowledgment has been received:

Consulat General de Belgique,
Londres, 16th June, 1915.
H. G. Mackie, Esq.
British Consulate-General,
Buenos Aires.

Sir.—I have much pleasure in acknowledging your letter dated 20th May, 1915, enclosing a cheque for the sum of £22 13s. 6d., a contribution towards the Belgian Relief Fund raised by Miss Ruth Torre and other young ladies of Quilmes. Kindly convey to these ladies my grateful thanks.

I am, dear Sir,

Yours faithfully,

Querulous Huns.

The complaints by German prisoners in Corsica that the women address opprobrious expressions to them are probably quite well founded. Can the Huns, however, expect anything else? The women of Corsica know that among these may be some of the brutes who have made the name of German soldier synonymous with ferocious barbarity, unbridled license, and actions at which Satan might feel ashamed. One cannot therefore feel compassion for the "musical, mystical Germans" as if they had been honourable, hard-hitting, clean-handed enemies. As for the food, it is probably reduced to the same scale as that served out to French prisoners in Germany, which does not err on the side of luxury. There is therefore here no reasonable ground for complaint, but the Teuton loves feasts of fat things, and wines upon the lees well refined. The best is good enough for him, while the unlucky population withers away for lack of sustenance.

Organised Theft.

The pretty little dialogue soldiers' pocket-book found on Austrian prisoners shows the gentle German idea of how "to live on the country." That naked robbery, plunder and licentiousness are encouraged by the brutalised officers is effectively proved by the extracts printed:—

"Where are your valuables?"

"Where is your money?"

"Tell me the truth, otherwise I will have you shot."

"Call me the master or mistress of the house."

"I am hungry. I want chicken, soup, rice, a bottle of old wine."

"Prepare me a better room."

Any drunken, bestial Jager or pickelhaube may be his own quartermaster, and his thefts and violences are actually encouraged. As is the Emperor so are the soldiers, from the former, the arch thief, who has fortunately lost an enormous amount of his investments, down to the ugly, flat-faced East Prussian corporal, they are all alike, whether in stuffing precious objets d'art into the thievish pockets of a Crown Prince who has forgotten that he was ever even called a gentleman, or the soldier who snatches the last loaf from a starving family, all thieves, liars, villains and murderers.

End of a Bugbear.

Once more Mr. Lloyd George has proved himself the man for the situation, and the miners' strike in South Wales is over. This will not be agreeable news for the Germans. As to any satisfaction derived by us from us from the Krupps strike, it was little enough, as it is common knowledge that the German Government would not hesitate to dragoon their workers into submission in a manner inconceivable in Britain, where personal liberty counts for so much, one inclines to think at present, sometimes for too much. Justice is to be done to the miners, and this is well, for the Royal Power must not be made a mere instrument of repression for either workmen or masters, and the men's leaders profess themselves satisfied with the arrangement concluded. The fact that nearly every point asked for is to be conceded tends to show that there was a desire on the part of coal owners to exploit both their country while in its utmost need, and their workmen as well. No reprobation, and indeed no disgrace can be too great for people who act in this way.

BRITON.

ROSARIO NEWS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

July 20.

The Cold.

The weather has ranged from mid-summer to midwinter during the week, and one has had the sensation of sliding down the thermometer as down the pole of a fire station. The reason has been the prevalence of wind from the dentist's quarter — where the teeth are. Plant growth has not been interfered with very much, chiefly because everything was killed by the frost about a fortnight ago.

Ghastly Tragedy.

The tragedy which overtook Mr. Ernest Parodi and his family on Saturday night has awakened much sympathy amongst the members of the British community. Returning from a holiday up-river, they left the Santa Fe boat and got into a coach towards midnight. The coach was the last of those conveying passengers from the boat, and the first F.C.C.A. crossing, which is protected by "barreras," was passed safely, as also was the second. Along the third—on the old Santafecina line—which is unprotected, a cargo train laden with cereals was approaching, and it seems evident that the "cochero" must have attempted the common trick of dashing across to save a tiresome wait. The vicinity, at the corner of Rioja and Alem, is badly lighted, especially at so late an hour, and he must have miscalculated the distance, for the coach was caught fairly and squarely and hurled along the line with its occupants nearly 100 metres. The horses escaped, and so did the driver, but Mr. Parodi's two little boys Leopold and Joseph, fifteen and eight years old, respectively, were killed; the little daughter, Pilar, was so badly injured that her life is despaired of; and Mr. and Mrs. Parodi were badly bruised and suffered severely from shock. The terrible calamity was witnessed by two nephews who had been down to see the steamer in and had run up from the wharf to wave a last "good-night." Mr. Parodi, who was born at Gibraltar, has lived many years in this country.

Franco-Belgian Bazaar.

Mme. Hoff's venture must rank as one of the most successful ever made in Rosario in a good cause. The takings for the ten days, including admission receipts, aggregated 22,750 pesos gross; expenses came to about $2,500; so that a net profit was realised of something over $20,000. The Governor of the Province was present on two occasions, and a pretty little story attaches to one of these. He bought, for $10, a 8-dollar ticket in the raffle of a splendid china tea service, and presented the ticket to the small maiden of whom he purchased it. Need I go on? Of course, the little maid won the service! Mr. Menchaca also made a special donation of $100 to the Red Cross stall. I mentioned that Messrs. Seaton and Parry were running a small cinematograph as a side-show. They took the handsome total of $270—all in 20-cent "entradas."

The Great Raymond.

Packed houses have witnessed the greatness of Raymond at the Colon during the past week. There has been the usual impromptu interest arising out of members of the local British community going on the stage to see fair play on behalf of the audience. The face of one of these gentlemen when from the pocket of his coat, which had been borrowed, was produced a flask of milk with the usual rubber attachment! To-night, I understand, he is going to show Mr. Rosenberg, of Messrs. Chiesa Hnos., how futile it is to make strong boxes in which to shut up this X-ray of a Raymond. The other night he got out of a pair of handcuffs of new regulation English pattern, which I can vouch for were quite genuine and were properly put on.

The Markets.

The wheat market has been entirely nominal, and the millers have found difficulty in buying sufficient for their needs. Export business is out of the question. It is reported that $12.50 has been paid for wheat of 78 kilos quality, for Brazil. This is about $3.50 over present shipping value. In maize, there has been very active trading, and it is calculated that the total sales for the week approximated to 100,000 tons. Most of this has been bought by those houses who trade with the Scandinavian countries, and they have paid from 10 to 15 cents more than the British firms have been able to do for their home market. It is interesting to note the nationality of the steamers now loading; out of fifteen loading maize, eight are Dutch, five are British, one Norwegian, and one Danish. I did not know the Dutch had so many fine steamers! Linseed has been slow, with hardly any business doing; prices nominal at about $11.

14th of July in Rosario.

Although, owing to the war, no reception could be held at the French Consulate as has been customary on the 14th of July, the French community in Rosario and their sympathisers felt that they could not allow their anniversary to pass without some expression of sympathy with the cause of the Allies. At 8.30, a large concourse of people collected in Plaza Pringles and with flags and music proceeded to the French Consulate. There they were joined by the British, French and Belgian Consuls and proceeded along Calle Cordoba to the Italian Club, where they stopped and called loudly for a speech from the Consuls. Short addresses were given from the balcony.

The Chaco Indians.

The Rev. A. Bevis, from the Paraguayan Chaco, gave an interesting address at Alberdi on Sunday last. In introducing him, the Rev. J. A. Rickards said it was the first time that one of the S.A.M.S. workers had addressed them in Alberdi during the six years he had been there, but he hoped in the future that that would be altered. He also hoped that the collections at morning service would be given to Mr. Bevis for the benefit of his work in the Paraguayan Chaco.

Mr. Bevis said he was one of thirteen S.A.M.S. missionaries on a station ninety miles inland from the River Paraguay. The station had been founded some twenty-four years previously, but owing to the nomadic tendencies of the Indians the work was necessarily slow. One of the chief causes of the Indian being a nomad was the climatic conditions of the country. Game, etc. naturally went where there was water, and as during part of the year the land was an arid plain, all living creatures mounted to the surrounding districts and hills. Then again the Indian did not understand forming colonies or have any settled occupation; in fact, it was thought by many that it was impossible for him to become really civilised. Time, however, had gradually convinced the world that this idea was erroneous. A missionary's first work was to teach the Indians some industry, such as building houses, cultivating the land or rearing cattle. Their terror and dread of evil spirits made the Church teaching almost impossible in the earlier stages. When one of their comrades was dying, he was taken into the forest and left there alone, and often most horrible rites practised on the body beforehand. In the case of a death, all the victim's pots were killed and his hut and goods destroyed to appease the wrath of the evil spirits. In spite of drawbacks and disheartening results, Mr. Bevis felt there was no question but that the work was progressing. To prove how trustworthy the Indians may be, he gave two examples. A fellow-worker was in charge of the transport from the station to the river, but owing to the state of the roads was obliged to leave part of the goods in a village five days from the journey's end. These were put in a hut and given in charge to the Headman of the village. Returning in ten days' time, all was found intact in spite of the natural curiosity of the Indians. Another time he himself was a witness of the Indian's trustworthiness. He had to visit one of his fellow-workers, Mr. Caddaw, in a village some miles further inland. Mr. Caddaw had left for another village, leaving his stock of provisions in his hut. Added to the Indian's intense love for food was the fact that these villages are quite open and unprotected; yet, in spite of this, Mr. Caddaw's hut and its contents remained in the condition in which they were left.

The Rosario Football League.

Three matches were played on Sunday for the "Copa de Honor," the most interesting of which, and the one which occasioned most excitement, was Rosario Atlético v. Gimnasia y Esgrima. It was played on the Rosario Atlético ground and resulted in a win for Gimnasia, 5 goals to 0.

The other matches were Tiro Federal 3. v. Newell's Old Boys 1, and Belgrano 6. v. Sparta 0.

DAY BY DAY IN ROSARIO.

(From Our Correspondent).

July 20.

Following upon the annual installation of new officers to the local Masonic Lodges, the "Light of the South" and the "Alexandria," a service was held on Sunday morning at St. Bartholomew's Church, attended by about 35 brethren. The Right Worshipful D.G.M., Mr. F. H. Chevallier Boutell, came up specially from Buenos Aires for the occasion, and all present were in full regalia. Mr. Boutell read the lessons, and the pulpit was occupied by the Chaplain, the Rev. Canon Pepys. The collection, devoted to the Prince of Wales's Fund per the British Patriotic Committee, realised $210.

Mr. Spencer S. Dickson is now expected back towards the end of August.

The Bazaar in aid of the Franco-Belgian Red Cross which was going on for the ten days from the 4th to 14th made its final effort on the evening of the 14th when the net total realised was carried up above the $20,000 mark. The piano given by Mr. Fraser has not yet been raffled, and tickets for a dollar each may be obtained from either Mr. A. M. Barnes, of General Mitre 665, or from Mr. Parry of the British Consulate.

Mr. Julian Parr, ex-President of the Rosario Bolsa, is still alive, spite of recent rumours to the contrary, and good news has this week been received from him.

The wedding of Miss Lucia Sara Miles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Enrique E. Miles, of El Trebol, to Mr. Santiago Orti, is to take place at St. Bartholomew's Church on Saturday week. A reception will follow at the Savoy Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Knight, of Fisherton, are leaving by the s.s. Desado on Monday for a trip to England.

The bazaar at the Talleres to be opened on September 10 by Mrs. C. H. Pearson and on the following day by Mrs. J. P. Crouch, promises to be a big affair; the Committee are already steeped in preparations.

The Rev. A. Bevis, who has been visiting Rosario from the Paraguayan Chaco, had a busy day on Sunday. He gave an address at Alberdi in the morning, spoke to the children at the Talleres Sunday School in the afternoon, occupied the pulpit at St. Bartholomew's at 6 p.m. and later on preached at Talleres Church.

LEGATION DESPATCHES

German Trenches Captured

BRITISH ADVANCE NEAR CHATEAU HOOGE

The following telegrams has been received by His Britannic Majesty's Minister at Buenos Aires from the Foreign Office, London:

July 21 (12.0 p.m.)

Sir John French reports 20th July: "Yesterday evening after successfully exploding mine just west of Chateau Hooge, east of Ypres, our troops occupied about 150 yards of enemy's trenches; the gain has since been consolidated. Two machine guns were captured and 15 prisoners, including 2 officers. Two other machine guns were destroyed by explosion. Elsewhere there is nothing to report."

CRUSHED TO DEATH

A DEFECTIVE CRANE CAUSES FATAL ACCIDENT.

On the eastern side of the South Dock, opposite the end of Calle Brazil, a fatal accident occurred yesterday afternoon, which resulted in the death of a man and dangerous injuries to his brother.

A weight of some 1,300 kilos was being raised by a crane, and owing to the breaking of the link-pin, the whole mass fell. The mechanic, Nicholas Rodriguez, had not observed that working underneath were two Italians named Santiago and Francisco Aiello. They had no chance of escaping when the load fell, with the result that Santiago Aiello was instantly killed and his brother Francisco dangerously crushed and hurt.

The crane was the property of Messrs. Wilson, coal merchants, Doctor Ortiz de Rozas has given instructions for the detention of the mechanic Rodriguez.

The victims of the accident are two Italians who have worked for some years in the Argentine, and both are married. The body of the elder, Santiago, is now in the Morgue, and the younger, Francisco, is in hospital.

Mr. Alexander F. Cochrane, of the London and River Plate Bank, Rosario, has received an appointment with the Frigorifico Armour de la Plata, and will take up his new duties at the beginning of August.

I understand that Mr. Thomas MacGuire has been obliged to undergo a very serious operation at the hands of Dr. Frend and Dr. Thomson. The patient is progressing as favourably as could be expected.

Last Wednesday a very enjoyable meeting of the Plaza Jewell Tennis Club was held. Play was indulged in as long as the light permitted and tea was provided by Miss Luisa Chiesa. To-morrow another meeting will take place as is customary every Wednesday and tea will be provided by Miss Omnes.

Mr. Alfred Hertz and his wife, formerly Miss Cora Barlett, left for their estancia in Godoy on Saturday accompanied by Señora Rosario Aldao de Hertz.

Mainly About People

Mr. Herbert Gibson leaves to-morrow for Dover by the Zeelandia.

Among the passengers by the Zeelandia is Mr. Jorge Arturo Bell.

Mr. and Mrs. Alen McKay, Miss G. Forster and Mr. A. S. Cuff, have arrived at the Phoenix Hotel.

Ingeniero Dirks of Messrs. Dirks and Dales, with Mrs. Dirks leaves for Rio by the Zeelandia on July 23.

The last number of "Leslie's Weekly," contains a portrait of Miss Hale Pearson, daughter of the well-known Argentine financier.

The marriage of Mr. William Chambers and Miss A. Lombardi, will take place Saturday in the Robson Hall, Chaseomús.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Murphy and family are amongst the latest arrivals at the Palace Hotel. They are spending a few days in town from the camp.

There are messages at the Central and South American Telegraph Company's office for schooner Black, B.S. Aires from Baltimore, U.S.A., also from New York to Bodlevere, Buenos Aires.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Laing have left for England and desire, through the medium of "The Herald," to bid farewell to their friends.

A marriage has been arranged and will shortly take place between Rita, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Baines, of Olivos, to Mr. Eric Hudson, of Cordoba, third son of the late Rev. Robert and Mrs. Hudson, of Hove, Brighton.

The friends of Mr. F. A. Howard, of Kay and Co., will be sorry to hear that he is seriously ill at his house at Lomas de Zamora.

There will be very general sympathy with Mr. T. E. Nodder, of Messrs. Houlder Bros., 337 Sarmiento and of San Isidro, who has just received news of the death of his father, Mr. T. H. Nodder, at 23 Lismore Road, Meersbrook, Sheffield.

A peculiarly melancholy event has been the decease of Mrs. Vera Evelyn Rita Flower, wife of Mr. Lionel Flower, of Veraflores, Cañuelas, F. C. S., and of Wyke Hall, Gillingham, Dorsetshire. Mrs. Flower died yesterday at the British Hospital, on the fourth anniversary of her wedding. She was well known in the Capital and greatly liked. She was a fancier of dogs in certain breeds of which she was an authority. Mr. Flower, who is staying at the Phoenix Hotel at present, may possibly go to England shortly.

The engagement is announced of Mr. W. Danby late of New Zealand and also a well known Rosario resident, to Miss Pyman, sister of the late Rev. R. F. Pyman, M.A., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's Church, Rosario. Mr. Danby went to England some months ago and is now in the West Lancashire Field Ambulance Corps stationed in New Oxted, Surrey. He was for a long time Secretary to St. Bartholomew's Club and also a member of the choir and took a great interest in all work connected with the church. Heartly congratulations on behalf of all their friends in the Argentine who also express the wish that they may spend their honeymoon amongst them.

DAY BY DAY IN CORDOBA.

(From Our Correspondent).

July 19.

The Rev. J. W. Fleming, D.D., of the St. Andrew's Scotch Presbyterian Church of Buenos Aires, conducted the services at the English Church Hall on Sunday last.

Mr. Harry Clarke, the representative of "The Great Raymond Company," has arrived in town and is stopping at the Plaza Hotel.

The many friends of Mrs. Every Miller, who when a resident of this city was one of our most faithful church workers, will learn with pleasure that Mrs. Miller is to have charge of the refreshment booth at the Bazaar and Fancy Fair to be held shortly in Rosario.

Mr. George A. Brigstocke spent last Sunday in visiting the golf course at the Alta Gracia Hotel, Alta Gracia.

The Rev. Cyril Moore is expected back from the camp on July 29.

Miss Muriel Hobbs has joined the Cordoba Athletic Club.

Mrs. Boyd expects to make a visit on Thursday next to Cañada Gomez, where she will spend several days.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Lindemann were compelled to postpone the Fancy Dress Ball to be held at their home at Alta Cordoba on last Saturday night, due to their little daughter suddenly falling ill. Now that the child is much better the Ball will take place on Saturday of the present week.

Mr. Roland Hunt, of Buenos Aires, took advantage of the beautiful weather on Sunday to enjoy a round of golf at Alta Gracia.

Mr. G. E. Morton is leaving town for Buenos Aires on a business trip the first days of this week.

The prizes won by Miss Gladys Guppy and Mr. Louis G. Babb at the American Mixed Tennis Tournament held at the Cordoba Athletic Club on July 9 will be presented at the Club Pavilion on Sunday afternoon at 4 p.m.

Miss Brunkleu has joined the Cordoba Athletic Club.

Mr. C. H. Pearson, of the Central Argentine Railway, spent Sunday at Alta Gracia and made a trip around the links.

To-day the ground is being broken at the Cordoba Athletic Club for a new tennis court which will be installed alongside No. 3 court. It is the intention to make a trial of red sand as a bed for the playing surface of the court.

Messrs. Ferguson and Ditlesen motored to Alta Gracia on Sunday and indulged in some interesting golf.

Mr. Norman Colson came in from Pícar to enjoy some tennis for the week-end, but unfortunately while rushing after a ball in an exciting game he badly wrenched his knee, and will be obliged to lay up for a couple of weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Dunbar and Miss Violet Dunbar spent last Sunday at Alta Gracia.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Davis were visitors at the Athletic Club on Sunday last.

Mr. J. P. Urner, formerly of this city, is now located in Zarate.

THE WORLD'S CROPS

UNFAVOURABLE REPORTS FROM EUROPE.

London, July 21.

Messrs. Broomhall's last circular report on the world's crops contains the following information:

United Kingdom.—General rains have fallen and all crops have improved. Official estimates of the yield are, wheat 63 million bushels, barley 44 millions, oats 85 millions. Warm dry weather is now wanted.

France.—Wet weather continues. Recent heavy rain and other storms have done considerable damage, and have delayed the harvesting.

Germany.—Most of the reports are very favourable, and a large yield is expected of wheat, with potatoes excellent.

Russia.—The crop prospects are generally maintained, especially in regard to winter wheat. The outlook for the spring crop is not altogether favourable; but the reserves will be large and burdensome unless shipping becomes possible.

India.—The indications for the monsoon are better, but moisture is again needed. The crop prospects up to the present are favourable. Holders of old wheat are very reserved.

Australia.—Further good rains have fallen. The indications, based upon actual prospects, point to a very large yield of wheat.

Italy.—The harvest weather is rather better, but the crop will not be up to expectation.

Spain.—The reports as to the results of the harvest are not favourable. The early indications gave a probable yield of 156 million bushels; but it is now estimated that fully 30 per cent. of this will not be realised.

North Africa.—The results of the threshing are proving fully 20 per cent. less than earlier indications.

Scandinavia.—The outlook for wheat and rye are poor.

Greece.—The official report states that rain has caused severe damage to the crop, and the prospects are greatly lowered.

SALE OF BREEDING CATTLE

Messrs. Adolfo Bullrich and Co. sold yesterday at their Central Sale Rooms, 20 Shorthorn cows and heifers served from "Dos Marias," Estancia Cecil W. Lopez, Limited. The prices obtained for cows varied from $1000 to $250, and for heifers from $700 to $350, an average of $510 nacional.

SHIPOWNERS HIGH CHARGES

Mr. H. John Hill, the general secretary of the Boilermakers' Society, in his annual report issued recently from the headquarters in Newcastle, refers to the high freight charges of the shipowners in the time of the nation's greatest need and peril, which was a black spot which stained the escutcheon of an otherwise honourable and noble profession.

MORE HORSES FOR BRITAIN GOVERNMENT HOUSE FOR RIO NEGRO

A NEW PROPOSAL.

Señor Serrano, the Governor of Rio Negro, has approached the Minister of the Interior to obtain his authorisation to the construction of a Government House in Viedma. It is estimated that the cost of erection will be about $40,000. The proposal has been well received by the Minister of the Interior, and steps are already being taken to carry out the work.

Señor Serrano has taken the opportunity of urging the necessity of defensive works against the possibility of future floods, and of the advisability of draining Lake Juncal, the periodical overflow of which causes such immense damage. The population of Viedma are always in fear of the inundations and such work as has been going on to protect their land only proceeds very slowly, and but little progress has been made.

Governor Serrano will, during the month of September, make a prolonged tour throughout the province, in company with several deputies.

HUNS AT MARTIN GARCIA

TO BE VISITED BY THEIR MINISTER.

The Minister of Marine has acceded to a request of the German Minister accredited to the Argentine to visit the German sailors from the Cap Trafalgar and the Dresden, who are interned on the island of Martin Garcia.

The Rosario has been lent for the purpose. She will sail on Saturday from the North Basin at 1 p.m. The German Minister and his secretary will be accompanied by the Argentine Naval Secretary. The Rosario will return the same day.

EARTHQUAKES IN JAPAN

NO CASUALTIES REPORTED.

Tokio, July 16.

For the last two days there have been earthquakes every half hour or so in the southern part of the island of Kiu Shiu, alarming the inhabitants of that region. The earth has cracked in several places, and the trees and grass have been withered up. Persons staying there for the summer months have fled. The eruption of the volcano Kirishima is increasing in violence, but no casualties have been reported.

COLLISION IN THE RIVER

SALVAGE OPERATIONS.

The collision which occurred on Thursday in the river between the Spanish steamer, "P. de Satrustegui" and the Italian boat "Sirra" has resulted in the sinking of the latter. She was badly stove amidships, and sank during the early hours of yesterday. It is fortunate that the collision occurred in shallow water, and even in sinking the "Sirra" is only down up to her decks. The work of salving her, however, is one of considerable difficulty, all her holds are full of water. Tugs have been sent with all the necessary materials to assist the salvage operations.

The Sirra was proceeding from Norfolk with a large cargo of coal, consigned to the National Bank. The mail steamer, "P. de Satrustegui," as soon as she has discharged her cargo, will be dry docked for repairs.

Further details concerning the sinking of the Sirra have come to hand at a late hour. During low water yesterday afternoon she was examined by the diver Eugene Thomas, who states that he discovered three plates badly stove in, and that to this is due the sinking of the ship.

The captain, Signor Antonio di Anne, has been in conference with the agents of the company in which the vessel is insured, with a view of obtaining the necessary assistance to salve her, which the diver has stated as being possible.

The first engineer, Bando Vicenza, was the only member of the crew to be in any way hurt, and his escape was a remarkable one. At the time of the collision he was asleep in his cabin, and was awakened by the shock and the splintering of everything in his cabin. In spite of this, the only injury he received was a more or less serious one to his eye. His predicament was unpleasant. In total darkness he heard the cries of the crew, and the commands of the captain, but was unable to get out owing to the cabin door having jammed. During his imprisonment he realised that the vessel was sinking. He was released by members of the crew. These number 28, and the captain hopes to make the necessary provision for them, after his interview with the insurance company.

There has been no loss of cargo and no further report of damage. It is thus expected that the Sirra will soon be afloat again, although the work of salving her will be by no means easy.

"THIS WAR IS A CONTEST OF ENDURANCE"

Revival in Recruiting Enthusiasm

LONDON, JULY 28.

MR. ASQUITH, SPEAKING TO-DAY ON THE PROSPECTS OF THE WAR SAID THAT:

RECRUITING IN THE UNITED KINGDOM WAS UNDIMINISHED, AND THE LATEST REPORTS WERE THE BEST FOR A LONG TIME;

THE FLEET WAS STRONGER, AND THE SUBMARINE MENACE WAS NOT GOING TO INFLICT SUBSTANTIAL INJURY ON BRITISH COMMERCE;

CONFIDENCE IN THE RESULT OF THE CAMPAIGN IN THE DARDANELLES IS UNDIMINISHED;

ITALY IS STEADILY GAINING GROUND, AND HER OBJECTIVE WILL SOON BE WITHIN REACH.

THE PRIME MINISTER FINALLY REFERRED TO THE GALLANT EFFORTS OF RUSSIA, AND DECLARED THAT THIS WAR WAS A CONTEST OF ENDURANCE.

CHARGE AGAINST BRITISH AMBASSADOR U.S. CONSULATE EMPLOYEE ARRESTED

SIR CECIL SPRING-RICE ACCUSED OF VIOLATING U.S. NEUTRALITY.

Washington, July 28.

It is stated that the directors of the newspaper "Fatherland" published in New York have brought before the Secretary of State a charge against the British Ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, of having violated the neutrality of the United States by recruiting volunteers for the British army, and of having taken part in the inscription of Montenegrins in the States who wish to return to their country to take service in the army.

It is thought probable that Mr. Lansing will take no action in the matter.

MORE "DIPLOMATIC DISCUSSION"

AMERICA'S ATTITUDE OVER
SINKING OF THE LEELANAW.

New York, July 28.

The United States Consul in London has telegraphed to the Department of State at Washington that the German submarine which sank the American steamer Leelanaw gave the crew sufficient time to abandon the vessel.

It is expected that the case will be one for diplomatic discussion when it will be settled whether Germany should recompense the owners for the loss of ship and cargo.

The German Government has not yet sent any explanation of the attack on the steamer Orduña.

CHARGE OF ASSISTING BRITISH SUBJECT WITH FRAUDULENT
PASSPORT.

New York, July 28.

An American subject named Charles Wilson who is attached to the United States Consulate in Berlin is reported in a telegram from the German capital to have been arrested and placed in confinement pending investigation of the circumstances attending the escape of a British resident by means of a passport alleged to have been fraudulently obtained.

Wilson is stated to have certified that he was personally acquainted with the applicant for the passport and that he was an American citizen, on the strength of which the passport was issued. When Wilson found that the fraud was about to be discovered he disappeared, but was arrested on the Swiss frontier and brought back to Berlin.

TAUBE RAID ON CALAIS

Paris, July 28.

A German Taube passed over Calais to-day, and a number of others over Mardyck. The bombs they dropped had no effect.

German aeroplanes also attempted a raid on Dunkirk, but were chased away.

PREPARED FOR A LONG CAMPAIGN

FRENCH'S ARMY FIT FOR ANY EMERGENCY

London, July 27.

Despatches received by the War Office state that the British forces at La Bassée have made some slight progress, having occupied by means of night attacks several positions which were tenaciously defended by the enemy.

Field Marshal French reports that the position of the expeditionary army is constantly becoming stronger, as every day fresh defence works are constructed, fresh troops are received and further supplies of munitions arrive.

The Commander-in-Chief states that the British army is prepared for a long campaign and is fit to meet any emergency. The sanitary service is so good that no case of epidemic disease has occurred among the troops.

BRITISH FLOTILLA IN ACTION.

London, July 27.

The Admiralty reports the receipt of despatches announcing that a British flotilla co-operated with the French in the bombardment of Westende. The damage caused to the German positions was considerable.

ARTILLERY DUELS IN FLANDERS

Paris, July 27.

The War Office has published an official communiqué which says:—

"In return for the bombardment by the Germans of Furnes and Dunkirk our artillery has cannonaded the German cantonments at Westende and Middelkerk.

"In the Senchez sector there were artillery actions and combats with hand grenades.

"In the Argonne region two attempts by the Germans to attack near Layon and Binarville were easily repulsed.

"In the Vosges district we succeeded in extending and consolidating our positions on the summit of Lingekopf and in occupying the pass between Lingekopf and Carrieres. The Germans bombarded the pass of Schlucht."

AEROPLANE BASE DESTROYED

FRENCH DESTROYER'S SUCCESS IN THE ADRIATIC

London, July 26.

The French destroyer Bisson has shelled and destroyed the aeroplane and submarine base established by the Austrians on the island of Lagosta off Dalmatia.

CABLE WITH MAINLAND CUT.

Toulon, July 26.

The French destroyer which bombarded and reduced to ruins the supply station on Lagosta island used by the Austrian submarines and aeroplanes, also cut the cable connecting the island with the mainland.

FRENCH INFANTRY ADVANCE

German Reverses in Champagne
District

ZEEBRUGGE AGAIN BOMBARDED

Amsterdam, July 28.

The German naval base and fortified positions at Zeebrugge were bombarded to-day by a French cruiser and a number of aeroplanes.

A considerable amount of damage was done. A shot from one of the cruiser's guns struck a German torpedo boat. Several ammunition magazines were blown up and parts of the fortifications ruined.

FRENCH ARMY RESUMES THE OFFENSIVE.

Paris, July 28.

Important operations are announced to be taking place in the Champagne district. After several weeks devoted to sapping and blowing up the enemy's trenches, the French infantry has commenced an advance, attacking the enemy at various points.

Along a front of considerable extent to the north of Perthes and Beausejour, the French have compelled the enemy to fall back somewhat and seek the protection of their fortified positions.

The French, who have been reinforced, continue the attack and have consolidated the positions captured.

In the Arras region the French have also taken the offensive with satisfactory results.

Several trenches have been taken near Notre Dame de Lorette after a sharp contest which was terminated by a bayonet charge by the French. Subsequent counter-attacks by the enemy were in every instance repulsed. The fighting still goes on with vigour.

GERMAN ATTACKS REPULSED.

Paris, July 28.

The official bulletin published to-day by the War Office reports:—

"In the region of Artois north of Souchez, the Germans, after a strong bombardment, delivered last night several different attacks against three of our positions. After a very spirited combat they were driven out of the trenches which the French succeeded in occupying, with the exception of one point, where they retained about twenty yards of trench, which has been sapped in advance from our front.

"The town of Soissons was again bombarded yesterday evening.

"In the Argonne region, in the vicinity of Fontaine-aux-Carnes, the enemy attempted to make an attack but was driven back to his trenches by our infantry fire.

"On the rest of the front, the night passed quietly.

TSAR'S NEW ARMY OF 1,500,000 MEN

1896 Class Called to the Colours

Zeppelin Captured During Fighting in Poland

PETROGRAD, JULY 28.

THE TSAR HAS ISSUED A UKASE CALLING TO ARMS ALL MEN BORN IN 1896. THIS, AND OTHER MEASURES ABOUT TO BE ADOPTED, WILL GIVE THE GRAND DUKE A NEW ARMY OF 1,500,000 MEN.

THE TSAR'S ASIATIC SUBJECTS, PARTICULARLY THOSE OF SIBERIA, ARE ALSO ABOUT TO BE SUMMONED TO THE COLOURS.

ACCORDING TO UNOFFICIAL REPORTS WHICH ARE CURRENT HERE, EXTRAORDINARY PREPARATIONS ARE UNDER WAY THROUGHOUT RUSSIA FOR THE ORGANISATION OF AN ENORMOUS ARMY, AND FOR A NEW AGGRESSIVE CAMPAIGN ON A HUGE SCALE.

GERMANS CROSS THE BUG

Russian Successes in Poland

CAPTURE OF A ZEPPELIN

Petrograd, July 28.

Military critics consider that the situation of the Russian forces on the Narew has much improved during the last few hours. They have been concentrated in great force in the locality and are offering a stern resistance to the advance of the Germans. Their efforts have had the desired effect, the Germans having been checked by the artillery and infantry attacks constantly delivered against them and inflicting prodigious losses upon them.

It is stated that the efforts of the Germans to take possession of Warsaw have already cost them upwards of half a million men.

To-day's official despatch reads as follows:—

"On the Niemen the situation is unchanged. There have been cavalry outpost actions there.

"To the southwest of Kovno on Monday the enemy was repulsed beyond Vesianarew, and on Sunday and Monday from Dobrolenka.

"In the Novo Georgievsk region there is fighting with increased energy.

"On the left bank of the Narew the enemy is held back by energetic counter attacks.

"Intense fighting occurred in the forest of Rosen on Monday evening. The enemy brought up enormous reserves from Akove and Serock.

"On both banks of the Narew there have been successful Russian attacks, some of the enemy's detachments being compelled to beat a hasty retreat. In the region of Serock we captured one Zeppelin, 700 prisoners and several maxims.

"Enemy counter-attacks from Constantinow were repulsed by our armed motor-cars.

"On the left bank of the Vistula at daybreak we delivered a successful bayonet charge, the enemy's attempts to approach our front Nadarzyn-Piasieczno to the southeast of Blonie being repulsed.

"On the Vistula and Vieprz front tranquillity prevailed. East of the Vieprz to the Bug the fighting continues. In this region on Monday evening large forces of the enemy captured a portion of the Russian trenches, but they were expelled from it in a subsequent counter-attack.

"Particularly vigorous attacks in

KULTUR'S NEW WAR-CRY

BANISH LATIN SCRIPT FROM THE SCHOOLS.

New York, July 28.

A despatch from Berlin says that along with the movement to purify the German language of foreign words comes another, designed "Banish Latin Script from the Country." The advocate of this writes:

"One of the resources of our enemies is the English language, through which a great part of the world, including America, is dominated. Along with the British language there go English characteristics and ways of thinking. Hence the world willingly gives credence to what passes through the filter of the English language.

"German truth cannot pass through the filter of the English language; hence we should no longer use English script in Germany. Whoever uses the Latin script in our schools uses in reality the English script.

"This script has also invaded France under the name 'écriture Anglaise.' Since we are so enthusiastic about foreign things we have taken the English script as our own with respectful obedience; and we are on the best road to deny utterly the script of a Goethe, a Koerner, a Jahn, and other great Germans."

"INCORPORATING" BELGIUM

CONSOLIDATION OF FINANCIAL INTERESTS WITH THOSE OF GERMANY.

London, July 28.

Advices received by way of Amsterdam indicate that arrangements for the complete consolidation of Belgian financial interests with those of Germany are progressing rapidly at Antwerp.

The German administrator of the Banque Centrale Anversoise has given the information that it is to be absorbed by the Deutsche Bank, its head being the director of the latter institution.

the neighbourhood of Grubochow were successfully repulsed.

"On the Bug river stubborn fighting is taking place in the region of Sikal and Potovrzhlitsa, where a portion of the enemy's forces crossed the river.

"On the Dniester and the Pruth the enemy delivered ineffectual attacks."

AS IN 1812

RUSSIANS LAY WASTE ABANDONED COUNTRY

WINDAU EVACUATED AND BURNED.

London, July 22.

Official despatches from Petrograd announce that while the steps for providing the forces of Russia with the necessary armaments and munitions are being carried out, the General Staff will continue to withdraw the forces East in pursuance of the tactics adopted in 1812, which resulted in the downfall of Napoleon's armies.

Everything is being destroyed by the retreating army. Cities, towns, villages, hamlets, and farmhouses are being abandoned by their inhabitants which accompany the forces, and the buildings, with everything that cannot be taken away, are burned.

The armies are preceded by thousands of carts and drays carrying all that can be transported and is required for the troops in campaign. Parallel with the carts travel huge herds of live-stock, and behind the army all is a desolate waste.

All these measures are being carried with stern military rigour.

WINDAU BURNED AND EVACUATED.

New York, July 22.

It is reported from Berlin that the Russians burned Windau before evacuating it; also that, according to reports from Libau to-day, they have applied the torch to the harbour works and various buildings. The greater part of the town is said to be destroyed.

RULE BY COERCION

GERMANY'S GENTLE WAY

Paris, July 22.

As a further breach of the rights of people by the Germans the Press reports that recently the Germans tried to compel the owners and employees in industrial establishments in Roubaix to work for them. As this failed the Germans have deported to Germany 140 of the leading men of the city, among whom are tradesmen, merchants, priests, and civil functionaries. One of them is M. Eugene Mette, a wealthy trader and ex-Deputy for the Northern Department.

THE ZEPPELIN BUBBLE

GERMANS LOSE FAITH IN UTILITY OF DIRIGIBLES.

New York, July 28.

According to despatches from Rotterdam there are signs that the Germans are beginning to lose their faith in the efficacy of the Zeppelin as an instrument of war, and opinions are expressed that several radical changes will be necessary to make the airship of practical use.

It is noted that when the war broke out the German public pinned their faith on the Zeppelin, while the submarine was passed over almost unnoticed. Now Von Tirpitz is the hero while Count Zeppelin is in the shade. Withal, the Germans continue the construction of dirigibles which are modified according to the latest discoveries.

BLANKETS FROM THE STATES

ORDERS PLACED BY BELGIUM AND ITALY.

New York, July 28.

Belgium has placed orders for 30,000 cavalry blankets with American mills, bringing up the total orders from that country for blankets to 400,000.

Italy also is said to have closed its contract for blankets here.

THE WEIGHT OF THE WAR

RUSSIAN CRITIC'S COMPLAINT

SIMULTANEOUS ATTACK NECESSARY

New York, July 22.

A telegram from London states that complaints are beginning to be heard that Russia is bearing practically the entire brunt of the war. These complaints are confined to the mass of the people, who cannot judge what is really happening on any front for two days in succession.

The military critic of the "Russky Invalid," who is certainly in close touch with the General Staff, contrasts the furious battle which is being fought in a dozen different directions within the frontiers of Russia with the apparent quiescence of the British, French and Italian armies.

Without pledging himself to their accuracy he mentions various estimates that between the Vistula and Bug rivers alone the Teutons have upwards of twenty army corps, that is to say 1,200,000 men, actually fighting under high pressure, and he adds that as many more are operating along the entire front.

After recapitulating the strenuous events that have happened on Germany's eastern front during the last few days, he says:

"Speaking generally, the weight of the war at present lies on our front, while the positions of our allies is much lighter, except at the Dardanelles, which is a very difficult campaign. The war is still very far from the end. Is it to consist of skirmishes by the Germans with each of their adversaries in turn? We want a general and united attack on the Germans simultaneously from all quarters, with a full exertion of strength. This alone can end this protracted world-war."

VON HINDENBURG DEFEATED.

London, July 22.

It is reported from Petrograd that the Russians have inflicted a defeat upon Marshal von Hindenburg's forces.

It is stated that some of the more distant suburbs of Warsaw will have to be evacuated.

RUSSIA'S FINANCES

INCREASED ISSUE OF STATE SECURITIES

Petrograd, July 27.

The Minister of Finance has applied for authority to issue State securities amounting to £120,000,000 beyond the sum at present allowable.

The Minister stated that the Savings Banks up to July 1st. showed deposits amounting to 180 million sterling above those of last year, which is almost the exact amount of the loss to the Treasury owing to the prohibition of the making and sale of vodka.

EMULATE THE OSTRICH!

GERMANY ADVISED NOT TO REPLY TO WILSON'S THIRD NOTE.

London, July 28.

A Reuter's Agency telegram from Amsterdam says:

"The 'Cologne Gazette' has published a wireless message from Washington containing a suggestion that, in order to avoid further exciting public opinion in the United States, Germany should not reply to the last Note from the States unless she is able to give a favourable answer. The 'Gazette' considers the advice well worthy of consideration."

AUSTRIANS LOSE ALL IMPORTANT POSITIONS

Evacuation of Podgora Imminent

TWO-WEEKS BATTLE NEAR SERJOCH

Advance by Italian Infantry Checked

New York, July 28.

A telegram from Geneva reports that despatches from Laibach received in Geneva to-day state that the Austrians have entirely retreated from Gorizia. The telegram proceeds:—

"The movement began in the latter part of last week, in consequence of the terrible losses sustained. The evacuation of Podgora is now only a question of hours. The position is untenable for the Austrians, who have lost all their important positions. The whole of the Carso plateau is in the hands of the Italians with the exception of a few hundred yards of trenches where the Austrians still hold out.

"The Italians are launching terrific attacks against the Austrian lines at Fogliano, Tarazzo, Redijuglia and Doberto. The battle is still under way near Serjoch. It began two weeks ago and is now assuming great proportions. The terrific cannonade can be heard from Zerneth. The struggle is for the possession of the summit of Scartuzzo. The Italian infantry has been checked, but the artillery continues the engagement."

AUSTRIANS ABANDONING GORIZIA.

Rome, July 28.

From reports to hand it appears that the Austrians are retiring from Gorizia. The work of repairing the fortifications has been suspended and preparations are being made on the railway for the transportation of troops, provisions and munitions.

In regard to the operations on the Doberdo plateau, it is known that the Austrians guarding the road to Trieste have lost their best troops and will be unable to maintain their positions any longer. With the exception of a few trenches, the whole of the Carso table-land is in the hands of the Italians.

In the fighting on the Carso plateau yesterday the Imperial forces lost 2000 men.

"FIRM AND SURE PROGRESS EVERYWHERE."

London, July 28.

The Chiasso correspondent of the "Daily Mail" telegraphs that the Italians are now masters of the Lower Isonzo region, having captured all points commanding the western Carso from which the Austrians had been able to prevent the Italians from crossing the river.

Since occupying Monte San Michele, on the northern slope of the Carso plateau, the Italians have also taken Monte Sei Busi, 400 metres in altitude, on the southern slope.

In reference to this achievement a despatch from Monfalcone to "Il Secolo" says:—

"Our troops have gained another noteworthy success in the capture of Sei Busi after a desperate contest with the enemy. Four times the Bersaglieri reached the summit where the Austrians were formidably entrenched, and four times they were driven back with great loss. The field of battle was lit up by magnesium bombs which on bursting in the air scattered what resembled a rain of stars.

"At daybreak the Bersaglieri essayed a fifth attack which was successful, the Austrians being completely exhausted.

"An Italian Alpine regiment succeeded in working round the foot of the hill and nearly cut off the retreat of the enemy. Two thousand prisoners and an abundant amount of material of war fell into the hands of the Italians.

"News from other points of the front confirm the reports of the firm and sure progress of the Italians everywhere."

CONTRABAND OF WAR

ITALY FOLLOWS BRITAIN'S LEAD.

Washington, July 28.

In regard to the Italian list of contraband, the Royal decree governing the attitude of Italy toward the shipping of neutrals, which was on the file at the Department of State to-day, shows close conformity with that of the British Government. The modifications of the rules are outlined in the Declaration of London. They also follow those made by Great Britain and include the provision that goods shipped to neutral countries must be consigned to an individual and not merely to order.

The decree authorises blockades of neutral coasts if it is established that the enemy is obtaining supplies for his armed forces from that territory.

SPIES FROM THE VATICAN

PROCEEDINGS TO BE TAKEN BY ITALIAN GOVERNMENT.

Rome, July 28.

Legal proceedings are about to be taken against Professor Schneider Graziosi, Sub-Manager of the Vatican Museums, his brother Karl, a clerk in the Bank of Rome, and his nephew Victor, architect, who were taken by an Italian torpedo boat while taking photographs of the defence works on Ponza island. The rumour that the Vatican had made a friendly protest against the arrest, which was circulated by certain "foreign elements," has been contradicted.

GERMANY'S GRAIN CROPS

QUALITY ADJUDGED EXCELLENT

New York, July 23.

A despatch from Berlin announces the commencement of the garnering of the wheat and rye crops, the quality of which is judged to be excellent. The unusually warm weather has resulted in a fuller and mealier grain. The production, although somewhat diminished in regard to quantity, is equalised by the increased percentage of flour.

The supply will not only be sufficient for a year, but will make it possible to lay by a reserve which will last for some months longer.

GORIZIA IN RUINS

TERRIBLE EFFECTS IN RECENT FIGHTING

London, July 24.

According to J. M. Jeffries, correspondent of the "Daily Mail," all the eastern suburbs of Gorizia are in ruins. The line is so battered by the Italian artillery and so cut to pieces by the bayonet that the Teuton troops to-day hold only that portion of the road between San Mauro and the Plava tracts, and their present positions are seriously menaced by the irresistible charges of the troops of King Victor Emmanuel which are being launched without intermission upon the enemy.

40,000 AUSTRIAN LOSSES IN ISONZO FIGHTING.

Rome, July 24.

The Austrian losses in the battle in the Isonzo valley are estimated by the Italian General Staff at 40,000 men.

The Italian aerial fleet which is preparing the way for the advance of the army on Trieste has bombarded the railway and station at Nabresina, 15 kilometres from Trieste.

The Austrian torpedo boat flotilla has been broken up into sections for the purpose of separately attacking the undefended parts of the Italian coast. The ports of Ortona and Pedaso, which are mere seaside watering places without any military significance, have thus been shelled. Being summer time there was a considerable population of visitors; but fortunately only some slight material damages were caused by the fire of the boats.

TROUBLE IN TRIFOLITANIA

GRADUALLY LESSENING UNDER ITALIAN RULE.

Rome, July 28.

The latest despatches from Tripolitania are of a very re-assuring character.

It is stated that the five forts on the coast have garrisons of sufficient strength to deal with any attack by rebel "mehallas," and have also received additional artillery.

The natives however who have been roused by the German and Turkish propaganda do not appear to be very eager to attack, confining themselves to harassing the tribes in the vicinity who have remained loyal to the Italian Government.

General Ameglio, the new Governor, is adopting the same tactics that were found so successful in Cyrenaica, which consisted of sending out strong flying columns armed with light field-guns and machine guns which pursue and break up any rebel forces that have been collected for the purpose of attacking the Italian forts.

REBELS LED BY EUROPEAN OFFICERS.

London, July 28.

The "Morning Post" publishes a despatch from its correspondent at Rome who says that the withdrawal of the Italians from the interior of Tripoli has now been completed. The people have been concentrated in four coast towns, viz., Tripoli, Homs, Misurata and Jara.

The rebels are reported to be numerous and to be led by European officers and several native chiefs who have returned from Turkey.

ITALY AND SERBIA

UNTRUTHFUL REPORT OF STRAINED RELATIONS.

Rome, July 24.

The leading newspapers of Rome contradict the report of strained relations between Italy and Serbia. They say that the two States are on as cordial terms as before the war. The action of Serbia in Albania is causing no anxiety whatever to the Italian Government.

WAR ON TURKEY AND GERMANY

ADVOCATED IN ITALY

New York, July 27.

A telegram from London to the "Evening Sun" says that advice from Rome indicate that Italy is preparing for war with Turkey. Popular agitation for participation in the Dardanelles campaign, which was suppressed some weeks ago by the Government, has now been resumed without let or hindrance.

At the same time an attitude of violent hostility to Germany has again developed, the newspapers pointing out the futility of keeping up the fiction that Italy is not at war with Germany, as there is indisputable evidence that German troops are incorporated in the Austrian forces opposing Italy.

Earlier in the war, when the "Messaggero" and the "Giornale d'Italia" advocated war on Turkey, the censor interfered; but the censorship has evidently been rescinded, as all the papers have taken up the agitation.

KING AGAINST INTERVENTION.

London, July 27.

A telegram from Rome to the "Morning Post" says that opinions are divided about sending an Italian contingent to the Dardanelles. The King, General Cadorna, and the military generally were opposed to the idea, but the Foreign Office, for political and diplomatic reasons, desired to take a hand in the Dardanelles campaign.

The Italian aristocracy, although before the war they were largely Germanophil, have gone to the front in large numbers, and the Italians say that they are more prompt to spend their blood than their wealth.

The Italian middle classes have contributed well to the war fund in proportion to their means. The Press has acted with great patriotism, and the foreign correspondents have had no cause to complain of the censorship.

ITALIAN HERO'S DEATH

"ON, ON, THE VICTORY IS OURS."

Rome, July 24.

An interesting story is told by the papers of an old Garibaldian named Lavezzari who, although 76 years of age, insisted on being allowed to fight for his country. He joined his old regiment which fought against Austria in 1859, having taken an oath to die or regain the land which Austria had wrested from Italy.

Despite his age Lavezzari displayed extraordinary energy. Wherever the fight was thickest, always in the front rank, the red shirt of the old Garibaldian was to be seen.

In the attack upon and capture of Podgora he was one of the first to enter the trenches; but at the moment of victory he fell mortally wounded with his face to the foe and calling to his companions, "On, on, the victory is ours."

The newspapers, in relating the incident, say:—"This is how a hero dies."

DISGUISED AS AUSTRIANS

BAVARIANS OPPOSING MONTENEGRIN TROOPS.

Rome, July 28.

A telegram from Cetinje to "La Tribuna" announces that proof has been obtained that the Austrian troops opposing the Montenegrins in Herzegovina have been strongly reinforced by Bavarian forces, although in Austrian uniforms. The Austrians have also received from Germany much material of war, especially artillery of various calibres.

WILL GREECE CONTINUE NEUTRAL?

Non-Intervention Rumours in Athens

Russian Naval Activity in the Black Sea

New York, July 28.

It is reported from Athens that King Constantine will receive the ex-Premier of Greece, M. Venizelos, in a day or two, when it is expected that the political situation will be definitely defined.

The general opinion is, however, that even in the case of a change of Ministers, Greece will continue neutral.

ALLIES REINFORCED

TROOPS LANDED ON GALLIPOLI PENINSULA.

New York, July 28.

Despatches from Tenedos announce that more troops have been landed on Gallipoli peninsula under the protection of the naval guns. The fresh contingents immediately took their places in the firing line.

RUSSIAN NAVAL ACTIVITY

OPERATIONS IN THE BLACK SEA

New York, July 28.

Despatches from Petrograd announce that the Russian Black Sea squadron continues its activity in those waters with the object of preventing troops or supplies from being sent to the Dardanelles. Several more Turkish sailing ships have been sunk.

DARDANELLES WOUNDED

LANDED AT GIBRALTAR.

Madrid, July 28.

A telegram from Algeciras announces that a transport has landed at Gibraltar 500 British wounded from the Dardanelles.

SUBMARINES IN ACTION

GERMANS CLAIM VICTORY IN THE DARDANELLES.

New York, July 28.

A telegram from Berlin says that it is announced in the "Mittag Zeitung" that a German submarine in the Dardanelles destroyed the French submarine Mariotte on July 26, the crew of 31 men being taken prisoners.

KABYLES IN FRANCE

IMPORTED LABOUR FOR HARVESTING.

Paris, July 28.

A telegram from Chartres, Eure-et-Loir, says that six hundred Kabyles from the south of Algiers have arrived there to assist in gathering the harvest.

CANADIANS FOR EUROPE

10,000 MEN TO LEAVE MONTREAL

London, July 28.

A telegram from Montreal announces that ten thousand more trained and fully equipped troops are ready to sail for the United Kingdom. Meanwhile recruiting in Canada is proceeding under normal conditions.

EXPLOSION IN DIRIGIBLE HANGAR

THREE MEN KILLED AT WORMWOOD SCRUBS.

London, July 28.

An explosion occurred to-day in a hangar for dirigibles at Wormwood Scrubs which caused the death of three men and injuries to some fifteen or twenty others.

An investigation has been commenced to ascertain the cause of the disaster. There is a strong impression that it was the work of a criminal, but no proof to that effect has yet been obtained.

CAUSED BY A LIGHTED CIGAR

London, July 28.

The official report of the explosion at Wormwood Scrubs says:—

"Three persons were killed and twenty persons injured by the explosion of an army dirigible in its hangar at Wormwood Scrubs to-day. The victims were mostly mechanics employed about the aviation camps.

"It is believed that some gas which had escaped was exploded by a lighted cigar."

PROTECTION AGAINST SHRAPNEL

STEEL HELMETS USED BY FRENCH TROOPS.

Paris, July 28.

It is reported from Dunkirk that the new helmet with which the French troops have been provided has given excellent results.

The helmet, which is made of chrome steel, is for protecting the men from shrapnel, and it is stated that the soldiers highly approve of the innovation and now fight with greater confidence. The cost of the helmet is only 33 centimes.

RUBBER SHORTAGE IN NORWAY

MOTOR TRAFFIC SERIOUSLY AFFECTED.

Christiania, July 28.

Rubber is becoming exceedingly scarce in Norway, and motor traffic is greatly affected by the want of it, many omnibuses having had to be withdrawn from the public service.

The Royal Automobile Club and the Foreign Office are trying to obtain the permission of the British Government to the purchase in London of limited quantities of manufactured rubber.

GERMANY'S NEW AEROPLANE

A SEMI-INVISIBLE CRAFT.

Rotterdam, July 28.

A new kind of aeroplane is being used by the German army, which is almost invisible at the height of 3000 feet and entirely so at an altitude of 6600 feet.

This result has been obtained by replacing the material ordinarily used for the wings by a chemical substance called "cellon." It is a combination of cellulose with acetic acid, which makes an exceedingly tough, transparent, pliable and non-inflammable material.

REBELLION IN HUNGARY CAUSED BY FOOD SHORTAGE

London, July 22.

Intelligence has been received from Austria-Hungary through Amsterdam that there have been popular risings of a serious nature in the Dual Monarchy, especially in Hungary.

Although the uneasiness is general, the most violent manifestations have been at Leibnitz and in the valley of the Sulm river to the southward in the direction of Trieste, also on all that part of the frontier.

The movement took the form of a strike and a protest against the scarcity and exorbitant prices of articles of consumption. The bakeries and shops were attacked and pillaged and much damage done, several fires breaking out.

As all the population took part in the movement, the local police were impotent. Help was asked for and the town was occupied by six regiments of troops after a collision with the strikers in which there was considerable bloodshed.

The rising having been put down, the strikers who had been taken prisoners were tried by court-martial, and the ringleaders executed as soon as sentence was pronounced.

The agitation has extended far and wide, and it has been found necessary to withdraw 15,000 troops from the front to maintain order within the Empire.

TURKISH DEFEAT IN THE CAUCASUS

AN OFFENSIVE THAT FAILED

Petrograd, July 27.

Despatches from Tiflis announce that the Turkish forces in the Caucasus having obtained reinforcements commenced a series of offensive operations against the Russians lines which they considered weakest.

The Russians defended themselves with great vigour, repulsing their opponents and finally sallying from their trenches and putting them to flight and pursuing them for several kilometres.

The enemy lost heavily in effective, besides a number of field and machine guns.

The prisoners say that the Turkish army is demoralised.

FORTY TURKISH VESSELS SUNK.

Petrograd, July 27.

A laconic official bulletin announces that Russian torpedo boats in the Black Sea have sunk forty Turkish coaling ships.

COAL SHAFT AND SUSPENSION BRIDGE DESTROYED.

Petrograd, July 27.

The official announcement of the sinking of forty Turkish sailing ships laden with coal by the Russian torpedo boats operating in the coal region of the Black Sea took place last Sunday. The boats also destroyed a new coal shaft and a suspension bridge on the Asia Minor coast.

TURKEY'S NEW ARMY

CONTAINS MORE GERMAN OFFICERS.

New York, July 27.

A telegram from Amsterdam says that the "Telegraaf" publishes despatches from Berlin announcing that fresh contingents of German officers have left for Constantinople at the request of Marshal von der Goltz. They are to take charge of the operations on Gallipoli and of the new Turkish army corps which will take the field before the summer is over.

TRADING WITH THE ENEMY

London, July 28.

Alexander Seling, a German, late Venezuelan consul at Nottingham, has been sentenced to imprisonment for eight months for trading with the enemy.

BALTIC'S NARROW ESCAPE

WHITE STAR LINER PURSUED BY A SUBMARINE

EXCITING FLIGHT FROM THE FASTNET.

Liverpool, July 27.

The steamer Baltic has arrived from New York. The passengers report that a German submarine sighted the ship near Fastnet and chased her. On seeing this the Baltic changed her course and rapidly zigzagged until she had almost made the coast of Cornwall.

PIRATES AGAIN ACTIVE

THREE BRITISH VESSELS SUNK

London, July 26.

The following vessels are reported to have been sunk by German submarines since Saturday last:

British steamer Roslin, 128 tons, Aberdeen, in the North Sea.

British steamer Strathmore, 316 tons, Glasgow, North Sea.

British steamer Grangewood, 3422 tons gross, Gratitude S.S. Co., London from Archangel to Havre.

A number of fishing boats were also sunk.

It is believed that no lives have been lost.

BRITISH FISHING VESSELS LOST

London, July 28.

German submarines have sunk three more British fishing boats and another Norwegian sailing ship. In each case the crews escaped.

NEUTRAL VESSELS SUNK.

London, July 28.

German submarines have sunk the Swedish steamship Emma and the Danish schooners Maria, Neptunis and Lena. The crews have landed at Blyth to-day.

PIRATES' LITTLE JEST

"TORPEDOES FOR CHURCHILL AND GREY."

London, July 27.

Apparently determined to demoralise the British fishing trade as much as possible, two German submarines appeared suddenly among a fishing fleet off the north coast of Scotland and sunk nine trawlers, viz., the Rosslyn, Celtic, Cydorna, Cadwell, Strathmore, Honoria, Cassio, Hermione and Sutton.

In each case, in spite of vigorous shell fire from the German underwater boats, the crews of the fishing boats escaped without injury. Although the men of the Honoria and the Sutton drifted in their open boats for forty and forty-five hours respectively before being picked up, all were landed safely to-day.

Many other fishing vessels have been forced to take refuge in the northern harbours. Some of the fishermen say that the Germans on board the submarines spoke good English. In one case they shouted out: We have nice little torpedoes here for Churchill and Grey."

CLOWN PRINCE'S ESCAPE

GERMAN HEIR NARROWLY ESCAPES DEATH.

London, July 22.

A despatch from the north of France says that last week the German Crown Prince had a narrow escape from death. While he was watching the progress of a combat through his field glasses a projectile fell very close to him, killing two men, wrecking some supply wagons and covering the Prince with earth.

THE THIRD NOTE RE-AFFIRMS ATTITUDE OF THE STATES

Washington, July 24.

The text of the Third Note from the United States to Germany on the subject of the latter Power's methods of conducting submarine warfare has been published in the newspapers to-day, and runs as follows:—

"The Note of the Imperial Government dated July 8 has received the careful consideration of the Government of the United States, which regrets to say that it finds it by no means satisfactory. The Note overlooks the real points at issue between the two Governments, and indicates no means whereby the accepted principles of the law of humanity can be applied in the grave problem awaiting solution; while on the other hand it does make suggestions for a partial suspension of those principles such as would virtually signify the abandonment of them.

"The United States Government notes with satisfaction that the Imperial Government unreservedly recognises the validity of the principles upon which this Government has laid stress in its various communications to Germany, in regard to the proclamation of a war zone and the announcement of a submarine warfare against merchant shipping on the high seas; the principle that the seas are free, that the nature of the cargo of merchant vessels must be ascertained before they can legally be seized or destroyed, and that the lives of non-combatants must in no case be endangered, unless the vessel resists or tries to escape after having received the order to stop and submit to search. An act of reprisal is, per se, an act outside the law, and the defence of such act and the admission thereof are illegal.

"The United States Government has, however, been disagreeably surprised to find that the Imperial Government considers itself to a large extent exempt from the obligation of observing these principles, even in the case of neutral vessels, owing to the practice which, in its opinion, the Government of Great Britain is adopting in regard to neutral commerce.

"The Imperial Government will readily understand that the United States Government cannot discuss the policy of the British Government in regard to neutral commerce, except with that Government itself. It must consider the conduct of other belligerent Governments independently of any discussion with the Imperial Government as to what this Government considers an unjustifiable violation of the rights of American citizens on the part of the commanders of German submarines.

"Illegal and inhuman acts, although they may be considered justifiable against an enemy who is held to be proceeding in defiance of law and humanity, are obviously inadmissible when they deprive neutrals of their recognised rights, especially when they violate even the right to live.

"If belligerents cannot enter upon reprisals against their foes without endangering the lives of neutrals as well as their property, the principles of humanity and justice and a due regard for the dignity of neutrals demand that such practices shall cease; and persistence in them would constitute, under such circumstances, an unpardonable offence against the sovereignty of the neutral Powers affected.

"The United States Government is not oblivious of the abnormal conditions created by this war, nor of the radical changes in the circumstances and methods of attack brought about by the use of instruments of naval war which the nations of the world could not have had in view when the present international laws were formulated. It is prepared to make every reasonable concession for these new and unlooked for aspects of naval warfare; but it cannot consent to renounce any essential and fundamental right of the nation on account of these new and altered circumstances.

"The rights of neutrals in time of war are based on principles, and not on expedient; and those principles are immutable. It is the duty and the obligation of belligerents to find a means of adapting the new circumstances to those principles.

"The events of the last two months have clearly proved that it is possible and practicable to carry on the submarine operations which characterise the activity of the Imperial German fleet within the so-called war zone in a manner substantially in accordance with the accepted practices and rules of warfare.

"The whole world regarded with interest and increasing satisfaction the demonstration that this could be done by the German naval commanders. It is therefore possible to contrive that submarine attacks shall be above criticism, and thereby to do away with the principal causes of offence.

"In view of the admission of illegality made by the Imperial Government when alleging its right to reprisals in defence of its acts, and of the manifest possibility of conforming to the established rules of naval warfare, the United States Government cannot believe that the Imperial Government will abstain any longer from expressing its disapproval of the inexcusable act of the German naval commander in sinking the Lusitania, or of offering reparation for the loss of American lives, so far as reparation can be made for the useless destruction of human lives by an illegal act.

"The United States Government, while not indifferent to the friendly feeling whereby it was inspired, cannot accept the suggestion of the Imperial Government that certain vessels should be designated and allowed the freedom of the seas, as that would be an illegal act. The mere agreement would of itself imply that other vessels would be open to illegal attack, and would therefore constitute an abandonment of the principles which this Government is upholding, and which, in more tranquil times, every nation will accept.

"The Government of the United States and the Imperial Government are striving for the realisation of the same great object, and have jointly so striven for a long while, maintaining the very principles on which the United States Government now so solemnly insists. Both are striving for the freedom of the seas, and the Government of the United States will continue to strive for it, whoever may violate it and at whatever cost. It invites the practical co-operation of the Imperial Government at this moment when co-operation may be most useful and when that great and common proposal may be most notably and efficaciously realised. It also expresses the hope that that object may be to some extent at least attained even before the present war comes to an end. It can be done.

"The Government of the United States feels compelled not only to insist on these principles against any who may violate or disregard them, in the protection of the subjects of the nation, but is also deeply interested in seeing that they shall be practised by the belligerents themselves; and it holds itself in readiness to act at any moment as a common friend with the privilege of suggesting the means of doing so.

"Meanwhile, the very value which this Government attaches to the long and uninterrupted friendship which has existed between the Governments and people of the two countries impels it very gravely to impress upon the Imperial Government the necessity of a scrupulous observance of the rights of neutrals in this serious question. That same friendship impels it to say to the Imperial Government that the repetition by the German naval commanders of acts in contravention of those rights will be considered by the Government of the United States, when they affect American citizens, as deliberately unfriendly."

GERMAN PRESS COMMENTS

"GERMANY'S STAND WILL BE MAINTAINED."

New York, July 24.

According to a despatch from Berlin, the American Note was not published there this morning but will probably appear in the afternoon editions.

Count Reventlow, in an article to the "Tages Zeitung" says that no matter what the Note contains, the submarine campaign will not be restricted. So far as Germany is concerned, there can be no further question as to its attitude. Germany's stand has been taken, and it will be maintained.

FURTHER NEGOTIATIONS.

The "Lokal Anzeiger" says that the contents of the Note do not preclude the possibility of further negotiations between Washington and Berlin.

U.S. NATIONAL DEFENCES

VAST REORGANISATION SCHEME

New York, July 24.

It is reported from Washington that the President has requested the Secretaries of State, War and the Navy to furnish him with full information as to the state of the national defences, with the intention of submitting to Congress a vast scheme of reorganisation.

BRITAIN'S REPLY TO THE STATES

INSTRUCTIONS FOR CANCELLATION.

New York, July 27.

The British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has telegraphed to the United States Secretary of State requesting him to cancel the reply which was sent yesterday to the American Note regarding the question of interference with neutral commerce. Another reply is being prepared and will be sent shortly.

MODIFICATION CAUSED BY WILSON'S NOTE TO GERMANY?

Washington, July 27.

It is believed in official centres that the meaning of the telegram from Sir Edward Grey to Mr. Lansing requesting him to hold over the publication of the British reply to the United States Note as there was a supplement to follow, is, that Great Britain has decided to modify her policy in respect to the control of the seas on account of the observations made in the last American Note to Germany.

The Secretary of State declares that there has been no negotiating of any kind in the matter with the British Ambassador or Foreign Office.

SWISS NEUTRALITY

TO BE RIGIDLY ENFORCED.

Berne, July 23.

The Swiss Federal Council has taken further steps for the maintenance of neutrality on the part of the Press as well as the public. Insults directed to nations, chiefs of State or foreign Governments are prohibited under penalty of a fine of £200 or six months in prison. Those guilty of breaking this regulation will be tried by the Civil Court.

REPLY TO BE FORWARDED THIS WEEK.

New York, July 27.

Despatches from Berlin report that the German Foreign Office is engaged in drafting the reply to the American Note, which will probably be forwarded before the end of the week.

ANOTHER AMERICAN STEAMER SUNK

DARING "REPLY" TO WILSON'S THIRD NOTE

London, July 26.

A German submarine is reported to have sunk the American steamer Leelanaw in the North Sea. The vessel was bound from Archangel to Belfast with a cargo of linseed. All the crew were saved.

(Note—The Leelanaw is described in Lloyd's Register as of 1924 tons gross register, built at Newcastle in 1886, and belonging to J. Jerome of Tacoma, U.S.)

CREW ORDERED TO THE BOATS.

London, July 26.

Further details concerning the American steamer Leelanaw, off the north-west coast of Scotland, show that the commander of the submarine inquired of the captain what cargo there was on board. The latter replying that it was linseed, the commander declared that it was contraband of war and ordered the crew to get into the boats. The order was obeyed and the submarine then proceeded to sink the steamer.

INCIDENT CREATES SENSATION IN WASHINGTON.

Washington, July 26.

The news of the sinking of the American steamer Leelanaw by a German submarine has caused a deep sensation here. It is considered that the act come under the classification of "deliberately unfriendly" acts to which the final paragraph of the Third American Note, recently delivered, refers.

The Government has ordered an official report to be furnished upon the incident.

CREW ARRIVE AT KIRKWALL.

London, July 26.

The captain and crew of the American steamer Leelanaw have arrived at Kirkwall to-day in their own boats. The vessel left Archangel on July 8 with a cargo of flax for Belfast, after which she was to return to the United States in ballast.

The commander of the submarine appears to have sunk the Leelanaw under the authority of the German Government's decree issued on April 18 last declaring flax to be contraband of war.

SUNK BY THE PIRATES

NEUTRAL VESSELS DESTROYED.

London, July 27.

German submarines have sunk the Norwegian barque Harbor, and the Danish fishing boats Nogill and Honaria. The crews are believed to have been rescued.

The crew of the Norwegian schooner, Harboe, which was attacked and set on fire last Sunday by a German submarine, have landed here.

The Captain says that the crew were given five minutes to get into the boats. He saw three other vessels on fire near the spot where the Harboe was attacked.

A despatch from Batavia reports that the American oilship, Maverick, from Los Angeles, on reaching the Java Sea was held up by a Dutch warship and brought to Batavia where, after an inspection of the ship's papers, she was released.

ATTACKED BY CHOLERA

ENVER BEY IN THE HANDS OF GERMAN PHYSICIANS.

Athens, July 23.

A despatch from Constantinople states that the Turkish Minister of War, Enver Pasha, has been attacked by cholera, and is in the hands of German physicians.

It is also reported that an epidemic of cholera is raging in the Turkish military encampments.

BRITAIN'S LOSSES IN OFFICERS AND MEN

330,995 KILLED, WOUNDED & MISSING

London, July 27.

The Prime Minister has announced that the British casualties since the commencement of the war, exclusive of those of the African campaign, details of which are not yet available, amount to 330,995 men.

The statement has caused surprise, as the declarations of the War Office had led people to believe that they were much lower.

THE PREMIER'S STATEMENT.

London, July 27.

A printed statement issued by the Prime Minister gives details of the losses sustained by the British forces from the commencement of the war to July 20. They are divided up as follows:—

Killed:—

France: officers 3,288, men 48,377. Dardanelles, including Naval Division: officers 567, men 7,567. Other theatres of operations, excluding German Southwest Africa: officers 145, men 1,445.

Wounded:—

France: officers 6,083, men 156,308. Dardanelles: officers 1,379, men 28,635. Other theatres of operations: officers 248, men 3,247.

Missing:—

France: officers 1,163, men 50,969. Dardanelles: officers 198, men 10,892. Other theatres of operations, officers 22, men 641.

KING GEORGE ON TOUR

VISIT TO MUNITIONS FACTORIES.

London, July 23.

King George has been visiting the munition factories at Coventry and Birmingham. His Majesty also visited the military hospital at Birmingham.

TO STIMULATE RECRUITING

CANADA REDUCES MEASUREMENT STANDARDS.

Montreal, July 27.

An order issued by the Military Department taking effect from to-day, admits to the ranks of the Canadian troops men of 5 feet 2 inches in height. Heretofore volunteers of less than 5 feet 3 inches were rejected.

The requirement of a chest measurement of 33½ inches has also been reduced half an inch for those of 30 years or under. The object of this relaxation of the regulations is to increase the number of enlistments.

MARRIED MEN AT THE FRONT

843,000 IN THE BRITISH ARMY.

London, July 22.

In the House of Lords to-day Lord Newton said that the number of married men in the British army was approximately 843,000. The aggregate amount of the separation allowances paid to the wives and children of these men came to about £25,000,000.

ANTWERP FINED

London, July 27.

A telegram from Amsterdam to the "Morning Post" announces that the city of Antwerp has been fined 250,000 francs on account of a popular demonstration which was held on the Belgian fête day.

BRITAIN'S FINANCES

PROBABLE INCREASE IN THE BANK RATE

London, July 24.

The Bank of England's statement just issued which shows an increase of £56,000,000 for the week does not show the full volume of subscriptions to the war loan on Tuesday, when probably £250,000,000 out of the total of £600,000,000 was actually paid up.

There are three several reasons why this result was not shown in the Bank's return. For one thing, the joint stock banks, while crediting the Government in their books with the subscriptions made by them, are paying cash on the instalment method, that is, as the public expenditure requires; but it is also believed that the Government has repaid the Bank of England £50,000,000 against advances on pre-moratorium bills. The Bank itself has also paid into the market some millions sterling which were borrowed a few months ago to help in controlling the money market. These cross-currents prevented the Bank return from reflecting accurately the huge transactions of Tuesday.

The Bank rate now being effective and the money market under control, banking opinion is urging the general taxation of imports and a higher income tax, with the object of curtailing imports and enforcing general economy. The Prime Minister yesterday indicated the likelihood of the adoption of some such policy.

The American exchange market is the visible crux of the problem. What will probably happen ultimately will, as heretofore intimated, be the sale of short-term bonds to the American market; but the first step is not unlikely to be an endeavour to stimulate further English sales of American securities. Through still dearer money here Lombard Street has come to recognise the danger of drifting. The Bank rate may go to 6 per cent. before very long, with a view to making 5½ per cent. effective in the outside market.

The offering of the £9,000,000 Canadian loan in America is exciting interest. The incident is welcomed here, even though we feel that it indicates that America's peaceful penetration of Canada is one of the increasing number of evidences of the enormous start the United States holds in the race for financial leadership and prosperity after the war.

TAXATION OF SMALL INCOMES

London, July 23.

The Prime Minister to-day received a commission of bankers and business men who applied to him to urge greater national economy, increased taxation on imported goods, and a tax upon the smaller incomes.

Mr. Asquith stated that the present circumstances were exceptional. The question of further taxation needed serious consideration, but the Government and the Chancellor of the Exchequer would give the matter early attention.

The Minister also showed a disposition to support other suggestions put forward by the commission.

LORD PENRHYN'S LOSSES

ELDEST SON AND TWO HALF BROTHERS KILLED.

London, July 22.

Lieutenant the Hon. Charles Douglas Pennant, of the Coldstream Guards, is unofficially reported killed in action.

Lord Penrhyn has thus lost his eldest son and two half-brothers in the war.

TWELVE MONTHS AGO

ANNIVERSARY OF OUTBREAK OF GREAT WAR.

Paris, July 23.

The French newspapers recall the fact that to-day is the anniversary of the presentation by Austria-Hungary of the ultimatum to Serbia. They emphasise the resolution of France and her allies to continue the war until the Central Powers are crushed.

WHERE GERMANY FAILED.

Paris, July 23.

"Le Matin," in an article on the recurrence of the anniversary of Austria's ultimatum to Serbia, says that Germany reached the point of wishing to crush by diplomacy, if not by force, those nations which were unwilling to accept her yoke. She was completely carried away by her desire for domination, a mania which led her to believe that she could not exist without her authority being uncontested in Europe.

KITCHENER'S ARMY

LARGE REINFORCEMENTS LEAVING FOR THE FRONT.

New York, July 24.

It is reported from London that the newly organised troops in Great Britain are about to leave for the front.

The Secretary for War, Lord Kitchener, has expressed his entire satisfaction with the troops, which include several regiments of Irish.

The forces will probably be reviewed by the King before leaving.

CAMP COOKING

LADIES APPOINTED BY THE WAR OFFICE.

London, July 24.

Hundreds of lady Professors of domestic arts will pass the holidays in giving cookery lessons in the camps of Britain's new armies, receiving the temporary rank of Corporal or Sergeant.

This step is being taken owing to reports that waste is going on in the camps.

The War Office has arranged for a hundred to begin work next week. If the results are good the scheme will be largely extended.

FIGHTING IN ARABIA

TURKS EXPELLED FROM SHEIKH OTHMAN.

London, July 24.

An official report issued by the Press Bureau says:

"The city of Sheikh Othman in Arabia, which in the withdrawal of our troops to Aden, had been temporarily abandoned, was reoccupied by us on Wednesday, the Turks being easily expelled and pursued for a distance of five miles.

"Sheikh Othman is now securely held, and the civil population is fast returning. The Turks still hold Lahaj, but they are said to be suffering from sickness.

"Our total casualties in the affair of Wednesday were about 25 of all ranks."

TRADING WITH THE ENEMY

NOT ILLEGAL IN THE FAR EAST.

New York, July 23.

A telegram from Tokio announces that the Japanese Government has informed Britain that Japan cannot accede to the request that trade with the citizens of hostile nations be prohibited in the Far East, on the ground that such a step would be contrary to constitutional law.

TURKISH VESSELS SUNK

BY BRITISH SUBMARINE IN THE MARMORA.

London, July 26.

It is reported from Athens that a British submarine penetrated as far as Constantinople, where it sank a Turkish transport and two smaller vessels armed with cannon.

RUMOURED SINKING OF TURKISH TRANSPORT.

London, July 26.

Confirmatory tidings have been received that a British submarine eluded the Turkish warships in the Dardanelles and the Sea of Marmora and penetrated into the very harbour of Constantinople, sunk two of the Sultan's gunboats and a steamer and returned safely to her base.

According to a Mitylene despatch, the submarine also sank a Turkish transport in the Sea of Marmora.

Athens despatches state that the submarine fired a torpedo at a transport anchored at Tophane. She failed to strike the transport, but hit the wharf which was completely wrecked.

The Mitylene despatch says that the torpedo struck the transport while discharging troops, and that the vessel sank in a few minutes.

NOTE TO NORWAY

BRITISH FOREIGN SECRETARY'S CONCILIATORY ATTITUDE.

Christiana, July 23.

The British Foreign Secretary has sent a Note conceived in the most cordial terms giving full satisfaction to the Norwegian Government for the violation of Norwegian waters by British warships, especially in regard to the seizure of a German steamship within those waters.

The Press expresses its satisfaction, and demands that the Government shall request amends from Germany for the torpedoing of Norwegian vessels with the loss of several lives.

MINES IN THE SUEZ CANAL

LOSS OF THE THERSITES.

New York, July 23.

A despatch from the Hague says that it is reported from Cairo that the British steamer Theresa, while passing through the Suez Canal, ran against a Turkish mine and sank.

A report from Boston, however, says that the captain of the British steamer Rufford Hall, anchored there with a cargo from the Far East, describes the sinking by a mine in the Suez Canal of the new Blue Funnel liner Thersites, which took place about the end of June last. It is thought that this must be the vessel referred to, as the Theresa is reported to be still afloat, and to have reached another port.

CAPETOWN'S THANKS

SWORD OF HONOUR FOR GENERAL BOTHA.

London, July 23.

A telegram from Capetown announces that the municipality of the city presented General Botha with an address congratulating him on the success of the campaign in Southwest Africa, and with a sword of honour. The ceremony was witnessed by an immense crowd, who greeted the General with immense enthusiasm.

ITALY'S WAR LOAN

SUBSCRIPTIONS NOW REACH 1,117,500,000 LIRE.

Rome, July 22.

It is announced that the total subscriptions to the Italian national loan now amount to 1,117,500,000 lire.

APPALLING STEAMSHIP DISASTER

VESSEL TURNS TURTLE IN ILLINOIS RIVER

New York, July 24.

A telegram from Chicago announces that the Michigan Steamship Company's steamer Eastland, while travelling in the Illinois river with a large number of excursionists on board, capsized and sank. It is rumoured that three hundred persons were drowned in the catastrophe.

700 BODIES RECOVERED.

New York, July 24.

It is reported from Chicago that about 700 bodies have been recovered from the Illinois river.

A subscription has been opened in Chicago for the surviving relatives of the victims, and large sums have already been contributed.

The Eastland was a steamer of 1961 tons, and was built in 1903.

STRUCK A SANDBANK.

New York, July 24.

Further details of the catastrophe to the steamer Eastland show that the vessel had been chartered by the Western Electric Company for the purpose of giving a day's outing to all the employees of the firm with their families, the total number amounting to about 2500.

One report says that the accident was caused by the vessel running into a sandbank in the river.

PASSENGERS SLEEPING IN THEIR CABINS.

Chicago, July 24.

According to the statements of some of the survivors, the whole thing happened so suddenly that the captain had no time to give any orders. The passengers were for the most part sleeping in their cabins at the time.

The names of the victims have not yet been published.

MORE THAN LICENSED NUMBER OF PASSENGERS ON BOARD.

Chicago, July 24.

This morning the steel excursion steamer Eastland, carrying 2500 employees of the Western Electric Company, with their wives, children and sweethearts, turned turtle on a sandbank at Dock river near the Clark Street bridge. Three hours afterwards persons on the shore heard cries and knocks from those who were confined in the cabins and other rooms which were above the water line.

The Chief of Police said at 9 o'clock that 250 bodies had been recovered, but he believed that the total would not be short of a thousand. He expected to recover the other bodies when the inner compartments of the boat were reached.

There is a large number of boats engaged in the rescue work, and they are being assisted by numerous private motorcars and wagons which have been pressed into service to convey the sick and injured to hospital.

An eye-witness of the disaster said that the boat turned gradually over. The crowd rushed to the side that had settled in the water, and the steamer, overbalanced, turned clean over on its side.

The best evidence obtainable shows that the Eastland had more than her licensed number on board, viz., 2060.

Mr. W. H. Greenbaum, who was in charge of the excursion, said:—

"We chartered five steamers for the excursion to Michigan City. We had the steamers Eastland, Petoski, Theodore Roosevelt, Racine and Maywood. The Eastland was the first boat to load, and the docks were crowded with passengers. The report shows that there were 2500 passengers aboard the Eastland. I have no idea how the accident occurred."

1,500 VICTIMS

INCREASING DEATH-ROLL IN THE EASTLAND TRAGEDY.

New York, July 27.

It is reported from Chicago that the total number of victims of the Eastland catastrophe will probably be not less than 1500. At the time the last despatch was received yesterday evening 1072 bodies had been recovered. There are still many more bodies not yet recovered, and it is unlikely that this can be done completely until the hull of the vessel has been raised from the bottom of the river. The hull is to be examined by the twenty-five divers that have been brought together for the purpose from all parts of the lake.

The proprietors of the Eastland were notified by the Department of Commerce on July 14 that the vessel was a danger to life; but this fact was only revealed on Monday night by the statements of the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Redfield, referring to the correspondence between the Department and the St. Joseph Navigation Company of Chicago.

Public subscriptions for the victims of the accident amount to about $200,000, and the Western Electric Company has devoted another $100,000 to the same purpose.

A NEGLECTED WARNING

New York, July 26.

Recent telegrams from Chicago announce that 931 bodies have been recovered from the wreck of the steamer Eastland, of which number only 60 are still unidentified.

Mr. John Devereux York, Naval architect, has sent to the officer who is making inquiries into the cause of the accident copy of a letter he wrote in 1913 to the Inspector General of Ports declaring the Eastland to be very unsafe owing to the insufficient weight of her keel, and recommending that on this account she should not be allowed to continue in service.

The inquiries instituted by the police also tend to show that the number on board at the time the vessel capsized was nearly 3,000, although her full load of passengers was supposed to be only 2,070.

FIRE IN U.S. NAVY YARD

STRICT INVESTIGATION ORDERED.

New York, July 22.

Two fires occurred to-day almost simultaneously in the local navy yard, one on the super-Dreadnought New York and the other on the destroyer Warrington, both in drydock.

While but little damage was done, the fires being easily put out, the fact that four fires have occurred in the warships' navy yard and three at New York in the last three weeks, coupled with the fires that occurred in the warship docks at Philadelphia and Boston, was sufficient justification for strict investigation being ordered.

It was said that the fire on the New York was caused by electric wiring; but the officers refused to say what was the cause of the fire on the Warrington.

POLITICAL SCANDAL

RESIGNATION OF U.S. MINISTER TO SAN DOMINGO

Washington, July 23.

The President has accepted the resignation of the American Minister at San Domingo, Mr. James Sullivan, thus terminating a disagreeable political scandal. It was brought to light by Senator Phelan in the course of an investigation in the name of the Department of State into the fitness of Mr. Sullivan for his office, the result of the report on the subject being unfavourable to him.

WIRELESS AND THE WAR

MARCONI COMPANY'S ANNUAL MEETING.

London, July 26.

Presiding to-day at the annual meeting of the Marconi Wireless Company Signor Guglielmo Marconi dwelt upon the interference with the development of the company in some directions in consequence of the war. For instance, the Argentine Company had for the present deferred work on the high power station; and the negotiations of the Spanish Company with the Government of that country had not been facilitated by the outbreak of war. They continued, however, to progress, and he was advised that the negotiations were assured of an early and satisfactory termination.

Since the last meeting there had been some important developments in wireless; however, it was inadvisable to say more on that subject at present.

There were 1100 men from the Company employed in the Army, the Navy, or on special duty.

Mr. Isaacs, in seconding the report, said that the reason why business had not been prosperous in the first year was because of German competition aided by a subsidy. The Company had, however, fought that competition successfully.

It had been unfortunate that the British Government had refused to grant them the right to erect high power stations in all the colonies in 1910. The Germans resolved to build a chain in all the German colonies, paying three times the price that this Company had asked of the British Government. The result was that before war was declared at midnight on August 4, Germany, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon of the same day, had been able to send wireless messages to her merchant vessels at sea to make quickly for neutral ports. By that means she saved the greater part of her mercantile marine.

SPIES FROM THE STATES

TO BE COURT-MARTIALLED IN BRITAIN.

New York, July 27.

A number of persons who have recently arrived from the United States have been detained on a charge of being spies. After a preliminary investigation the men will be tried by court martial.

GERMAN FRONTIER FORTIFICATIONS

AROUSE INDIGNATION IN HOLLAND.

New York, July 23.

It is reported from Amsterdam that the Netherlands Government is considering a proposal that a Note should be sent to the German Foreign Office inquiring the reasons for the Germans having erected fortifications on the frontier and for their exercising such strict vigilance on the Belgo-Dutch boundary.

The action of the Germans is giving rise to great irritation owing to its hindrance to traffic and to the many inconveniences it causes. Unpleasant incidents occur daily to the Dutch traders who have business in Belgium, through their being stopped and subjected to annoying interrogations, and sometimes to detention.

HUNGARIAN PAINTER'S SUICIDE

GALIMBERTI SHOOTS HIMSELF.

Rome, July 23.

A telegram from Buda Pest announces that the famous Hungarian painter, Galimberti, has committed suicide by shooting himself with a revolver on his wife's tomb.

SPAIN AND THE WAR

SYMPATHY NOW WITH THE ALLIES.

London, July 27.

The "Morning Post," in a leading article on the attitude of Spain in regard to the belligerents, says:—

"It is obvious that German designs on France required that Spain should preserve a friendly neutrality towards the Central Powers.

"In this, until recently, the German world policy has been successful, and since the commencement of the war Spain has largely favoured Germany. But now signs are not wanting that, in Spain as in the rest of the world, German methods of warfare are opening all eyes to the true character of their barbarous egoism.

"A remarkable manifesto which appears in another column signed by more than seventy distinguished Spaniards proves that, among those at least, sympathy with the Allies is gaining ground. We welcome this declaration from Spain's foremost men, not the less so because it expresses sympathy with a conviction which has spread throughout the civilised world."

PEACE PROPAGANDA

LEADS TO ARRESTS OF SOCIALISTS IN GERMANY.

Amsterdam, July 24.

A despatch from Berlin says that the police have opened active warfare upon the Socialists who are spreading their peace propaganda. The houses of many of them have been searched and numbers of inflammatory leaflets were discovered. The men arrested belong to the new Socialist party formed by members of the Wurttemberg Diet.

SURVIVORS PUT TO DEATH

FRANZ JOSEF "ELIMINATES" A COWARDLY REGIMENT

London, July 22.

Information has been received that a Bohemian regiment which was reported to have been guilty of cowardice was eliminated from the army by Emperor Francis Joseph, who ordered all the survivors to be put to death.

FRENCH SCULPTOR KILLED

IN ACTION AT THE FRONT.

London, July 23.

The death in action of M. Henri Brzeska is officially announced. The late M. Brzeska was a sculptor belonging to what is known as the "Vorticist" school. Most of his work was executed and exhibited in London, although he was a Frenchman by birth.

THE DEATH PENALTY

FOR GERMANS WHO ASSIST THE ENEMIES OF THE FATHERLAND.

New York, July 23.

The German Government is stated to have warned German subjects in the United States through the German Consuls in the States that anyone who aids or abets the enemies of Germany in time of war will incur the death penalty, in accordance with the law referring thereto.

INTERNEED IN SARDINIA

20,000 AUSTRIANS TAKEN BY ITALY

Rome, July 23.

The number of Austrian prisoners captured up to the present is estimated at 20,000, most of whom have been interned in Sardinia.

About 1900 deserters from the Austrian ranks have surrendered themselves to the Italians.

THE FORESTAL COMPANY

And Dubious Patriotism

BRITISH JOBS FOR GERMANS

There once lived a Baron Munchausen. He was, we believe, a German, and he told "tail" stories.

To-day Baron d'Erlanger is prominent in Anglo-Argentine commercial affairs. Among other concerns he is a leading light on the London board of the Forestal Land, Timber and Railway Company, Ltd., a company which has more than once been criticised by its British shareholders for its partiality to German employes.

This company's ordinary general meeting was held in London last month, and the report of the proceedings appeared in the "Review of the River Plate" last week. At the meeting Baron d'Erlanger delivered an eloquent address, answering the criticisms of another gentleman who recently made a tour of Argentina, and looked rather closely into the conduct of the affairs of a number of British concerns. The Baron said, among other things, "I may also mention that the German managers of the Forestal Company in Buenos Aires were immediately suspended in their functions, and have ceased to be managers of this company and have been replaced." The suspension referred to as having taken place immediately after war was declared, but may be, we are wrong, and we confess a complete inability to understand Baron d'Erlanger's statement in view of certain facts.

At the outbreak of the war the joint managers of the Forestal Company were Messrs. Schefftel and Schleiss. These gentlemen were deprived of the faculty of signing for the company, but in every other sense, performed, until very recently, the functions of managers. At an important meeting held at the offices of the lawyer of the Forestal Company, during the first week in June, respecting a controversy with another large company, Mr. Schefftel attended as manager of the Forestal Company, and we believe that only about twenty days ago were the services of this gentleman dispensed with. We also believe that Mr. Schleiss held his post as manager till about April or May last.

Under the heading of "Far Reaching Measures," in the report of the company's meeting, Baron d'Erlanger goes on to say, "We have gone as far as it was possible to go in the changes we have made in the administration, without bringing about a stoppage of our factories." From this it might be gathered that only the indispensable technical men of German nationality had been retained. However, we are informed that the following posts are held by Germans in the Buenos Aires offices of the Forestal Company:—Cashier, Mr. Fuses; Chief of Maritime Department, Mr. Simons; Second Chief of Maritime Department, Mr. Winterfeld; Chief Sales Clerk, Mr. Lindner; Sales Contracts, Mr. Pablo Sasse; Bookkeeper, Mr. Winclair; Accountant's Assistants, Messrs. Antonio von Niebauer, and H. Houttes.

It is understood that Mr. Simons is also manager of the Cia Argentina de Lanchas, whose directors are Messrs. Negri and Colquhoun, and whose offices are in the same building as those of the Forestal Company. Are the officers referred to above considered as essential to the non-stoppage of the factories?

British Columbia lumbermen have been asked to submit bids on a contract for 500,000,000 board feet of lumber to be used in building 100,000 two-roomed houses in France. The houses are to be built at the expense of the Government for the use of people who have lost their houses and other property in the war. The order would, if secured, keep the largest mills in the province occupied for some time in cutting the lumber.

IMPROVEMENT IN PROSPECTS

London, July 28.

The "Financial Times" devotes a leading article to the prospects of Argentine railways, which says that the holders of stocks have been having a bad time, which is traced to some extent to deals in the future prospects of the lines. The article continues:—

"The fears of competition by lines which are being built either by the Argentine Government or by foreign companies are disposed of for many years, if not finally. The existing lines have chiefly been constructed with money raised abroad in time of great prosperity when seeking employment at low rates. The results, for investors were for many years highly satisfactory; so much so that the appropriations of capital increased yearly, until doubtless the pace became too fast. Extensions went ahead of popular development, with the result of diminished mileage returns.

"From the present onwards, however, and possibly for many years one can expect to see the opposite. The result will be the continuous development of the districts already served by the railways. The new extensions, always temporarily unprofitable, will almost certainly cease to be so. It will be impossible to raise money on terms which are likely to be attractive until another wave of prosperity attracts new money to begin a fresh period of expansion.

"With a brisk export trade forecasting an early revival of important trade, the current year ought to witness a turn in the fortunes of the railways. How severe the fall has been from the highest in 1914 is shown by a table wherefrom the following figures are taken:—

"Pacific, fall 32 points, Southern 45½, Western 39½, Central 32½, Cordoba 30½, Entre Rios 35½. The prices of all these stocks are rather nominal. In one sense the recent selling has been in the nature of a compliment to the Argentine railways, because it means that this market has remained one of the few channels open to investors needing cash. This should reassure holders."

NO COMMENT ON THE WAR

DANISH CENSORSHIP OF THE PRESS.

Copenhagen, July 27.

A temporary law giving the Minister of Justice powers to restrain Press comment upon the war has been hurriedly passed by the Danish Rigsdag and signed by the King. Any newspaper violating this regulation will be subject to a fine without being allowed recourse to the regular tribunals.

The measure is due to the desire of the Government to check criticism of the belligerent Powers, a certain section of the Copenhagen and provincial Press having been using severe language on the subject recently.

AUSTRIA'S ARMY

TO BE AUGMENTED BY 800,000 MEN.

London, July 27.

The Buda Pest correspondent of the "Morning Post" reports that the organisation of the last Austro-Hungarian Landsturm troops will be completed by Oct. 7. This will add 800,000 men to the army of the Dual Monarchy. The class includes men between the ages of 43 and 50.

REVOLUTION IN HAITI

President Put to Death

New York, July 28.

It is reported from Port-au-Prince, Haiti, that the Governor of the city, apparently acting under orders from the President of the Republic, General Guillaume, had 160 political prisoners executed, one of them being ex-President Oreste Zamor.

Infuriated by this brutality the populace attacked the Legation of San Doming, where the Governor was in refuge, dragged him out and put him to death.

They then went to the French Legation where General Guillaume had fled, took him out and shot him in front of the Legation.

The United States Government has decided to despatch a warship to Haiti to protect the foreign residents. The vessel may also take a landing force if it should be found necessary to exercise pressure on the rebels.

WITH THE COLOURS

Ward, Henry James, Royal Dublin Fusiliers.

KILLED IN ACTION

SERGEANT-MAJOR A. G. THOMSON

The many friends in this country of Mr. Alex G. Thomson will read with deep regret the announcement of his death a few days ago. This sad event took place at Bethune, France, on June 20. Sergeant-Major Thomson was struck by a splinter from a shell and death was instantaneous. He had seen active service in the Boer war, had for about seven years, been one of the staff of the Santa Fe Land Co. and the Forestal. All who knew him at San Cristobal remember him with affection and deep regard.

At the beginning of the war he joined the 2nd. King Edward's Horse, but it was not until April that he was sent to the front, where he has too soon filled a soldier's grave.

A true sportsman, and a brave and upright man his loss is mourned by all his old companions. (many of whom are also at the front) and by a large circle of friends.

DRIED VEGETABLES IN DRESDEN

Paris, July 22.

A despatch from Zurich reports that the statement appears in the "Frankfort Gazette" that, in order to introduce a remedy for the high price of vegetables, the municipality of Dresden, has decided to distribute dried vegetables among the inhabitants at the rate of half a kilogramme per head, to obtain which a special bond will have to be produced.

SABOTAGE ON A LINER

Tampering with Engines on Voyage from B.A.

ARRESTS AT GENOA

Rome, July 28.

Telegrams from Genoa announce that the steamer Lombardia has arrived from Buenos Aires with passengers and reservists.

Two of the men belonging to the engine room are under arrest on a charge of having tampered with the machinery of the vessel while on the way from Buenos Aires to Rio de Janeiro, causing her to be detained some time for repairs. The men will undergo their trial in due course. PAGE 5.

QUILMES EN FETE

WHIST DRIVE AND DANCE IN AID OF RED CROSS FUND.

Ever since the first patriotic entertainment held by Britons in the Argentine for the purpose of assisting the various organised funds which have made their call upon every one with the spark of patriotism alight, Quilmes has always been to the fore front. Never has a function, however small, been organised that has not met with success, both from the point of view of those entertained and from the main object of financially swelling the funds for whatever patriotic association the function was organised.

Last night brought forward another example of how Quilmes can "do things," of how they can enjoy themselves, and chiefly in what manner they can materially increase the funds of the British Red Cross Society.

The Quilmes Dramatic Society, through its committee, had organised a bridge tournament and a dance, and an immense success it was.

Miss Ross, the Principal of the High School, had most generously placed the schoolrooms, in fact all the rooms in the school, at the disposal of the organising committee, and to the dance flocked the whole of the élite of Quilmes. Approximately four hundred people were present.

The expenses incurred were the minimum. The ladies of Quilmes provided the refreshments, and all through the day Mr. Reed was busy with the decorations, and, as usual, all was given free of cost. The British Society lent their flags and banners. The scene was a gay one, and in spite of, or may be on account of, the numbers present, the enjoyment of all was apparent.

Mrs. Oldham, Mrs. Lovatt and the Messrs. Walters provided the prizes for the bridge tournament, and Mr. Avery came forward with numberless cigarettes.

No estimate can yet be given of the amount of the benefit to the Red Cross funds, but it will be considerable, and small as Quilmes may be, it can claim to be justly proud of its organisation and assistance to patriotic funds.

COUNTERING POISON GAS

RUSSIA'S UNIQUE METHOD.

London, July 27.

It is reported from Petrograd that the Russians are in the habit of using an ingenious method of protecting themselves from the fumes of the poison gases of the Germans.

In front of their trenches the Russians cut other shallower trenches, which they fill with material soaked in petroleum. When the Germans launch a cloud of asphyxiating gas the Russians set fire to the material which gives out a dense column of smoke and flame, causing the gas cloud to deviate from its course and rise to a height which makes it harmless.

LAND OF LILLIPUT

Conducted by Egeria

My dear Lilliputians,

Naturally you hear many stories connected with this terrible war. Life seems cheap indeed, when one thinks of the lives being sacrificed day after day. It reminds one of the time when gladiators fought with lions, and Christians were thrown to the same wild beasts, all to make a Roman holiday; but the lives to-day on one side at least are being given up to make a holiday for the future world—a holy-day when war will be finished with—we all hope. I read a story recently about a young Canadian who was wounded; and whose rescue cost several other lives. When he fell, an English bugler picked him up and tried to take him to safety. A shell burst above them, the bugler fell dead. A stretcher-bearer then took the soldier on his back—he was hit and fell—another and another stretcher-bearer came, and finally they got to the dressing station, where his wounds could be attended to. The Canadian says he was wheeled away from the zone of danger in a baby-carriage; and he also tells of the amusement lots of them got from the sight of Germans masquerading in Highland kilts and in khaki. It is a good thing the soldiers have a sense of humour is it not? They get a smile, then, even in the midst of awful sights and sounds. The soldier says he does not even know the name of the bugler hero who gave his life for him, in a way, one comrade just helping another—but that his face will live with him for ever. Do you know where Ontario is? If not look it up on your maps of North America; and you will see a place where 45,000 children in 245 country schools are growing (or maybe by this time have grown), a potato war crop, the proceeds to be devoted to the funds for helping the war sufferers.

I think I told the inhabitants of Lilliput a great deal about the war dogs, some time ago; and how useful the four-footed friends of us humans were, especially to the Red Cross workers. Now I will tell you about police dogs. At one time everybody thought the only use for a dog was to keep watch and ward over the doormat; but the following story will give you some idea of what a dog can do, and of his superior intelligence, also how he may be educated. The first one who thought of using the dog in the police force was a Belgian who lived in Ghent. Now you hear so much about Belgium since the war that you will probably know where Ghent is, and what a quaint old city it is and intersected by canals. Now the docks and landing places were for years infested with gangs of loafers and thieves who often beat the solitary policeman and escaped capture. The chief of the police thought much of the responsibilities of the situation and finally concluded that it would be safer for the men and a valuable addition to the efficiency of the force to add dogs to them.

These petty depredations became more and more annoying as time went on, so some sixteen dogs were selected, trained and enrolled as regular members of the police force of Ghent. Any man connected with the department who is caught ill-treating the canine members will be instantly dismissed. The methods of training are entirely those of kindness from the beginning.

They are taught by dummy figures made up to represent thieves and suspicious looking characters, such as they would be apt to encounter. The dummy is placed in the position a man would be liable to take if he wanted to conceal himself and put in the position the dogs might meet with him on their rounds.

The dogs are then taught to seek, attack, seize and hold, but not to hurt seriously. They are very intelligent and soon understand all of the first lesson, but not to hurt the prey is a harder proposition. The dummy is lowered to the ground and the teacher teaches his dog pupil not to worry the victim. In a short time he learns he must not allow his foe to move even a finger until an order is given.

After the dogs understand the business of the dummy a real man takes his place and they try to have the person who takes care of the dogs and feed them, so they will be fond of them.

At first the dog wears a muzzle; as soon as he is amenable to orders and can be fully depended upon they try them with other men on the force, and in about four months' time he has usually completed his education, and is ready for active service as a regular member in good standing of the police force.

These dogs are taught to seize their prey in the water, to save drowning persons, to scale steep walls, be alert and quiet and be dependable.

Most of them are of the sheep-dog breed, but a few of the Russians have been used with good results.

They have a uniform, strong leather collars bound with steel and studded with sharp points of steel, and wear a medal inscribed with name, address and age. In place of the helmet he has a close muzzle of wire, so as he can drink, but not eat, and for protection in bad weather he has a snug overcoat.

During the day they live in comfortable quarters in their spacious boxes at the station headquarters, but begin their duty at ten in the evening.

When the bells begin to chime in the quaint old belfry of Ghent they come to attention and then begin a mad barking, so anxious are they to get busy, and on the last chime they are loosened and seek their own special officer and go with him on his beat. They go about fifty yards in advance and if anything suspicious meets their eye they bark for help, and if the man tries to escape the dog springs at him and never lets go until given the order.

They are on duty until six o'clock in the morning and return for the day to the headquarters. They are fed on soup, rice and the best Kneipp bread twice a day and get a biscuit and a slice of bread before they go on duty at night.

The dog has proved himself faithful, attentive and reliable. He walks the regular beat, searches dark corners, if suspicious barks for his comrade, works well and has proved a valuable addition to the police.

There would be somebody who would be afraid of a dog, truly, but only the person with a guilty mind.

Have any of you wondered why salt melts the snow, why things grow yellow with age, etc?

I came across the following little scientific stories from "The Child's Book of Wonder" recently, for I am always on the look-out for something to interest the Lilliputians, and here they are.

WHY DOES SALT MELT THE SNOW?

We are all familiar with the instrument known as the thermometer, which was invented by a man named Fahrenheit, who lived from 1686 to 1736. He found that the lowest temperature he could obtain was got from a mixture of ice and salt, and in order to make a scale to measure heat he called the temperature of this mixture 0 degree, and the temperature of boiling water he called 212 degrees.

Now, on such a scale the freezing-point of water was 32 degrees, so that we say that it is freezing when the thermometer stands at 32 degrees Fahrenheit.

When salt is mixed with ice or snow in this way, the process of mixing changes the salt, ice, or snow into a liquid, but the temperature of that liquid is considerably lower than the temperature of freezing water or snow; so that we see one of the most striking effects of heat is its power of changing the physical condition of matter.

In this particular case it changes the salt, ice, or snow into liquid; but as that liquid requires a much colder temperature to freeze it than water does, the snow is slowly melted.

WHY DO THINGS GO YELLOW WITH AGE?

This is a question of the production of a particular colouring matter, or pigment, in this case a yellow pigment. As a matter of fact, it is not everything that goes yellow with age. For instance, an old shilling is not yellow, which points to the fact that whether the article becomes yellow or not depends upon what it is made of.

In the case of a leaf which turns yellow in the autumn, these colouring matters, or pigments, are produced by a chemical change, the green colouring matter splitting up after a long time into others, of which yellow is one. So most things which become yellow as they get old are yellow because of the production of a yellow pigment from some of the substances contained in them, and these things will generally be found to be composed of vegetable matter.

WHY DOES WOOD WARP IN DAMP WEATHER?

As long as a piece of wood is growing in the tree, and is alive, it contains, of course, a certain amount of moisture, and this moisture is in the fibres, which we may think of as a number of small tubes packed side by side. Now, these fibres shrink or swell up according to the amount of moisture they contain. When the tree is cut down and made into timber, a great deal of the moisture is let out and evaporated; and if the wood is quite dry it will retain its shape as long as it is so.

It is one of the difficulties in drying wood to get both sides equally dry; and we may have noticed that if we place a piece of damp wood near the fire, or if we wet one side of a piece of dry wood and hold it near the fire, the wood immediately begins to curl, owing to the wet side contracting or expanding, while the other side remains stationary. The shrinking and swelling, according to the amount of moisture present, takes place only across the grain of the wood, leaving its length entirely unaffected by the moisture.

WHAT HAPPENS TO SNAILS WHEN THEY DIE, AS WE FIND ONLY THE EMPTY SHELLS?

We may sometimes find, while walking along the sea-shore when the tide is low, the white bones of a bird or some other animal. And, if so, we may ask why do we not find the dead bird, but only its bones? Perhaps we may say at once that it was because the bones of the bird were harder than the rest of it, and lasted after all the soft flesh and muscle and everything else had decayed and disappeared. So it is in the case of the snail. True, the snail has not a skeleton like a bird has, because the body of a snail is a very soft substance, like that of a slug. When the snail dies its soft body is easily broken up into many different chemical substances, and all the moisture in it evaporates, and all that is left is the hard shell, which will last a long time. So that the answer to the question is simply that the harder a thing is the longer it will last, no matter whether it happens to be the shell of a snail or the bones of another animal.

WHY DOES OIL FLOAT ON THE SURFACE OF WATER?

It seems very curious at first sight that one liquid should be able to float on the surface of another; but if we think carefully about it we see at once that whether a thing floats on the surface of water or not depends upon one or two things. First, it depends upon whether it is soluble—that is, will dissolve—in water or not.

For instance, if we put a piece of salt in water it disappears because the salt is soluble in the water. If, however, we put a piece of light wood on water it floats there, because it is not soluble, and therefore remains intact, and also because the weight of the piece of wood is less than an equal piece of water. It is much the same with oil. Oil and fat are quite insoluble in water, and as the oil is considerably lighter than the same bulk of water, it floats on the surface.

WHY DO SMALL THINGS FLOATING ON WATER MOVE TOWARDS LARGE THINGS?

The reason why small bodies floating on the surface of water are attracted to larger bodies is that, by the law of gravitation, any large body attracts in its own direction any smaller body, whether the two are floating in the water or whether they are in any other surroundings. Only if they happen to be in water it is easier for the power of attraction between the two to cause the smaller body to move towards the greater, because water is a mobile fluid and can be displaced easily by anything which moves through it.

Now I am sure you will like to know something about the centipede, so you will have a variety of things to think about. You have all seen a centipede I am sure, and perhaps know it by the old familiar name of "Jenny Hundredfeet." Another name for it is Chilipoda, and it is a nasty insect to have anything to do with, for it poisons when it bites, and it is a ferocious animal (it is an animal you must know, although we often call it an insect), active and swift, and it feeds on other living animals, to whom the bite is fatal instantly, the poison being supplied by glands to two great claws placed just beneath the mouth. In tropical regions, centipedes are very dangerous, the bite being not only most painful, but producing sores which are very difficult to heal. There is a Professor who some years ago tried to study the order in which the legs of centipedes moved; but he did not succeed in making out the method. He came to the conclusion that if the animal had to study the question itself it would not get on at all, and he concluded his remark by the following: A centipede was happy quite.

Until a toad in fun said, "Pray, which leg moves after which?"

This raised her doubts to such a pitch,

She fell exhausted in the ditch
Not knowing how to run.

Now I have no story for you this week; but perhaps you will enjoy a number of little stories, written by a slave called Aesop. I am sure all your friends the Brobdingnagians know them well.

THE JACKDAW AND THE PIGEONS.

A jackdaw who noticed that the pigeons in a certain dovecot were very well fed, whitewashed his feathers in order to look as much like a dove as possible, and went and lived among them. The pigeons, so long as he kept silent, did not recognise him; but at last he forgot that he was acting the part of a dove, and began to chatter like a jackdaw.

Then the pigeons saw what he was, and drove him away. But when he flew back to the church tower, the other jackdaws, not knowing him in his discoloured feathers, also drove him away, so that he had no home to go to.

It is no use pretending to be what we are not, for we are sure to be found out sooner or later.

We gain nothing by being greedy.

With love from
"Egeria."

As proof that Argentine cigarettes are appreciated by our volunteers, the following extract from a letter received (similar to others) from T. Overton, Rosario, will interest subscribers:—

"The splendid offer of the Buenos Aires branch of the Royal Colonial Institute to forward Argentine cigarettes to our volunteers relieves me of the anxiety as to whether my son would receive the boxes which I have been posting to him fortnightly. My son stated in a recent letter from the front 'that they only have a very small number of cigarettes dished out to each man, and that if he could only get a packet of Argentine now and again he would feel like being in heaven.'"

London, S.W.
16th. June, 1915.

Sir,—I am commanded by the Army Council to request that you will convey to the British community in Uruguay their deep appreciation of the generous and patriotic feeling which prompted them to send over to the Army the horses which arrived at Liverpool on the s.s. Hesperides on May 31.

I am to ask you to assure the donors that their horses will be well cared for and acclimatised, before being put into work, and that they will prove a most welcome addition to the fighting forces of the Empire.

Of the seventy-seven which will shortly be ready for issue, forty-three are classed as Infantry Officers' Chargers and Mounted Infantry Troopers, and thirty-four as Light Draught Horses. Some time must, however, elapse before the whole of the horses presented by the British community in Uruguay can be issued to units, as the horses generally landed in poor condition, after their long sea voyage.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Yours obedient servant,
(Signed) B. B. CUBITT.

His Majesty's Minister,
British Legation,
Montevideo.

MESSRS. LIEBIG AND THE RED CROSS FUND

A MAGNIFICENT DONATION.

It has been decided by the Directorate of Messrs. Liebig and Co. Ltd. to give an annual donation of £5000 sterling to the British Red Cross Fund as a tribute and a material expression of what they consider the whole world owes to the British Mercantile Marine in these trying moments of European history.

PROPAGANDA IN URUGUAY

"POR LA CIVILIZACION."

The eleventh number of the spirited publication "Por la Civilización" edited by an influential French-British-Belgian-Uruguayan Committee (address Casilla de Correos 84, Montevideo) has been issued. The front page is occupied by an illustration of the world-revered Queen of Belgium and the young heir-apparent. The number is published in honour of the Queen's birthday, July 25. The introductory article is an eloquent eulogy on the ideal and illustrious woman of "home and people." The article concludes as follows:—

"These sovereigns who yesterday ruled over a people the most active, most laborious and most prosperous on earth, wander to-day almost without territory or country, he—at the front of a handful of heroes defending the remnants of a territory reduced to a mere strip—because the rest is still cursed with the brutal and savage plant which the vampires designed in the Prussian military academies—she—softening and consoling the grief of the wounded and orphans whom foreign charity shelter.

"The civilised world—silent spectator to-day of that misfortune, so unjust and monstrous—has its eyes fixed on that small corner of Ypres where the diminished subjects of Alberto I and Isabel wait the longed for moment of re-conquest. It is possible that this will cost much bloodshed, it is possible that this may not be achieved by force of arms, but—there is a necessary medium to complement this effort—the exigency which all neutral countries must formulate before the modern Attila—that Belgium has returned its integral liberty and independence and its throne restored to the sovereigns of this heroic and long-suffering nation.

"If the United States will take this initiative and the Republics of America second it, if all the foreign States of Europe will support it, if they in unison will give the Kaiser of Berlin to understand that they will cut off all commercial and diplomatic relations with Germany until Belgium is restored to its former situation—the civilised world would see repaired the enormous and irritable injustice which to-day bleeds the human heart. And the civilised world, ashamed of the barbarity of Prussian militarism is bound in duty to do this, to bring home its resolution to the bandits which attempt to apply to the present times the human specie of pre-historic periods in which it was difficult to distinguish the future man from the entirely bestial savage."

The following article "Un poco de Historia" recounts the sworn asseverations and public declarations of Germany to observe the neutrality of Belgium from 1831 down to the eve of the present war.

"Estocada en pleno corazón" is the trenchant reply of the American psychologist, M. J. Marc Baldwin to the invitation of the League of German Universities in New York to become an adherent to the pro-German campaign in the United States, which in substance is summed up as follows:—

1.—The diplomatic pourparlers exchanged before the war convict Germany of a shameless want of honour, cynicism and calumny. England had imposed upon it a duty to Belgium and civilisation.

2.—All honour to England which accepted this duty when it could have evaded the necessity to fight. Germany is waging this war as a nation of bandits and pirates—its methods being that of official vandalism.

3.—That groups of Germans in the States consider that Americans who had studied in Germany should be less patriotic as Americans—less fervent of Anglo-Saxon ideals, but he would have these Germans understand that Americans were not "Made in Germany." These Germans were traitors to their adopted country.

4.—German aspirations are altogether too evident. The war has fully defined what Pan-Germanism signifies. This is proved by the re-

THE EMPIRE'S FIRM RESOLVE

TO FIGHT UNTIL VICTORY IS WON.

London, July 26.

The anniversary of the declaration of war is to be celebrated throughout the British Empire by demonstrations at which a declaration will be proposed announcing the firm resolve of the nation to continue the struggle at all costs.

The form of the declaration, which has already received the assent of the Prime Minister, is as follows:—

"On this anniversary of the declaration of the just war in which we are engaged, it is resolved by the citizens met in assembly in the city of (name of city) to reiterate their inflexible determination to continue, until the victory be won, the struggle for the maintenance of the ideals of liberty and justice which are common in the just cause upheld by the Allies."

WITH KITCHENER'S ARMY

OLD "HERALD" SUBSCRIBER'S EXPERIENCES.

An old "Herald" subscriber, Mr. Lionel Blyth, of the Argentina estancia, near Gral. Villegas, who left home three months past to join Kitchener's army, writes saying:

"Just a line to say I got an unofficial note from Major —, War Office, to say that he had signed my commission, and I shall be in the "Gazette" this week, 2nd Lieut., 3rd Wessex Brigade, R.F.A., Territorials, and I will let you know fuller particulars, I am off to London to get my outfit. It has been a little trying waiting, and one feels quite uncomfortable, an able bodied chap walking about out of khaki, people look at you with their noses in the air; almost asking you what you are doing? There are a lot of slackers here, and quite a few who would be quite willing to join, but are afraid of losing their billet to some rotter who is only too keen to step into their shoes."

SAN FRANCISCO EXHIBITION

ROOSEVELT VISITS THE ARGENTINE SECTION.

The Argentine committee of the Republic's section at the Californian Exhibition at San Francisco received a telegram on July 24 stating that ex-President Roosevelt paid a visit on Friday afternoon to the Argentine Pavilion and its subsections during which he explained to many friends who accompanied him several interesting details concerning this Republic and of his visit here.

The timber section of the Argentine exhibit is attracting a considerable amount of attention on account of the 531 different kinds of wood being shown, all of which are part of this country's produce.

velations of the shameful methods adopted to realise it; the violation of public and private rights, destruction of historical monuments—impudent bluff—indiscriminate distribution of floating mines and the murder of innocents and undefended by piratical submarines.

By these propositions the apologists for Germany wish to diffuse German culture in all parts. A German victory by these means would destroy for generations any possibility of solving the problems of the political world and German militarism has impeded that solution.

Other interesting articles are "El Heroísmo Belga," "Un Juicio Sobre la Alemania actual," "El Ejemplo de Bélgica," and "14 de Julio."

The celebration and legally established perpetuation of July 14 as a national holiday in honour of France was the last nail in the coffin of local pro-German propaganda and as far as Uruguay is concerned, a clinching victory "Por la Civilización."

A WET DAY

BY A CAMP SCHOOLMASTER.

The rain is falling, steadily, persistently, monotonously. Overhead glooms a grey, depressing sky, unrelieved by flying clouds or lightning flashes; just grey. Dripping, soaked trees, are all around, whilst underfoot is mud, and puddles of water, and unpleasant wet grass. It is a d—d day altogether.

I got through the morning well enough, with the aid of my pipe and a newspaper, and the hope that the weather would clear, but the rain still comes down reluctantly, and it is now late afternoon. The fact of the matter is, to-day is a holiday, and I had planned a little excursion; this being now an impossibility, makes me somewhat grumpy, which conclusively proves that I am less of a philosopher, and more of a fretful child, than I imagined myself to be. There is nothing like being candid with oneself, over one's own failings. One of my pupils has just interrupted me, a boy of eight years. He wishes a consultation. If you imagine that there came a timid knock on the door of my room, and on my calling, "Come in," there entered a childish form, with a sweet wistful face and earnest eyes, asking me, "If the rain-drops are the tears of angels?" you'll have to guess again. On the contrary, there comes a bang at the door which is immediately afterwards forced boisterously open, and a small creature, born apparently of the rain and mud, especially mud, unblushingly presents himself. He is my youngest pupil. His clothes are saturated with water, and covered with dirt; he has been playing at the side of, and very probably in, the "laguna," a place he has no business to go to at all. He desires me to advise him, as to how best he can avoid the maternal storm which is bound to rage when his mother sees him; but first, will I go with him to the "laguna." "It's such sport." Ugh! No thanks. What next, I wonder?

It is impossible to clean the boy; it is equally impossible to send him away desponding. I therefore take him outside, and under the pretence of indulging in a little horseplay, manage to upset him in a fairly large pool of water. He has no idea that my action was planned beforehand, to him it comes as a perfectly heaven-sent accident, and he hastens off, whistling jubilantly, and unpleasantly, to inform his mother, that by an unfortunate mischance I have knocked him down in the dirt, and to say nothing at all about the "laguna." The lady will no doubt have some thoughts concerning me, but I don't care. I should be a brute not to avert a disagreeable climax to the boy's unalloyed happiness, also I feel proud of the ingenuity of my plan.

Quietness again, and as I start out upon the dreary landscape, there comes into my mind by some peculiar chance, an article that I read some time ago, about a concentration camp in Holland, organised for the Belgian refugees. Poor, poor, unhappy creatures. Immensely long wooden sheds, roughly put up, divided into compartments, like a gigantic stable or series of stables; such is the home of thousands of Belgians; many of whom, all their lives, will no doubt have been accustomed to warm, comfortable, well furnished houses, for they are an extremely home-loving people. Their benefactors in Holland have done a great deal for them, by providing necessities; it would be unreasonable to expect anything in the shape of luxuries. On a wet day, how intensely miserable it must be in that camp, men, women, and children all herded together, under necessary but galling rules and regulations; prisoners in the hands of friends. I can form a vague idea of the surroundings: the ground a quagmire; fretful, peevish children, desponding, broken-spirited men and women, dampness and chilliness everywhere, and always the same question, "When will this end?" with the same answer, "When the war is over."

I think of all this as I gaze out through the rain-laden air, on to the rain-sodden ground, and not for one solitary moment does it cease, but keeps on raining, drearily raining. What a day it is. If a tremendous storm would only spring up, with rushing wind and blinding rain, vivid lightning and crashing thunder, that would be a relief, but there is no appearance of such a thing, any more than there is of the sun shining, and clouds dispersing. It is a selfish wish, perhaps, but everyone is disagreeable and selfish on a soaking, wet day. I remember a wild storm of wind and rain that raged in the north of England on February month, a number of years ago, I forget how many, also the exact date, and don't wish to recall the precise time; I hate to reckon up years that have passed. It was a storm and no mistake. Chimneys came clattering down, doors and windows were blown in, and many houses had the roofs lifted clean off them. It was a dreadful time, and we were not accustomed to such tempests, which made matters all the worse. I was staying at a tiny village at the time, whither my wondering steps had taken me, in search of peace and quietness, for I was commissioned to write six special articles, by an exacting and over-fastidious editor, who, however, paid handsome rates. I found the peace and quietness at the village pub, an ideal abiding place for many reasons, but principally one. It was so convenient to live right on the spot. I always took mine hot, with a bit of sugar.

Well, one night it blew great guns, and a deluge of rain poured down; we all had to rise at an unearthly hour the next morning, in order to repair damages: even I, the honouree, and paying guest, had to lend a hand. It was awful. The chimney pots, and half of the chimney itself, came down, and made a big hole in the roof. Whilst we were all congregated in the kitchen, the window of that room began to bulge inwards, in the most alarming manner. The old man said he would have to get a prop of some sort, to "shore" the window up. Accordingly, his daughter, a girl of about eighteen, and I, held the door open a few inches, for him to squeeze through. She was a strong young woman, and I was fairly muscular at that time, but it took the united strength of both of us to shut the door again, in the face of that terrible gale. We stood gasping, leaning against the door, after having succeeded in closing it, when suddenly it began to move inward, forcing us along with it. "Mercy," shrieked the girl, "the door is bursting in now." We struggled desperately, and managed to get it closed to within about three or four inches, but try as we would, it was impossible to get it further. My companion was almost in tears, from fright and exhaustion, and I was feeling played out myself, when I happened to look upwards, and lo, there, close to the top of the door, projected about a foot of a stout wooden prop; we had been doing our darndest to keep the old man out. Later on I was hunting all over for my great-coat, and found it along with other garments, stuffed into a hole, in the wall of one of the rooms, caused by the blowing, clean out, of a small window, no doubt rotten with age. What laughs and jokes we had concerning our adventures, when all was over. I lived a splendid month in that little village, but had to finish my work in town, after all. It was always my intention to return to the place for a holiday, but somehow it never came off, and now, even if I had the opportunity, I don't think I would go, for a letter reached me here a short time ago, from a friend at home, who often used to spend a week at my old quarters, and he said that the old landlord was in his dotage, and very unpleasant to deal with, whilst his daughter, who now Since last week weather conditions have changed. After the heat rain was expected. Instead it has become very cold, frosts and ice once more making an appearance.

An American handicap tournament will be started on the 24 to compete for two racquets presented by Mr. Lopez. Although time is short the Committee hope to get through with the work satisfactorily.

Attention has been called to an error in my letter of last week, in which it was stated that the Victoria Park had been presented to the British Colony several years ago by Mr. Robinson. I am informed on good authority that the Park was bought by subscriptions by the British Colony in general.

Church Vestry.

At a recent meeting of the parishoners, held in the London and River Plate Bank House, the Rev. Mr. Bate in the chair, the following were elected:—Chaplain's Warden, Mr. Sketch; People's Warden, Mr. T. B. Morley; Treasurer, Mr. S. W. Roberts; and Messrs. T. Castle and C. Todd. The Rev. Mr. Bate took the opportunity to compliment Mr. S. W. Roberts, who had acted as Chaplain's Warden in a most satisfactory manner for a number of years, and also Mr. Morley for good work done. During the meeting he announced that he expected a visit from Bishop Every probably on the 8th of next month. Before closing the meeting Mr. Emley proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Bate for the great interest he was taking in the parish and felt assured that his efforts would meet with the success they deserved. Mr. Bates suitably replied.

manages the house, is married to a drunken husband, and has eight children. Good Lord! No, let me stick to pleasant memories of the old days, and not mar them by viewing realities of the present. Changes, continually changes, and those that are sad seem to strike one most, causing one to grow despondent and melancholy, particularly on a day like this, for as I pen these lines the rain falls drearily through the rain-laden air, on to the rain-sodden ground, and not for one solitary moment does it cease, but keeps on raining, drearily raining.

But everything comes to an end, even a wet day, and now it is dusk, so I light the lamp and draw the curtains, and my room looks cosy, and feels cosy, which is pleasant. I step out into the chill air to have a final look at the sky, and when I return, the warmth, and cosiness seem more delightful still, after my brief excursion, which is also very pleasant. From the house I hear the good lady cooing to the baby, telling her it will be a fine day to-morrow, also the merry laughter of the two boys, and the rattle and tinkle of tea-cups and plates, denoting that it is nearly time for tea. All this is very pleasant, too, and I have been a fool to get down in the dumps. Cares, like joys, are only fleeting, and surely if some of our days have not been quite satisfactory, we can counter-balance them with others, which have been brimful of happiness. If that is impossible, for those of us who may perchance have experienced more sorrow than joy, then there is still the glorious future to look to, with the never-fading hope that to-morrow may be better than to-day.

Municipal Matters.

The question of the letting of the municipal theatre has been lately gone into, and it has been decided that this building shall not be let for political meetings, or for any sort of meetings with tendencies in that direction, and that it shall only be used for plays or social benefits. The Committee of Parks and Walks is now planting a large number of trees in the different streets. Several people have asked to have the trees placed in front of their houses, promising to be responsible as far as possible for their preservation. Trees are also being planted in Plaza Alta and Cabildo.

Veterans' Football Match.

An interesting football match was played this morning between the Pacific and Portenians. The latter club fielded a scratch eleven, while the former included a scratch team from the Pacific and town. Pacific played twelve men; goal, Williamson; backs, McKerrow and Pearson; half-backs, Langlands, McCoubrey, and Moore; and forwards, Maples, Clysdale, Andrews, Migotti, Kingspark, Reid. The referee was Mr. Norman Geddes. Quite a large crowd gathered to witness this match, amongst them several ladies. Pacific were far too strong for the Portenians, and during almost the whole of the game the play was in the latter's territory. In the first half Langlands had the misfortune to twist his ankle, and his place was taken by Colewell. All the so-called veterans played very well, but especially Clysdale, Moore and Naples, and the goal-keeper, who saved two very difficult shots as well as two penalty kicks. Five minutes after the play started the first goal was scored by Andrews, and during the first half Moore scored two more. In spite of the team not being in very good training they all played well, although one or two members were showing signs of being "done-up" towards the finish. After half-time Clysdale scored a goal from a well-placed corner by Maples; then Maples took the ball from midfield, and scored another goal, after which Kingspark scored, again in the goal mouth, making the total at the finish of the game, 6-0.

Items in Brief.

The project of the National Deputy Doctor, A. Escobar, with regard to the sale of the fiscal lands in Ingeniero White, which was brought up some three years ago, has at last been settled, and sanctioned by the Chamber of Deputies. A telegram to this effect was received on Friday by Señor F. Hitche, informing him of this fact, and that the measure would become law this year. This notice caused quite a commotion in Ingeniero White, and a special edition of the "Puerto Comercial" was issued.

The Independence Park, on which is the Tiro Federal, has now been taken over by the Municipality, for the purpose of making it into a recreation park with swimming baths, etc., for the use of the general public.

The wheat market is at present very weak, and the only lots touched are those of first quality for Brazilian export. The price quoted is $12.40. The demand for barley is good, and the price now being asked is $6.20. Cow hides from Neuquen are still fetching $14, and others $13 to $13.80. Horse hides $7 and $7.50. One lot of hair was sold for $14, and others from $11.50 to $12.20. Maize for local consumption is selling at $4.40/50 in waggons at Bahia Blanca, hay and alfalfa of good quality is fetching $32 and $34 the ton.

OBITUARY

THE LATE MR. J. TALBOT.

Mr. Joseph Talbot, an esteemed resident of 59, Claremont Road, Forest Gate, London, England, died after a long illness in his 73rd year, on Sat., June 26, to the deep sorrow of a large circle of friends. The deceased gentleman was a celebrated engineer and directed the work of the Underground Ry. on the Embankment, whilst he also superintended the work years back of the East London Railway when its line was extended through Wapping and Rotherhithe to New Cross. He was probably better known in the engineering world in the Argentine Republic and the Uruguayan Republic, where he acted as manager to Mr. Thomas Andrew Walker (the late) and later to the executors of the latter, and also filled the same position with Messrs. C. H. Walker and Co., at the Conchillan Quarries of the Buenos Aires Harbour Works. He had over fifty years continuous service with the Messrs. Walker. He had also been associated in the management of the construction of the Bermuda Dock at Bermuda, the Khedivial Dock at Alexandria, Egypt, and of the Severn Tunnel. Both in Buenos Aires, where he had a large circle of acquaintances, endeared to him through his geniality and kindly disposition, and in London, his death is much lamented.

The funeral took place on Tuesday, June 29, the interment being made in a new family grave at the City of London Cemetery, Ilford, the Rev. J. S. Elphick, Vicar of the St. Mark's Church, Forest Gate, conducting the Burial Service. The assembly in the cemetery Chapel included Mr. and Mrs. J. Nicol Cook (daughter and son-in-law), Mr. and Mrs. Howard (daughter and son-in-law), Mr. Matthew Talbot, Mr. John Talbot and Mr. Samuel Talbot (brothers). The Misses Eppie and Cissie Cook and Mr. Jack Cook (grandchildren), Dr. Thornton, Mr. C. Haw Walker, Mr. C. R. Walker, Mr. J. R. Walker, Mrs. and Miss Ingram (sister-in-law and niece), Mrs. Abbott, Mrs. Drury, etc.

Mr. Joseph Henry Talbot (only son of deceased) is in Buenos Aires, and Mrs. S. Wertheimer (a daughter of deceased) is in Hobarts Town, Tasmania, and so could not be present at the sad obsequies.

A large number of choice floral tributes was placed around the grave by the members of the family. Mr. and Mrs. Hay Walker, Mr. and Mrs. H. Curtis, Dr. Thornton, Mrs. Plowman and family, Mr. and Mrs. Drury and family, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, R. and M. Curtis, Messrs. Hobday and Walker, Lt. J. Irvine, R.N.R., Mr. and Mrs. Nash, Mrs. Mason, Mr. and the Misses Cundy, Household staff at 59, Claremont Road, Mrs. C. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Holden and family and

MR. HUGH ROBSON.

Mr. Hugh Robson, of Chascomus, died on Sunday morning at 2 a.m. to the great grief of his many friends, and within two months of the death of the late Mrs. Robson. The loss of both will be felt widely and much.

Mr. Robson always took an active interest in all that has pertained to the best interest of Chascomus. He was one of the most generous supporters of the Scotch Church in the town where he was greatly esteemed. A large number of English and Spanish speaking people gathered for the funeral and the local Press has feelingly referred to his death and the loss to the community.

JOHN BRIDGES GIPPS.

The funeral of the late Mr. John Bridges Gipps, took place at the British Cemetery, Chacarita, on July 26. The Rev. H. Westby Brady was the officiating clergyman. Amongst the number present at the funeral or who sent cards were the following:

MR. ALGERNON PERCY CLARKE DEAD

FROM WOUNDS RECEIVED IN ACTION.

Great sympathy will be felt with Mr. J. Percy Clarke, late of the F.C.S., who has just sustained the loss of a second son by the death of Lieut. Algernon Percy Clarke, aged 21, who died of wounds on July 25. His brother Lieut. Harold Percy Clarke, it will be recollected, also met a soldiers' death on May 25 last. The late Lieut. Algernon Percy Clarke, left Cambridge to offer his services and was subsequently appointed to a commission in the 23rd Battalion London Regiment. He went to the front on March 14, and had therefore seen four months of the most appalling fighting before he too fell a victim to the war against German Militarism. The following paragraph from a recent issue of the "Daily News" gives some idea of what these gallant fellows went through:

HEROIC LONDON REGIMENT.

A member of the 23rd London Regiment, I send you this plain and unvarnished tale of an heroic achievement of a London regiment. The 23rd London Regiment, after faithfully and steadily doing trench duty for about two months, were ordered to charge. They did so coolly and effectively. They succeeded in taking three lines of trenches by brilliant dash, but were shelled out of two lines by terrible enfilade shelling, which caused more casualties than the charge, many men being blown to pieces. They hung on till they were relieved under terrible machine gun and artillery fire; in one instance forty-seven men held a trench against overwhelming odds. The Germans threw petrol bombs, and many men were blinded and roamed about without sight between the lines. The whole was a terrible and unnerving sight to civilian soldiers, but the boys did fine. Nevertheless, it was a brilliant achievement."—"Daily News," June 21.

Brady took the service. Amongst the number of floral tributes sent were those from:—The staff of the London and Brazilian Bank, the Western Telegraph Football Team, the Misses Dodds, Mr. J. N. Dodds, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Evans and family, J. W. Royal, "One little wreath."

A large number of deceased gentleman's friends were present at the funeral or sent cards. Amongst them were:—J. E. Perthuy, A. E. Biet, Rev. J. W. Brady, H. C. H. Gibbs, W. H. Grassick, Reginald Rumbold, Mrs. W. G. Evans and family, W. A. Ainsworth, John R. Bartle, William Dodds jr., A. T. Gooding, D. MacMillan, R. Caldwell Cook, R. F. Stuart Leeson, J. F. COPPER FOR GERMANY

EXTENSIVE SMUGGLING FROM RIO

Rio de Janeiro, July 24.

An enormous impression has been caused by the announcement which appears in the evening papers of the discovery by the water police that the smuggling of copper out of the country destined for Germany has been going on for some time on a large scale.

The discovery was owing to secret warnings of what was going on being sent to the police, when a watch was set with the result stated.

It was found that the person responsible for this trade in contraband was the General Superintendent of the Rio de Janeiro docks, a man named Preiss Lohmann, from the United States, and that the metal was conveyed by vessels flying the Swedish and Norwegian flags. It is estimated that Lohmann, who is believed to have a number of German accomplices in the city, has made a very handsome sum of money out of the transaction.

THE FANATICS OF BRAZIL

SKIRMISH WITH POLICE.

It is evident that the so-called fanatics, the horde of bandits armed with German weapons and encouraged by German funds, who have been so long lesolating the interior of Brazil, are not yet dispersed. From Florianopolis comes the report of a severe conflict at Canoinhas, where the cutlaws attacked a body of police, who, however, inflicted severe loss upon them, so that they eventually retired. While they never actually defeat the forces of Government, they never seem to sustain a crushing defeat, and continue to form a focus of unrest and lawlessness in the districts infested by them.

Heroic Italy

TRIBUTE BY BRITISH PUBLIC MEN.

London, July 27.

A tribute of admiration to the Italian nation which has been signed by over 150 persons of distinction, declares that none will ever forget the crisis in arriving at a decision through which Great Britain passed last August; but, the document says, Italy had a still harder path to travel, having to endure suspense for nine months. The tribute continues:—

"Italy has staked her all for the same principles of nationality, humanity and public right that inspire our own endeavours; and we hope in all earnestness that her national aspirations will now be consummated. We feel towards heroic Italy of 1915 as the Father of Italy felt towards the heroic country of the Risorgimento."

The "Morning Post" says that this tribute is endorsed by the whole of the British nation.

ARGENTINA'S NEED

WANTED; A BUSINESS GOVERNMENT

DIMINISHED REVENUE AND ASCENDANT EXPENDITURE

Seven months of the current year have gone by, and the preparation of the Budget for 1916 still hangs fire owing to the desire of the Government to have some sound basis on which to found their estimates. Hitherto it has been customary for Government, through the Budget Committee, to take last year's revenue yields as a mean whereon to base their allocation of expenditure for the next annual period. Moreover it has always been the custom to budget for a superavit, and for many years past this superavit has been regularly forthcoming. This year with on the contrary show a marked decrease, variously estimated at anything from twenty to fifty million dollars, and the worst of it is that whilst trade and commerce are alive to what this means, the political element apparently cannot bring themselves to realise that the goose is no longer laying the golden eggs with regularity commensurate to the nation's needs. The flourishing state of Argentina's agricultural and pastoral interests; the enormous sums lying idle with the banks; the ever-increasing demands for all classes of Argentine products; each and all have contributed to foment the idea that by some inexplicable means money will be forthcoming to carry on the work of administration on a similar scale of expenditure to that which has been customary in the past.

This absolute inability to connect cause and effect is not, be it said at the outset, shared by all Argentine legislators alike. Fortunately this country has among its political leaders men who are fully in touch with the latest European and American political practice, men who realise that the present system is bound to end in disaster of the worst kind unless a prompt term is set to its excesses; but unfortunately such men are in the minority, and suffer from the double drawback of supporting unpopular opinions and advocating schemes that are directly counter to all Argentine political tradition. The Federal system, safeguarding as it does the rights of the provinces, which have always been jealous of the commercial and political ascendancy of Buenos Aires, puts the modern politician very much at the mercy of the reactionary individual, usually of provincial extraction and pledged, wittingly or unwittingly, to the chief aim of getting as much as he can for his own province in particular, and the other provinces in general, regardless of the broader interests of the Republic as a whole. It must not be thought that this sentence implies an absolutely indiscriminate appropriation of funds. The provinces have many claims that deserve to be heard, and when it is possible, to be satisfied. There is a vast amount of development work to be done in every Argentine province; work that calls for much expenditure which cannot in the nature of things bring in an immediate and tangible return. The difficulty is to make each province see that with the national revenues insufficient to meet the national charges, all the efforts of the nation must be turned to making ends meet, either by reducing expenditure or by increasing revenues, or by both measures simultaneously.

Yet it is very plain that this urgent need must be insisted upon, and that with as little delay as possible, if the ship of state is not to find itself on a lee shore. The increase of taxation, of such taxation as is now enforced, presents grave difficulties. All over the country one finds proprietors and traders uniting for the purpose of pe-tioning their immediate authorities in favour of reduction. Buenos Aires Province cannot make ends meet, and even went so far as to suggest the collection of its revenues by judicial means; yet simultaneously with this resolution came the news that a monster agitation was afoot to seek a reduction of the valuation plan on which the actual scheme of revenue was based. Then the other day the proprietors of Buenos Aires sought similar alleviation owing to the heavy fall in rentable values, and so it goes on all over the Republic. Meanwhile there is no disposition among the political leaders to treat economy as a practical theme. The Ministers budget for additional sums to cover in dispensable expenditure in their several departments, but never suggest where these funds are to come from, and seemingly never take into account that the previously available aid of capital loans is to all intents and purposes closed to them for many a long day. They contract short date obligations with a lightness of heart that is appalling to anyone who realises that these obligations must either be met or renewed at ruinous rates of interest, and generally they behave as though the fields and farms of Argentina were all worked for the exclusive benefit of the national revenues.

Granted that the magnificent fertility of the land, and the freedom from all complication in the great European war, is an over-present asset of incalculable value, one would like to see some practical means of drawing on this reserve of energy in such a way as to relieve actual necessities without overburdening the future with a crushing load of debt. The taxation of exports appears to offer the safest, speediest, and most economical way out of the difficulty, always provided that such taxation is accompanied by real economy in the spending departments of the State, not by mere paper transactions which usually resolve themselves into taking from Peter to pay Paul. It is no good to wait for a return of the import trade to its old dimensions, and to argue that when once that good time comes there will be cash enough and to spare for all. Experts are agreed that the flood of imports will not set in for many a long day. The lesson of economy learnt by the Argentine people is likely to endure for some considerable time, and the Government revenues are like to suffer thereby, however much the community may benefit collectively. It has been argued that the imposition of export taxes will harm the producer, who is already taxed for the land he tills, the materials he employs, the clothes he wears, and the food he eats. It remains to be seen however whether this is not an exaggeration. A trifling impost on exports would perforce have to be paid by the consumer, and he does not live in Argentina. This is not a time for discussing the ethics of such taxation, and one may even grant the contention that normally such taxation would operate as a bar to Argentine foreign trade. But with meat, and wheat, and maize, to say nothing of skins and wool, taken and wanted by the whole of Europe and the United States, this difficulty is absolutely imaginary. Moreover when the world returns to its normal commercial orbit, and when goods flow hitherward in ever-increasing volume, the export tax can easily be rescinded if it is found to be operating as a handicap in Argentina's competition with the other producing nations. Funds must be had on the cheapest possible terms, and as borrowing is out of the question, save at exorbitant rates, another alternative must be found, and that with out delay.

ARGENTINE CHILLED MEAT

THE TRUST BOGEY

FOREIGN INITIATIVE AND NATIONAL INACTION

Some three years ago there was a great outcry in Argentina concerning the invasion of the Beef Trust. A couple of local frigorificos changed hands—at very advantageous prices for their proprietors—there was some brisk competition in the market for suitable cattle as between the English and the American interests, and, after a few months the agitation died away. Little more was said, certainly nothing more was done to provide a third alternative to the only two buyers of prime slaughtering cattle that operated in the Republic. Now La Nación, in a well-informed article which is summarised elsewhere in this issue, returns to the charge and declares Argentina to be under the domination of a meat trust, hinting, if it does not state the fact in so many words, that the seller will in future have to accept whatever price and terms the buyer may choose to offer.

Now it is not our intention to awake the old arguments as to the commercial morality of what is popularly known as "trust" trading. There are trusts and trusts, and as the United States themselves have found out there are many businesses where consolidation, which the popular mind always spells "trustification" has been beneficial all round, buyer and seller alike profiting by large and certain supplies. This is certainly the case in regard to the Argentine cattle industry as allied with the frigorificos and the only unfortunate part of the matter from a British point of view is that the capital and energies employed are American, at any rate as regards the major portion of the trade. Britain holds the shipping and railway facilities, her specialities, whilst the United States have the factories, that being a class of business in which she has proved herself pre-eminent in the meat trade. Where then does Argentina come in? The answer is to be found in the statement that she has collectively preferred to take the place of the essential cattle breeder, leaving to others the more risky and more technical work of preparing the animals for the foreign market. Prices for first class frigorifico stock have stood at high levels for a long time now, the demand has never been greater, and one fails to find any ground for complaint by the breeder or estanciero.

Hence it is to be hoped that responsible individuals will think twice ere they raise the cry of "Trust" in regard to the large and ever-growing American interests involved in the chilling and freezing of meat. It is open to Argentine capitalists to establish works when and where they will; it is also more than likely that if they were to do so on a satisfactory scale and with ample guarantees of permanent working, they would make a good thing of the venture, and enjoy as much special governmental aid as is consistent with ordinary commercial rights. Unfortunately the spirit of enterprise is lacking in this country. The idea of sinking some five to ten million dollars in a project that calls for hard work, incessant worry, and possible failure at the end, has no chance of being put into practice. Profits are too distant, the percentage appears too small and the practical result of this attitude is that someone else, more far-sighted and above all more industrious, steps

SUBSCRIPTIONS AND DONATIONS FOR JUNE.

The Committee of Management of the British Hospital held their usual monthly meeting on July 21, the following gentlemen being present:—Messrs. C. H. Pearson (Chairman), T. Lloyd, A. G. Thornton, R. de Candoile, Hope Gibson, W. E. O. Haxell, A. M. Wilson, A. W. Boote, G. Lloyd Davies, Ven. Archdeacon W. H. Hodges, Rev. Dr. W. P. MacLaughlin and C. Manifold.

The Hon. Treasurer reported that the expenditure for the month of June had been $24,123.27, making the aggregate for the six months $136,964.30.

The number of patients treated during June were 309, as compared with 306 in the same month last year.

The following subscriptions and donations were received during June:—

in a renders himself indispensable. It is the story of the Argentine railways over again. Whilst Great Britain has sunk huge sums in transport facilities in Argentina, getting but a very moderate profit in return, the Argentine man of affairs has contented himself with speculating on the rise of land values brought about by railway enterprise, the only really national railway ventures all coming to a sudden stop for want of capital and good management. We hold no brief for the American freezing companies, but we cannot help seeing that they are bringing large sums of money into the country, sums that are already going far to revivify many branches of labour and trade. La Plata is proving already the utility of a big well paid working class population, and here in the port of the capital the movement and pay roll consequent on the meat trade is of no importance in the social economy of the commune. The estanciero will certainly have to take what prices are offered to him if there is but one firm buyer, but he always has the remedy in his own hands, as the freezing companies well know. There is no monopoly in the building factories, plant can always be bought, and in short the whole thing rests on the division of labour. To-day the Argentine estanciero rears his herds, the American freezer buys them, and the British railroads and shipping firms place them on the foreign market. This is stating facts broadly and without prejudice to the existence of genuinely British concerns engaged in providing the meat as well as shipping it. Hence commonsense deprecates all attempts at hindering an arrangement that has worked very well in the interests of all the parties concerned.

THE DARDANELLES PROBLEM

From the Turkish Side

MILITARY POSITION

By Granville Fortescue

Constantinople, June.

The military problem of the forcing of the Dardanelles is the most fascinating one of the war. Not only does it loom large with possible political consequences, but it combines all the operations of naval and military tactics developed in modern times, tested to the last resource. The capture of the peninsula of Gallipoli may hasten the climax of the war. In any case, the battling on sea and land in the Dardanelles brings out every thrilling incident of combat between fort and ship, land force and land force, the whole set down in an environment pulsating with historic interest. The ruined walls of Troy look down on the rusty sides of the transport Rjver Clyde. The hulk of the "E 15" lies in the Hellespont. So does the fighting instinct bridge the cycles.

The campaign divides itself naturally into the sea and the land operations. As the naval battle was the first in point of time, let us take up this at the outset.

The premature attempt to pass the Narrows of the Dardanelles has been the theme of so many criticisms that nothing is gained by further discussion of the inception of the plan. After spending a week in the Narrows, since the first bombardment, and conversing freely with correspondents and neutral officers present when the attempt culminated, I can give a summary of the net results of the fire of the battleships. The damage done by the forts and mine defences is already too well known.

"ONE GREAT FORTRESS."

I must interrupt myself to state that in view of the tone of optimism which pervades the English Press in discussing the operations in the Dardanelles, what I shall unfold will be distinctly disappointing to those who expect a speedy forcing of the Straits. The policy of the censor in allowing any absurd exaggeration in the way of a story depicting English success in this zone to be published while suppressing the facts of the difficulties that confront the Allies, has given the people at home a much too sanguine outlook on the actual situation. Mr. Ellis Ashmead-Bartlett alone lays stress on the handicaps under which the land forces are fighting, but compared to the difficulties of the naval operations these are as nought.

I have traversed the coast from Fort Nagara to within a half-mile of Kumbale, and instead of dividing it into named defences, as Forts Medejeh, Chimilik, Kilid Bahr, Dardanos, and so forth, I am tempted to classify the whole coast as one great fortress. For such it is. Since March 18 every position that offered a field of fire in the least suitable has been turned into a battery. The banks of the Straits bristle with guns. Artillery of large calibre, excepting the movable howitzers, is absent in these new defences, but they are armed with an uncounted number of small guns.

AN ARMED CAMP.

This factor of preparation is one that must be kept constantly in mind when studying the situation in the Dardanelles. Since the first attack on the Straits the Turks have been training with a conscientiousness only exceeded by the soldiers of Kitchener's Army. All Turkey is an armed camp. From the moment you cross the border at Mustafa Pasha until you reach Constantinople you are passing Turkish troops in the making. You see them in all states of development, from the raw levies berded into the corner of some village station to the perfected recruit in the person of a smart orderly, who takes your card up to some personage in the War Ministry.

And when you go down the Sea of Marmora and touch land on either the Gallipoli or Asiatic side of this zone, you cannot ride a mile in any direction without falling on a camp. With this indication of what Turkey is doing to meet the crisis that threatens on land it is evident that preparation of a similar nature is proceeding in the coast defences. Naturally it is a preparation which is not open to inspection. How each particular fort along the Narrows is hourly becoming a greater menace to the ships that may attempt the passage of these waters does not show on the face of things. The presence of numerous German marines and the constant arrival of munitions are the visible signs of what is going on behind the walls of earth.

The forts that guard the Narrows, from Nagara and Kilid Bahr and Chanak, are not in a strict sense modern. Yet tested under the severest attacks of high-power guns the damage they have suffered is almost nil.

METHOD OF FORTIFICATION.

The forts are all built along the same lines. The walls are raised about thirty feet above the foundation, and are almost twice as deep as they are high. The construction is revetted earth, to my mind the best class of defence possible. Usually there are eight embrasures with a 6-in. gun in each. These guns are of an old type, front pivot mounted in a "barbette." I describe them as old, because they cannot be fired with the rapidity of the most modern fortress artillery, but against ships operating in the narrow passage which they defend a round in two minutes, which they are capable of developing with trained gunners, is amply sufficient. These guns have not the range of the ship's ordnance. This distinct advantage is nullified in an action confined to the restricted channels of the Dardanelles. From Chanak to Kilid Bahr the distance is but 1,400 yards. And at this point the course of the Dardanelles changes, which implies additional difficulty for ships navigating these waters. So the fact that the fortress artillery is not of the most recent Krupp manufacture is amply compensated for by natural conditions.

I have stated that the guns as a rule were of 6in calibre. There are other guns of larger calibre in some of the forts. One of the largest is mounted in Fort Dardanos.

EFFICIENT GUN CREWS.

Under German tutelage the crews that man the forts have arrived at a high state of efficiency in drill. That their morale has increased a hundredfold since the fatal March 18 goes without saying. Confidence is the note of all. A certain amount of friction exists between the Turkish commanders and their German allies. This is bound to be the case under the circumstances, but it is little more than an expression of jealousy on the part of the native officers. The Germans view the pretensions of the officers of the Sultan's army with tolerance. The friction which exists will hardly become of sufficient importance to impede military operations.

The question of ammunition is all important. There is no doubt that there is no arsenal in Turkey which can turn out ammunition of a calibre large enough to fit the fortress guns. So the forts must rely on the supply on hand, which, however, is said to be ample.

But it is not alone on the guns of the forts that the Turks place their reliance in the impregnability of the Dardanelles defences. The waters before the guns are sown with mines. These are the dangers against which it is almost impossible to guard. Mine-sweepers cannot operate far up the Hellespont, as they come under the fire of the machine-guns mounted at numerous points along the shores.

There are also hidden batteries, especially placed to protect the mine-fields. These are so carefully concealed that they defy detection by aerial observers.

ARE THERE LAND TORPEDOES?

There has been much talk about stations for the launching of torpedoes from land. I met the officer whom every one credits with being in charge of this work, and he assured me that the existence of such stations was pure invention. However, we may take his statement with reservation. A land torpedo launching station would be an effective defence for such a narrow, crooked passage as the Dardanelles. The difficulties of constructing such a station would not be great. And the platform and launching tube could be easily concealed. One may be sure that if it is a feasible undertaking the Germans have adopted it.

In addition to the defences enumerated the Straits are protected by howitzer batteries mounted on short sections of railway track. The elimination of these is a most serious problem for the attackers.

This brings us to the matter of the abandonment of the operations against Kum Kale. In my opinion this failure to press home the attacks against the Asiatic positions is a mistake. Leaving the Turks in undisputed control of the Anatolian shore, gives them a base from which to operate against troops advancing up the Gallipoli peninsula. In fact several bases have already been established here. How and when the troops gathered here will be brought into action I cannot discuss, but the shelling of the trenches across the Hellespont was a matter of daily occurrence the first weeks of June. Such firing will have a decidedly demoralising effect even if it does not produce many casualties. Indirect fire when continuous is discouraging to the best troops.

The summarise, defending the Dardanelles we have:

- First, the forts, out of date, but of proved effectiveness.
- Second, the mine-fields.
- Third, the batteries protecting these mine-fields.
- Fourth, possibly, land torpedo launching stations.
- Fifth, newly-constructed batteries and redoubts erected in favourable positions along the Asiatic shore.
- Sixth, mobile howitzer batteries.

The list speaks for itself.

ALLIES' HANDICAPS.

Taking up a discussion of the land operations considered alone, while the handicaps of the Allies are not so disproportionate, yet they are severe enough. It must be borne in mind that the Gallipoli peninsula today is not, from a military point of view, the same place it was three months ago. I have no doubt that a sufficient force landed in March might have changed the whole complexion of affairs in the Dardanelles. But there is no use crying over spilt milk. What must be realised is that under German guidance, on the peninsula to-day, every ravine is a field of obstacles, every ridge a fort. If the British troops have a herculean task in Flanders, pause to imagine what is before them here.

In the first place they are outnumbered by two to one (I write in the first week of June), and, in the second, they are operating from a most difficult base. At first glance one may say that the advantage in numbers is of little importance, as Turkish troops during their last war were of proved inferiority. Perhaps they were a poor lot during that last Balkan war, though from the look of things at present I doubt even that, but to-day the Turkish common soldier is most formidable. With German thoroughness, the imported instructors begin at the very foundation of things, and build up. I have seen the new instruction of the Turkish army from the training of the recruit to the planning of communications and defences, and, believe me, it leaves little to be desired. There has never been any question of Turkish bravery. And the grim seriousness with which the soldier of the Sultan goes about his work to-day marks him as a most worthy foe. So the matter of numerical superiority is of considerable importance.

HINDRANCES TO OPERATIONS.

With the advantage of numbers, the Turks combine the occupation of the salient positions on the Peninsula. Knowing the ground over which the operations proceed is also a great help. I am of the opinion that much of the terrain here is terra incognita to the Allies.

Another hindrance to prolonged operations in Gallipoli during the summer is the lack of water. Up to the present, owing to the unusually late rainy season, the need of water has not been seriously felt, but if the fighting is to continue throughout July and August, a drought may be expected.

It is the difficulties of transport that make the operations in the Dardanelles one of the stupendous war tasks of history. Try to visualise what the moving of the men and matériel of four divisions, roughly 100,000 men, from England to Turkey means. First, the gathering of the forces and their embarking. Then their convoy over thousands of miles through a submarine-infested sea. And, finally, the landing under a hellish fire from a protected enemy. Lines of boats, passing with troops from ship to shore, fired on from three angles. Guns embarked and landed under similar cross-fire. The men once ashore, they meet at once every military obstacle that the mind of man has devised. Under a murderous rain of copper-coated lead they carve out a bit of the enemy's country, and hold it. But now more ammunition must be landed. And food and water. And the wounded must be withdrawn. Is it not a situation calculated to nonplus the most daring and sanguine?

EFFECT OF NAVAL GUNFIRE.

Of course, the presence of the English and French Fleets makes the action possible. But perhaps the most astounding feature of this side of the fighting is the disproportion of losses suffered by the Turks to the amount of ammunition expended by the Fleet. This is due to the fact that the naval shells are of peculiar construction, especially contrived for piercing armour. I have seen the fragments of shell fired from the main batteries of the Queen Elizabeth. From actual count these shells seldom break into more than ten pieces, i.e., the nose, the base, and the shell proper rent into eight large bits. In consequence, unless such a shell explodes directly in an occupied trench the damage it may inflict is small. You will see the whole side of a hill where the Turks are dug in reeking with smoke until the gases of the bursting projectiles seem to cover the earth with a haze. Such a bombardment looks like certain annihilation to every living thing in the shell-swept zone. Yet, let the shelling cease and the troops advance to the charge, and they are met with a murderous fire from the very ground where the shots have been falling the thickest. This is one of the mysteries of modern warfare.

But the battleships are running grave risks all the time they steam

PRINTERS AND THE WAR

LORD NORTHCLIFFE'S
WITTICISMS.

Lord Northcliffe presided recently at a "patriotic dinner" held at the Hotel Cecil in connection with the Lloyd Memorial (Caxton) Seaside Home. Among the large company present were Sir George Riddell, Admiral Sir Edmund Free-mantle, Sir Adolph Tuck, Sir Joseph Lawrence, and Mr. Upcott Gill.

Lord Northcliffe, in proposing continued prosperity to the Home, said that in view of the fact that so many printers were at the war it was proper they should do what they could to raise funds for the sick and wounded among their trade. It was a patriotic gathering to let their friends at the Front know they were not forgetting them. (Cheers.) That they were thinking of them was proved by a letter which had just been received from the Front, in which the writer said he "thought the patriotic rally a splendid idea, for few know or realise how much we suffer from our enemy. The Lloyd Home at Deal is just the home we want to win men back to health and strength again." (Applause.) There were 3,000 London printers in His Majesty's Forces. That he thought was a magnificent testimony to the patriotism of printers. (Cheers.) They proposed in view of the war that twelve extra beds should be provided at Deal for wounded printer soldiers. It was estimated that the cost of maintenance of these beds would be something like £500 a year, and he appealed for subscriptions. The public had probably heard of printers' devils, and, indeed, some of the higher authorities seemed to regard all printers as devils. (Laughter.) From the very beginning of printing the authorities seemed to have been at war with printers, and his friend, Mr. John Walter, of "The Times," member of a fifth generation of printers, had family recollections of the enforced seclusion of one of his ancestors by reason of the heartlessness of the censors of the time. History might repeat itself, for the printer of "The Times" was again in trouble. (Laughter.)

in these waters. Two were sunk while I was at Chanak—the Triumph and the Majestic. The latter ship I saw the day before she was torpedoed. The under-sea boat that accomplished these feats is at present in dock in Constantinople, and the crew are enjoying themselves after the manner of victorious sailors on shore leave. The sight brings the fighting blood of every interned Englishman in Constantinople to the boiling point. To offset these German successes there is the extraordinary work done by the dashing commander of the E 11. He has, by his exploits in sinking Turkish transports in the Marmora and Constantinople harbour, demoralised the Turkish line of sea communications.

From what I have written it may be contended that I look on the operations in the Dardanelles pessimistically. Such is not the case. I can see success for the Allies in time. But they must be prepared to make enormous sacrifices.

Ammunition is the decisive factor in modern battle. I have written this phrase a score of times in the last ten months. In concluding this review of conditions in the Dardanelles, I do not hesitate to say that in the end the fate of Constantinople will be decided by the amount of powder and shell available for the use of the contending armies.—"Daily Telegraph."

WARSAW IN WAR-TIME

IN POLAND TO-DAY

Warsaw is the same as ever. It is Sunday, and the church bells are ringing. The Boulevard de Cracovic is filled with promenaders. The weather is bright, and the air almost warm under the influence of the sun's cheering rays. One sees many pretty toilettes and still prettier faces. It was Mickiewicz who said: "The Polish women are the most beautiful in the world." Yonder, in a setting of green, is the great poet's statue on an imposing pedestal. One wonders why the inscription should be in Russian; would it not be possible to take advantage of the generous proclamation of the Grand Duke Nicholas and have it engraved in Polish?

The nave of the cathedral is filled with worshippers, listening with rapt attention to the oratory, at once delicate and powerful, of a priest still in his prime—the Abbé Gralevski, one of the finest preachers and one of the most devoted Polish patriots in the capital. He was a deputy for Warsaw in the first two Dumas. Two years ago he withdrew in a large measure from political life, and devoted himself to social work and school reforms.

His audience seemed spell-bound by his eloquence. The Abbe had touched a sympathetic chord in describing the national country life with its simple manners, ancient ballads and local costumes. I saw tears running down old men's cheeks as the vision of their dear native country took form and colour on the orator's word-landscape.

MORE THAN A CRIME.

The Poles have remained a very pious people. The Germans appear to have been profoundly unconscious that it would suffice to invade the holy places of Czenstochowa for the hearts of the peasantry to be inflamed by hatred and indignation against the Prussian army. It must be admitted that the Russian agencies touched up their first dispatches on this subject. The truth was re-established afterwards, but the effect was already produced. Terrifying stories were spread broadcast of the acts of sacrilege committed by the Germans. The Polish population in its fury would listen to no explanations. Besides, the example of Louvain was there to remind the Poles of what the Kaiser's troops are capable on occasion.

This war will have proved to the Germans that military force is not everything, and that the psychological factor possesses considerable importance also. If one examines, as in the case of Poland and elsewhere, the diplomatic, political and commercial possibilities open to Germany even at the outset of this crisis, one is aghast that a State should commit so many errors in so short a space of time. Some Talleyrand should have been there to repeat to Berlin every day: C'est plus qu'un crime; c'est une faute.

RUSSIA'S "BIG CHILDREN."

The great Russian Orthodox church is on the Place Saski. It is a basilica of quite recent construction. The cupolas are picturesque and the interior luxurious. A bell tower rises some distance away, like St. Mark's at Venice. At ordinary times the church is hardly frequented by any but functionaries, as the Poles are Catholics. Nowadays it is full, but the congregation is one of soldiers. At the bottom of the steps, in the square, I saw a curious sight—a hundred soldiers holding one another by the hand, as if they were afraid of getting lost. They were peasants from the centre of Russia, and Warsaw appeared to them like a strange land. There are thousands of Russian soldiers who have never set eyes on a big town. The citizens of Warsaw were good-naturedly amused to see the open-mouthed astonishment of these big children, who walk about in groups and ask their way at every step.

The Varsovians have seen samples of every portion of the vast Russian Empire pass through their city since the war began. It has afforded their children an excellent object lesson in ethnography, for the army of Russia in Europe and Asia comprises a very respectable collection of varieties. I must add that the troops have been very kindly received—one of the many changes brought about by the war—and their relations with the townsfolk are excellent. They all say how delighted they are with their stay in Warsaw. The Kirghiz of the Siberian regiments are especial favourites. Their warlike enthusiasm is such that on the day of their entry into Warsaw they had to be escorted by Cossacks. They were convinced that Warsaw was Berlin and were burning to attack the city right away. "Give us a chance to run the Prussians through," they cried with such insistence that they were packed off to the front at the earliest possible moment. Since then they have had plenty of opportunities to transfix Prussians. The other morning I succeeded in finding a house whose roof had been wrecked by a bomb from a Zeppelin or a Taube. These aerial visitors still come pretty frequently to hover above the city and drop their projectiles on the inoffensive inhabitants.

COURAGE UNDER FIRE.

The Germans have already killed or injured half a hundred women and children—a glorious military achievement, I dare say, from the Bernhardt point of view. The manager of the Grand Hotel Polonia, opposite the Vienna Station, told me how the German aviators the other day dropped five or six bombs, with no other result than to cause all his windows to fly into atoms. The Varsovians reckon as little of these stupid attacks as the Parisians do. When the sun shines and the sky is blue they remark: "A fine day for aeroplanes," and the ladies dress for a walk.

Their Rotten Row (Park Avenue, they call it) is a sight worth seeing at 4 to 5 o'clock in the afternoon, with a well-dressed crowd thronging the footwalks and gallant officers and fair ladies driving to and fro in handsome carriages or mounted on fiery horses. Warsaw has lost nothing of its "chic," in spite of the German menace.

Close at hand are the spacious premises of the Scola Kadetski. While the cadets are away at the front, this magnificent building serves as a military hospital. It is the temple of devotion and of Polish activity, a fitting manifestation of female genius. The hospital was entirely organised in a fortnight by an exclusively Pol-

MR. BERNARD SHAW ON LORD NORTHCLIFFE"DESERVES SOMEWHERE ABOUT SIXTY YEARS."

Under date June 14, Mr. George Bernard Shaw has written to the wife of Mr. Sheehy Skeffington, who was recently sentenced to six months' hard labour for making an anti-recruiting speech, and released on Tuesday night owing to impaired health from a hunger strike, contrasting the treatment of Mr. Skeffington and Lord Northcliffe.

"The latter," says Mr. Shaw, "not only endeavoured to stop voluntary recruiting by refusing to insert the War Office appeals, but actually—with the same object, that of bringing about conscription—published a letter from the Bishop of Pretoria conveying the impression not only to the English but to the German public that the British Army in Flanders was outworn, out-numbered, and must presently fall prey to its enemies unless conscription were at once resorted to.

"Now it is clear that if Mr. Skeffington deserves six months for his speech in Beresford-place, which would not have reached a thousand people but for the prosecution, Lord Northcliffe must deserve somewhere about sixty years. I can only congratulate him under the circumstances on being still at large."

Mr. Shaw adds that there is nothing to be done, as the Defence of the Realm Act abolished all liberty in Great Britain and Ireland.

NEW SUB-MANAGER OF SOUTHERN RAILWAY

MR. J. M. EDDY'S APPOINTMENT.

The newly appointed sub-manager of the Southern Railway, Mr. J. M. Eddy, is due to arrive in Buenos Aires on August 2, on board the R.M.S.P. "Amazon."

There has been considerable speculation in railway circles concerning the appointment. It is stated that the usual duties of the sub-manager are vested on the Southern Railway in the manager, and that the reason for Mr. Eddy's appointment is not very apparent, unless it is that the present manager has received an appointment of greater importance.

Mr. J. M. Eddy has for some time past acted as traffic manager on the London and North Eastern Railway. He entered the service of that Company in 1898.

ish committee, at the head of which is Baroness de Bising, a lady of great charm and talent. The great majority of the patients are Russians, of course, but the staff is exclusively Polish; some 30 doctors, 60 sisters of mercy, 400 volunteer nurses belonging to the highest families in Warsaw, all working day and night with twofold enthusiasm—for it is the first time that the authorities have sanctioned anything of an exclusively "national" character, and each member of the staff is intent on showing what the Poles are capable of when they are left to their own devices.

AMERICA INSISTS ON GERMANY'S ERROR

The long expected Reply to Germany's egregious diplomatic blunder wherein she sought to justify her theory of naval warfare, has been delivered by the American Ambassador in Berlin and published abroad to the whole world. It may not please the fire-eaters, who would fain see the United States in actual belligerency with the Central Empires, but it cannot be gainsaid that its measured language and concise terms leave no room for doubt as to the ultimate intentions of Washington should Germany still remain deaf to the dictates alike of humanity and commonsense. Its reference to submarine warfare in general and in particular lays special stress on the possibility of using the new arm in such a way as to comply with what has hitherto been regarded as accepted practice in regard to non-belligerent vessels. It further touches on the admission of illegality made by the German Government when it claims a right to reprisals, and it sternly refuses to fall into the clumsy trap that was laid for it, by dragging in the validity of British actions afloat, saying that this does not come under discussion.

Germany's artless suggestions regarding the employment of neutral or enemy ships to carry American passengers—and cargo—is also dismissed very briefly, such a procedure being stigmatised as running counter to the principles which the American Government has from the outset striven to maintain. Nor can the United States understand why Germany has not already admitted the inexcusable nature of the attack on the Lusitania, offering at the same time every satisfaction imaginable for the useless destruction of human lives thus brought about by an act that was in itself against all the rules of war. Finally the Note roundly declares that although both governments wish to maintain amicable relations and to minimise, in so far as may be possible, the horrors of modern naval war, the United States will consider any repetition by German naval commanders of such attacks as being deliberately unfriendly, whenever American citizens are involved therein.

This is plain speaking and means that the worst phase of the submarine horror is closed. For unless Germany is working with the deliberate intention of provoking war with the United States, even her rulers can scarce disregard the warning with which the Note closes. It is true that the attack on the Orduña still awaits explanation, but diplomacy

AN AUTHOR'S TRIBUTE

SIR EDWARD RUSSELL AND "THE HERALD"

The real test of a newspaper's popularity is supplied in the reports of the circulation manager. Bearing this in mind, we are all—down to the office boy—incurable optimists on "The Herald." The loyal support of the local reading public has made possible the many improvements which have taken place in the paper during recent times, and personal knowledge of conscientious journalistic work has not been the sole reward of those responsible for the production of a newspaper. Tributes from readers are commonly received, but, by the last mail from England there arrived a letter from the doyen of English editors—Sir Edward Russell—who referred to us in the following kindly terms:—

"Splitted, well-informed, and of good journalistic quality, I think the paper is quite a meritorious production—readable and interesting from end to end."

The communication, from which the foregoing is an extract, was handed to us by a Buenos Aires resident who had favoured Sir Edward with a copy of "The Herald." The testimonial was unsolicited.

Sir Edward Russell, as every journalist knows, is the Editor-in-Chief of the Liverpool Daily Post, one of the six really great provincial dailies. A prominent Liberal, former M.P., one-time London dramatic critic, and author of several books, Sir Edward is now—since the death of W. T. Stead and the retirement of Sir Henry Lucy—the greatest of British working journalists.

INTERNED GERMANS

VISIT BY COUNT VON LUXBURG.

On July 24 Graf von Luxburg, the German Chargé d'Affaires in Argentina, went over to Martín García by the gunboat Rosario with a view to visiting the German sailors there interned.

Captain von Moller, the German Naval Attaché, accompanied the diplomat and they were escorted by Captain Heinrich Fliers, of the Argentine Naval Service. The number interned must be considerably lessened by the defection of those who were permitted to escape by the Eleanore Woermann and who are now enjoying the bleak hospitality and rigorous vigilance of the Falkland Isles.

FROZEN MEAT FOR FRANCE

120,000 TONS TO BE PURCHASED ANNUALLY.

Paris, July 22.

The Minister of Agriculture and the Chief of the Military Administrator, M. Maclerc, have decided to purchase 120,000 tons of frozen meat annually until the end of the war. The companies with which the Government is doing business are authorised to import produce duty free.

will doubtless smoothen that incident over in a satisfactory manner if Germany assents to the main clauses of the Note. If she does not, and if the submarine war is to be waged as before, it is not the Allies who suffer most. In so far as they are concerned Germany has done, and will do, her worst, and provided she leaves the Western Ocean route alone, the probabilities of her involving America are slight. But such abstention will stultify her claim to make England inaccessible, will force even the inland German to realise that there is something wrong with his country's proud boast of her new sea power, and may even lead him to query some of the other marvellous statements upon which he has hitherto been regaled. In the meantime, it is for Germany to reply.

WOMAN'S EXCHANGE

1914-15 REPORT.

The Committee of the Woman's Exchange at their recent general meeting, unanimously re-elected the committee of last year for the ensuing period. The list of subscribers numbers 126, with 33 life members. Ladies of the British community are solicited to join. The institution offers all the advantages of a club. The committee desired to record their appreciation of Mrs. Forbes' management, and it is notified that no sale of work was held owing to the present adverse conditions.

Owing to the continued financial depression in the country, this year has not been so successful as those immediately preceding it, but, considering the great disadvantages under which all charitable institutions have been labouring, the working may be considered satisfactory. The income from all sources during the past year amounted to $27,459.73, and the disbursements to $30,069.56, both showing a considerable reduction on the previous year. The balance in favour of Capital Account is $9,858.81, and the stock on hand is valued at $1,141.60. Cash in hand and deposited in Bank amounts to $3,369.16.

In conclusion the Committee's report thanked the auditor, Mr. Burnham, and the "Buenos Aires Herald" and "Standard" for publication of notices.

FAREWELL TO MR. J. McNALLY

BANQUET AT SPORTSMAN.

By reason of the impending departure for the United States on a visit, or peradventure to stay, of Mr. J. J. McNally the Irish society is grieved. Mr. McNally has been an energetic and conscientious member going forth into the highways and hedges and commandeering good men as members and working with all his energy of which he possesses a large store, for the advancement of the young and vigorous association in question. On July 24 a number of his friends and fellow members to the number of perhaps thirty, entertained him to dinner at the Sportsman. Among those present were: Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Lynch, Mr. Young, Mr. Sheridan, Mr. Leahy, Mr. McClenahan, Mr. Kelly, Mr. Scanlon, Mr. Mahon, Mr. Gribben, Mr. Canwood and others. The preliminary business of dinner having been despatched, a number of gentlemen took the opportunity to testify to the personal regard in which the guest of the evening is held and the hopes entertained that he will return or if not that prosperity may be his page. Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Lynch, Mr. Young, Mr. Sheridan and Mr. McClenahan spoke in this sense and the first named said, that if by an evil chance Mr. McNally did not return, the Irish Society would lose a prime asset. The health of the departing brother was pledged with enthusiasm and it was again enforced, that much of the present prosperity of the Irish Society, is due to his indefatigable energy, joined to an agreeable presence and a blunderbuss way. Mr. McNally is, like many men of real merit, modest and his reply was deprecatory but he thanks his friends for their said opinions. Nevertheless those who know him will prefer to estimate him at the assessment of his friends rather than the very modest opinion he sets upon himself.

TRAGEDY IN DOCK 3

A shocking accident which occurred yesterday at Dock 3, resulted in the death of Benito Posa, a Spaniard, aged 38, acting as winchman. At the moment when one of the hydraulic cranes was swinging aloft a load of six cases, one of these slipped and fell upon Posa. The injuries inflicted on the unfortunate winchman on the head and body were so severe that he expired before he could be even raised from the ground. The body was sent to the morgue.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS

The British troops in Flanders have met the foul tactics of the Germans with their customary resource. The first of our pictures this week shows what happens when a gas cloud is seen rising and advancing from the German lines. An alarm gong, made from an empty German gun cartridge, is vigorously beaten in the advanced trenches. Immediately the troops don their respirators, and leave their "dug-outs." A series of remarkable photographs taken from an aeroplane at the Dardanelles, was published in the last issue of the "Illustrated London News" which came to hand. Most of the pictures dealt with the sinking of the British battleship Majestic, which was torpedoed at the entrance to the Straits. The picture we give is one of the series and shows the battleship heeling over, prior to turning bottom upmost. She had disappeared from view within about seven minutes from the moment of being struck. The French Zouave regiments have proved equal to their great reputation in the fierce hand to hand fighting in Northern France. The picture reproduced shows a bayonet charge through the wire entanglements in front of the German trenches, the Zouaves advancing with great dash. To win fame and then to die within two weeks was the fate of Lieutenant Warneford, V.C., the British aviator who destroyed a Zeppelin. He was killed while experimenting with a new machine. The wrecked aeroplane is shown in our picture, and the burial scene at Brompton Cemetery, London, is also shown. According to cabled reports, the Kaiser is here, there, and everywhere along the various battle fronts. We publish this week a picture showing him near the advanced German positions in Flanders, surrounded by his generals who are explaining the situation to him. The Alpine regiments of the Italian Army have done splendid work in the snow-bound passes of the frontier. The picture shows a group of the men in marching order.

FIRST AID

MR. H. ROGERS' LECTURE AT BANFIELD.

A lecture on First Aid was delivered last night at the Oak Hall, Banfield, by Mr. H. Rogers, to an interested audience. The lecture, which is the first of a series arranged by the Sociedad Argentina de Primeros Auxilios, dealt with the circulation of the blood.

In a manner that was lucid and untechnical, Mr. Rogers delivered a highly instructive discourse. He pointed out how essential it was to grasp the fundamental principles of the human system, the elements of anatomy and physiology, before it was possible to intelligently apply first aid. A very large number of cases in which first aid was necessary were cases of haemorrhage, and if the circulation of the blood were understood, so much the better could bleeding be dealt with. The anatomy of the blood system, venous and arterial circulation was described, the effects of shock from loss of blood, and the like. The value of the tourniquet and the danger of injuries to the main circulatory system. At the close Mr. Rogers was loudly applauded, and received a sincere vote of thanks and many congratulations.

THE "NON-CENSORSHIP"

OFFICIALISM AND ITS ABSURDITIES

THE EXAMPLE OF THE COLONIES

"The Herald" published in its issue of June 17 a despatch from London announcing that the north-east coast of England had again been raided by Zeppelins and that fifteen casualties were reported. The names of the raided towns or villages were not given.

An examination of the London dailies for June 16 revealed the fact that the announcement of the raid appeared in terms almost identical with those used in these columns. It was also stated that, in deference to the wishes of the War Office, no details were being published, as it was considered that to state which districts were visited and the effect of the raid would only serve to guide the enemy in making future attacks. The sequel is interesting.

By the last mail, a copy of the Financial Times containing the following paragraph reached us:—

The War Office finds it necessary to remind the public that all correspondence between the United Kingdom and foreign countries should be easily legible and as brief as possible. Letters which are of great length and barely legible are liable to be delayed, and may, in extreme cases, be detained, or returned to the sender.

Letters and telegrams containing any information which may be directly or indirectly useful to the enemy render the writers liable to prosecution, and the public should bear in mind that their letters and telegrams will be less likely to be delayed if they avoid altogether topics which call for the special scrutiny of the censors. For example, no particulars are permitted to be communicated about the strength, movements or distributions of the British or Allied naval or military forces, or about Zeppelin attacks, or the localities visited by hostile aircraft.

The italics are ours, and for this reason: by the same mail a letter was received, from the north of England, containing reference to the Zeppelin raid on June 15, and stating, more or less precisely, which districts on the coast had been visited and what damage had been done. The German Continental Times, published in Berlin at about the same time, also contains details of damage done to north-east coast shipyards by the raiders. Although our information proves conclusively that the German version is absurdly exaggerated, there is sufficient substratum of truth to the story to show that the German raiders were not working entirely in the dark; moreover, it is more than probable that they received details of the effect of their raid in a manner similar to ourselves.

In view of the express wishes of the authorities, we do not propose to publish the information now at our disposal. At the same time, however, it is scarcely gratifying to realise that the censorship of letters despatched from England is so lax that information can be, and probably is, given to the enemy through the ordinary channels of private correspondence. Letters which have reached "The Herald" recently from India, Australia, and New Zealand, bear evidence of having been much more closely scrutinised. In every instance they have been opened and bear the stamp of the Military Censor.

VICTORIA SAILORS' HOME

MRS. DE MELLO'S CONCERT.

There was a considerable and an enthusiastic audience at the Sailors' Home on July 24, to listen to the various items of a concert arranged by Mrs. de Mello.

There was not an artist on the programme who did not thoroughly entertain and please the audience, and from start to finish the concert went with a harmony and swing that the arrangements deserved.

Mr. Charles Gabb chose four songs, but the most perfectly sung was his last encore, "I hear thee calling me." He was in good voice, and this beautiful song of Marshall's is perhaps the most perfectly rendered of all Mr. Gabb's repertoire. "Because," his choice immediately preceding this encore, was taken too slowly, and although well sung, there was a tendency to drag the melody.

Mr. de Mello also had encores in both parts of the programme, and his singing of "In Sympathy" was greatly appreciated. It was unfortunate that owing to a severe cold Mrs. White was unable to sing, but she did much to make up for this disappointment in her valuable aid at the piano. Mr. Stanley Parker gave "Ailsa Mine," a difficult song, exceedingly well.

"Rule, Britannia" is a new creation of Mr. P. G. Scott's, his elaborate costume was splendidly thought out, and as an originality was excellent. His variation of dress, from the "innocent" nose to the electric lighting installation, which he adopted for his comic by-play in the second half of the programme created roars of laughter. This costume was also original—very original. The applause he received was well deserved.

Mrs. A. H. Davies on the violin was repeatedly encored, and best of all was the playing of a Hungarian Rhapsody. It was deservedly and highly appreciated.

Mrs. de Mello's singing was received with immense applause. Her rendering of "Carmena" was fine, and she was even in better voice than she was at Belgrano the other evening. It was indeed a treat to listen to her. "Uncle John," her encore in the second half of the programme, is not so pleasing a song as others Mrs. de Mello has been heard to sing.

Both the first and second part of the concert concluded with a quartette. In the first half, "On the Crocodile" was given by Mr. and Mrs. de Mello, Mrs. White, and Mr. Gabb, and the closing one was Rumbault's setting of "God Save the King."

The concert was a thoroughly enjoyable one. The programme was as follows:—

Part I.

Duet, "A May Morning" (Denza), Mr. and Mrs. de Mello.

Song, "My Queen" (encore "Until one day"), Mr. C. R. Gabb.

Song, "April Morn" (encore, "Somewhere a voice is calling"), Mrs. de Mello.

Song, "Rule, Britannia," Mr. P. G. Scott, in original costume.

Song, "Tommie Lad" (Margetson), Mr. S. de Mello.

Song, "Ailsa Mine," Mr. S. Parker. Violin solo, "Hungarian Rhapsody" (encore, "The Bee"), Mrs. A. H. Davies.

Quartette, "On the Crocodile" (encore, "A Regular Royal Queen"), Mrs. White, Mr. Gabb, and Mr. and Mrs. de Mello.

Part II.—Duet, "Excelsior," Mr. Gabb and Mr. Parker.

Violin solo, "Humoreske" (Dvorak) (encore, "Le Cygne"), Mrs. A. H. Davies.

Song, "In Sunny Susquehanna" (Aspinall) (encore, "In Sympathy"), Mr. de Mello.

Song, "Carmena" (encore "Uncle John"), Mrs. de Mello.

Song, "Because" (encore, "I hear thee calling me"), Mr. C. Gabb.

Comic variety, in original costume, Mr. P. G. Scott.

Quartette, "God Save the King."

Mr. W. K. Griffith was at the piano.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY IN CALLE SARANDI

LADY SHOOT'S HER LATE FIANCE AND COMMITS SUICIDE.

Late on Wednesday evening a tragedy occurred at a house in Calle Sarandi 1539, the details of which were made public yesterday and have caused considerable sensation in the social circles in which Dr. Luis Lejenne and his fiancée Catalina Losino were known.

It is only just recently that Dr. Lejenne graduated as a chemist and it was during his studies at the University that he met Srta. Losino, who was a fellow student of the same science.

During the months of their studies together they fell in love and became engaged and decided that they would celebrate their marriage on the successful conclusion of their studies.

The reported details which led up to the tragedy in which Catalina Losino shot her betrothed and then committed suicide are conflicting. One story states that Lejenne tired of the girl and when the time arrived when he graduated, it was decided to end their engagement. This so troubled her that on Wednesday evening she called at the house of Lejenne in Calle Sarandi and asked his mother for a few words with him. A few moments after they had been together, two shots were heard and the people in the house rushing in found the body of Lejenne and his fiancée lying in a pool of blood. Life in both cases was extinct and death instantaneous. The distressed lady had shot her betrothed and then herself, through the head, with a .38 automatic pistol. The parents of Dr. Lejenne affirm that there was no engagement between their son and Srta. Losino, but at the same time they could not explain how it was that the deceased lady was wearing an engagement ring, which the friends of Lejenne recognised as being given to her by him. The other story of this unhappy tragedy says that Lejenne's father refused to listen to such a thing as a marriage between his son and the girl and in spite of the seven years during which the two had been lovers, determined to oppose the alliance as firmly as possible. He wrote to this effect to the girl on Wednesday and she immediately went to the University to see her fiancé. A scene occurred between them. The girl is stated to have said she would kill him rather than lose him and he replied by producing a revolver. It was this that led to the tragedy which occurred at 9 p.m. on Wednesday night.

Srta. Losino lived at Garay 2482 and had finished her examinations in chemistry and was only awaiting the final stage—her thesis—to become a graduate in three months time.

FIRST AID

LECTURE AT BANFIELD.

Under the auspices of the Southern District of the St. John's Ambulance Society, an instructive and interesting lecture was delivered at Oake Hall, Banfield, by Mr. Rodgers, a practitioner at Lomas Hospital. The structure of the human body was the subject for this, the first of a series of lectures.

A letter of thanks was read from the London Secretary of the St. John's First Aid Society, acknowledging £25, the proceeds of a concert which was given.

On Monday, the second lecture will be delivered at the same hall at 8.30 p.m. when the subject will be "The Circulation of the Blood."

All English-speaking persons are cordially invited, and it is hoped to add many names to the roll of membership.

ROSARIO ECONOMIES

REDUCTIONS IN ALL MUNICIPAL DEPARTMENTS.

A project was to be submitted to the City Council yesterday, which will meet with but scant popularity among municipal employés, and make Dr. Culaciati perhaps as heartily hated as any of his predecessors, not omitting even Dr. Infante of comical memory. This is the fate of most reforms, yet the Intendente is looking ahead to avoid the crushing deficit which he foresees at the end of the current year, a result of the ruinous expenditure of previous holders of the office, and the previous Councils. The plan is expected to effect economies amounting to $300,000 m'n by the end of the year. All salaries of $150 and upwards are to be subjected to a reduction of from 5 to 10 per cent, according to a graduated scale. The daily pay of peones working for the Municipality is to be reduced from $3 to $2.50, a total saving of $40,000. This is considered to be a better expedient than discharging a considerable number of the men, though in this case on their small wage the reduction is nearly 17 per cent. Numerous economies will also be made in the Departments of Public Lighting, Public Works, Parks and Gardens, whereby it is expected to effect a further saving of $108,000. No doubt is entertained that the proposal will be accepted in toto, the expenses being thus reduced without dismissing any employe, otherwise the Municipality must, at the end of the year, face a deficit of not less than half a million pesos.

ROSARIO GAOL

ALLEGED SHAMEFUL PECULATIONS

It is remarked in Rosario that the recent bloody occurrences in the city gaol, prove the necessity of the Government abandoning its attitude of aloofness and intervening in a decisive manner to abolish the continuous troubles and scandals. But for an incident the prisoners would have been well provided with arms. Furthermore serious frauds are believed to have been perpetrated. The prison pay sheets have been systematically falsified so that employes are made to figure therein as drawing salaries who do not and never did, exist. This too at a time when public employes salaries are being reduced 5 to 10 per cent and the mere peones, to prove the republican equality and equity of the City Fathers, 17 per cent. People want to know what kind of Contaduria the Provinces possess and why these gross thefts are possible? It appears that instead of being a Government penal establishment for the discouragement and punishment of crime and reformation of the prisoners, the prison of Rosario is merely a source from which a number of private peculators draw as much money as they can get into their greedy hands, utterly careless of organisation, justice or any other thing but gain.

BOOT CONTROVERSY

CRUSADE AGAINST IMPORTED FOOTWEAR.

The Liga de Defensa Comercial has presented a memorial to the Minister of Finance to persuade him to actively discourage the import of foreign made boots and shoes as such imports are absolutely ruinous to the shoe manufacturers of the country. The question as to whether the public prefer such a shoe, is not discussed. The public must wear what it can get, and what the manufacturers choose to give them. pay the prices they care to impose and be thankful to get their feet covered. At present the Liga does not object to the import of oak tanned soles or waterproof soles, rubber soles or certain fine leathers but that is probably only their kind forbearance and will not last long but the slogan of "Industria Nacional es un peligro!" will be raised again.

PALERMO

The outstanding feature of Sunday's racing at Palermo was the running of Pan Pan in the classic event, and the simple and easy manner in which he once again proved himself by far the greatest miler in this country. Pan Pan is certainly one of the most remarkable horses in training at Palermo. One could easily bring oneself to enthuse over this son of Ducato, so strangely impressive is he, in various ways. To begin with he attracts attention by his manner on parade. He is amusing. To see him walk up the track, head hanging down in the laziest manner possible, occasionally stopping and staring idly about, while Rivero is kicking him with spurs to get him to move or whacking him with his whip, which, by the way has not the slightest effect because he pleases himself exactly what he does and takes his own time which is so slow that the other horses are up and down before Pan Pan has even reached the place where he feels inclined to turn round. It is really most entertaining to watch him. But when it comes to racing, phew! what a different story. On Sunday he absolutely laid La Nativita out flat and won by a length and a quarter with ease. The manner of Petite Chose's running was entirely beyond comprehension. To travel along with such horses as Pan Pan and Mustafá, and expect to have a dog's chance at the finish, where these taller and bigger animals simply sweep along with their immense ground covering action appears to us absurd. The only way one could conceive that Petite Chose had a chance was to use her immense speed over say the first 1400 metres and trust to nothing being able to catch her. Ran as the race was Petite Chose will never, never have the ghost of a chance of winning.

There was only one race on the programme that provided anything like a close finish. This was the last race on the programme, and without question the finest race of the afternoon. It proved what a fine jockey Torterolo is, old Inspector has been out heaps of times with Navarro, Cardoso, etc., but never once with success, whatever his chances at the weights may have been on Sunday, it was nothing but Mingo's riding that won the race. Without whip or spur Inspector was ridden with all the little jockey's might. Even then Inspector seemed very hard to make go. He gave one the impression of sourness. Probably, and this is said in all seriousness, the constant runs down the field without success have sickened the horse, and he has sort of "chucked" trying. Torterolo had to absolutely make him try on Sunday. It was a grand race, and Mojinete was only just beaten a head, with Massenot third.

The first event of the day ended in an easy win for Sun Yat Sen at the expense of Persil. Wotan was withdrawn, and most of the money that would have been played on him went on to his stable companion. Thus Persil was favourite, and registered his second second this season. Zio ran into third place, and on the book had no chance of doing so. Out of five outings he has never got a place this season. Beethoven was a complete failure.

In the second event the debutante Sisterly, a filly with an action as fine as any at Palermo, had not the slightest difficulty in beating Englander on Papeleta. The best run in the race, however, was performed by Obela, who was left 10 lengths at the start and finished third. Referring to the start of this race and of the fourth, one can but say they were disgraceful, and never gave the smallest chance to backers of Obela and Dentelle in this event of Eureka, a very probable winner, in the fourth.

At last Vicente Lopez has been successful by winning the colt's race from Dosel and Strap. Avanti was the failure of the race. Moderato again got fourth. The surprise was the amount of money that went on Gefé, and for no apparent reason. However, whoever thought him good enough to win were sadly mistaken. He never shewed up at all. In the Premio Black Prince, La Loca registered her fourth successive win. Revanche was second. It may be remarked that this second place was only allowed to occur by Acosta on Novedad. Perhaps Acosta did not like to "do" his stable out of the "shop."

The sixth event was an easy thing for Don Ramiro, and indeed it was a most sound and reasonable result. We feel a sense of annoyance in having selected Sin Humo, because we understood that he was to be ridden by Englander. He would never have been our selection otherwise. This is another plea for the twenty-four hour programme of runners and jockeys. It gives one so poor a chance, when they start juggling at the last moment with jockey changes.

Mingo Torterolo proved the value of a good jockey in a large field, he won with surprising ease from Baldissera and Gontran in the most creditable time of 1.37 4/5, only a fifth outside Pan Pan's time.

In the Premio San Pascual, the favourite Stagno failed hopelessly to do anything. The race was won by Last Reason from San Simon and Escandalo. The former comes back to a distance he likes, and looked very fit, after for weeks looking so stale and poor. San Simon can be reckoned with again.

The whole meeting was a most enjoyable one, and some of the older hands made quite a nice little pile with their conservative and personal fancies.

LA PLATA

Racing at La Plata on Sunday afternoon was noteworthy for one or two unusual occurrences. In the first place, it should be noted that the only two horses which were entered for two races were prominent in each race in which they ran. Mabile, entered twice, once in the first event and again in the last, was successful in both races. Beating Normando half a head in the first event and dead heating with Charlotte in the last, Mabile had two most exciting races.

Normando, entered for the first race, only lost by the shortest of heads, and then came out and won the seventh race.

The other interesting feature of the meeting was the failure of Kiddy to win again. The 62 kilos did the trick, and successfully prevented him doing better than third. It was an excellent and enjoyable meeting. Amongst the several winners given by the "Herald" was Mabile $28.80 and Pretty Polly $30, a very nice double!! The results were as follows:

PREMIO BABEL, 1300 metres. — 1. Mabile 51, $28.80 and $3; 2. Normando 56, $2.20; 3. Hirondele 46, $3.10. Won by half a head; 1 1/4 lengths. Time 1.19 4/5.

PREMIO BOUCI, 1300 metres. — 1. Mabile 46, $5.50 and $5.90; 3. Monedia 45, $4.80. A dead heat; 1 1/2 lengths. Time 1.19 2/5.

Also ran: Querida II, Gallego, Pilleria, (4), Cárcano, Agarrate and Kotter.

ROSARIO

The race meeting at the Hippodrome Independencia, Rosario, on Sunday, was an enjoyable one, and passed off with only one of those unpleasant occurrences which have lately become a fashion at the inland port.

The classic event was won by Mi Nene, who was installed a warm favourite. He won with the greatest ease from Cocainera. This event attracted most public attention. The talent had in general a good day, but were considerably upset when La Gordetti favourite for the fifth event, fell.

It was this event that was the only unpleasant feature of the meeting. Ruiz was suspended for three months for foul riding, and it was this foul riding that brought about the downfall of La Gordetti and Sopenon. Luckily neither of the jockeys riding these horses were hurt.

The results were as follows:

"Father," inquired the little brain-twister of the family, according to "Stray Stories," "when will our little baby brother be able to talk?"

"Oh, when he's about three, Ethel."

"Why can't he talk now, father?"

"He is only a baby yet, Ethel. Babies can't talk."

"Oh, yes, they can, father," insisted Ethel, "for Job could talk when he was a baby."

"Job! What do you mean?"

"Yes," said Ethel. "Nurse was telling us to-day that it says in the Bible: 'Job cursed the day he was born.'"

FOOTBALL

ARGENTINO DE QUILMES (2) v. BELGRANO (1).

Played at Belgrano on Sunday, the visiting team was successful by 2 goals to one. The teams which met were as follows:—

Argentino de Quilmes.—Rotondo, Martinez, Ortega, Molachino, J. R. Pozzo, Vincotta, Ginebra, Cabana, Arpillaga, J. J. Pozzo and Polimeni.

Belgrano.—T. Reddell, J. Pena, G. G. Brown, H. Cox, A. Mallen, J. E. Hughes, J. Martin, H. Vignoles, C. Oliva, A. B. Cullerne, and C. Palmer. Mr. F. Hasler was referee.

The first goal of the match was scored by C. Palmer for Belgrano, who played for the first time in the Club's senior team. He played well throughout the game.

The match was fairly well represented by the score, but Belgrano were unfortunate, because shortly after commencing Vignoles had to retire hurt. The half time whistle saw Belgrano leading by 1 goal to nil. In the second half, however, matters were reversed. Argentino de Quilmes scored twice through Polimeni and Cabana, and thus ran out the winners.

RACING v. ESTUDIANTES DE LA PLATA.

This match, played at Avellaneda on Sunday, resulted in a pointless draw. It was an excellent game, played before a large number of spectators, and the La Plata team played a very different game than when they last met Racing. They were defeated then by 5 goals to nil. Sunday's match was played between the following teams:—

Racing.—Arduino.—Ochoa and Reyes; Pepe, Olazar and Comaschi; Conaveri, Ohaco, Marcovecchio, Hospital and Perinetti.

Estudiantes de la Plata.—Barcos; Pastor and Galup Lanus; Aranguren, Duarte Indart and Lopez; Lamas, Lascano, Leonardi, Tolosa, Valenciani.

Señor G. Guassoni had the whistle.

BOCA JUNIORS (1) v. QUILMES (0)

Played on the Sportiva Barracas ground on Sunday, an interesting game resulted in a tie. Mr. H. W. Lambrecht refereed the following teams:—

Boca Juniors.—D. Zacevich, H. Lamas, B. Ochoa, M. Peralini, C. Capellini, A. Frattini, P. Calomino, S. Gelina, E. Colla, F. Taggini, S. Alvarez.

Quilmes.—C. F. Pearson, A. Cerutti, J. Brown, H. Reid, J. C. Pollini, A. L. Dickinson, B. Hoare, C. Guisani, P. Raggi, J. Morgan, G. Durante.

The game was fast and prominent throughout the first half was Barry Hoare. The first goal, however, was scored by Calomino for the Juniors. On changing ends the Juniors had most of the play, until shortly before the close, when a pass from Dickinson enabled Raggi to net the ball for Quilmes and bring the scores level when the whistle blew.

ESTUDIANTES (3) v. HISPANO ARGENTINO (1).

Played on the ground of the latter. A good game resulted in the home team being defeated by 3 goals to one. The game was a very fast one throughout. The Estudiantes scored their first goal through E. Antequeda. Dannaher levelled matters for Hispano Argentino, and at half-time the scores were one all. In the second period Estudiantes had matters their own way and scored twice through De la Barrera and L. Susan. The teams were as follows:

Estudiantes.—Croce, Pavlosky, Alcardi, Madero, Ivancevich, Vaccari, Lahitte, M. Antequeda, E. Antequeda, De la Barrera, J. Susan.

Hispano-Argentino.—A. Caballero, J. Flores, L. Otin, Murga, S. Pardo, S. Prutto, F. Roldan, J. Monconil, J. Gianetto, G. Dannaher, P. Martin.

Mr. R. E. Benyon was referee.

BANFIELD (5) v. COMERCIO (1).

Played at Banfield on Sunday. The homesters won easily by 5 goals to nil.

The scorers were S. Burton 4, and R. Brown 1. The former played exceptionally good football for Banfield. A. Dolhagaray netted the ball for Comercio. The teams were as follows:—

Banfield.—D. F. Meriggi, J. G. Rohm, T. Legarreta, L. Nai Foina, R. Moglia, R. Brown, P. Alesi, S. Burton, W. E. Roscoe.

Comercio.—L. Carles, L. Molteni, E. Gallazzi, G. Envidez, G. Romero, P. Cositorti, J. Mignanery, A. Bourdieu, A. Dolhagaray, L. Pravato, L. Bordo.

Referee, A. Vacarezza.

SAN ISIDRO (5) v. DEFENSORES DE BELGRANO (0).

Unbeaten and top of the league San Isidro gave a painful trouncing to Defensores de Belgrano on their own ground on Sunday. The Saints played easy football, and were not, at any time, called upon to exert themselves in their 5-nil victory. The scorers were Badaracco, Julio Fernandez in the first half, and Marini, Sayanes, and Morroni in the second. The teams were as follows:—

San Isidro.—Wilson; Bruno and Rossi; Olivari, Morroni and Iriarte; Marini, Julio Fernandez, Sayanes, Badaracco and Alzua.

Defensores de Belgrano.—Rodriguez; Sacco and G. Fourcade; Pascuato, Rota and Puricelli; Bissio, Rubio, Grupalli, L. Fourcade and Lun.

Señor Duchini was the referee.

LAWN TENNIS

BELGRANO ATHLETIC CLUB.

TOURNAMENT IN AID OF RED CROSS FUNDS.

On Sunday next, August 1, a mixed double sealed American Tournament has been arranged to be played on the courts of the Belgrano Club, commencing at 8.30 a.m.

Entrance fees are $4 per couple, and should be forwarded to Mr. H. F. Presscott, Cangallo 682, before 6 p.m. on Thursday, July 29. Lady players need not be members of the club.

The entry fees received will be given to the British Red Cross Society.

CHIRIPITIFLAUTICOS v. PHENACKERS.

On Sunday the Belgrano Lawn Tennis Courts were the scene of some strenuous tennis, which lasted all day long, between the Chiripitflauticos and the Phenackers. It was a day on which the former got their own back for their recent defeat by the Phenackers at football. The results of the day's play was as follows:—

GOLF

SAN ISIDRO II. v. ARGENTINE GOLF CLUB II.

The links of the Argentine Golf Club were visited by San Isidro's second team on Sunday afternoon, and both in the singles and foursomes the Saints had to admit a rather severe defeat, in fact, only one match in each section was won. In the Singles Mr. W. B. Jones was the only successful player for San Isidro, although A. R. Larreta managed to halve his match with H. Mohr Bell. Mr. F. H. Jones and Baillie won their foursomes match, and Messrs. Boddy and W. B. Jones halved against Leslie and Cranwell. Two matches won and two halved was the limit of San Isidro's success. Details of the scores are as follows:—

LOMAS ATHLETIC CLUB

"GARCIA MEROU" CUP.

Over the links of the Lomas Athletic Club on Sunday 28 members turned out to play for the "Garcia Merou" Cup.

The best of the 28 cards returned was that of Mr. Ernest Gibson who went round in 83 and who, with his handicap of 5 returned the net score of 78, which was two strokes better than Mr. C. R. Carstairs.

The winner only took 38 for the last 9 holes.

The following were the cards returned:—

GRAND OPERA

At the Colon

WEEK-END PERFORMANCES

The matinée performance of "Manon" on Sunday was on the point of being suspended owing to the indisposition of Sr. Caruso who was suffering from severe cranial neuralgia. Fortunately the great tenor was sufficiently recovered to admit of the production of Massenet's masterpiece which was interpreted by him and Mlle. Vix in the same masterly manner these truly great artists have accustomed us. Applause was much in evidence from a packed house, especially after Caruso's delightful renderings of the "prayer" and "dream" items.

For the evening performance Strauss's "Rosenkavalier" given with such success the previous evening was repeated. A second hearing of this delightful work of art intensified the many beauties which were evident on the night of its first production. Strauss in his new opera has departed from the vigorous and chaotic cacophony of his "Salomé" and "Electra" and has turned to the simple, melodious style of Mozart. Melody, pure and simple is the predominant feature of the "Rosenkavalier" melody broadly outlined and very easy to discern and to follow, but raised from the trivial by a masterly use of all the resources of the modern orchestra. As an example of this new style of Strauss may be mentioned the letter scene of the second act. This incident, which occupies nearly the whole of the act is set to a simple waltz time melody of the style known as "viennese" and made familiar by Johann Strauss and Gung'l. This simple little waltz is repeated over and over again, yet with such an ever varying tonality and change in orchestral colouring that not only does it never pall on the senses but is looked forward to and greeted with pleasure at its every repetition.

The weak point of the work is the libretto which is never of great merit and which in its endeavour to be humorous frequently descends to the grotesque, also there are parts which are too extended and which also have the disadvantage of forcing the music to bear company in this prolongation. "Der Rosenkavalier," however, in spite of these frequent long drawn out parts and scenes of doubtful taste is a work of great artistic merit. The music contains many delightful moments of melody, and several times during the opera rises to the sublime.

Much skill in writing for voices is shown, the composer never overtaxing his singers, nor using them for mere vocal display. The orchestra is the chief factor for the melodic expression, the singers voicing the sentiments, the orchestra is intended to convey but in a manner more tuneful than is usual to this style of opera.

The opera was splendidly rendered and shows that great care has been taken in its production. The greatest meed of praise is undoubtedly due to Comm. Gino Marinuzzi, who prepared and delivered the musical execution with a care, skill and beauty, which well deserved the enthusiastic applause with which the opera was received.

The principals Sras. Raisa, Dalla Rizza, Galli-Curci, Perini and Giacomucci; and Sras. Cirino, Caronna, Patrinjeri and the artist who took the role of "un cantor," but was not mentioned on the programme, all sang and acted with skill and enthusiasm. The minor parts were well filled, the stage discipline being very near perfect.

The orchestra rose to the occasion and under their skilful director became one perfect instrument responding to every shade of the masterly interpretation of Sr. Marinuzzi.

Last evening the performance was a benefit one given in aid of "La Caja Pital." The work given was "Rigo-

FINANCE AND ART

MUNICIPAL COMPLACENCY AND OPERATIC EXPLOITATION

The lovers of Grand Opera are few and far between in the British community; nevertheless those among us who may fairly claim to pose as cognoscenti, have as a rule had much experience of many renderings by various artistes either in Europe or in the States, to say nothing of the kaleidoscopic procession that has passed over the Buenos Aires stage during the past five years, to go no further back. Until a short time ago it might fairly be said that Opera was the one fine art thoroughly understood of the people in this city. In the days when the chief interest of the season turned on the company at the Opera House in Calle Corrientes, subscription nights were a function alike artistically and socially considered. The social side still remains, outwardly at least, but it is very questionable whether even this much can be said for the artistic merits of present performances. Various causes must be held to account for this state of affairs, which, be it borne in mind, does not date from the current season but is the culminating effect of a policy wherein municipal complacency and managerial self-sufficiency—coupled with an intense desire to turn over capital as rapidly and as profitably as possible—have combined to harm the truest interests of the artists, the public, and the art of opera in so far as its presentation in Buenos Aires is concerned.

The combination of art and finance on the grand scale has never been entirely successful. About the only effective and dividend-earning group of theatres in Great Britain belongs to a syndicate of music-hall proprietors, where the performers play to the level of their public, and the various 'turns' are taken on their separate merits. Opera stands on quite another footing. Each 'tournee' to be distinctive, artistically speaking, must be made by a homogeneous body. If great stars appear in the operatic firmament, then the lesser letto" with Titta Ruffo as the hapless jester. Nearly sixty-four years have elapsed since the premiere of "Rigoletto" in Venice. Many claim that the score of "Rigoletto" is Verdi's best; melodically this may be correct, but in a real musical sense this opinion cannot hold good when levelled against "Aida," "Otello" and "Falstaff." The pure, easy flowing melodies, however, of "Rigoletto" undoubtedly make it one of the first favourites of the popular opera frequenter. Titta Ruffo's reading of the name part is well known in this city and is perhaps the finest ever witnessed here. His rendering last evening was conceived in the most convincing manner. His voice was in superb form and from the moment he stepped upon the stage he held his hearers enthralled by the power of his wonderful art. A performance such as Titta Ruffo gave us last evening calls for no mentioning of special solos for his whole part was sung with a warm rich voice of extensive tone amplified by the intelligence of his forcible acting. Titta Ruffo is not only the king of baritones, he is the finest exponent of operatic vocal art living. Sra. Galli-Curci in the role of "Gilda" was heard to great advantage. Her agile voice remarkable for its purity, range and expression, sweet and full in the middle tones with upper notes of crystalline quality was ably demonstrated last evening. The applause that followed her singing of the "Caro nome" was overwhelming and was well merited. The tenor of the evening was Sr. Lazaro who gave a very good rendering of the pleasure loving Duke of Montova. He received much applause for his rendering of the famous Donna e mobile. The chorus showed lack of preparation. The opera was magnificently mounted and worthy of Colon traditions.

stars must be at least of sufficient merit not to suffer total eclipse through the brilliance of their rivals, whilst orchestra, corps de ballet, and the thousand and one other aids to faithful interpretation of a great masterpiece of lyric drama, must be keyed up to the proper pitch if the true note is to be struck. It can hardly be maintained that this has been done of recent years. The great stars have twinkled for their appointed number of nights, but it has been conspicuously noticeable that when they have been absent from the firmament the works then put on, have been far more pleasing, artistically speaking, owing to the lack of undue contrast.

Indeed it is quite on the cards that ere next season comes, sufficient pressure will be brought to bear on the Municipality to insist on the re-appointment of the committee of opera lovers who have formerly been consulted on the making up of the season's schema. It ought not to be forgotten, though impresarios are apt at times to forget, that the Colon is municipal property, and that its functions are, theoretically at any rate, intended for the educating and uplifting of popular taste. Now the giving of Aida or La Gioconda at reduced prices of $5 per platea may be a sop to Cerberus in the shape of public opinion, but it does not cover the whole duty of a Municipal theatre. The more fact that a large combine of Italian financiers and gentlemen interested in theatrical affairs should think it good business to ring in the Colon ought not to be accepted by Argentines as sufficient reason for taking whatever such a combine may like to give them. The orchestra, to take but one instance, is under the direction of a maestro who, though young, is already one of the great names in the musical world, but can it honestly be said that his orchestra is adequate to his powers as a conductor?

One might pick many more holes if one wished to do so, but that is not the purpose of the present article. In justice to the artistes themselves one should say that they at any rate are hardly to blame for the existing condition of affairs. They suffer without cause. Buenos Aires has been the grave of many artistic reputations, but it is far too often forgotten that the management is frequently as much to blame as the artiste when a house fails to "rise" to a well-known and deservedly great singer. The case of Mlle. Vix in Carmen is sufficiently clear to exemplify the point, and may be mentioned since her reputation as a singer is superior to all possible fear of adverse criticism. Her Manon alone will stand for ever in the memory of Buenos Aires audiences who had the good fortune to hear her. Now in Carmen she had absolutely no help from the apportionment of the caste. Granted that she played the part as it is very often played in Paris, and granted too that here one is accustomed, by birth and tradition one might say, to a very different rendering, were the chorus and the subsidiary allotment of scores calculated to harmonise with the principal? The question scarcely calls for an answer.

Generally speaking criticism has been tempered with mercy, but there is a growing feeling that some one should speak out if the critic's art is not to fall to the level of the puff superlative that to some people is the only real use of the critic. Buenos Aires and New York are the two greatest centres of opera to-day. Many of the artistes now here are known to both publics, and it is the height of injustice for their reputations to be damaged by careless management, based solely on the box office receipts. If both take their work seriously, artistes and critics can be mutually beneficial. And if, as is very probable, the proposed union of lyric and dramatic critics becomes a fact prior to the formation of next year's company, it may well be that its composition will show Art first, and Finance in its proper place as her convenient handmaid.

CONCORD IN CONGRESS

Session of Kilkenny Cats

A sensation has been created by the report that Intervention was to be asked for in the Province of Buenos Aires. The discussion of the subject yesterday in Congress was the occasion of dispute and heated interchange of arguments and vituperations in which Sr. Djckman, Sr. Oyanharte, Sr. Demaria, Sr. Justo and Sr. Mjhora sustained the parts of a quintette, with occasional burden by the President of the Chamber. The solos were interesting, such as "It's a lie!" "Ah, now you show your bloody ('sangriento') character." "Fratricide!" "I am speaking and I won't be interrupted!" "You are a liar!" "And it is you who lie, I demand that they read it!" "It is you that lie." At this point, symptoms of personal assaults, restrained by other Deputies. "You are a lot of sectaries!" "And you are a factious charlatan!" "Let this incident cease!" says the President. After all this harmony, which proves that we can have our "scenes" just as well as the "Mother of Parliaments," the Intervention was further discussed, and the Socialists will vote for it. The Santiago Perez murder is instanced as another proof of the necessity of national interference.

SAN JUAN-JACHAL RAILWAY EXTENSION

VETOED BY THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS.

Doctor Moyano, the Minister of Public Works, had a conference yesterday afternoon with the Governor of San Juan, concerning the possibilities of extended public works in that Province. Special opportunity was accorded for discussing the projected construction of a railway from San Juan to Jachal. At the same time the Governor asked that the State Railways running through the Province would carry free of charge the stone which it was found necessary to carry from 25 de Mayo for the purpose of constructing defensive works against the rise of the river San Juan.

The Minister of Public Works passed this request on the State Railway Administration with a recommendation as to its urgency. In reference to the branch railway to Jachal and the construction of the necessary bridges, the Minister stated that at the moment there was a lack of necessary funds to carry out a work of such extensive proportions.

ACCIDENT TO THE REGINA D'ITALIA

DELAYED AT GIBRALTAR.

A telegram from Gibraltar states that the "Regina d'Italia" has met with a slight accident in the Straits. She collided with another vessel in a dense fog. Repairs are being effected at Gibraltar. All are well on board. The "Regina d'Italia" left Buenos Aires on June 30 last with 25 first class passengers and 1200 Italian reservists. The vessel she collided with was a Greek boat, the s.s. "Giorgius" which sustained very slight damage and proceeded on her voyage.

PROHIBITION FOR WINNIPEG

CARRIED BY A 20,000 MAJORITY.

London, July 22.

A telegram from Winnipeg, Manitoba, reports that in the province of Alberta 125,000 votes have been registered in favour of prohibition, which was carried by a majority of about 20,000. This was a direct legislation vote, and the province will, therefore, go dry on July 1, 1916.

HARVEST PROSPECTS

CONSIDERED GOOD. LOCUSTS LITTLE FEARED.

Intense as is the interest taken in the prospect of the forthcoming harvest in any year, it is even greater than usual in 1915. The country wants a bumper harvest for economical reasons, particularly and also because there is a chance of selling it to prodigious advantage so good that "Such an opportunity may not occur again."

It is calculated that the area sown is very much greater than last year. Therefore the prospects ought to be of the rosiest character, provided that neither pest nor rust doth corrupt, and that langosta does not come down and eat up every green thing and every herb. Against the latter the Defensa Agrícola is already preparing to take the field with vigour. The pest is reported to have already appeared in strength in several districts, but although there is no great apprehension of their doing disastrous damage, extensive preparation has been made, and the work of extermination is proceeding briskly. Altogether, even allowing for the fact that we are habitually and by repute optimists, there seems good ground for supposing that the good prospects of sale will be encountered with a plentiful crop.

EFFECT OF THE RECENT FROSTS

POOR PASTURAGE AND CAMP LOSSES.

From the principal agricultural districts of the Republic information is beginning to come to hand concerning the state of the crop and the effect of the late severe frosts and cold weather. Reports from the Western Zone of the Province of Buenos Aires are by no means all that could be desired. Frost, followed by a lack of rain has seriously damaged the pasture, which a month and a half ago was abundant but which is now poor and greatly retarded.

Ploughing in many places is completely at a standstill and in others it is calculated that at least 15 per cent of the land cannot be prepared for the coming season.

Matters are further aggravated by the poorness of the alfalfa for feeding purposes, its high price and also the high prices demanded for maize and thus the increased cost of the feeding of farm animals.

In the Western zone the weather still continues dry, with strong southerly and south-westerly winds.

In the North, it is estimated that the increased cost of feeding is $3.30 per month. Several cattle breeders have found it necessary to take their cattle off the land and house feed them.

HOW SHALL I INVEST $3,000?

(To the Editor).

Sir,—Would some reader be so kind as to inform me through the columns of the "Weekly" edition of your most valuable paper if $3,000 would be sufficient capital to start any business in the camps of the Province of Buenos Aires. For example could one rent a chacra and make anything out of it by keeping two or three cows, a market garden, and poultry, or if not what would be the best way to invest three to four thousand dollars in the Province of Buenos Aires or the Rio Negro. If yourself or some reader will be so good as to give me information on the subject you will greatly oblige.—Yours, etc.,

AN INTERESTED SUBSCRIBER.

PURCHASE FOR THE ALLIES

INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION FORMED.

For some days past, a feeling of considerable uneasiness has been growing in Argentine business circles concerning the very appreciable falling off in the demand for this country's goods in Europe. Up to quite recently, cereals, meat and this Republic's produce in general was in considerable demand in England, France, etc., and the sudden decrease in orders has created to the speculation and uneasiness.

The latest reports from London, however clear the matter up, and the news received by export houses of the formation of a commission for making purchases between England, France, Belgium and Italy has created an excellent impression and the hope of increased exportation. This international commission is being formed with the utmost rapidity and will have its headquarters in London. It will undertake, on behalf of the Allied Governments, purchases of all commodities, inclusive of military effects, and will by its constitution avoid all unnecessary expenditure and competition.

Up to now the personnel of the commission is unknown. It is stated that the suspension of large purchases during the past week or two has been due to this commission not having yet made their plans and having agreed to work in concert.

The immediate restimulation of the export trade of this Republic is looked for when the international commission commences operations.

Further information states that a fully empowered representative of the Italian Government has already left for England to take up duties on this commission.

NEW F.C.C.A. TERMINUS

TO OPEN ON AUGUST 2.

The official opening of the magnificent new Terminal Station and Offices of the F.C.C.A. will take place at 4 p.m. on Monday next, August 2. The public who have watched with interest the work on the fine building and its ample interior spans, will be deeply interested in view of its completion, and it will be a new sensation to run into a Terminus which is not surpassed on the continent, after the venerable Retiro O. and the newer but now insufficient Retiro R.

VISIT BY THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS AND SIR REGINALD TOWER.

Yesterday afternoon, the Minister of Public Works, accompanied by Sr. Sagasta paid a visit to the New Retiro Station, for the purpose of a tour of inspection.

The Minister, Dr. Moyano, was accompanied by Sir Reginald Tower, the British Minister, and many representatives of the Central Argentine Railway Company. A visit was paid to all the various and numerous branches in the new building and special interest was taken in the system of signals. Dr. Moyano expressed himself as highly satisfied with the work, which had been carried out in entire accordance with the approved plans.

ITALIANS DETAINED

TURKISH ACTION IN ASIA MINOR

New York, July 27.

The "Evening Post" has received a telegram from its correspondent on Rhodes island announcing the arrival there of an American cruiser with several hundred refugees from the Syrian coast.

The despatch says that the cruiser also went to Meraina to take off a number of Italians; but the Turkish authorities refused to permit them to leave, and the cruiser sailed without them.

ARCHDEACON'S WEDDING GIFT

PRESENTATION AT ST. JOHN'S.

Yesterday afternoon the Ven. Archdeacon Hodges, of St. John's Pro-Cathedral, was the recipient of an acknowledgment from the members of the congregation and his friends, on the occasion of his approaching marriage with Miss Letts. There were about 150 present at the afternoon reception at St. John's Hall, and tea was served to those invited in the course of the proceedings. Sir Reginald Tower, the British Minister, was present, and gracefully made the presentation on behalf of the congregation in the felicitous manner of the Diplomatic Corps, observing that the Archdeacon, who usually addressed others, was this time obliged to listen. A silver plate, bearing an inscription referring to the occasion, and a cheque for £200, formed the pieces de resistance of the presentation. There was also a parchment, having the hymn, "O Thou who hearest," illuminated upon it. Subsequently some time was spent in personal congratulations to the bridegroom-elect, and in conversation. The names of those who contributed to the presentation are as follows:—Mrs. Malcolm Anderson, Mr. R. S. Anderson, Miss Lilian Allen, Mrs. Atwell, Mrs. James Begg, Mr. and Mrs. Lowe Brown, Miss Bulpin, Miss Alice Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Burr and family, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell, Mr. George M. AERIAL TORPEDO VESSELS

AMERICAN ENGINEER'S INVENTION FOR BRITAIN.

London, July 27.

It is stated that an American engineer has been entrusted with the construction of a flotilla of aerial torpedo vessels for destroying Zepelins according to an invention which the Press says will be found of great importance. The experiments with the invention have given most encouraging results.

RESCUED ON THE HIGH SEAS

BRITISH MASTER'S FINE SEAMANSHIP.

The details have just become known of a feat of brilliant seamanship on the part of Captain Fairgrieve, of the British steamer Dunachton, owned by Henderson and McIntosh, of Leith.

The Dunachton, which came to Buenos Aires consigned to Mr. G. J. Logan, is about to sail for South Africa with mules and horses and a general cargo. She is a big "lump" of a ship, and this fact makes the feat of Captain Fairgrieve more remarkable. While she was on her voyage from Liverpool to Baltimore, the Dunachton sighted an American fishing schooner in distress eight miles E.N.E. of Cape Henry, at the entrance to Chesapeake Bay, on June 3.

A heavy sea was running at the time, and a gale was blowing from the north-east at 65 miles an hour. The schooner was dismasted, and had the American colours reversed. She was making extremely bad weather of it when the Dunachton came up, and the crew were in grave danger. Captain Fairgrieve saw that the launching of a boat was impossible, and he undertook the ticklish operation of laying his ship alongside the schooner, and giving her his lee. By brilliant seamanship the operation was successful, and the thirteen men comprising the schooner's complement were taken aboard the steamer safely. They were all Greeks, and while loud in their praises of the gallant Captain they wailed over the loss of the ship's dog which could not be got aboard the Dunachton.

Captain Fairgrieve landed the schooner's crew at Norfolk, Virginia. The master of the Dunachton is a member of the Imperial Merchant Service Guild.

BOGUS HABANA CIGARS

LARGE HAUL FOR RIO POLICE.

A Brazilian report states that, at the request of the Cuban Chargé d'Affaires, the police have raided a factory at Rio which was accustomed to turn over "Real Habana" cigars, made in Brazil. The proprietor, a Spaniard, Juan José Culebra Senior, was arrested. The police have confiscated many thousands of cigars which are, no doubt, good enough to smoke. Those who sometimes meet with cigars of Havana which seem to have come from a more sulphurous region may be assured that they are something worse than Brazilian leaf.

BASURA DESTRUCTORS

CONSTRUCTION OF ANOTHER PROJECTED.

Proposals for the construction of new destructors by the Compañía Incineradora have been handed to the Department of Public Works. According to current opinion some of these works will be almost immediately erected near the Chacarita. The municipality will then permit a delay of five years for the erection of the remainder and renew for that period, the contract for the provisional works. Nevertheless there is a strongly expressed opinion that these suggestions will be refused. The Intendencia has made up its mind and intends to take a strong line on the subject. However and wherever the "basura" deposits are incinerated, the public will hope that they may be delivered from those penetrating whiffs.

Agricultural & Pastoral

CAMP NOTES

(By Our Agricultural Editor).

The severe frosts have had a very detrimental effect on pasturage, and stock-owners are lucky who have taken advantage of the more favourable weather to provide an adequate supply of dry fodder, which can be used in an emergency. Oat sowings on account of the dry weather have not come away as luxuriantly as they generally do, hence the disappointments to many estancieros, who had counted on their oats as a pasturage, for a certain number of their animals. The dry weather has retarded the briand, hence the backward condition of this crop, which is generally sown to be used in an emergency. There is no use hiding the fact that, at the present time, pasture generally is very bare, and in consequence breeding cattle are getting very thin and will require to be carefully handled when the spring growth comes.

The demand for all classes of fat stock, has been much firmer this week than any previous weeks sales yet recorded. Prime quality fat steers are well worth 24½ cents; while all sorts of inferior quality animals have possibly experienced even a greater demand than the prime quality for exportation. Cattle for local consumption are scarce; and now would be a most favourable opportunity for placing Paraguayan or Corrientes cattle on the local market. I am aware of all the inspection tramells and annoying veterinary inspections which the present regulations demand, but quite recently the local authorities were reported to be moving in the direction of lessening the difficulties, up to the present experienced in the introduction of cattle from the Northern Republic to this plaza. The utility of these big fleshy, though, somewhat bony cattle are well known; and at the present moment, would be likely to find much acceptance among buyers of cattle for local consumption.

The local Press have this week been announcing that the French Government have made a contract in this country for the purchase of no less a quantity than a hundred thousand head of steers, to be exported to Europe on foot. The difficulty of transport will be overcome by the French Government sending the necessary steamers here for the transportation of these steers to Europe. This proposition has already been presented to many of the strongest houses here; but was generally declined on the grounds of the difficulties, likely to be met in the acquisition of such a large number of prime fat steers of a heavy weight. This latest competitor, against the freezing companies is likely to further advance the present high prices ruling for all sorts of stock, adaptable for slaughter.

The present hard dry weather has been most favourable for the slaughter of pigs; but notwithstanding the former low prices have not made any noticeable advance on former quotations. All foodstuffs have advanced so much in value that it is surprising pigs have not so far participated in the rise; though I am in hopes that a firmer trade may be met in the near future.

The present steady demand for all classes of heavy draught horses, suitable for export, will be the means of ensuring a very firm competition for Clydesdale or Shire stallions at the forthcoming Shows. The activity of export buyers for the Clydesdales or of that cross, in preference to the Shire or Percheron, naturally elates the fortunate owners of this class of sire, when are assured of a very firm trade at the forthcoming shows. The inquiry for Percherons for their cross-ses at the present time must be rather disappointing to partisans of the breed, which has not met with so much enquiry as the crosses of the more popular Shire and Clydesdale.

The sale of pedigree Shorthorn cattle this week was commenced with a draft of cows and heifers from the celebrated herd of Sr. Cecilio L. Lopez, Cabaña "Dos Marías," Juarez, F.C.S. These came under the hammer last Tuesday at the yards of Messrs. Adolfo Bullrich and Co., and there was a fair attendance at the sale. The animals were presented in rather low condition, in fact they came in straight from the potrero, and consequently were seen at their worst as the winter down south has been very severe this year. There was anything but keen competition shown by buyers, yet the average of $545 for the cows and $475 for the heifers or an all-round average of $510 for 20 animals sold, may be considered not so bad, especially in view of their condition.

On Wednesday the same auctioneers submitted to auction some bulls and heifers from estancia "San Blas," the property of the executors of the late Benjamin Gimenez Paz, and again only a moderate trade was experienced. The best price for the bulls was $1,600 paid by Sr. Gmo. Sere for "Patriot 4th," while three others found purchasers at $1,500 each, making an average of $1,525 for the four bulls. $900 was the maximum figure secured for heifers, Messrs. Maraspin and Co. paying this price for a nice breedy looking sort in "White Heather." Other six heifers sold at $700, $650, $600, $500 and $450, giving an average of $628.57 for the seven animals.

On Thursday last a draft of Percheron stallions from estancia "San Genero," Monte, F.C.S., bred and owned by the executors of the late Rodolfo Peña, were submitted to auction in the yards of Messrs. Adolfo Bullrich and Co. Bidding was slow and no fancy prices were obtained. Sixteen horses passed through the ring with a result that they exchanged ownership at prices ranging from $950 to $325, making an average of slightly over $352.

Amongst camp visitors to the city during the week I noticed:—Mr. George Gordon-Davis, General Manager of the Estancias and Colonias Cecilio Lopez; Mr. E. St. Haydon, of "El Kiora," Bahia Blanca; Mr. Robert Dixon, of Cordoba; Sr. E. Haristeguy, of Tandil; Sr. José Riego, of Balcarce; Mr. John Sibson, of Cazon; and Mr. Lucas Anchava, of Rosario. One and all complain of the severe cold experienced in their different districts, and of the scarcity of pasture.

DISTRIBUTION OF RICE

REPORT ON GENERAL PROGRESS

Engineer Vallejo, who has charge of the Government distribution of rice in the Province of Mendoza, has forwarded details to headquarters concerning the quantity of rice already received in the various districts in that Province.

Mendoza—321,868 kilos of from 77.8 to 81.25 kilos per hectolitre. The first of poor germination, the two remaining of good fermentation.

Zapata—137,209 kilos in two lots of 80.1 and 80.6 both good.

Hullera—100,031 kilos in three lots of 77.6 poor, 79.65 and 80.00, 3 per cent.

San Martin—100,039 kilos of 77.6, all poor.

San Rafael—125,162 kilos in 3 parts of 79.45 to 81.5, all good.

This makes a total of 1,228,200 ks. One despatch missing of 271,800 ks.

Señor Vallejo requests this to be sent at the earliest moment possible.

LA PLATA POULTRY EXHIBITION

QUALITY OF THE EXHIBITS

DESCRIPTION OF THE BIRDS SHOWN.

Supplementing the complete list of prizes awarded at the La Plata Poultry Show, that appeared in last Saturday's "Herald," a few remarks descriptive of the exhibits will undoubtedly prove interesting to those who keep poultry, whether on a large or a small scale.

The Poultry Show, apart from the sales resulting therefrom, turned out to be a greater success than many had expected. The arrangements that had been carried out by the officials of the Poultry Association, were well planned and executed, the hall being very appropriate to show off the large number of birds that had been entered.

The work of receiving and putting the birds in their places was done under the direct supervision of the President of the Association, aided by the Manager, Secretary, and the Treasurer, all working for the advancement of poultry-keeping in Argentina, and as has been stated, without any monetary compensation of any description.

Had it not been for the general slackness that is apparent in the majority of industries here, including that of avi-culture, the number of entries would have been considerably higher, but under the circumstances, things were quite satisfactory, and the quality of the birds in general was somewhat higher than that of the exhibits at last year's Show in La Plata.

At the sale held on the 11th instant, those who had entered their birds with the final object of disposal, were somewhat disappointed, as the prices realised were very low.

ORPINGTON.

Of the many varieties of this breed, the Black led, as usual, both in quality and number. Some of the trios exhibited may be truly classed as of exceptional quality, especially the first-prize winners, bred and shown by Mr. E. C. Hardoy.

Although the judging is supposed to be conducted under the guidance of the "American Standard of Perfection," it is evident that where English breeds are concerned, this standard is not quite appropriate. The judges, however, were practical in the matter, and the winners were really typical birds from an English point of view.

Of late years the quality of exhibition Black Orpingtons has greatly improved. This may partly be due to the friendly competition between breeders, but without the enthusiasm that a few have shown, this breed would probably be in no better position now than it was five years ago. The exhibits at La Plata Show were, in the majority, well-built birds, of low body, and short legs, fine lustrous black plumage, and beak and legs of similar colour. The principal defects noticeable were white on the beak, and in at least one prize winner, a defective comb.

The White Orpingtons, birds of the same build as the Black, were not so well represented, but considering the difficulty of keeping the male birds' plumage free from brassiness in this country, the average quality may be termed very fair. The hens of this variety were extremely nice birds, having very white legs and beaks, and being of good size. The White Orpington is sure to be taken up by more breeders in this country as the prevalent opinion here is that this variety proves to be a more prolific layer than the other varieties of the same breed.

Of the remaining Orpingtons exhibited, the Buffs were most favoured. The sudden changes in the weather have a very prejudicial effect on the plumage of these birds, as it often occurs that they are wet from a sudden shower, and the hot sun that follows tends to destroy the deep buff colour that breeders strive to maintain. The hens were not so well built as the blacks and whites, although their shape and depth of body were good.

A trio of Blue Orpingtons was much admired; it proved a prize winner, exhibited by the Misses Saavedra Zelaya, and were easily birds of first-class quality.

PLYMOUTH ROCK.

In the Barred variety of this breed, there were two or three trios of somewhat degenerated birds, but some of the winners were probably the finest Barred Plymouth Rocks ever exhibited in this country. We should specially mention the "Champion" cock, a most typical bird. Not only has he the size and shape of his breed, but his colouring, the fine and perfectly marked bars of his plumage, and the colour of beak and legs, make him one of the finest birds ever seen here.

Many of the Barred Rock hens exhibited were very fine, both in plumage and carriage, though in colouring of beaks and legs they did not strictly conform to the requirements of the "American Standard of Perfection." Being a breed of American origin, the standard of that country is the correct one, but it has been questioned, times without number, by breeders here, who find it practically impossible to produce a hen of good quality, with perfectly yellow beak and legs.

The females invariably turn out with black spots on the beak, and when the beak is almost perfectly yellow, the hen is defective in some other part of the body, generally in the plumage. As imported birds show the same characteristics it is obviously time that some modification were made in the Standard, so that the dark spots may be admissible in the specimens of this breed.

The other varieties of Plymouth Rocks comprised the Whites and Buffs. Of the former there were a few nice birds, a White Rock cock in particular that carried off a first prize, being a typical bird, pure white in plumage, and of splendid shape.

A trio of Buff Rocks was almost superior in colour of plumage to the Buff Orpingtons, but in other respects they were not so good.

WYANDOTTE.

Besides the White variety, there were only a couple of trios, black and silver respectively, exhibited. The latter was of good quality, but the blacks were very defective in feather-colouring. This variety is little known here, and in order to make the birds more presentable, many a breeder would have pulled out the offending white feathers, but Mr. Parkes is above such methods, so he exhibited his blacks with their full plumage, defective or otherwise.

Mr. Harding again scored in the Whites, and he was, of course, the only exhibitor that carried off three first prizes. It is all the more creditable to him when it is remembered that poultry-breeding is his hobby, and in his spare moments he manages to produce birds that can beat those produced by many other "criaderos."

Among disinterested breeders there was some divergence of opinion as to the claims of more than one trio to the honour of first prize, but the majority favoured the judge's decision. This general utility breed, of good appearance, rose-comb, yellow beak and legs, fair-sized body, and excellent layer, is not more generally bred through lack of interest on the part of professional breeders. As a layer it is hard to beat, though the general opinion favours the Mediterranean breeds, which are of smaller build.

LEGHORN.

Excepting one or two trios of fair quality, the exhibits of this breed were certainly not exhibition birds. The White Leghorn is now extensively raised here, but the quality is poor, and although it is recognised that a bird need not necessarily be of exhibition type in order to be a good layer, neither should a good layer that has no claim to perfect type be entered at Shows. Mr. A. G. Mitchel, the first-prize winner in this breed, exhibited a very nice lot.

RHODE ISLAND RED.

The usual defective colouring was apparent in the majority of exhibits in this section, the hens especially being faulty in this respect. The first-prize winner, a young cockerel of about ten months, exhibited by Mr. J. E. Scarnichia, was of exceptional quality, though some thought the bird a trifle too big. Even if this were so, it cannot be called a serious defect in a comparatively new breed which is being slowly evolved towards perfection. The cockerel must have been a first-class bird, as it is quite unusual for a young bird to be awarded a first prize at a poultry show in this country. The usual prize-winners are birds varying in age between one and three years.

BRAHMAS AND COCHIN CHINAS.

The entries in these classes were comparatively few, though the quality of the prize-winners was quite as high as that attained at the Show in past years. Mr. J. Richins exhibited the first-prize winners in each class. The light Brahma may not be the best general-utility fowl, but it is undoubtedly one of the handsomest of all the breeds. It has not the cumbersome aspect of the Cochin China, and although the latter looks a much heavier bird, on account of the greater profusion of feathers, it is not usually of more weight.

LANGSHANS.

The black variety was sub-divided into the Croad and the English types. A large number were entered, and it is evident that this breed is esteemed as a good winter layer. The length of leg, however, detracts a lot from its value, as it sometimes happens that a fine specimen will suddenly go weak on his legs, and can only be cured after much trouble and attention. This is certainly obviated to

APPROACHING SHEEP SHEARING SEASON

PURCHASE CONTRACTS BEING MADE BY U.S.A.

Arrangements are already being entered into between this Republic and the United States concerning the sale and purchase of the wool from the coming shearing. Owing to the war the markets of Belgium, Germany, Austro-Hungary, and part of France are closed. The difficulty felt by the States in obtainable supplies for the manufacture of woollen goods has been somewhat overcome by approaching the Argentine. Woollen exports from this republic are stated to have been interfered with last year, owing to a lack of transport vessels to carry the cargo and much of it remained unsold in the country.

The coming season, it is estimated, will give a supply of wool well up to the average, and that the business contracts now being made between dealers here and in North America will ensure the sale of the whole.

KENT OR ROMNEY MARSH FLOCK BOOK

A most interesting volume, dealing with the pedigrees and other interesting data, relating to this old and highly reputed breed of sheep, has just been received. This is volume 21, and has for a frontispiece a photo of Quested's No. 187, the Reserve Champion ram and first prize for best ram, other than a yearling at the Ashford Ram Show and sales 1914. The compiling of this book and all its attendant attentions to numbering and tattooing has been in the expert hands of the Secretary, Mr. W. W. Chapman, who is worthy of all praise for the excellent production which has just come to hand. The Romney Marsh, as a typical square sheep, with a heavy covering of wool, undoubtedly ranks among the best, and their popularity at the present time in the North Island of New Zealand, is conclusive proof of their strong position, as the most suitable sheep in that part of the world, which is recognised for its scientific sheep farming and cross breeding to the most profitable utilisation of their animals.

a great extent if the utmost care is taken not to inbreed. Line-breeding, in fact, should only be practised by those who are thoroughly acquainted with the pedigree of their stock. This breed also belongs to the general-utility type, being of good size, as well as a good layer. The first-prize winners were exhibited by Mr. Ricardo Tizzio and Messrs. F. and A. Plot.

OTHER BREEDS.

Of the other breeds, the best exhibits were to be seen in the Minorca and the Game sections. The latter were of good quality, though there were signs of degeneration in some of the trios that were entered as pure breeds. The Minorca class, though not bad, was not up to expectations. There was formerly a very good demand for this breed, but in recent exhibitions the quality seems to have deteriorated.

DUCKS.

There was a poor entry of ducks, and the quality was not up to that reached in other shows. The Pekins were probably the best of those shown, and the "crlollos" were far too small. This breed is essentially a large one, though the laying capacity is small, but breeders nowadays do not seem to be able to get the necessary size.

POULTRY IMPLEMENTS, ETC.

There were also exhibited an assortment of the various articles required in poultry-keeping, such as foods, medicines, incubators, eating troughs, drinking-fountains, egg-boxes, etc., the special prize in this section being awarded to Mr. H. F. Minana Momess for the "Minana" specialities.

LONDON WOOL SALES

JUNE-JULY SERIES.

A London firm of wool brokers in their circular dated June 29, referring to the fifth series of London sales of Colonial wool, say that compared with the close of the May Sales, merino greasy fleece is from 7 1/2 to 10 per cent., pieces from par to 5 per cent., dearer. Scoureds too, rule at from par to 5 per cent. over May closing quotations. Crossbreds sell, on the average, at fully 5 per cent. over last sales' values. Capes, both greasy and snow-whites, are par to 5 per cent. dearer.

PETROLEUM IN ALGARROBO

RICHES IN THE PARTIDO OF VILLARINO.

The great advantages which are likely to accrue from the more general use of this mineral has been the general talk amongst the industrial community for some time, while the possibilities of a shortage in the coal supply from abroad makes its more general use here almost a necessity. Petroleum of a very superior quality and in abundance has been struck in that zone and is already occupying public attention on account of the great and lucrative possibilities which its exploitation offers. In Comodoro Rivadavia there is undoubtedly a great future for that oil field, though its great distance from the consuming centres, and through railway lines, will place it at a disadvantage compared with the favourable situation of Algarroba. Considering the importance of this discovery and the favourable conditions for its successful exploitation, it does not reflect very favourably on our local capitalists if they allow this excellent opportunity of handling one of the country's most important propositions to fall into the hands of foreign capitalists.

CATTLE LIFTING AT ARRECIFES

NEITHER LIFE NOR PROPERTY SAFE.

"Cuatrismo" is said to be rampant in the Bartolomé Mitre district and lawlessness so general that the carrying of a revolver is looked upon as a necessary habit like wearing a hat. Don Ricardo Dowdail, who is in charge of the "La Curumalan" establishment, has been a severe sufferer by depredations, and has expressed his intention hereafter of taking energetic means to preserve property and to discourage those raids.

RIO NEGRO FLOOD

PROMPT SALVAGE BY THE F.C.S.

It is said that the present spate in the Rio Negro is the greatest within living memory. Never before has so vast a volume of flood water poured down the valley, and, if the damage done is not so great as that reported on previous occasions, it is because the F.C.S. authorities gave timely notice to the residents of threatened districts and helped them to fly to the shelter of the stations. In contradiction to this it is asserted that the officials of the Territory gave no warnings nor did they adopt any means to assist the unhappy inhabitants. They are alleged to be leading a tranquil existence, far from the Territory which they "govern," whose dwellings are being dissolved in the rush of the turbid waters and whose inhabitants are fleeing for their lives. They will be all there when tax-day comes round, though. The recent heavy rains have caused the present terrific flood, and it may be remembered that on July 15 the Neuquen rose 30 feet at Pass de Indio and the Limay 26 feet. At Choele Choele the Rio Negro suddenly grew by an increased depth of 27 feet, and the great affluents continued to pour their furious torrents into the main stream. Since July 18 the whole valley of the Negro has been deeply flooded, and had it not been for the action, previously referred to, of the F.C.S., there would have been fearful loss of life.

Had the barrage of Neuquen been completed, the disaster would have been averted, "but," says "El Diario" sarcastically, when the administration undertakes any work it becomes of such difficulty as to require forces such as built the Pyramids of Egypt."

GRAIN ELEVATOR

CONCESSION AT QUIRQUINCHOS, F.C.C.A.

The Minister of Agriculture has authorised the Wollmeider Gebruder Company to erect and work a grain elevator, in accordance with plans presented, at Los Quirquinchos, F.C.C.A. According to the terms of the concession the elevator must be finished and in working condition at the end of two years. As a guarantee of good faith the Company has deposited the sum of $25,000 with the Minister of Agriculture, which amount is to be refunded on completion of the work in the stated time.

In case of non-fulfilment, the Company will forfeit that sum or its value, collected upon the installations of the establishment.

FALKLAND ISLANDS NEWS

(From Our Correspondent).

Port Stanley, July 21.

A Place in the Sun.

"Lord, help us to have a good conceit of ourselves." Thus prayed a man who thought that humility was sometimes carried to extremes. Ian MacLaren records the prayer of a commiserating Scotch Minister who petitioned on our behalf, "Oh Lord! we pray thee to be with our Brethren stranded in the Falkland Islands,—which as Thou knowest are situated in the South Atlantic Ocean." Now a swarm of busy bee steam launches and motor boats buzz about the harbour and a local mail steamer about the Islands.

We now possess a modest railway, two telephone Exchanges and Telephones; we have a wireless which has communicated at 1,200 miles distance; and are erecting a second wireless which will carry as far as Gibraltar; and are preparing for cable communication also. The plant for a third wireless installation (to be on the West Falkland Island) is already here. We have come to the front as a colony coveted by the German Ahab (as much as Naboth's vineyard was coveted by the Jewish Ahab), the attempted appropriation of which cost him the destruction of his powerful Pacific Fleet, and brought about a local naval battle that has marked us down in the pages of history. Revenue last year was £36,765 and population now about 3,500. We have experienced having a censor of the Press, and Post Office authorities have opened our correspondence, much to the indignation of their recipients who posted back the envelopes to bear testimony to that operation which was quite justifiable at the time.

We have had three captured ships brought to us to decide their fate and future destiny; and we are beginning "to have a good conceit of ourselves."

"The Story of the Falklands" written by Governor W. L. Allardyce, C.M.G., (the copies of which are sold at a shilling for the benefit of the Stanley Museum) is well worth perusing.

Prizes of War.

The Norwegian s.s. Josephine which after her conversion in the Stanley Prize Court was re-christened "The Graham's Land" (like the Apostle Paul) was sent away to "build up the Faith which once she laboured to destroy."

A writ was served on the three-masted schooner Pax, flying the Argentine flag, on June 27, and on July 7 in the Stanley Prize Court she, with her cargo of 285 tons (i.e. 8,080 bags) of linseed was condemned as a lawful prize. Her Captain gave notice of "An Appeal" against that decision, but seeing that it was proved that the Pax had been a German ship up to February, 1915, then transferred—according to the Declaration of London there was sufficient evidence to warrant her condemnation.

The s.s. Bangor, alias the Seattle, flying the Norwegian flag, and having a cargo of coal, etc., had the Norwegian flag on July 7, substituted by the St. George's Cross; and a complement of officers and crew put aboard her from H.M.S. Macedonia and other naval men from the naval depot. She left to proceed to another British port on July 13. Her boatswain was (with his consent) retained in her. He having stowed her cargo, would be useful. H.M.S. Macedonia left Stanley on July 7 to proceed to the River Plate. Mr. Will Rutler (a noted Falkland horse-breaker) who failed to get a passage in the R.M.P. S.N.C. to go and offer his services in Kitchener's Army was considerably given a passage as far as Montevideo in the Macedonia.

Suspicious Disappearance from a Captured Ship.

From the s.s. Bangor mysteriously disappeared a Swede (rated as A.B. but not long previously a baker by trade) named Neilsen, on the night of June 16, at about 8 p.m.

A boat of the Bangor was found stranded in front of the "First and Last Hotel," but no sign of the missing man other than his cap found washed up on the beach near the boat. The wind at the time being N.W. might account for the boat and cap being found where they were.

Whether Neilsen was drowned or not, has not yet come to light.

Demand for Celibacy of the C.E. Clergy.

The prospective change in the future appointments of none but unmarried men in the Episcopal Church here, is exercising the minds of some of the colonists, upon which matter opinion seems divided. Dean Seymour has already left us, and the remaining clergyman, the Rev. McDonald Hobley, leaves at the expiration of his term—at the end of this year. Henceforth, it would appear, no Benedicts need apply. In consequence of "murmuring in the wilderness" concerning the sparse showers of spiritual manna which of late years has fallen to their lot in the outside "The woman beguiled me," seems to have been made the pump-handle to pump a stream of cold water on the clergy here being in a position to say, "I have married a wife and therefore I cannot come." There is something to be said on both sides of the question, and it would form a good subject for the Stanley Debating Society.

I could instance cases of married clergy, such as that of Dean Brandon, Canons Aspinall and Blount, the Rev. S. A. Hall, and others, who seemed to have had no wifely hindrance to heaving up their anchor in Stanley for pastoral visitations to the outside camps.

I have known a clergyman's wife here for many years do splendid church, and other uplifting work; its influence exists even yet—though years after. She was appreciated in her efforts as much as her hard-working husband in church and schools, etc., and, given the will, a clergyman's wife can be a great power for good here.

I could furnish an instance of an unmarried clergyman who (in a manner of speaking) "jumped a claim" and the intermediate stages of clerical advancement, becoming Dean here, and then, after only about nine months' labour in the colony, during which he made no pastoral visitations into the camp worth speaking of—instead of becoming "a returned empty" (as church-titled dignitaries are termed in England when they leave the colonies) stuck to the title of Dean of the Falkland Diocese, and on the score of it sought and found a colonial bishopric. When here he averred that his position as Dean necessitated his stopping in Stanley.

On the other hand, with either one or the other of the two clergy, we manage to afford to keep here, always alternately itinerating in the camps, the demand for Services, Marriages, Baptisms, and Funerals, might be more adequately met. However, the Bishop's fiat has gone forth, and "the old order changeth." As to whether single-blessedness of the clergy here will make them more persona grata or not, the proof of the pudding will be in the eating.

In the endeavour to please all parties, a clergyman's life sometimes "is not a very happy one."

The Non-Conformist Church.

For want of a Pastor remains closed. Its late Pastor, the Rev. R. Johnson, with many others from the Falklands, had an anxious time when nearing England. Half an hour after they had passed a certain spot, a ship was there sunk by a German submarine.

St. Mary's Church (R.C.)

The sisters at the Convent kindly executed the two farewell addresses—on vellum—lately presented to the Rev. R. Johnson, and to Mr. W. C. Girling.

The beneficial utility of St. Mary's cinematograph pictures was recognised, and, helped by a concert given in the Church Hall on July 15, brought in £28 15s. 4d.

Church News.

The Rt. Rev. Bishop Every, who was returning to Buenos Aires from Punta Arenas, where he had held a Confirmation of 16, came ashore from the Ortega, hoping to confer with Rev. M. D. Hobley, but the latter (our only C. E. clergyman) had left for the camp a few hours before.

The proceeds of the Church Bazaar last month amounted to £134 19s. 8d. The "All to Church" cry does not seem to commend itself as it should do to Stanley folk. With the Non-Conformist Church closed (for want of a Pastor), there should be at least twice the number that do attend. At the men's Sunday afternoon meeting on July 11, but eight came; seven on the 18th; on previous Sundays still less. Whereas, at many dances, concerts, etc., held in the same room on week nights, the room was full.

Births.

In Stanley, on June 3, Mrs. Chaloner, a son. On June 6, Mrs. Bennett, a daughter. On June 3, Mrs. Abner Berntsen, a son. On June 8, Mrs. G. Peck, a daughter. On June 26, Mrs. Sarney, a daughter. On July 3, Mrs. Basely, a son.

At Punta Arenas on June 19, Mrs. J. G. Douglas (nee Robins of Stanley) a daughter.

Obituary.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bennet, aged two days, July 8. Mr. James Hattbe, aged 33, of H.M.S. Macedonia. Mrs. G. P. Smith (of Johnson's Harbour), aged 69, on July 3 succumbed to an illness of several months duration. The funeral accompanied by many relatives and friends took place on July 7, at St. Mary's Church (R.C.). The Rev. Mario Luis Migone officiated.

The Falkland Volunteer Corps.

A presentation to Captain I. Watt, late commander of the F.I.V., was made at the Guildhall, London, when the Lord Mayor presented a purse of 58 sovereigns subscribed for the members of the Second Battalion of his regiment to their Adjutant Captain Watt.

There was a large attendance of officers and men to witness the presentation.

The Lord Mayor stated that Captain Watt was an old service man, having served in the Coldstream Guards, and was also in command of the Volunteers in the Falkland Islands.

In the early days of the Corps Captain Watt promptly volunteered his services and for two or three weeks helped most materially in coping with the great rush which ensued. When active drill started it was found that Captain Watt was a very competent instructor, and from the first of January he had done most excellent work particularly in taking in hand the large number of men without previous military knowledge and putting them through the earlier stages of their drills. In every capacity he had made himself extremely popular with those with whom he had come in contact, that he had gained not only goodwill but the affection of members of the Corps. At the end of the proceedings Mrs. Watt was presented to the Lord Mayor who congratulated her on her husband's record.

Profit-Sharing by the Falklands Islands Company.

The F. I. Company has increased the Annual Bonus (which last year was 10 per cent.) given to their employees to 12 1/2 per cent. for the year 1915, in consideration of the admirable way in which at the time of German storm and stress all parties put their shoulders to the wheel.

Government Appointments.

Captain Frederic John Newham of the 9th Company National Reserve Guards, to be officer commanding the F. I. Volunteer Force; James Jones Wilson to be a Stipendiary Magistrate for the Colony and its Dependencies, also Collector of Customs; Deputy Post Master. Register and Health Officer for the West Falklands and adjacent Islands; Dr. F. J. Craddock, M.R.C.S. and L.R.C.P., to be Assistant Colonial Surgeon, East Falklands.

Acknowledgment has been made and thanks by the Belgian Minister for a cheque for £140 contributed to the B. Relief Fund.

The Government Dental Clinic.

In 1914, nearly five and a half months were spent and work done in the camps. All twelve stations were visited by Mr. G. W. Royle (dentist). In 1913, the number of visits received 998; number of extractions, 248; number of fillings, 214; whereas, in the year 1914, visits were 510; fillings, 171; extractions, 274.

The number of visits paid to scholars by the Colonial Dental Surgeon, Mr. G. W. Royle, during the year 1914, doubled that of 1913. The children have displayed a keener interest in the care of their teeth. The number of visits during 1914 were 224; fillings 91; extractions 84. Lectures were given illustrated by lantern slides.

Variety Concert.

An appreciated variety concert was given in the Stanley Church Hall on July 15, organised by Mrs. C. McDonald Hobley and the Rev. C. M. D. Hobley. On the stylish and amusing programmes sold, among other skits appeared, "Notice. You are earnestly asked not to throw mutton, kelp, or penguin eggs at the performers, as they are doing their best."

The programme was as follows:—Overture by "The Blue Birds," A discourse on Mr. Cohen by Mr. Royle, Japanese Fiddle solo, by Mr. C. C. Howe; Song by Lieut. J. N. Goddard (F.I.V.); Dance, by Miss Malvina Thomas; Recitation, "Dagobert the Jester," by Mrs. Hobley; Indian Club Swinging, by Mr. J. Stokes; Song by Mrs. Captain Smith; A farce entitled "My Car,—What?" or, "Change for La Rochelle," in which Mr. G. W. Royle delineated the part of Mr. Spiffkins; Mr. J. Stokes, that of "Adolphus Spiffkins"; Mr. Barry Girling that of "Mr. Wiffkins"; Mr. W. Bartram that of "Energy"; Mr. Peter Sandys, "Sparks"; while Mr. A. E. Smith portrayed "Policeman Kettle." "At the Piano," by Miss Gladys Davis; "Patter Comedians," by Messrs. Bartram and Stokes; Song, by Lieut. T. N. Goddard; Recitation, "Little Orphan Annie," by Miss Malvina Thomas; "The Popular Comedian," acted by Mr. Tom Burrell; A Dance, by Mrs. Hobley; "Maisy my Maisy," by Mr. Peter Sandys; "Johnny McKay," by Mr. J. Stokes; Song by Mrs. Smith; A rendering on the violin of "Norma" was given by Mr. C. C. Howe; "The Great Hit" was "warbled" by Mr. W. G. Royle; and "The (Butter) Scotch Comedian Mr. Spluttermasher" was made toothsome by Mr. J. G. Royle. With many encores the concert lasted over 3 hours. Proceeds £28.15.4.

Farewell!

A convivial and farewell supper given by friends, honoured Mr. W. C. Girling (who had been for the last 16 years in the F. I. Company's Stanley Office). Twenty-five were present at the Rose Hotel on June 24. Toasts were drunk, speeches made, songs were sung, and the presentation made of an illuminated, and framed address. The workmen of the F.I. Company subscribed 11 guineas wherewith Mr. Girling was himself to purchase a memento of the regard and good feeling they had for him.

A presentation to the Rev. Dean Seymour was an ornolu clock; to Mrs. Seymour a silver plated Butter Dish was presented.

The Falklands Fight—An Unrecorded Incident.

"The Buenos Aires Herald" of Jan.

15, 1915, records the invading visit of Admiral von Spec and the German armed auxiliary "Sedylitz" with her two consorts having gone into Port Fitzroy (12 to 15 miles south of Stanley). But the deeds of three modern Falkland ladies were left "unhonoured and unsung" until now.

This has been remedied by Admiral Sir Doveton Sturdee, who by the last mail-steamer sent to Mrs. Roy Felton a silver tray, and to Miss Marion McCloud and Miss Christina Goss a silver tea-pot each, accompanied by a letter of thanks for the service they had rendered to the Fleet.

The occasion was as follows:—The men-folk of Fitzroy station were everyone away engaged at some distance. Mrs. Roy Felton (the manager's wife) with her three little children (one of them a baby in arms), together with her two maids were alone when the unwelcome German marauders arrived and anchored their three ships behind some islands in the harbour. Fortunately the house happened to be out of sight from that anchorage. Mrs. Felton at once ran to her telephone and, Hullo! Hullo! into Stanley, where H.M.S. Canopus was "sitting on the mud" in the harbour (as a fortification), connected with the town by a telephone cable. The Canopus apprised Admiral Sturdee, who took measures accordingly. Meanwhile, the two damsels Misses McCloud and Goss "went softly" again and again to the top of an overlooking hill, remaining out of sight as far as possible, but keeping one pair of eyes on the Germans; and Mrs. Felton reported their every movement to Stanley by the telephone. Between the three of them they "smote the nail"—and hit it on the head very time!

The outcome of which was that two out of the three vessels were sent to the bottom of the sea, while the "Sedylitz" managed to evade the H.M.S. Bristol and reach the River Plate.

Left Behind!

"No room! No room! Ye cannot enter now!" was the sad refrain for the cars of a dozen or so would-be passengers from Stanley on the arrival of the R. M. S. Ortega on June 28, which left the same day.

The steamer was full with travellers that had been prevented by snow from crossing the Andes: French, Italian and other reservists and volunteers, and an opera company.

The reflected glory of travelling in a mail-boat that had dodged the German shells in the Pacific and thus become deemed "a lucky ship" was denied to them.

Of those who succeeded in "forcing a passage," the colonial surgeon Dr. Pierce had to make shift in the ship's dispensary, while his valuable bulldog shared with him that abode.

Mr. and Mrs. Girling had to become inmates of the ship's hospital though there was "nothing wrong with them."

Dr. Turner (médico from West F.) with Mrs. Turner and four children had to squeeze into a three-berth cabin.

The Very Rev. Dean, Mrs. and Miss Seymore, Mrs. Fred, Kiddle, Mr. A. Hardy got accommodation of a sort.

Among those who could not secure a passage were Mr. W. Rutter (who had volunteered for the front), Mr. James Perry (who wished to go to Buenos Aires Hospital for treatment), Mr. Howatt and family, Messrs. G. and J. Dean.

Why?

Mr. W. Hart Bennet, Government House, Nassau, Bahamas, a former Col. Sec. and Commander of the F. I. Volunteers, wrote to Stanley that "only in the F. I. Magazine had he seen that it was a F. I. Volunteer who first saw and reported the approach of the German Fleet on December 8." It was told in the "B. A. Herald" of January 15. Would some one kindly "send" him a copy?

Spy's Declaration in London

A DISCREDITED STORY

Rio de Janeiro, July 27.

The newspapers publish a telegram from London which reports that a man named Fernando Buschmann, who has been arrested as a German spy and is likely to be shot, has declared himself to be a subject of Brazil.

In reply to inquiry at the Brazilian Foreign Office, the Press reporters have been informed that nothing is known of the man there.

TELEGRAPHIC PERFECTIONS

FIFTEEN HOURS TO LOS COCOS.

Complaints of the telegraphic service are loud, numerous and continuous. La Nación instances the following example of efficiency. A telegram handed in as specially urgent and charged consequently at triple tariff was directed to Los Cocos and was handed in on Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Capital. It was delivered on Thursday morning at 11.30, the destination being a few squares from the station. This despatch had taken 15 hours to arrive after being declared urgent, charged as urgent and for immediate delivery. This is a sample of the kind of they constantly going on in the Postal Telegraphs Department. It is scarcely necessary to point out how damaging might be such delays in many circumstances. One does not hear anything of the Department refunding the excess charged for rapid delivery. What is a telegram for anyhow, if not for rapid delivery? Next time the sender will prefer to send a messenger on a mule. He will probably beat the electric current.

are still discharging cargo for the Admiralty. The two steel lighters being put together for the Navy are progressing. Workers for the new wireless are now taken back and fore by railroad tram. The s.s. Manchester Civilian left Stanley on June 24. The Josephine (now the Graham's Land) left Stanley on July 6. The s.s. Bangor (captured ship) left Stanley on July 13 in charge of naval officers and crew from the Macedonia.

The H.M.S. Macedonia left Stanley during the second week of July. The 3-masted schooner Pax (cargo liner), captured, is still "at pax" (peace), and anchored in front of the Hon. Vere Pack's house.

The local s.s. Falkland brought from Darwin factory 3,000 cases of canned mutton on July 15.

Shipping, since the war started, has required some thousands of carcasses of mutton. The F. I. Company are seeking supplies of sheep for mutton from the West Falklands.

MENDOZA NEWS

(From Our Correspondent.)

Mendoza, July 26, 1915.

Wedding.

A charming wedding was solemnised on Saturday, in the Anglican Church Hall in Mendoza, between Mr. Sydney H. Forbes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bracey Forbes, of London, and Miss Ellen Enemark, eldest daughter of Mr. Jacob Enemark, wine grower, of Chacras de Coria, Mendoza. The marriage ceremony was effected by the Rev. F. Middleton. The church was tastefully decorated with white flowers, suitable bridal music being rendered by the organist (Mr. G. Parry). There was a large and representative gathering at the function, comprising a number of Mr. Forbes' bank colleagues, and many members of the Danish community. A reception was held at Chacras de Coria. All the toasts were cheered with much fervour. The wedding presents were handsome and numerous. The happy couple will spend their honeymoon at Potrerillos, in the Andes.

English Church.

The Rev. F. Middleton has received a call to proceed to Rosario, Province of Santa Fé, to take charge of the work at present being done by the Rev. Mr. Pepys. Mr. Middleton leaves here on July 27.

Chamber of Commerce (Province of Buenos Aires).

A delegation has just visited Mendoza with a view to soliciting the co-operation of the Provincial Government towards agitating for the establishment of a lower scale tax applicable to vendors of national wine and beer; thereby it is proposed to foster materially the Mendoza wine industry. At present, owing to the excessive high tax of $500 imposed, a large number of licensed houses are unable to continue in business.

Sport.

A 20-round boxing contest is advertised for July 31, in the Casino Theatre, between Jack Murray and F. Priano. The championship carries with it a purse of $1,000.

Lawn Tennis.—The complete results of the recent tournament in Mendoza are given below:—

Tennis Tournament. Ladies' Singles. First Round: Mrs. Simpkins—30 beat Miss Andrew—30, 6—4, 6—0; Mrs. Jacoby—15, beat Miss H. Pettigrew—15, 6—2, 6—0. Second Round: Mrs. Simpkins—30, beat Mrs. Burrows scr., 6—4, 6—4. Final: Mrs. Simpkins beat Mrs. Jacoby, 6—3, 6—1.

Mixed Doubles.—First Round: Mrs. Burrows and L. Freeth scr. beat Miss Pettigrew and H. Nevelle—15, 3—6, 6—2, 6—4. Second Round: Mrs. Jacoby and H. Gubbins scr. beat Mr. and Mrs. Simpkins—30, 4—6, 6—2, 6—4; Mrs. Burrows and L. Freeth beat Miss Andrew and N. Stenning, w.o. Final: Mrs. Burrows and L. Freeth beat Mrs. Jacoby and H. Gubbins, 5—6, 6—1, 7—5.

Men's Doubles. First Round: H. Nevelle and A. Deleballo—15, beat J. Grimsditch and L. Freeth—15, 4—6, 6—1, 6—3. Second Round: L. Prince and J. Munro scr. beat H. K. Simpkins and S. E. Burrows, scr., 6—1, 6—5; H. Nevelle and G. Delaballe beat A. Van Wever and H. Gubbins—40, 6—3, 2—6, 6—2. Final: H. Nevelle and G. Delaballe beat L. Prince and J. Munro, 6—3, 5—6, 6—1.

Men's Singles (Championship).—First Round: L. Freeth beat L. Prince 6—5, 6—5. Second Round: H. M. Gubbins beat H. K. Simpkins 6—4, 6—5; L. Freeth beat G. Delaballe 1—6, 6—1, 6—3; J. Munro beat R. H. Williams, 5—6, 6—3, 6—4; A. Van Wever beat J. Grimsditch 6—3, 6—5. Third Round: H. M. Gubbins beat L. Freeth, 5—6, 6—1, 7—5; A. Van Wever beat J. Munro, 6—0, 6—3. Final: H. M. Gubbins beat A. Van Wever, 6—4, 6—4, 3—6, 4—6, 6—4.

Off to the War.

Mr. John Martin, late Inspector of the Transandine Railway Service, leaves here to-day en route for England to join the colours.

CRIME IN TUCUMAN

RECONSTRUCTION INTERRUPTED

Details of the reconstruction of the crime are to hand from Tucuman, in which Señora Juana P. de Griet was brutally murdered by a gardener named Vinas, employed on the premises. The reconstruction, which had been ordered and arranged for Thursday afternoon, was interrupted in an amazing and alarming manner, for in the midst of this peculiar and, to the British mind, disgusting legal ceremony, a Turk sprang out from amidst the numerous spectators, firing a revolver, wounding other lookers on, and during the ensuing alarm the murderer made a dash for liberty. This occurrence brought the reconstruction of the crime to a sudden ending.

The reported details are as follows: On Thursday afternoon, Doctor Miguel Dominguez, the Judge of instruction, accompanied by secretaries, sergeants of police, vigilantes, and other officials, together with the murderer, repaired to the scene of the murder for the purpose of "reconstructing the crime." The ceremony was attended by a large number of spectators, and the criminal had commenced to recount the story of the murder. At the moment when both morbid and legal interest over the bloody deed, was at its height, a Turk named Juan Ali (sic), one of the gangsters at the works, jumped out from amongst the crowd armed with a revolver, which he fired at the murderer. The bullet, however, missed the criminal, but struck the police-sergeant Barro, who was close by. During the confusion that followed, Vinas took to flight, escaping the bullets of the Turk, and incidentally from the hands of the police. He was, however, caught by a civilian named Augustine Sol, after he had run a short distance only. Ali continued to shoot, wounding the flying murderer slightly in the arm, and hitting a mechanic named Remigio Alvarez, who was attempting to check the flight of Vinas.

With difficulty the Turk was overpowered. He stated on being questioned that he had the day previously seen one of the children of Señora de Griet crying bitterly for his mother, and that this scene so upset him that he determined to kill the murderer at all costs.

The police, however, believe that the business was engineered so that the murderer might escape. After the startling finish to this legal process, both the murderer Vinas and Juan Ali were placed under lock and key with a sentry posted at the door of each of them. Even then the incidents of the afternoon were not ended. The guard placed over Vinas "in a moment of distraction" found himself suddenly confronted by a brick, with which his prisoner was threatening him, and who with his free hand was endeavouring to strangle him. His cries brought the other guard, Damian Toledo, who was watching over the Turk, to his rescue. Together, and with the aid of three heavy blows on the head, they managed to reduce the criminal to a state of order.

TREATMENT OF PRISONERS

AMERICAN AMBASSADOR OBTAINS BETTER CONDITIONS FOR FRENCH OFFICERS.

New York, July 26.

A wireless communication received at Sayville from Berlin says that the German Government has notified the American Ambassador at Berlin that the German officers who are prisoners in France are now being treated in accordance with the mandates of the Hague Convention. In consequence of this the fifty French officers who were in retaliation being treated as military prisoners have been restored to former conditions.

Public Opinion as expressed in the Argentine Press.

THE SITUATION OF THE PENSION FUND

(La Prensa.—July 22).

The Report for 1914 which has just been presented by the President of the National Fund for Pensions and Allowances contains, says La Prensa very grave matter for thought, and proves the justice of the remarks made in 1913, when this journal pointed out that Government intervention was necessary. The mere fact that pensions for 1914 amount to a million six hundred thousand pounds more than those of 1913, is taken as a base whereon the President of the Fund founds some observations which show that firm measures are necessary if the security that the Fund is intended to afford to old national servants is to be maintained. There is not the least possibility of disputing the importance of these observations, La Prensa continues, since the present system is, as was remarked in 1913, actually conducive to the bankruptcy of the Fund.

Though it may be true that this bankruptcy is not to be looked for immediately—La Prensa puts it at 1923—that does not affect the gravity of the situation, which ought to have been treated with the importance it deserved once the facts were denounced. It is the duty of the Government to provide against the time when it may find itself forced to provide the sum of thirty million for pensions, since it is inconceivable that the Government will abandon its old servants who have no other means of existence than those which the Government itself has secured to them. Legislative reform La Prensa declares to be indispensable and urgent, seeing that every year that passes brings the danger nearer, and that it is the clear duty of the Government to avoid the grave difficulties that may arise from its lack of foresight.

COMMERCIAL RELATIONS WITH NORTH AMERICA

(La Nación.—July 23).

Interviewed by a representative of La Nación on his return from North America, Sr. Victoriano Villamil, who attended the congress of financiers, recently held at Washington, as delegate from Argentina, has given his impressions as to the future commercial relations between this country and the States. Sr. Villamil is firmly convinced that there is great reciprocal interest in the question of bringing the two countries into closer commercial intimacy. One of the first necessities to that end in his opinion is a better service of shipping between Buenos Aires and the North American ports. Although this important question was discussed at the meeting referred to, Sr. Villamil states that unfortunately nothing definite was decided as regards the establishment of new lines. The question of a commercial arbitration however was exhaustively studied, even in its relation to cable contracts between New York and Buenos Aires. It was proposed that the Chamber of Commerce in both Capitals create a special committee with general powers for the furtherance of the idea. Both Chambers of Commerce will maintain a list of thirty arbitrators representing and fomenting the different branches of trade, half of the names on the lists being chosen by each Chamber. Passing to the question of finance, Sr. Villamil says that in the States Argentina is recognised as a country of immense natural resources and it may be confidently hoped that before long Argentine securities will be quoted in the American daily papers as they are at present in those of London, Paris and Berlin.

THE QUESTION OF THE BUDGET

(La Nación.—July 22).

The preparation of the Budget Estimates is taking a long time, says La Nación, but the delay is justified owing to the necessity for seeing more or less what the revenues are likely to produce, since the first half of the current year shows a diminution of $28,000,000 when compared to its predecessor. It is however hoped that the second half of the current year will show an increase when compared with 1914, but in any case a reduction of revenue must reasonably be expected, and the Government must provide for such a contingency, and wait for another three or four months ere it can forecast the 1916 Budget with any likelihood of being near the mark. Meanwhile economies are effected in accord with the actual diminution, and in the hope that the second half will not show a greater loss than the first half of the year.

It is in this pruning process that the Budget Committee finds its hardest task, owing to the fact that the various ministries do not help them by reducing the estimates of their respective departments; indeed some of them have even gone so far as to ask for increased allocations of funds, just as though the treasury was in a position to spend extravagantly. The argument used is that such expenditure is indispensable, though, as La Nación justly remarks, the indispensable thing is to make revenue and outlay balance each other. Ministers have all been asked to reduce their demands, but they get over this difficulty by cutting down the really indispensable allowances, leaving superfluities intact, knowing well that at a later date the former will have to be supplemented by special grants from Congress, and La Nación concludes by recommending to the President's consideration the advisability of consulting with the Minister of Finance and, in accord with his expert advice, exercising his right of reducing such expenditure. Let there be no diminution of assignments destined to cover services that are known to be absolutely necessary at the expense of matters that at the present moment may well be dubbed superfluous.

LIGHTING THE SOUTH COAST

(La Prensa.—July 23).

The Government has arranged for the funds needed to put up four principal lights on the South Coast, namely at Isla Leones, Cabo Blanco, Cabo San Francisco, and Cabo Buen Tiempo, and, as La Prensa justly remarks, the importance of this measure is very great, given the difficulty of the ports in this region. The first light will form an absolutely safe mark for boats bound to Camarones and Comodoro Rivadavia, the light on Cape Blanco will be a first rate guide to vessels making the land between Camarones and Chubut, whilst the lights on San Francisco and Fairweather Cape will be the advanced sentinels to the ports of Santa Cruz, San Julian, and Gallegos, thanks to their long range of visibility which will simplify exceedingly the entry to these ports, now of considerable commercial movement.

Meteorologic conditions down south, and the strong currents caused by the high tides at the entrance to all ports and bays, have always led to the navigation in those waters being considered dangerous. And the danger is added to in the winter season by the heavy squalls of snow and rain that render observation a matter of difficulty, save by the use of fixed

THE CANALS IN THE DELTA

(La Nación.—July 26).

The Public Works Department of the province of Buenos Aires has acquired an unchallenged reputation for mistakes, if not for something worse, says "La Nación," whence arises the present financial state of the province, now close on the borders of insolvency. Among the jobs taken in hand during the period of frenzied activity was the drainage scheme, which, as last year's experience shows, produced exactly the opposite effect to that originally intended. Another gem is the Northern Canal, perfectly useless, says "La Nación"; the Meridiano V. railway, a job that not only touches the limits of railway foolishness, but also lends itself to suspicion on the financial side, and, whilst being of service to no-one, costs about two and a half million dollars to manage. The road to La Plata is another work of the same category. In fact a list of the failures would be as long as a list of the works undertaken, but, says "La Nación," its immediate object is to draw attention to the unexpected attitude taken up by Sr. Ugarte's government with respect to the law relative to the canals in the Parana Delta.

In 1911 a law providing for the net work of canals that was to drain this region was duly passed, despite the resistance of those who thought that such work was premature and would only throw a fresh charge on to the provincial treasury. The scheme became law however, being financed by a loan of $3,000,000 gold, the idea being that the cost of the work ought to be borne by the government and by proprietors in a zone of 1500 metres on each side the proposed canals. Unfortunately the division was not equal, the government, i.e. the general body of provincial taxpayers, being responsible for 60 per cent., the while the proprietors actually benefited were only put down for 40 per cent. The work was done, and well done, by the contractors, but now that the time has come for payment the proprietors find the cost too heavy and seek to have it spread over all the landowners in the Delta, and the government are trying to pass a law to this effect. As "La Nación" remarks it is very probable that the isleños, who have no-one to defend their rights, will be forced to pay for the betterment of lands that will actually tend to diminish the value of their own holdings in Rio Carabelas, Parana de las Palmas, Parana Guazu, Parana Mini, Rio Lujan, etc. despite the fact that they originally paid more for the properties than would have been asked for the uncultivated land now canalised. Such monstrosities, "La Nación" concludes, only occur in the government of Sr. Ugarte, and give a very good idea of his conception of the duties of a public functionary.

points on the coast line. When these are not visible ships must keep well out to sea to be clear of danger. Thus, these four new lights, plus the acetylene gas buoys to be placed at the entrance of the Deseado River, Santa Cruz, and Gallegos, the Argentine coast will be much better lighted, from the Plate right down to Staten Island, which, as La Prensa remarks, is as it ought to be, seeing that ships pay lighting and buoyage dues. It is now the duty of the Minister of Marine to insist on the installation of a complementary system of secondary lights, together with a powerful light on the English Bank, that ever-present peril to navigators making the River Plate, whilst at the same time syrens, radio-telegraphic apparatus, and other aids to navigation and life-saving ought not to be forgotten.

MUNICIPAL AUTOMOVILES

(La Prensa.—July 24).

The commission now managing affairs municipal has postponed the study of a project which is intended to regulate the use of the municipal motor cars, the said postponement being said to arise out of deference to the Intendente, who is studying the traffic question, though, as La Prensa remarks, one fails to see where the connection between traffic and the employment of municipal property by employes and private persons comes in. The lack of logic in reality involves the question of whether sundry corrupt practices in the administration of the commune are to be checked or no. Motor cars and municipal property in general, are presumably to be used for public service, not to forward the private interests or convenience of employes. Hence the use of such facilities by employes, their families, or their friends, for private ends, shows a lack of administrative control that ought to be corrected immediately the offence is made public.

The incorrect employment of motors by municipal employes may be classed as a corrupt practice, and one that has its root in the custom of allowing individual privileges to certain functionaries, being more or less on a par with the unlimited issue of tramway passes and other perquisites of that sort. It may be that the law as it stands can deal with the offence, but that does not explain why the project was postponed, seeing that since the cars in question all bear the legend "municipal service," and the public themselves are in a position to help in extirpating the abuse, if the municipal administration is impotent to do so. There should have been no postponement, says La Prensa. The project relatively insignificant, yet bears within it the germ of an important principle. Offenders should be punished, and if the sense of decency of the employes does not show them where they are at fault, the while the weakness of their superiors allows them to continue the abuse, then the public will do well to give them an energetic lesson.

ADMINISTRATIVE CONTRADICTIONS

(La Prensa.—July 26).

The government has authorised a private firm to use the national colours of a foreign nation as a fiscal stamp upon certain merchandise handled by it, thereby showing that even government is not always aware of the resolutions passed by the various ministerial departments. This ignorance, says "La Prensa," accounts for the fact of such permission being granted, despite the fact that some months ago the Department of Agriculture decided to prohibit the use of national flags as emblems or trade marks, save when application to use them in this manner was supported by the authorization of the respective government. Nevertheless the government has allowed such use to be made of a national flag, presumably under the advice of the Minister of Finance and against the expressed opinion of the head of the Internal Taxes Department.

Government bases its decision on the fact that the goods in question are sold by the government whose flag encircles them, hence this latter may be rightly considered as a trademark. This reading "La Prensa" considers to be a mistake on the part of the authorities. The question does not turn on who is the seller of the goods, but rests entirely on the prohibition regarding the use of national flags as trade emblems, the idea being to preserve the respect due to the official symbols of the various nations. This ignorance on the part of the government of resolutions passed by its own department ought to show ministers the need for collaboration among their functionaries, and, when a point is in doubt, legal advice should be sought. The present case offers such a point, and "La Prensa" concludes that these discrepancies might well be avoided by a little more administrative unity.

TARIFF BELLIGERENCY

(La Nación.—July 24).

The commercial hostility of the nations now at war has reacted on the neutral nations in the shape of traffic disturbances, or additional transport risks that have stopped or hindered free commercial intercourse, and La Nación states that this difficult situation has created a world-wide and insupportable crisis which threatens to continue after the war is over in the shape of a tariff war that will embrace not only the belligerent states but also the neutrals. The customs war will turn on the "three tariff" principle, and if carried into effect it will imply serious hindrances to international trade. In many cases the Allies will not be able to replace the supply of goods that were formerly forthcoming from their rivals, and the result will be that the neutrals will have to buy and sell under a system of external pressure from influences that they cannot avoid.

Moreover it is logical to suppose that the Central Empires will adopt a similar scheme of reprisals, also interdicting the neutrals who have dealings with the Allies. In Argentina's case there are for instance sundry goods that support the German-Argentine trade, goods for which there would be little or no demand in the lands of the Allies, and the same thing applies to imports from Germany, many of which are irreplaceable on equal terms by that country's rivals. Such anomalies would create a very difficult situation, and La Nación is of opinion that the difficulties would fall on the heads of those who created them. Argentina, supposing that she refused to enter into any such customs coalition, would find her trade diminish, but at the same time her general contribution to the trade of the world would also show a severe falling off. In short, concludes La Nación, it is doubtful whether such reprisals would be workable, and it suggests that when calm reflection has replaced the heat engendered by battle, these manifest drawbacks will be observed and the trade of the world be allowed to follow more or less its normal channel.

THE HYPOTHECARY DEBT

(La Prensa.—July 27).

The government is taking steps to find out the true total of the private hypothecary debts now running in the Republic, and "La Prensa" states that it has done what it could, on such data as were obtainable, to emphasise the importance of the problem involved. It points out further that mortgages have various origins, the capital invested being supplied from different sources, hence it is legally and economically impossible to draft any measure that will cover the whole field in a radical manner. Moreover "La Prensa" remarks that on one occasion, when commenting on the statistics published by "La Razon," it drew attention to the fact that a mere moratorium would not benefit debtors who were commercially in difficulties, and that their debts would merely be added to by the capitalization of the interest at the same time insisting that nothing must be done counter to the legal guarantees that affect capital.

On these counts "La Prensa" repeats that the capitalists themselves must intervene before the state is called upon to take any measures. Whether such a thing is or is not feasible does not come within the province of the journalist to decide. Whilst sympathising with the unfortunate position of the debtors one cannot give even a silent assent to any proposal to subvert the provisions of Argentine law as it affects civil rights, the more so since foreign capital has come here relying upon these self-same laws. On this base alone can the whole theme be studied, and "La Prensa" does not flatter itself that an easy or immediate solution can be found. The enormous sums at stake is one of the chief difficulties to be met, but possibly when the creditors realise what this means they themselves will be ready to help the situation by tolerant measures. The debtors who are able to go on meeting their obligations, and those who have no possible hope of salvation may both, says "La Prensa," be counted out. In the latter case speedy liquidation is the only thing that will enable them to take their place once more in the commercial strife, and in conclusion it may be said that the only way out of the apparent impasse is to find some equitable settlement; an end that may be aided by the investigation which the state is taking in hand.

THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT

(La Nación.—July 27).

Argentine political history has, says "La Nación," passed through several stages, and a century of independent life has sufficed to add largely to its prestige. There is however, a blot on the escutcheon; a deplorable example of material and moral decay in so far as one of its members is concerned, to wit, the province of Buenos Aires. No need to rake up ancient history; the spectacle now offered by the principal province is intolerable as presented under the present regime, or in other words under the system incarnated by Sr. Ugarte. When he took office for the second time, continues "La Nación," there was every reason to hope that earlier errors would now be corrected, and past experience be allowed to count for something. It was soon clear that past experience went for nothing, and in his work, which cannot be dubbed government even by a sarcastic spirit, he has merely reproduced the mistakes of his earlier regime.

His programme from the outset was to turn the government and its attributes into an electoral machine for his exclusive benefit. Hence comes deepseated disorganisation in every department of the administration, financial confusion, injustice, police domination, and the maintenance of political "bosses" that in many localities are a scourge to the inhabitants. All this has been done for electoral ends, and that there might not be lacking the extreme note, there has been granted by the legislature the suppression of the judicial regime and its replacement by a species of commission easily handled in accordance with the political schemes of the supreme authority. Never, concludes "La Nación," has the country participated in a more shameful spectacle in so far as its institutions are concerned. It is lowering for the prestige of Buenos Aires province, but the punishment is merited owing to the inertia with which its inhabitants have treated their rights as responsible members of the body politic. It will, however, bring about its own downfall through the weight of its own errors, and the day is not far distant which will see the total extinction of the present regime and the disappearance of all concerned therein.

CHILIAN MAILSSNOWFALL INTERRUPTS SERVICE.

Correspondence with Chile is still irregular. Since the closing of the Transandine route, mails have been sent via the Uspallata Pass by a mule service, which crosses the Cordillera in a relatively short time. The Chilean Government is considering how best to conduct international postal service while the railway system remains blocked. A service of trains therefore daily runs up to the railhead clear of snow and takes on the postal matter brought in by the mule trains.

INTERPROVINCIAL LIMITS

(La Prensa.—July 28).

The recent decree passed by the Government of the Province of Santiago del Estero, nullifying the finding of the commissions charged with discussing the question of inter-provincial limits is, says La Prensa, the best proof of the fact that this method of solving inter-provincial difficulties is not the one best suited to the purpose. As a rule, when such differences do arise, the Provincial Governments concerned try to arrange matters directly, and to that end appoint commissions to prepare the preliminary data. La Prensa is of opinion that it would be more constitutional and more in accord with the principles of Federal Government to submit such cases to the central authorities. Whilst the provinces are autonomous, they must nevertheless conform to the harmonic development of the State as a whole, and among the faculties of Congress the Constitution includes the fixation of provincial limits.

This clause was specially designed to prevent quarrels, the verdict of the nation being final. The Chamber of Deputies, as representing the people, and the Senate as representing the Provinces in their political capacity, are the two bodies which ought to discuss the question of limits and solve any differences that may arise in accordance with the constitutional law. The provinces, by taking the matter at issue to arbitration, are not on a par with independent nations, seeing that the decision is given by their own people, animated with the sole wish to benefit the country as a whole. Actual practice merely means unnecessary delay and increased expense, and, says La Prensa, this system might well be abandoned and the provisions of the Constitution adopted to their fullest extent, avoiding lengthy debates and the cost of proceedings that are at times cancelled by the provinces concerned, as the case of Santiago del Estero shews.

CORDOBA PROGRESS

(La Nación.—July 28).

The report of the technical commission appointed by Dr. Carcano, Governor of the Province of Cordoba, relative to the advisability of amplifying the San Roque Dam, has recalled a theme that is constantly in the mind of those who dwell in Cordoba city and its vicinity. From the day when it was found that the existing work was insufficient to supply all the water that was needed for the consumption of the city and the irrigation of the surrounding land, successive governments have been constantly pre-occupied with the task of finding a remedy. Little by little, however experience has shown that an extension of the San Roque Dam is necessary, and the present report therefore comes at an opportune moment.

The report, a summary of which was recently published by La Nación, deserves special praise for the frankness and logic with which its conclusions are set forth. It states categorically that it is not advisable to strengthen the existing work, nor increase its height, but that on the contrary what ought to be done is to build a new dam lower down the valley having four times the capacity of the old one. This conclusion, La Nación declares to be sound common-sense, and the only thing likely to carry out the original plans devised when the first dam was built. Among other advantages it will enable some 30,000 hectares to be brought under cultivation, land that is at present desert and almost as unproductive as it was ere the work was begun. Agriculture is there carried on extensively rather than intensively, and it is lamentable to reach the old inland city relieved by small patches of orchard

RE-SELLING OF THEATRE TICKETSMUNICIPAL INTENDENTE TAKES ACTION.

The retailing and re-selling of tickets for the Colón Theatre has this year, assumed such scandalous proportions, that the Municipal Intendente has at last taken notice of the matter and has determined to suppress it.

He lately requested the Chief of Police to instruct that a most strict and severe watch should be kept, in order to prevent the agents of re-sellers from trading in the streets and this police vigilance has already met with excellent results during the past few days.

During the next day or so Dr. Gramajo is forwarding a note to the Municipal Commissioners which will contain suggestions for a series of reforms in the ordering of theatres and will especially deal with penalties of ticket pedlars. He suggests a month imprisonment or an equivalent in fines.

THE NEEDED RAINSEXPECTED TO CONTINUE.

There has recently been a well founded alarm throughout the agricultural and cattle breeding districts of the Republic on account of the continued absence of rain. This has been remedied by the heavy downfall of Tuesday and yesterday which is reported to have been very general throughout the Republic and the districts which were in urgent need of water, have for once in a way got what they so badly wanted. Good reports come in from all the railway stations and the Meteorological Office. In some parts of Buenos Aires the rain was torrential and furious squalls of wind and hail are reported but without any special damages. The wet weather is expected to continue, but, this is beneficial as the first rains have merely moistened the crust of the hardened earth. In the west also, the rain has been copious. In other parts of the country, even where the fall has not been very heavy, the situation has been considerably relieved.

FLOODS IN THE SOUTHAPPREHENSION AT VIEDMA.

Reports from the South show that the Patagonian Rivers have reached an amazing height of flood water, and although the Rio Negro is stationary, apprehension of a general deluge still exists at Viedma. Preparations have been made for the worst as well as possible, but the Government sends only sailors who are not, it is said, peculiarly useful in this work. Residents more than ever urge the completion of the abandoned defence works. It is said that a slight decrease of the Negro has been noticed, but at other streams the water level is unprecedented.

ARGENTINE LANDSPROFITS DURING THE PAST YEAR.

London, July 28.

The Argentine Northern Lands in their annual report and balance sheet announce a profit for the year of £1003, leaving a debit balance of £10,261.

The Argentine Eastern Lands Company reports a profit of £524, and carries forward the sum of £1069.

and garden ground here and there. Cordoba has a right to a more extensive irrigated area, and it is to be hoped that the provincial chambers will see matters in this light when the project drawn up by the present Government is submitted for their decision.

ROSARIO NEWS

(From Our Correspondent.)

July 27.

Rain at Last.

This evening signs of rain are evident; drizzle is falling, and there is a heavy feel in the air as though the prophecy of Sr. Gil is to be fulfilled once more. The great meteorologist's strong point is the sun and the spots thereon. There has been one particularly large spot developing in the southern hemisphere of that august luminary, he says, and the world may look out for trouble in the nature of seismic disturbances. The three months of drought which he foretold as from the beginning of May have practically been accomplished.

The rain has come none too soon. What the frost and dry weather have spared has been little enough, and all the early promise of gardens in these parts has been wiped out.

The Markets.

Wheat trading, from the exporters' point of view, has been as dead as ever, prices still being held here at a parity much above that of Europe.

Maize prices have been easing off with the usual result of a general slackening of trade. Sellers in this district seem to have made up their minds not to sell, except in the most limited fashion, at anything under $4.70, and as shippers are only bidding to-day about $4.60, very few operations are effected.

Freights have had another spurt, as high as 639 having been paid for a ready steamer. I hear to-day, however, that they are easier, probably due to the smaller offerings of maize.

Athletic Tournament.

F.C.C.C. Stores Department A.C.

Postponed from the Ninth in sympathy with Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Holder, the sports of the newly-formed Athletic Club at New Alberdi were held on Saturday, and there was little to be desired as to attendance, competition, and weather. The ground is a well-chosen site, and has the makings of a good football or cricket ground; and it is situated conveniently to the growing "pueblo" which it provides with means of recreation.

The guest of honour was Mr. R. Ortega, Divisional Traffic Superintendent, who represented Mr. R. Stuart, the Traffic Manager, and gave away the prizes, remarking as he did so that the committee hoped to make the fixture an annual one.

Mr. A. E. Holder, the Stores Superintendent, added his congratulations to the Central Cordoba employees for having such a live and enthusiastic athletic club; and, alluding to the committee by name, he expressed to them the indebtedness of spectators and competitors alike in the warmest terms.

The committee were: President, Mr. W. C. Guilding; Secretary, Mr. Gerald V. Cumberbatch; Treasurer, Mr. A. W. Kyster; time-keepers, Messrs. S. Lauritsen and J. E. L. Hennesey; Judges of the Course, Messrs. A. W. Kyster and A. N. Santone; Starters, Messrs. J. J. Fort and L. Herrera; Course Committee, Messrs. T. Harte, W. C. Guilding, and M. Sanchez; Reception Committee, H. C. Horsted, G. V. Cumberbatch, and T. Harte.

The results were as follows:—

Kicking the football (prize given by Sr. F. Torras)—1 J. Pratti (43.70m.) 2 Cunningham (41.80m.), 3 A. Perkins (40.90m.).

Putting the Weight (silver cup presented by Sr. R. Montgomery, Chief Accountant).—1 Perkins (7.15m.), 2 P. Conde (6.60m.), 3 Pratti.

100 metres (silver cup given by Mr. R. Stuart).—1 Perkins, 2 Yeoman, 3 Bolcatto.

Long jump (silver cup, presented by Mr. A. J. Knight).—1 Perkins (4.50m.) 2 Yeoman (4.18m.), 3 Bolcatto (4.06m.).

220 metres.—1 Perkins (31 4/5secs.), 2 Bolcatto; 3 Benitez.

Tug-of-War.—Won by the married side.

Race for children under 10.—1 E. Orsted; 2, J. Estevez; 3 M. Estevez. In this race the prizes were of the Pauline order; every competitor received some memento of the occasion.

Ladies' race.—1st prize, a new pound sterling, presented by Mr. G. H. Horrocks. Won by Mrs. Perkins; 2nd, Miss Perkins.

Three-legged race.—1st prize, handbag, presented by Mr. A. E. Holder, won by Yeoman and Sanchez; 2nd Bolcatti and Benitez; 3rd Donaldson and Cunningham.

Veterans' race (prize, set of pipes, given by Mr. G. E. Morton).—Won by H. Orsted (14 1/5secs.).

800 metres.—1st prize, bronze statue, Benitez; 2nd silver cigarette case and matchbox, Perkins; 3rd J. Guilding, junr.

Obstacle race.—1st prize (silver cup, given by Mr. A. Jack, Chief Engineer of the F.C.C.C.), won by Bolcatto; 2nd prize, "Un Argentino" (a five-peso piece), won by Brunelli; 3rd Sanchez.

Consolation race.—1 Donaldson; 2 Biagioli.

Visitors' race.—1 Mr. E. Johnston, Divisional Locomotive Superintendent; 2 Mr. F. Gardiner-Brown; 3 Mr. H. C. Hearn.

Amongst others present, besides those already mentioned, were Mr. Lowdnes, Sectional Engineer; Mrs. Holder, Mrs. Lund, Mrs. Hearn, Mrs. Guilding, Mrs. Cumberbatch, and many other visitors from Alberdi and neighbourhood.

Rosario Football League.

There were a large number of spectators in the ground of the Rosario Central F.C. on Sunday to watch the match between Rosario Central and the Gimnasia y Esgrima for the championship of the first division. The result was a draw, one goal being scored by each side.

Other matches played on Sunday were: Newell's Old Boys (2) v. Rosario Athletic (1). Provincial (4) v. Sparta (3). Tiro Federal (3) v. Cordoba Central (0).

A party, including some half a dozen members of Plaza Jewell II., journeyed down to San Nicolas on Sunday to meet a local team at that port, and were defeated by 7 goals to 1.

Several of the exhibits have already arrived, and a most successful exhibition is generally anticipated. The foregoing list of judges include the names of many gentlemen who have officiated in the same capacity at previous shows, and always with the most satisfactory results. Their impartial judgments and sound knowledge of their special classes, has always been upheld by visiting experts and the exhibitors themselves.

ROSARIO RURAL SHOW

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE TO PERFORM OPENING CEREMONY.

Great numbers of cattle and other exhibits are arriving at Rosario for the Rural Show, which opens on Sunday next. The Rural Society has appointed as Veterinary Inspectors Drs. Oscar P. Casas, Leon Baley, and Horacio Larrachea. The statement is confirmed that Dr. Calderon, Minister of Agriculture, will preside at the inauguration of the Show, that he will give an address, see the exhibits, and lunch with Dr. Menchaca in the official box. In accordance with request, the Bolsa de Comercio has appointed Mr. T. H. Marston a Juror on the Maize and Cotton.

H.M.S. MACEDONIA

VISIT TO MONTEVIDEO.

H.M.S. Auxiliary Cruiser Macedonia yesterday landed at Montevideo, the crew of the Norwegian steamer Bangor, captured by H.M.S. Bristol on March 14, on her way from Montevideo to Valparaiso with a cargo of coal embarked at Baltimore and intended, as the Captain of the Bristol suspected, for the Germans. The Macedonia left within the limit of 24 hours.

"Wine that maketh glad (!?) the heart of man."

A highly technical article appeared in yesterday's "Nación," explaining the reasons why certain wines deteriorate, become acid, acquire various properties which do not commend them to retail sale, and the cause and why of various other chemical miracles. One has met some of these wines, but, quite contrary to what the article asserts, the virtuous and injured almacenero does not suffer loss thereby, not he; he passes the wine on to a gullible and dry gulleted public "quarum pars parva fui," and this is his usual practice. Sometimes his practice, one may be bold to say, is even worse, for unless the vines are grown in the Infernal Fields it is difficult to account, except on chemical grounds, for the sulphurous flavour which prevails, especially in Flores, so that the purchaser of a glass of vino tinto feels as if he had been subsisting on boxes of matches for a week. As to acidity, there are wines daily sold, in spite of legions of inspectors of this, that, and the other, which are capable of etching the coats of the stomach like aqua fortis; for body you shall get wines so full of it that it looks like ink, and is all sediment. No, the almacenero is not, in this matter, a martyr to the unscrupulous wine grower, and, as usual, the kicks are passed on to the poor old public; also the extra charges and the doctors' bills resultant from the experiments on our vile bodies by these dealers in the juice of the alleged grape.

"It's a lie; oh, it's a lie!"

Berlin is like John the Bastard, "whose spirits toil in frame of villainy." The most recent addition to the long list of black and damnable inventions is to the effect that somebody in Italy told somebody in Zurich who informed Berlin, who naturally wired to New York about it, that many British families are fleeing from Florence "because in case Italy gets the worst of the war with Austria, Britain may be blamed as the cause of it." This tender care for British families is very affecting, only it is quite superfluous. British people in Austria might be glad to clear out if they could, both because dwelling among the people of Hunmark Inferieure must be morally damaging, and because their friends the Italians are giving it in the neck to Austria every day. British residents know very well that under any circumstances they are safe in Italy, and that any unpleasantness which may have befallen Austrian and German subjects there is on account of their well-earned reputation as liars and treacherous spies.

"Shall we now, contaminate our fingers with base bribes?"

Bulgaria has, pursuing the mercenary policy which brought disaster on her in the last Balkan war, concluded a convention with Turkey whereby she observes a friendly neutrality in exchange for territorial concessions. Having taken this decision, Bulgaria may be inconvenienced at the grand settlement by being obliged to disgorge her spoils as the Allies are in no way bound to permit her to enjoy them. Roumania has sold her harvest to Germany, and for this also, no doubt, an ultimate reckoning will be exacted, probably in a refusal to allow territorial expansion to the Kingdom which preferred an immediate money advantage, for it is not to be supposed that there were not other markets open to which the grain might have been despatched with equal profit. Russia is actually the creator of Roumania and Bulgaria, but except in the cases of Belgium and Italy, national gratitude is a rare commodity.

WITH THE R.M.C.A. IN THE DARDANELLES INTERESTED AND AWED SPECTATORS.

A British resident in Buenos Aires has received letters from a relative who is now serving with the Lancashire Field Ambulance R.A.M.C., giving an account of some of the scenes in connection with the operations on the Gallipoli Peninsula. In the course of a letter to his father, he says:—

"To-day has been the greatest day of my whole life, for I have seen and heard the combined fleet in action. Yesterday I saw the most majestic sight—this wonderful fleet filing out of the harbour, and off to action. To-day I see the same fleet conducting what ranks in the history of the Navy as the fiercest bombardment ever known or undertaken. We have been right behind them, and have watched the effect of their magnificent gunnery until my eyes literally ached with gazing. All day long, and it is evening now, have these awful weapons been pouring out with deadly precision their messengers of death, and the roar, smoke, and swish combined, makes up one long incessant peal of thunder. You see a flash and a little smoke come, and then suddenly you gaze on land, and about fourteen or fifteen seconds after bang! bang! bang! followed by huge clouds of smoke. When this is cleared you see the shattered and ruined target, perhaps a whole house or two, perhaps half a street, and perhaps a fort or battery.

"To write an accurate description in order to give you the vaguest idea of what it is like is vain; the brain cannot take it all in sufficiently enough, but I perhaps some day will be able to tell you about it, because it will be fresh in my memory as long as I live.

"Our casualties, I know not what they are, or how many, but all this, and what I cannot put in, such as names, places, etc., you will have learnt from the papers long before you get this, but I felt I must occupy a few spare moments in writing to you. I will tell you why, especially to you. About 11-45 a.m. this morning we had a short communion service, and as I knelt there with all this cannonade going on round about, and its awful consequences, my mind was suddenly taken away from it, and filled with the pleasant and familiar picture of my father walking across the park on his way to church, and I could not help but be very much struck with the two extremes, one going his way to church unmolested, and in peace in one part of the world; and in another part towns, villages, and lives being swept away by fearful weapons, most artfully and skilfully worked. When I tell you that the average sized shell fired

The many friends of Captain and Mrs. Stone, who were for some time in charge of the Salvation Army Home in Ingeniero White, will be interested to learn of the birth of their daughter, which took place in Buenos Aires on July 19.

Mr. Murray left Port Galvan, on Friday last on board the Sabia, for a trip to Brazil.

On August 14, the anniversary of the outbreak of the war, service will be held in the large hall at Ingeniero White at 8.30 p.m.

Messrs. Williamson of the Pacific Railway, and Henderson, of the Anglo-South American Bank, are shortly leaving for England as volunteers.

The final for the billiard tournament was played off in the Club of the Southern Railway at Ingeniero White on Friday, between Messrs. Campbell, the winner of the last billiard match held there—and Gerardi, the treasurer of the club, the latter winning by 12 points.

from our ships contains 2,500 to 4,000 bullets, and some of our specials 13,000, you can picture what they do when they land."

INTERRUPTED CHURCH SERVICE

The same soldier writes to a friend in the following graphic terms:—

"Sure and it's a devil of a time since we exchanged a few lines with each other, and whilst I have a few moments to spare I will send you and yours a few words to inquire how you all are, and to let you know how I am. At present I am tucked away in my little house smoking some of the delicious bond of union which you were good enough to send along with some real gold flake. That they were a real godsend only I know, and I only had time to acknowledge them by a service P.C., which at the best of times are very newsless things. Let me now thank you very much for same, and at the same time assure you that the parcel was very acceptable and greatly appreciated.

"By jove, we are getting war here with a vengeance, and although perhaps it sounds very much like piling it on, nevertheless it is perfectly true when I tell you that from all accounts of men who have been in the fighting here, and also in the other theatre that other is pretty rotten, but it's a picnic to this place.

"The boys from your part have done splendidly, and fight like devils, but the poor beggars have been more than hacked about; in fact, everyone has more or less copped it very tough. Still we are plugging away, and you bet will give these swine a—of a time before we finish with them.

"You notice I call them swine? Well, they are led by swine—German officers here in galore, and the atrocities committed on the wounded that we used to read of are practised here even to a greater extent. What I have seen and gone through will always be perfectly fresh in my memory, and if I am spared to come back safe and sound it will ever be the greatest chapter and yet the most gruesome and awful chapter in my life. At present we are at a rest camp. But even here we are not safe from snipers and shells; only a couple of days ago we held a church service in what we considered quite a safe spot, one hymn had been sung, and a couple of prayers offered up, and we had just commenced singing "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," when pip came a bullet and over went a man only a few yards from me. Yesterday they got the range of a temporary hospital ship lying just outside, and started shelling her for all they were worth, but they soon shut up when a couple of our sea dogs opened out on them. Talk about noise! What with sea and land, guns and rifles, and Maxims I tell you you fairly got it, but really in time you become quite used to anything. It sounds rather gruesome, but I've become a dab hand at handling "stiffs," and think nothing of fixing 'em up and putting them either over the side into the deep or down into their earthen bed. At present we live like a lot of moles; the rest camp is on the side of a hill, with about 15 yards this hill we made our dug-outs just strip of beach below. In the side of long enough to enable us to lie down, say about 6ft. long, 3ft. of which is right under the earth, this to protect one's napper from shells or bullets. We are not so badly off for grub, though it's only bully beef and biscuits and tea with no milk in it; still there's plenty of it. I have not seen bread for a dickens of a time. A couple of days ago the General came and had a look at us, and paid us a very fine compliment. He said, "You men, although Territorials, have more than upheld the highest traditions of the R.A.M.C., which are known throughout the world. You have done splendidly, and have got through a great deal of hard solid work. Tell your friends that the General said so, and that he is very proud to have you under his command." Our boys have been exceedingly lucky considering all they have been through; we have only had two wounded, and not seriously.

THE WHEAT PROBLEM

IS THERE A SHORTAGE OF STOCK?

Considerable uneasiness is stated to be apparent concerning the wheat stock of the Republic. From the first of January to date some 2,400,000 tons of wheat and flour have been exported from the Argentine. During the whole of 1914 the exportation amounted to 957,611 tons—the small quantity being due to the bad harvest—and during 1913 the exportation amounted to 2,794,853 tons. The estimate of the amount of wheat and flour that will be exported during this year is some 3 million tons and that this will only leave a stock of 450,000 tons of wheat in the country, which amount it is stated has already been contracted for in Brazil, Europe and other countries.

It is uncertain whether these figures are correct but the suggestion has been made that the Minister of Agriculture should order an immediate investigation as to the amount of stock on hand in the various parts of the republic and with the knowledge thus gained will act in such a way as to protect the interests of the Argentine.

EXPORTATION OF CEREALS

WEEKLY STATISTICS.

During the past week there has been less buying of wheat and maize and furthermore an appreciable lessening in activity in general exportation. Freights are high and vessels few.

The week's export of wheat amounted to 4196 tons only, bringing the year's total up to 2,331,841 tons. Wheat orders only amounted to 885 tons, to the continent only 1170 tons were exported and to Brazil 2141 tons.

Exports of maize equalled 127,455 tons for the past week with a total to date since January 1 of 1,809,212 tons an increase of nearly 350,000 tons over 1914.

25,721 tons of flax were shipped and of this amount 15,152 tons were exported to U.S.A.

Oats were exported to London only and the shipments amounted to 5859 tons. There is already an increase of nearly 15,000 tons for this year over last, the total amount now being 487,387 tons. Barley exports were 2595 tons all for Europe. Wool, 1731 bales and a total of 280,975 for the year, were returned as being reported. Last year's figures for a similar period equalled 301,536, of this amount 71,359 bales went to Uruguay.

WHOLESALE MURDER BY TURKS

ARMENIAN FAMILIES
MASSACRED.

New York, July 27.

Telegrams from Athens report that news from Asia Minor states that the Turkish troops in the Caucasus in their retreat before the Russians destroy all the Armenian villages and kill the inhabitants wholesale. thousands of families having been murdered by them.

The Greek Government has asked its consuls for full information in order to ascertain whether any Greek subjects have thus perished.

Tipperary, famous for its remoteness, is the subject of an interesting page of photographs in the London "Sphere," one of which recalls a curious incident of history. Plans were drawn up simultaneously for barracks at Tipperary and Hong Kong, and were transposed accidentally. The result was that Tipperary got the barracks intended for Hongkong, and Hongkong those intended for Tipperary. Hongkong got the better of the exchange—which is an injustice to a town so famous in military annals.

MISSIONS TO SEAMEN'S CONCERT

LATE HOURS AND MANY ENCORES.

Last evening's concert at the Missions to Seamen should have terminated at the usual time, but owing to the marked appreciation of the audience and the multitude of the encores, it was prolonged considerably beyond the usual limits assigned. Further explanation may be found in the programme, which was as follows.—Part I.: 1 Pianoforte duet, Spanish Dance, by Mrs. Herald and Mrs. White; 2 song, "Humpty Dumpty," by Mrs. Bowditch (encore, "Meet me to-night in Dreamland"); 3 song, "Until," Mr. Bevan; 4 recitation, "How Young Hokey Enlisted," Mrs. Herald (encore, "An Old Crook"); 5 Waltz Song (encore, "The Bond Street Tea Walk"), by Mrs. Eidelberg; 6 comic song, "Row, Row, Row," Mr. Soane (encore, "Hullo! Who's your lady friend?"); 7 song, "I like your apron and your bonnet," Mrs. H. Richards (encores: "Tipperary up to date" and "On the Mississippi."); Part II.—8 Vocal duet, "The Battle Eve," Mr. Bevan and Mr. Baker; 9 "Vainka's Song" and "The Rocky Road to Dublin," Mrs. Eidelberg; 10 musical monologue, "A Tragedy in Five Acts," Mr. Baker; 11 "Sister Susie's Sewing Shirts for Soldiers," Mrs. Herald (encore, "My little wet home in the trench"); 12 song "Mandy Lane" (encore "Sue, Sue, Sue"), Mrs. Richards; 10 "The Little Silver Ring," Mrs. Bowditch (encore, "Rose in Bud"); 14 comic song, "Sailor's Bunkum" and "A Hymn of Ate," Mr. Soane.

This excellent programme, which was arranged by Mrs. Charles H. White, of Quilmes, whose accompaniments were a markedly successful feature, was rendered throughout in first-class style. Mrs. Herald's practical and patriotic songs and recitations, Mrs. Eidelberg's fine rendering of her songs, Mr. Baker's solemn humour, the brightness of Mrs. Richards, and Mr. Soane's amusing and topsy-turvy absurdities were all immensely appreciated. The manner also in which Mrs. Bowditch sang her tender ballads, especially the two last, and Mr. Bevan's interpretations were delightful. "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King!" concluded one of the best concerts heard at the Seamen's Mission.

A much-discussed measure of social reform in France at the moment is a proposed Bill according men under the colours the right to marry by proxy. This means that a soldier will make a declaration of willingness to marry a certain woman before the regimental officer, and the woman in her turn at home will make a similar statement before the registrar, and the marriage will be legally established.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO A SHIP'S CAPTAIN.

(From Our Correspondent).

Rosario, July 27.

On Saturday afternoon, between five and six, Captain James J. Ormond, of the s.s. Aldersgate, whilst going on board his ship had the misfortune to slip on the gangway. He fell between the vessel and the wooden piles of the wharf, and was fished out unconscious by members of the City Ambulance Corps. On his removal to the English Nursing House in Calle San Martin he was examined by Dr. Frend, and found to be suffering from concussion of the brain. On inquiry to-night I was informed that he is slightly better, but has not yet fully recovered consciousness. The Chief Officer of the Aldersgate, Mr. W. T. Wall, has taken command of the vessel, which is due to sail at 6 a.m. to-morrow morning.

HOMEWARD FIXTURES

THE S.S. BOLDWELL

ASHORE OFF LOBOS ISLAND.

From Montevideo comes the news that the English vessel, s.s. Boldwell, from Capetown, has run aground to the North of Lobos Island. Immediately on receipt of the information the tugs Powerful, Corsario, Atlantico and Salvador together with the two launches Germania and Braga were despatched to her assistance. It is stated that her position is rather critical. Two of her holds are full of water and the position in which she lies is causing some anxiety, owing to frequent buntings and jars and to the strong wind which prevails.

FALL OF WATER IN THE RIVER.

The fall in the waters of the river have been so considerable that yesterday afternoon the tug "13 of May" had nothing better to do than put back to her quarters in the South Basin. At 4 p.m. only 147 feet were registered, with the result that numerous vessels are hung up in the roads, and general shipping movement is at a complete standstill. No vessels could enter port yesterday afternoon. The s.s. Luna, due to sail yesterday, has postponed her voyage to Carmelo, until the river rises. All the lock gates are closed, and no ships can enter until late to-day.

SHIPPING NOTES.

Notwithstanding the threat of implacable vengeance, the R.M.S.P. Demerara safely arrived at Liverpool yesterday without molestation. The reputation of carrying a gun and shooting straight is evidently an asset on which Captain Gillard may be congratulated.

One of the most remarkable and striking phases in the development of Greece, says H.M. Consul at Piræus, has been the steady expansion of the Greek mercantile marine within the last 20 years. The number of vessels comprising the merchant fleet of Greece at the end of 1903 was 210 steamers, with a combined tonnage of 202,140 tons, and at the end of 1914, according to Lloyd's Register, it numbered 440 steamers, with a tonnage of approximately 900,000 tons, viz.: 4 vessels of over 6,000 tons, 15 of over 4,000 tons, 84 vessels of over 3,000 tons, 134 vessels of over 2,000 tons, and 202 vessels of under 2,000 tons. The increase in shipping rates since the South African War has contributed largely to the development of Greek merchant shipping, and certainly has had an extraordinary influence on the economic, and particularly on the monetary, situation of the country. According to statistics published by an English journal, 85 steamers, of 219,450 tons gross, were added to the Greek flag between July, 1913, and the end of December, 1914. The value of these steamers, reckoned at an average of £8 per ton gross, amounts to £1,755,600, and the total value of the Greek mercantile marine amounts to about £6,800,000. It is estimated that the earnings which the Greek mercantile marine will realise in 1915 as a result of the war will exceed £3,000,000.

In the course of a report on the coal trade of Palermo, the United States Consul at that port mentions that while in normal times the bulk of the coal imported comes from Wales and the Tyne, since the war started several cargoes of Pocahontas, New River and Fairmont coals have been imported. It is estimated that there are 25,000 to 30,000 tons now on hand in Palermo. Coal is delivered to the ships in lighters of eight tons capacity, being passed in baskets by hand into the ship. No machinery is used. Usually four lighters from 40 to 50 men are employed. In twelve hours there can be loaded about 300 tons at an average cost of 2s. 10d. a ton.

It is reported in the American Press that the American Line will ask the Government to assist it in the construction of four new ships of the Lusitania type, capable of making 25 knots or more. Inasmuch as the Lusitania and Mauretania were built with the assistance of a Government loan, the officials of the American Line, the only steamship undertaking flying the American flag on the Atlantic, believe that their enterprise should also receive encouragement in their scheme to build up an American merchant marine.

He was a Scot, with the usual thrifty characteristics of his race. Wishing to know his fate, he telegraphed a proposal of marriage to the lady of his choice. After waiting all day at the telegraph office he received an affirmative answer late at night.

"Well, if I were you," said the operator who delivered the message, "I'd thing twice before I'd marry a girl who kept me waiting so long for an answer."

"Na, na," replied the Scot. "The lass for me is the lass who waits for the night rates."—"Ladies' Home Journal."

AFTER THE FIRST YEAR OF WAR

Anniversary Gatherings Throughout Britain

Impressive Sermon by the Archbishop of Canterbury

London, Aug. 4.

The anniversary of the declaration of war was celebrated in all parts of the Kingdom by intercession services at the churches and by patriotic gatherings.

The chief of the former was held at St. Paul's Cathedral, London, which was attended by the King, the Queen and other Royalties. A number of wounded convalescent soldiers, including several native Indian troops, were present.

The service was simple but impressive. The Archbishop of Canterbury preached an eloquent sermon reiterating the justice of Britain's cause and of her Allies. He offered up prayers for the repose of those who have fallen during the campaign, and for the success of our arms.

The Cabinet Ministers and prominent legislators addressed patriotic gatherings in different parts of the country, at each of which a resolution reaffirming the country's strong determination to conduct the war to a successful issue was enthusiastically carried.

The chief of these gatherings was held in London, where speeches were delivered by the First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. Balfour, and the Canadian Premier, Sir Robert Borden.

PROTECTION AGAINST POISON GAS

RESPIRATOR INVENTED AT MELBOURNE UNIVERSITY.

London, August 4.

A Reuter's telegram from Melbourne reports that a respirator for use as a protection against asphyxiating gas has been invented at the Melbourne University which is reputed to be far more effective than any other at present in use on the field of battle.

SHADES OF SKOBELLEFF!

A PRETTY LITTLE STORY FROM PETROGRAD.

Paris, Aug. 4.

A telegram from Petrograd conveys a weird tale that at various points along the Russian line of battle the sentinels declare that they have seen the ghost of the great Russian General Skobeleff in uniform and mounted on a white horse.

The Russian legend is that the shade of the renowned warrior appears to the armies of the Tsar at critical moments, and that its appearance portends disaster to the enemy.

GERMAN ATTACKS REPULSED

HEAVY FIGHTING IN THE ARGONNE.

To-day's official report of the progress of the campaign in the West is as follows:—

"Nothing of importance was reported from the Artois region during the night except a combat with hand grenades north of the Chateau de Carleul.

"In the Argonne region the Germans made two attacks, one of them between Hill 213 and Fontaine-aux-Charmes, and the other in the region of Marie Therese. Everywhere the attacks were repulsed and we threw the enemy back into his trenches.

"At Four de Paris, also in the neighbourhood of Haute Chevauchée, an incessant fusillade took place between our trenches and those of the enemy.

"In the Vosges district fighting with hand grenades and petards continued, to our advantage.

"On the Lingekopf and the Schratzmannelle during the night we repulsed German attacks, also at Barrenkopf."

DACIA CONDEMNED

"A GOOD AND LAWFUL PRIZE."

Paris, August 4.

The Prize Court has proclaimed the steamer Dacia a good and lawful prize.

HYDROPLANE V. GUNBOAT

INTERESTING COMBAT IN THE BALTIC.

Petrograd, Aug. 4.

The Russian Government officially announces that a Russian hydroplane attacked a German gunboat near Windau and compelled it to run aground. It also chased a Zeppelin which was being escorted by two aeroplanes and brought down one of the latter.

FOLLOWING THE MOTHERLAND'S LEAD

NEW ZEALAND FORMS A COALITION MINISTRY.

London, Aug. 4.

A cable message from Wellington, N.Z., announces that a National Coalition Ministry has been formed, consisting half of Ministerialists and half of Oppositionists.

BRITAIN'S BLOCKADE OF GERMANY

REPLY TO THE U.S. NOTE.

Washington, Aug. 4.

The reply, dated July 23, of the British Foreign Office to the Note from the United States respecting the interference of the British warships with neutral commerce, has been published to-day.

The gist of the whole document lies in the following paragraphs:—

"In the various Notes received from U. E. it has been admitted that the belligerents have the right to establish a blockade in the ports of the enemy—a right which, in existing circumstances, has no real value if the said belligerents cannot be granted permission to cut off at sea the import and export trade of the enemy.

"I understand that the United States Government wishes to make its view clear that if the belligerents, under these circumstances, pass their trade through the natural ports, such as those of his own territory, their opponent has no right to interfere therein, and must restrict his blockading measures in such a manner that these ways for commerce may always be open to the adversary.

"This point of view, which His Majesty's Government regrets that it cannot accept, seems indefensible by any principle of International Law or equity. To cut off the commerce of the enemy through the neutral ports if circumstances so demand is the only way of making the blockade effective."

LONDON PRESS COMMENT.

London, Aug. 4.

The "Standard" says that the contents of the Notes exchanged between the British and American Governments show the differences of opinions held by those Governments, which, though serious, are by no means irreconcilable. There is nothing in this controversy that is likely to prejudice friendship and mutual respect. If the object of international law is to safeguard the interests of neutrals, such interests are better respected by the British addition to that law than by America's interpretation of it.

Most of the papers refer to the blockade established by the United States during the Civil War. The "Globe" claims that the demands put forth by President Wilson are inconsistent with American practice during the war of rebellion, and says:

"We are certain that on reflection the American statesmen will recognise our position, and, in the face of Germany's brazen violations of international law, they certainly will not push to an extremity a contention which they know to be untenable."

The "Pall Mall Gazette" observes: "We accepted interference with our trade during the Civil War as the legitimate expansion of the true principles of blockade. We can fairly claim that our present policy shall be judged by Americans with some broadmindedness."

MUNITIONS FOR THE ALLIES

BERLIN'S SUGGESTED REPRISALS.

New York, August 3.

According to a wireless from Berlin, the "Tageblatt" suggests that German firms and capitalists in the United States should join in hindering the manufacture of munitions for the Allies by American firms by taking measures of reprisals. It is suggested that German firms owning patents should refuse to issue licenses for the use of American concerns now engaged in the production of munitions, instancing a patent brand of Benzol as an example.

In connection with this, a local newspaper has stated that the Leigh Coke Company has been forced by German capitalists who own a large number of shares in its stock to refrain from supplying any of its output to the munitions factories.

"MY DESTROYING SWORD"

MANIACAL OUTBURST BY THE HUN LORD.

Paris, August 3.

A telegram from Bucharest says that the newspaper "Univers" publishes a message from the Kaiser to his sister, Queen Sophie of Greece, saying:—

"My destroying sword has fallen upon the Russians, who will require six months to rally. Soon I shall announce further victories to you. The war will soon be over."

MORE BLASPHEMY BY THE KAISER

SCENE IN COLOGNE CATHEDRAL

New York, Aug. 3.

A telegram from Cologne says that a few weeks ago the Archbishop of Cologne, Cardinal Hartman, when holding service in the Cathedral one Sunday in the presence of the Kaiser, said in the course of his sermon that he offered his congratulations to his Majesty on the victories won in the East.

On this the Kaiser rose and pointing to heaven said, in tones of profoundest conviction: "He Who is on High is assisting us."

HYDROPLANES FOR BRITAIN

APPEAL TO BRITISH COMMUNITIES IN SOUTH AMERICA.

London, August 2.

The British Overseas Patriotic League has issued an appeal to the British communities in South America. The message states that the League has handed to the Admiralty £35,000 for acquiring ten hydroplanes, and it would like to offer another ten.

(Note.—It will be remembered that on Sunday the British Society published an appeal for funds to be devoted to the purchase of an aeroplane to be named "The River Plate.")

EVACUATION OF RIGA AND WARSAW

Russian Armies Retire to New Defensive Positions

DANGER OF A DISASTER NOW AVERTED

NEW YORK, AUG. 4.

A WIRELESS DESPATCH FROM BERLIN SAYS THAT THE RUSSIAN LEGATION AT THE HAGUE HAS OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED THE EVACUATION OF WARSAW.

PARIS, AUG. 4.

A TELEGRAM FROM RIGA STATES THAT IN OBEDIENCE TO THE ORDERS OF THE GOVERNMENT, THE GOVERNMENT INSTITUTIONS AND STATE BANK HAVE BEEN TRANSFERRED TO TULA, WHILE OTHER BANKS AND COLLEGES ARE BEING REMOVED CHIEFLY TO DOCPAT.

OWING TO THE GENERAL EXODUS OF FAMILIES FROM RIGA THE TRANSPORT AGENCIES ARE OVERWORKED, AND REFUSE TO ACCEPT FURTHER ORDERS FOR THE SHIPMENT OF HOUSEHOLD GOODS.

THE DEPARTURE OF WORKING MEN FROM THE CITY HAS CREATED AN EMERGENCY WHICH THE GOVERNMENT IS MEETING BY THE ESTABLISHMENT OF EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES THERE AND IN OTHER INLAND PLACES.

GREAT DANGER AVERTED

Russians' Orderly Retirement

GERMANS PAY HEAVY PRICE FOR VICTORY

Petrograd, Aug. 4.

It is officially announced that the situation in the city of Warsaw has not changed. The battles fought north and south of the place have gone in the favour of the Russians, and meanwhile the main body of the Russian army is retiring in good order.

Two hundred thousand of the inhabitants have abandoned Warsaw, and gone inland. The remainder are in good spirits, and the supply of provisions is abundant. The authorities are still there. The fortress will probably hold out long enough to allow of all the war material being removed.

DANGER OF DISASTER PASSES.

London, Aug. 4.

In military circles here the belief is entertained that all danger of a serious disaster to the Russian army has passed, the Muscovites having strong positions ready provided for them to fall back upon, whence they can continue the struggle with advantage and hold the enemy in check.

It is stated that before deciding on the evacuation of certain defences in order to regain them later on, Grand Duke Nicholas consulted with the Commander-in-Chief of the Allied armies, all of whom expressed themselves in favour of the retreat.

COSTLY ADVANCE BY GERMAN ARMIES.

London, August 4.

Official despatches transmitted today from Petrograd report the following details of the progress of the campaign in the East:—

"The enemy attacked several times the Russian trenches on the Narew. The constant repetition of these attacks and the energy with which the trenches were defended resulted in their changing hands more than once, until the Russians, by a desperate bayonet charge, drove out the enemy and remained definitely in possession.

"Another engagement of equal ferocity is being waged to the north-east of Rozan, where the enemy is advancing from several directions at the cost of enormous losses.

"The Germans are making prodigious efforts to obtain possession of a forest to the north of Ivangorod. The capture of a small portion of the forest has cost them many thousands of killed and wounded.

"The German attack on Kurow was repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy."

RUSSIANS RETIRING IN ALL SECTORS.

Petrograd, August 4.

It is reported that the greater part of the material of war which was in the fortresses of Warsaw and Ivangorod has been removed to the fortress of Brest-Litovsk.

The Russian retreat is being conducted in an orderly manner, and only such articles as cannot be moved will fall into the hands of the enemy.

It is officially announced that the Russians are retiring in all the sectors, but that in their retreat they are inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

MOBILISATION OF SIBERIAN ARMY ABOUT TO COMMENCE.

The mobilisation of the Siberian army is expected to commence soon, and it is confidently believed that it will not be long before the situation improves.

GERMAN DEFEATS ON THE SKWA

Petrograd, August 4.

The following official report has published by the Russian War Office:—

"During the last three days the enemy has made enormous efforts to dislodge us from the Narew river sector from Ostrolenka to Lomza.

"In the district of Jedwabno the enemy is conducting a trench warfare, but by exploding mines we have continually held the upper hand.

"On the Pissa and Skwa rivers the whole of the enemy's army attacked us having first launched against us the reinforcements brought from France. Nevertheless we soon saw a complete German defeat in this sector; for it took the enemy a week to drive us back from the village of Serwatha on the right bank of the Pissa, while the battle for the passages of the Narew near Novogorod had not even begun.

"Near the mouth of the Skwa the enemy, thanks to forests, succeeded in passing to our side of the river; but we prevented him from bringing his artillery across the Narew, and we annihilated at the point of the bayonet some forces which were deprived of the protection of their artillery. These failures compelled the enemy to withdraw from this sector the reinforcements which had come from France, and send them to reinforce the Rozan army which was moving more rapidly.

LITTLE PROGRESS AND HEAVY LOSSES.

"This army was considerably strengthened by other reinforcements which joined it from the left bank of the Vistula. Nevertheless all the efforts of the enemy to make progress east or west were broken by the river Owe.

"The enemy then changed the direction of his attack and is now on a front between the Narew and the Owe, making great efforts to advance in a north-easterly direction behind Ostrolenka.

"During the three days of fighting the enemy repeatedly hurled large masses of infantry against our trenches; but, while suffering from severe losses, he advanced only two or three versts.

"On August 2 our troops, during a particularly desperate German attack, which they repulsed, saw the enemy's cavalry caught by his own infantry which had been thrown back with the intention of forcing them to attack us again. The German losses were very great.

"In the southern sector of the battle, near the village of Polishivintza, the enemy concentrated a large mass of infantry in order to force the passage across the valley of the Owe; but our artillery smothered his attack and the end of the valley, forcing the Germans in this region to disperse.

"Our losses were very heavy, but our troops are making a valiant resistance to the enemy's plan for dealing a severe blow from the Narew line upon the rear of the Russian armies which are impeding General von Mackensen's offensive in the Vievprz valley."

GERMANS CLAIM TO HAVE TAKEN OUTER FORTS OF IVANGOROD.

New York, August 4.

A radiogram from Berlin states that eight more of the outer forts of Ivangorod have been captured, and that the garrison of the place will be compelled to surrender before long.

Another radiogram says that the Russians are evacuating Warsaw and that two German army corps are hastening in pursuit of the Russian forces retiring east.

A "CORNER" IN COPPER

DOMESTIC UTENSILS COMMANDEERED BY GERMAN GOVERNMENT.

New York, Aug. 3.

A despatch from Berlin says that to-day a multitude of women and children invaded the gasworks and market halls carrying copper kettles and pots, desk ornaments and other articles of the metal, in compliance with the order issued by the German Government that all copper supplies were to be given up for public purposes.

The collection of these articles will continue for three days, the Government paying in cash for each article as it is delivered.

The huge heaps collected to-day represent only part of the supply available, since the roofplates of the museums, churches and other public buildings, which will aggregate enormous quantities, will remain untouched until needed.

TSAR'S MESSAGE TO HIS TROOPS

"I EXPECT YOU NOT TO LOSE HEART."

Petrograd, Aug. 2.

A proclamation issued by the Tsar to the Russian army and navy in commemoration of the anniversary of the outbreak of war has been printed in the newspapers of this capital. The proclamation says:

"Men of the Army and Navy!

"I expect you not to lose heart, but that you will all be prepared to make the further sacrifices and efforts needed to safeguard life and property in the Russian Empire.

"More than once has Russia undergone severe tests, and on every occasion she has emerged from them with greater power and solidarity than before, thanks to the efforts of her children.

"We must hold it as an absolute certainty that in this mighty war we shall gain the ultimate victory."

"UNITED TO THE END"

RUSSIAN MANIFESTO AT CLOSE OF FIRST YEAR OF WAR.

Petrograd, August 2.

Yesterday's papers reproduced the words uttered by the Tsar on August 1, 1914, when his Majesty said:—

"I solemnly declare that we shall not make peace until the last of the enemy's soldiers has left our country."

The "Exchange Gazette" publishes this declaration in the respective languages of all the allied nations. Commenting on the expiration of the first anniversary of the war, the paper says:—

"For years the enemy has been threatening the liberty of the world. We fully appreciate the efforts of our Allies, who surround him on all sides, and we are confident in the final triumph of right.

"During the past year our guide was the spirit of justice; and it will continue to be so in the months, perhaps years, to come.

"Russia salutes her Allies, and welcomes the heroic loyalty with which they are defending the common cause. We are united to the end, when the light will have dispersed the darkness."

RE-OPENING OF THE DUMA

RUSSIA RESOLVED TO CONTINUE UNTIL VICTORY IS WON.

Petrograd, August 2.

The ceremonial of re-opening the sessions of the Russian Duma was a brilliant one.

After the usual formalities the President of the Duma declared that the more terrible became the war, the more firmly was Russia resolved to continue until the victory was won. He then pronounced a greeting to the representatives of the Allied Nations, especially Italy, and finally reiterated his declaration that Russia would go on fighting until her enemies were crushed.

WATCHFUL RUMANIA

NO CONTRABAND FOR TURKEY.

Bucharest, Aug. 3.

Special officials have been appointed at all the Custom houses on the Rumanian frontier in order to prevent any contraband of war being despatched into Turkey.

It is affirmed that for some weeks not a single cargo for Turkey has crossed the frontier.

GERMANY'S LOST MILLIONS

Paris, July 31.

A telegram from Copenhagen states that the total losses of the German army since the commencement of hostilities amount to 3,500,000 men.

FALL OF ROVERETTO IMMINENT

Austrian Positions Rendered Untenable

Austrians Prepare to Evacuate First Line Defences in Isonzo Region

Rome, August 4.

The fall of Roveretto appears to be imminent. The last reports are that the Austrian positions which are being bombarded by the Italian guns have become untenable and the defending troops are making preparations to leave them.

The fall of this stronghold will probably result in the capture of Trent. The Italian siege guns are now bombarding the forts, and their fire is very accurate, a tremendous amount of damage being done on the first day of fighting.

Once the Italians get beyond Roveretto the Austrians will have to rely upon hastily built trenches for protection if they intend to oppose the advance of the invaders towards Trent. It is regarded as likely that they will fight rearguard actions, while the bulk of the army entrenches itself in the latter stronghold.

Despatches from Geneva say that the Austrians are also preparing to evacuate their first line of defence in the Isonzo region from Travitolo to Avisia is the Tyrol. The Italians are forcing the enemy across the railway in a strong advance by the Gail river valley, and the enemy's best Tyrolean troops have been overcome at several points in the Gail district, which were duly occupied.

In the Fella river region in Carinthia the Italians have taken possession of several miles of railway.

56,850 AUSTRIAN LOSSES.

Rome, August 4.

An announcement of official origin published in the "Tribuna" places the losses of the Austrians in the campaign against Italy as amounting to 56,850 men up to the end of June.

NO DISEASE AMONG AUSTRIAN PRISONERS.

Rome, Aug. 4.

A telegram from Liorna says that there has been a scare there over the supposed danger of infectious diseases being introduced into the place by the admission of prisoners of war, the foreign papers having contained alarming reports of cholera in Austria-Hungary.

The Liorna newspapers have however assured the people that they have been informed by the military health officers that none of the Austrian prisoners in hospital there are suffering from contagious diseases or from anything resembling cholera.

ITALIANS TAKE MONTE MALEDETTO.

London, Aug. 4.

A telegram from Milan reports that the Alpini, by a very brilliant action, have captured the summit of Monte Maledetto, to the northeast of the high peak of Crnta Alta.

The Austrians had cut trenches in the rock, and the height was a formidable fortress. In addition, the adjacent heights and the very narrow pathway leading to the summit were commanded by several batteries of heavy guns.

AUSTRIANS KILLED BY AVALANCHES OF ROCK.

Rome, Aug. 4.

Details of the Italian attack on Podgora and San Michele show that the strength of the Austrian defence works had been overrated, the fire of the Italian artillery reducing to ruins in a few days what it had cost millions to construct.

It is a remarkable fact that the heavy losses sustained by the Austrians were not so much the effect to the projectiles themselves as of the avalanches of rock brought down by the explosion of the shells, which caused the death of some 10,000 men. In the trenches excavated on the slopes of San Martino 2500 men were overwhelmed and buried beneath the debris.

FALL OF AUSTRIAN FIRST LINE DEFENCES.

New York, Aug. 4.

The "New York American" has received the following despatch from its correspondent in Milan:

"The first line of the Austrian defences in the Carso have been taken, and the Italian front has advanced a considerable distance in most difficult country east of Monfalcone and Sagrado.

"The attack on the second line of Austrian fortifications, hastily erected from Rubbia to Pietrarsa on the eastern slopes of the Vallone de Presse, has already begun with success. The Italian artillery, rapidly brought forward, is bombarding the new Austrian trenches, while the infantry has maintained a steady pressure on the retreating Austrians. Each day is marked by the capture of prisoners and considerable booty.

"At Vallone the Austrians attempted a resolute offensive against the positions occupied by the Italian right wing on Monte Sei Busi, from which the former had recently been driven; but they were repulsed with severe losses. In one place only several hundred dead were left by them.

BROKEN-UP BY ITALIAN GUN FIRE.

"At the extreme right great reinforcements were sent in dense columns from Duino. Marching to attack the Italian positions at Doberdo, these forces came under the fire of the Italian heavy batteries and were broken up with grave losses.

"The Italian heavy artillery has begun to interfere considerably with the attempts of the Austrians to bring up reinforcements, the large contingents being immediately shelled before they can reach the trenches. The remarkable precision of the Italian gunners accounts for the great losses sustained by the Austrians.

"The Teuton forces at Carso alone are estimated at more than 170,000. A large percentage of these have already been put out of action.

"In connection with the battle of the Carso heights, the advance of the Italian positions at Lava is of considerable importance, keeping, as it does, the Austrians busy defending both flanks of Gorizia. The wedge driven in here between Gorizia and Tolmino is giving the Austrians much concern.

"Monte Kuk, where the Italians have occupied the trenches on the slopes, is the key to the system of trenches and fortifications on Monte Santo, which the Italian batteries now have at their mercy.

AUSTRIAN RIGHT FLANK THREATENED.

"The Italian positions are also beginning to threaten the rear of Monte Sabotino, which defends the extreme right of the Austrian forces on the Isonzo. Sabotino is also threatened by the Italian batteries at Podgora.

"Another brilliant achievement was the capture by the Italian troops of the summit of Forcella, where, by the combined attack of two separate columns, the Austrians were driven out of their trenches at the point of the bayonet and their positions occupied.

"A combined attack by the Austrian artillery and infantry on the positions recently taken by the Italians at Costabella failed, the Austrians being driven back with considerable loss.

"The number of Austrian officers, as compared with the number of men, who are being taken prisoners continues exceptionally high. Various explanations have been offered of the phenomenon, but the real one, obtained from the statements of the prisoners themselves, seems to be that the terrific effect of the Italian artillery upon the Austrians when attacking or compelled to retreat, is so demoralising that the men are panic-stricken and abandon their officers, and the latter, completely helpless, fall into the hands of the Italian infantry which, by rapid forward dashes, takes them by surprise.

"The Austrians do not surrender through cowardice or weakness of defence; on the contrary, they have offered a most stubborn resistance which has been overcome only by the excellent organisation of the Italian troops, the splendid tactical leadership, the power of their artillery and the valour of both officers and men."

EX-SULTAN'S LOST PENSION

Madrid, July 30.

The newspapers give details of the circumstances under which the former Sultan of Morocco, Muley Hafid, has been deprived by the French Government of the handsome pension which has hitherto been allowed him. Muley Hafid settled at Tangier where he built himself a magnificent palace on which he spent over three million francs.

After General Lyautey came over as Governor-General of French Morocco, suspicions arose as to the fidelity of the ex-Sultan, and steps were taken accordingly. After this Muley Hafid transferred his residence to Barcelona, still vigilantly watched by the Government, which suspected him of intriguing with German agents. Later on the French consul in Barcelona conveyed to the ex-Sultan the orders of the French Government that he should return to Tangier, where a proper surveillance could be maintained.

Muley Hafid appealed for protection to the Bishop of Barcelona, who referred the matter to the Spanish Government. Correspondence ensued between the two Governments, the result of which was that Muley Hafid remained at Barcelona, the Spanish authorities undertaking the task of examining the correspondence, both by letter and telegram, of the former Sultan. The results of this investigation of the Moorish potentate's correspondence was that the French Minister of Finance, M. Ribot, cut off the pension.

Muley Hafid has applied for naturalisation as a Spanish subject, intending to settle definitely at Barcelona; but the Spanish Government has declined to grant the application until after the war.

The Press urges the Spanish Government to ascertain whether as a matter of fact Muley Hafid was guilty of conspiracy against France.

FIRST GERMAN NEWSPAPER

APPEARS IN BRUSSELS.

Amsterdam, Aug. 2.

Information from Brussels states that the first German newspaper appeared in that city yesterday. It is being financed by private parties, although it is believed to be supported officially, through Government advertisements and announcements.

CEASE THIS BUTCHERY!

POPE'S FERVENT APPEAL FOR PEACE

Rome, July 30.

His Holiness Pope Benedict has issued a fervent appeal for peace to all the nations at war, in which the following passages occur:—

"As I beheld the ravages of war, the awful grief of wives and mothers, the tears of inconsolable orphans, I firmly resolved to devote all my activity to the reconciliation of the nations at war, and this I vowed before the Divine Saviour.

"No heed was given to my friendly and urgent counsels in favour of peace, but I never ceased to offer my supplications to the Almighty, and to my prayers I sought to unite all those of the faithful poured forth on the sad anniversary of the outbreak of war.

"From the very bottom of my heart there goes forth a prayer that this war may be brought to a speedy termination.

THE DISHONOUR OF EUROPE.

"In the name of God, and by the blessed blood of Jesus, I conjure those whom Divine Providence has placed at the head of the Governments of the belligerent nations to cause to cease this horrible butchery which dishonours Europe, the garden of the world, whose regions, once the scene of flourishing industry and agriculture, are to-day strewn with corpses and ruins; where cities and towns are converted into sites of desolation to the thunder of the guns.

"Before God and man the rulers have taken upon themselves a terrible responsibility, and if the abundant riches of the earth enable the continuance of the strife, it is at the price of thousands of young lives, the ruin of cities and towns, of monuments, and at the cost of bitter tears.

"NATIONS DO NOT PERISH."

"Abandon your resolution to destroy one another. Nations do not perish. If they find themselves oppressed and humiliated, the day comes when they burst forth and exact retribution, transmitting to future generations a gloomy inheritance of hatred and revenge.

"Blessed be he who shall first hold out the olive branch and offer peace on reasonable terms.

"The equilibrium of the world and the tranquillity of nations depends upon loving kindness and mutual respect much more than upon being armed."

His Holiness goes on to invite all the friends to unite in hastening the end of the fray, and offers prayers that fraternity and love shall once more reign among the nations, so that by the peaceful study of art and industry a solution shall be reached in the future for all dissensions.

THE POPE'S APPEAL

MEETS WITH NO RESPONSE IN THE BRITISH PRESS.

London, July 31.

The Pope's plea for arranging a truce for the purpose of exchanging views as to the possible bases of a peace finds no response in the British Press.

The "Westminster Gazette" says: "The implication contained in the Pope's message is that we who are all equally involved in the fratricidal struggle are all in an equal degree responsible for the origin and outcome of this strife. We had, in August, 1914, no choice in the matter, and we have no choice now."

After citing numerous cases of German terrorism and despotism during the year of war, the "Westminster Gazette" adds:—"There is no conceivable method of arranging matters which will meet our views, short of such an issue as will make a repetition of these events impossible in the future."

Reported Action by Ministers of the Quadruple Entente

Von der Goltz to Make Great Effort to Crush the Allies

ATHENS, AUG. 4.

THE MINISTERS OF THE QUADRUPLE ENTENTE IN A BODY HAVE PRESENTED A SEMI-ULTIMATUM TO THE GREEK PREMIER, DEMANDING A DEFINITE DECLARATION AS TO THE POLICY OF GREECE TOWARDS THE WAR.

A GREAT "DRIVE"

Planned by Von der Goltz

COLONIALS RESIST TURKISH ATTACKS

London, Aug. 4.

Despatches from Tenedos report that this morning the Turks counter-attacked with the object of regaining the positions captured from them by the Australian and New Zealand forces. They were however driven back to their original positions leaving numbers of dead and wounded on the ground.

Athens announces the receipt of intelligence from Constantinople that the Turks are assembling all the forces available on Gallipoli peninsula to make another desperate effort to drive the Allies back. It is stated that they will be led by Marshal Von der Goltz in person.

A more hopeful feeling reigns in Constantinople owing to the news regarding the attitude of Bulgaria.

CONSTANTINOPLE BOMBARDED

VISIT BY RUSSIAN AIRMEN.

Sofia, Aug. 4.

A despatch from Dedeagatch reports that Russian aviators have attacked Constantinople, dropping bombs on the harbour works.

TURKISH TALES OF THE WAR

"SEVERE DEFEAT OF THE RUSSIANS."

New York, Aug. 4.

An official despatch from Constantinople reports:—

"In the Caucasus our movements developed successfully in the Tutach region. On Sunday we occupied the Russian positions ten miles north of Tutach, also drove the Russians from their positions upon a mountain range 6900 feet high. Our Edshnu basin remains in our possession.

"On the Dardanelles front there is nothing to report but intermittent artillery duels."

THE BALKAN PUZZLE

VENIZELOS ABOUT TO BE CALLED UPON TO FORM A CABINET.

Paris, Aug. 4.

Despatches from Athens say that M. Venizelos will shortly be called upon to form a new Cabinet.

The Greek Press says that in the case of Bulgaria attacking Serbia, Greece would be obliged to go to the assistance of the latter by virtue of the treaty in existence between the two countries.

ITALY'S PROTEST

AGAINST TURKEY'S INTERFERENCE WITH CONSULAR OFFICERS.

Rome, Aug. 4.

Acting under instructions from the Government, the Italian Ambassador in Constantinople, Marquis Garroni, has presented to the Sublime Porte a formal remonstrance against the vexations to which the Italian consular officers in the Turkish Empire are being subjected, and against the difficulties which are being placed in the way of the Italians who wish to leave the country.

This is generally held to mark the first step taken by the Italian Government in the direction of definite action.

ANTI-GERMANISM IN TURKEY

ENVER PASHA'S SIGNIFICANT MOVE.

London, Aug. 4.

A telegram from Mitylene transmits intelligence from Constantinople that recently the Turkish Minister of War, Enver Pasha, gave a political banquet at which all the Ministers, the Grand Vizier and the veteran Marshal Fuad Pasha, were present.

No Germans were invited. It is known that there have been serious dissensions between Enver Pasha and Von Sanders, and it is believed that important decisions of an anti-German character have been taken.

SLAUGHTERED BY TURKS

9,000 WOMEN AND CHILDREN MASSACRED ON BANKS OF THE TIGRIS.

Paris, Aug. 3.

The Socialist newspaper "L'Humanité" publishes a statement made by the Armenian Committee in Paris wherein it is asserted that the Turks in the region of Bitlis, after carrying out massacres on a large scale, assembled 9,000 women and children on the bank of the Tigris where they slaughtered them and threw the bodies in the river.

BUYING BULGARIA

LOAN FROM GERMANY IN EXCHANGE FOR IMPORTANT CONCESSIONS

New York, Aug. 3.

It is reported from Berlin that the matter of a loan to Bulgaria has been definitely settled. The loan is to be for 250 million marks and has been subscribed by a number of banks of which the Diskonto Gesellschaft is the chief.

In return for the loan Bulgaria is to give permission for the construction of a railway and a port in her territory.

200 TURKISH VESSELS SUNK

RUSSIAN DESTROYERS ACTIVE IN THE BLACK SEA.

Petrograd, Aug. 3.

The Russian Admiralty officially announces that two hundred Turkish sailing vessels and colliers have been destroyed by the Russian destroyers on the coast of Anatolia in the Black Sea.

AMMUNITION SEIZED FOR USE BY RUSSIANS.

Petrograd, August 3.

The official report announcing the destruction by the Russian torpedo boats of 200 Turkish sailing vessels laden with coal and ammunition along the coast of Asia Minor, says that in some instances the ammunition was confiscated where it was found to be available for use by the Russian forces.

Three shipbuilding yards were also fired and destroyed by the torpedo boats, and a coal depot was wrecked.

WHY THE GERMANS SURRENDERED

EXPLANATION OF BOTHA'S VICTORY IN S.W. AFRICA.

New York, August 4.

The German Government has issued the contents of a despatch from Dr. Selded, ex-Governor of German South-West Africa giving the reasons for the surrender of the German troops to General Botha. He says that a further successful resistance was impossible, as the German Colonial force was surrounded by enemies very superior in number and were cut off from their base of supplies. The condition of the horses, for which oats had been unavailable for several months, rendered hopeless an attempt to break through the enemy's lines.

BAND OF SPIES IN BRITAIN

SPECIAL POLICE INVESTIGATION

London, Aug. 4.

Special efforts are being made to capture the members of a band of spies who, according to the declarations of a man lately arrested on the same charge, have for some time been practising in the United Kingdom.

GERMAN TRANSPORT SUNK

BY BRITISH SUBMARINE IN THE BALTIC.

Petrograd, Aug. 3.

The Russian Admiralty officially announces that a British submarine entered the Baltic Sea and sank a large transport belonging to the German navy.

GERMAN "DISCOVERIES"

REFUTATION BY THE BELGIAN GOVERNMENT.

Havre, August 3.

The Belgian Government has just published a Grey Book containing documents refuting the statements which appear in the papers which the Germans pretend to have discovered in the Foreign Office in Brussels.

THREATS AGAINST ROOSEVELT

EX-PRESIDENT URGED TO CEASE ANTI-GERMAN PROPAGANDA.

New York, July 29.

A telegram from Acertin, Texas, states that ex-President Roosevelt has received a number of anonymous letters threatening him with death if, after August 10, he attempts to upset relations between the United States and Germany.

Mr. Roosevelt has handed the letters to the police.

MORE U.S. SUBJECTS DROWNED

LEYLAND LINER IBERIAN SUNK

London, July 31.

A German submarine has sunk the Leyland liner Iberian. Seven of those on-board lost their lives.

FOUR AMERICANS LOST.

New York, July 31.

A telegram from Queenstown announces that four of the seven men killed on board the steamer Iberian were Americans.

(Note.—The Iberian was a steamer of 5223 tons gross and was built at Sunderland in 1900).

"SITUATION GOING FROM BAD TO WORSE."

Washington, July 31.

The news of the sinking of the Iberian has been received here with much concern. Officials hesitate to say anything about the matter until certified details have been received, but they recognise that the situation between Germany and the United States is going from bad to worse.

VESSEL REFUSED TO STOP WHEN ORDERED.

New York, July 31.

The American Consul at Queenstown telegraphs that the steamer Iberian refused to stop when ordered to do so, and the submarine was therefore obliged to fire upon her.

MEMBERS OF CREW KILLED BY SHELL FIRE.

London, July 31.

The casualties on board the steamer Iberian were caused by the shell fire of the submarine. Five members of the crew were killed on the vessel, and two aboard a rescue boat. The submarine finally sank the Iberian by means of a torpedo.

Fifty-one of the crew have been landed safely.

SUNK BY THE SEA HUNS

SWEDISH STEAMER TORPEDOED

London, July 30.

A German submarine has sunk the British trawler Young Percy.

The Admiralty announces the sinking of the Belgian steamer Prince Albert, which struck a mine in the North Sea.

A telegram from Copenhagen reports that the Swedish brig Fortuna was torpedoed and sunk to-day in the North Sea.

In none of these cases were any lives lost.

London, August 2.

A German submarine has sunk the British steamer Clintonia. Thirty-four of the crew were saved.

(Note.—The Clintonia was of 3830 tons gross, built in 1907, and belonging to the Stag Line of North Shields).

LOSS OF THE STEAMER RANZA.

London, Aug. 3.

The British steamer Ranza, 2320 tons gross, belonging to Christie and Co. of London, has been sunk by a German submarine. Twelve of the twenty-four men forming the crew escaped.

CAPTAIN AND CREW LANDED

London, Aug. 3.

The captain of the steamer Ranzam sunk by a German submarine, has, with all his crew of twenty-four men, landed safe and sound.

BELGIAN STEAMER LOST.

London, Aug. 4.

The Belgian steamship Koophandel, 1885 tons gross, built at West Hartlepool in 1911 and registered at Antwerp, has been sunk by a German submarine. Nine of the crew have landed.

LLOYD GEORGE'S APPEALMORE COAL NEEDED*MINERS' DEMONSTRATION IN LONDON

London, July 29.

At the miners' National Conference at the London Opera House to-day, Mr. Lloyd George delivered a stirring address, the principal points in which are as follows:—

"Coal means life to us and death to our foes. Steam means coal, rifles mean coal. The shells are filled with coal, and the very explosives inside them are coal, while coal carries them right on to the battlefield.

"Help our men! Coal is everything to us. We want more of it to win the victory."

Referring to the recently published list of casualties including the names of about 350,000 officers and men, the Munitions Minister said:—

"All these were the victims of German coal, produced by the Westphalian miner working in co-operation with the Prussian engineer, without reserve and without regulation." He added:—"The British Navy which drove the German flag from the seas owed its strength to coal.

"There are two schools, optimists and pessimists; but I believe in looking things straight in the face."

The Minister concluded:—

"Events in the East, whatever else they may portend, mean that we must put forth all our strength, and that a larger share than ever of the burden of this struggle is to be cast on the shoulders of Britain. Don't shrink from it. We must pay the price of victory if we mean to get it. The peril to our country faces the great demand for coal. Despite the fact that the great supply of labour is diminished, we must have more coal to win."

The miners cheered Mr. Lloyd George repeatedly and enthusiastically.

WELDING OF THE EMPIRESIR ROBERT BORDEN ATTENDS CABINET MEETING.

London, July 29.

An incident of significance in the history of the British Empire occurred yesterday when Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, attended a Cabinet meeting which was held at Buckingham Palace under the presidency of His Majesty.

This is the first time that a representative of a British colony has been present at the deliberations of the Council of State.

SOUTH WEST AFRICATO BE COLONISED BY BRITONS.

London, July 29.

A telegram from Capetown reports that the Minister of the Interior in the Union Government, General South (?Smuts), speaking on the future of German South-West Africa, announced that the Government is making plans for sending there a large contingent of colonists from British South Africa. The Minister added that those who had borne the weight of the burden would have the preference.

AUSTRALIA'S WHEAT SUPPLIESPROBABLE GOVERNMENT MONOPOLY.

Melbourne, July 29.

A conference of the Premiers of the various States of the Australian Commonwealth is to be held before long to decide whether the Federal Government shall take over the ensuing wheat harvest so as to keep a control over its exportation after a sufficient quantity has been deducted to meet local requirements.

A YEAR OF WARSIR E. GREY'S MESSAGE TO THE STATES*VIEWS OF THE RUSSIAN FOREIGN MINISTER

New York, July 31.

The Associated Press of the United States having requested the Foreign Secretaries of various nations to send a message at the termination of the year of war, the following replies have been received:—

From Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Secretary:—

"The reasons which led Britain to go to war, and the ideals for which she is fighting, have been frequently set forth, and they are fully understood in America. I do not feel, therefore, that there is any need to repeat them now. I am quite content to leave the rights and the wrongs of the causes and conduct of the war to the judgment of the American people, the United Kingdom, and the entire Empire, together with our gallant Allies.

"We have never been more determined than to-day to prosecute this war to a successful conclusion, which will result in an honourable and enduring peace based on liberty, not on burdensome militarism."

From the Russian Foreign Minister, M. Polivanoff:—

"My opinion in a few words, after a year's duration of a war that is unprecedented in the annals of the world, is as follows:—The enemy is strong and cruel. For that very reason Russia and her heroic Allies must continue the war, even should it last for several years, until the enemy is completely crushed."

PRISON-MADE MUNITIONSBRITAIN'S EMPLOYMENT FOR CONVICTS.

London, July 29.

All the prisons and penitentiaries of Great Britain have been converted, for as long as the war continues, into factories for the production of war material. The usual work given to the prisoners of both sexes has been substituted by the construction of such articles, which include not only shot and shell but many other things of general utility in the army.

This new departure is being attended with considerable success. A report from the Home Secretary says that the prisoners take so much interest in their occupation that their output of work is more than double what it used to be in time of peace.

BATTLE CRUISER LIONDESPATCHED TO THE DARDANELLES.

Athens, July 29.

The British super-Dreadnought Lion has arrived at Mudros island, also the Aquitania and the Mauretania which have been transformed into transports.

The Lion received serious injuries in the engagement last January off Dogger Bank, and apparently is not now considered a first-class ship. She has therefore been sent to join the Dardanelles fleet.

The battleship Agamemnon is also lying anchored at Mudros badly damaged.

BRITISH PRISONERSSHOT BY A GERMAN GUARD.

New York, Aug. 3.

A telegram from Berlin reports the receipt of a despatch from Halle which says that a soldier was guarding some British prisoners who were working in a garden there, when two of them attacked him. The soldier fired at them, killing one and wounding the other.

TRUTH ABOUT THE WARTO BE PUBLISHED BY BRITISH GOVERNMENT*DETAILS DAILY

London, July 30.

It is announced that for the future the British Government will publish full details of the operations so that the public shall know from day to day how the campaign is proceeding. The Secretary of State for War considers it to be of great importance that the nation shall be kept au courant with the progress of the operations in France, Russia, the Dardanelles and in the other theatres of war.

By this means the people will realise the great efforts that are being made by the Allies, and how much still remains to be accomplished in order to gain the final victory.

DETAILS OF SUBMARINE DEPREDATIONS NOT TO BE PUBLISHED.

London, July 30.

The British Censor announces that in future he will not pass particulars of the operations of the enemy's submarines.

"GOTT STRAFE ENGLAND"BRITAIN "PROVED" RESPONSIBLE FOR THE WAR

New York, July 29.

A telegram from Berlin states that the "Allgemeine Zeitung" began the publication this morning of a series of documents purporting to be secret Belgian diplomatic reports which were found by the Germans in Brussels. These documents are stated to describe international political events from the time of the Moroccan crisis until the beginning of the present conflict.

The purpose of the publication is to show that Germany maintained a peaceful attitude throughout this period. The documents include alleged reports made by Baron Favereau, Count de Lalaing, Baron Grindl, Baron Leghait and Count Dursel. These reports, which date from 1905, deal with European politics, especially the attitude of the Triple Entente towards Germany.

Count de Lalaing and Baron Grindl are quoted as having reported in February, 1905, that the British hostility to Germany was caused by jealousy of the latter's commercial and naval growth. Count de Lalaing is said to have asserted that the British feared that their days of naval supremacy were numbered.

The statement attributed to Baron Leghait in May 7, 1915, was that while King Edward was in Paris he said that the confidence existing between Germany and France had disappeared, and the conditions were similar to those of twenty years earlier.

Baron Grindl is said to have been the author of a letter written on September 23, 1905, praising the Dreikönig led by Germany for having maintained the peace of Europe for thirty years, and declaring that the new disposition of the British fleet was unquestionably directed against Germany.

The same Minister is quoted as having asserted in a later letter that King Edward was hostile to Germany, and that the isolation of Germany was the aim of British policy.

All the letters printed emphasised the efforts said to have been made by Britain to form a coalition against Germany.

NEW DANISH LOANRESULTS IN A FIASCO.

Copenhagen, Aug. 2.

The new loan which the Danish Government has floated has resulted in a fiasco, only half of the amount having been subscribed.

THE IDOL OF ITALYVICTOR EMMANUEL AND HIS PEOPLE

New York, July 29.

The correspondent of the "Evening Sun," Mr. Will Guard, telegraphs from Milan to his paper as follows:—

"Democrat Republican as I am, and as every American should be, nevertheless of one thing I am convinced, namely, that Italy needs no change in its present form of government so long as King Victor Emmanuel reigns.

"The present war has demonstrated the proposition more clearly than ever, that Vittorio is the idol of his people. He represents the people, he is the people's spokesman. He seeks to, and does, voice their sentiments just as sincerely and effectively as does President Wilson, in these trying hours in the history of Italy and of the United States. He is truly a national Sovereign.

"I say that he is the idol of the people. I mean that to-day he is the idol of all the people. They liked him from the beginning because of his sincerity, simplicity and honesty. They were delighted when he got rid of all the social parasites at the Quirinal, when he did away with gaudy functions, the only excuse for aristocratic idlers to waste their time in mutual admiration, and when he fitted up a simple villa on the outskirts of Rome in which to live like a simple citizen of a real Republic."

"Yes! The common people of Italy understood their King. They realised that he was trying to feel just what they felt like. Like a true patriot he knew that the future greatness of the nation depended upon the protection of the interests just of these same common people, whom Lincoln said that God must love so much because he had made so many of them.

DOZENS OF DERNBURGS.

"When it came to the question of intervention, powerful and insidious influences were at work all over Italy against war. The secrets that are coming out now were concealed for months. The United States had its Dernburg, but Italy had dozens of them."

The correspondent goes on to cite numerous anecdotes of the life of the King at the front, among the most recent being the following:—

When the King was on the eastern front a soldier approached him, saying:—

"Your Majesty!"

"Speak up!"

"I am from Gorizia."

"Well, what of it? Why, Gorizia is still Austrian!"

"I was an Austrian soldier, Sire, but deserted. Now I am a volunteer Bersagliere. Gorizia is yours, and yet not yours yet. Gorizia is waiting for you. When will she see the tricolour, when will she see her new King?"

Vittorio smiled.

"BRAVO, BERSAGLIERE.

"Bravo, Bersagliere, it won't be long before you will present arms to your King in Gorizia."

The correspondent concludes:—

"I had the impudence three weeks ago to address a polite letter to the King himself requesting an interview at the front. This request was not granted, and no such request will be granted during the war; but I had the honour to receive a most courteous reply from his Majesty's Secretary, Signor Brusati.

"If his Majesty had received me, I am inclined to think that his words could have been summarised briefly somewhat like this:—"The Italian nation spoke a month ago, I cannot. The Italian army is doing the talking now!"

'I DID NOT WANT WAR' CANT BY THE KAISER MANIFESTO TO THE GERMAN PEOPLE

Amsterdam, Aug. 2.

The manifesto which the Kaiser has been preparing to mark the termination of the first year of the great war has made its appearance.

Addressed to the people of the German Empire and dated from the Imperial headquarters, the text of the missive runs as follows:

"In the inward strength of the nation and in the unanimity of the people the Empire sees the assurances of victory.

"The dykes we erected, in anticipation of having to defend once more what we won in 1870, have resisted the highest tide known in history.

"A year has passed since I found myself obliged to summon the German nation to arms. Europe and the world are passing through a period that has been without precedent for the effusion of blood; but I declare before God and history that my conscience is clear, as I did not want war.

"After preparations which went on for a decade a coalition of Powers to whom Germany seemed too strong thought that the moment had arrived to humiliate, or to close round and crush the Empire, which remained loyally by the side of her Austro-Hungarian ally in her just cause.

"TO WAGE A DEFENSIVE WAR."

"As I announced a year ago, we have not been led to make war by the thirst for conquest. When, in the month of August last year, all the strength of the nation joined their regiments, and the troops went forth to wage a defensive war, the hearts of all Germans beat in unison. Inspired by the example of unanimity given by the Reichstag, each man felt that this was a struggle for the most precious possessions of the nation, life, and liberty. The vicissitudes suffered by my beloved province of Eastern Prussia showed what we were to expect if the enemy were to have it in his power to determine our fate and that of Europe.

"The conviction that the struggle was thrust upon us produced miracles. The conflict of opinions within the Empire was silenced; those who of yore had been enemies came to mutually understand and esteem each other, and the whole nation is animated by a real spirit of comradeship.

"GOD HAS BEEN WITH US."

"With hearts full of gratitude we can say 'God has been with us.' The enemies' armies which were boasting of being in Berlin within a few months have been driven afar with shattering blows both east and west. In innumerable battlefields in various parts of Europe, and in naval battles both near our coasts and in distant seas, our enemies have been taught of what German anger is capable when fighting in self-defence, and what German strategy can bring about.

"No breach of international law on the part of our enemies has been able to shake the economic bases of the Empire. Agriculture, industry, commerce, the technical arts and sciences, have striven in unison to mitigate the horrors of war. Recognising the necessity of maintaining the means of transport they have devoted their efforts to the aid of their brethren in the field, while all who were not at the front worked together with all their energies to meet the common danger.

THE GRATITUDE OF THE FATHERLAND.

"With feelings of profound gratitude the Fatherland recalls at this moment and will for ever remember her warriors who, in defiance of

NO PEACE IN OCTOBER KAISER'S VIEWS MODIFIED

The Hague, July 30.

A letter from a German officer is published in to-day's issue of the "Nieuwe Courant."

Part of this communication says: "Recently the Kaiser paid a visit to our troops and dined at the officers' mess. During the meal we sang the military song 'We will meet again at home,' when the Kaiser rose and said: 'My dear comrades, you must not expect that that will happen soon. Probably we shall see once more roses blooming in the enemy's country.'"

GERMAN PEOPLE UNITED

WURTEMBERG SOCIALISTS ENDORSE WAR POLICY.

New York, July 31.

A despatch from Stuttgart says that the Wurtemberg Diet closed yesterday afternoon by passing the Budget. All the Socialists voted in favour of it except three members of the new faction.

Prior to the vote being taken the Socialists formally declared that interior political differences must disappear so long as the Fatherland is threatened by overwhelmingly superior forces, and this must be the supreme law of the country.

This has emphasised to the whole world the undeniable fact that the German people are united in this fearful struggle.

BANISHED FROM GERMANY

FATE OF MAXIMILIAN HARDEN.

London, July 31.

The German journalist, Maximilian Harden, is reported to have arrived at Constantinople incognito. He has been banished from Germany by order of the Kaiser for the duration of the war on account of an article he published about the intervention of Italy in the fray.

The article in question stated that the intervention of Italy was due to errors in Austrian diplomacy in not making concessions while there was yet time to do so, and only taking steps in that direction when too late.

death, have offered their breasts to the enemy. Above all does she remember those who have fought in hostile territory, whether by land, in the air or in the depths of the ocean.

"I feel profound sorrow for those who have fallen for the Fatherland and for the widows and orphans.

"In the presence of the unexampled proofs of personal ability and energy which the nation has given I entertain the flattering hope that the German people, persevering in the purifying process which this war has brought with it, will continue resolutely to follow the good old pathways of former days and will enter with confidence upon a period of fresh and great tests imposed in order that the nation may be firm of heart.

"WE SHALL SHOW OURSELVES WORTHY OF VICTORY."

"Meantime let us continue in the present heroic struggle, working unswervingly to bring about peace—a peace such as will give us the necessary military, political and economic assurances for the unhindered development of our productive energy at home, and for the liberty of the seas. Thus shall we emerge with honour from the combat which we are maintaining for the rights and liberty of Germany, however long the war may be; we shall show ourselves worthy of the victory before God, Whom we implore to bestow, in the future also, His blessings upon our arms."

VON TIRPITZ TRIUMPHS

SUBMARINE WARFARE LEADS TO SPLIT IN THE GERMAN CABINET.

New York, July 30.

A telegram from Paris states that the diplomatic exchanges between the United States and Germany may result in a crisis in the Imperial Cabinet.

The situation is the result of a discussion in the presence of the Kaiser between the Imperial Chancellor, Bethmann-Hollweg, and Admiral von Tirpitz which ended in the Chancellor, who favours the propitiation of the United States, by carrying on the submarine warfare with less rigour, tendering his resignation.

The inference drawn from this incident is that the Kaiser is in favour of Von Tirpitz's programme being carried out in its entirety.

BETHMANN HOLLWEG INTERVIEWS MR. GERARD.

New York, July 30.

A radiogram from Berlin announces that the Imperial Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg, has had a long interview with the American Ambassador, Mr. Gerard. The subject of discussion was the question of submarine warfare, and it is understood that Mr. Gerard will communicate to President Wilson the views of the German Government upon the matter.

IRON CROSSES FOR ALL

3000 DISTRIBUTED TO ALSATIAN SOLDIERS.

New York, July 30.

A despatch from Berlin says that since the beginning of the war 3000 iron crosses have been distributed among the soldiers of Alsace, serving in the German army, who have displayed special bravery and loyalty.

The honorary degree of Doctor of the Higher Technical School of Hanover, has been bestowed on Herr Adolph Muller in recognition of his services in the development of electric accumulators, whereby the submarines have been enabled to operate so successfully. Herr Muller holds the appointment of Director of the Accumulator Works of Hanover.

SUNK BY GERMAN TORPEDO BOAT

DANISH CREW'S STRANGE STORY

London, July 31.

A telegram from Copenhagen to the "Morning Post" says that the crew of the Danish steamer Nogill which was sunk by the Germans declare that their ship was sunk by a German torpedo boat, not a submarine, and that she was one of a flotilla of eight or nine. She was about 327 feet in length and mounted four 85 mm. guns.

The men added that the Germans told them that they were returning from a cruise of ten days in the North Sea. They had no fear of the enemy's warships because of their speed and unusually heavy armament.

RUMANIA'S WHEAT CROP

AN ABUNDANT HARVEST.

London, July 29.

A telegram to the "Times" from Bucharest states that almost the whole of the crop in Rumania, which is very abundant, has been gathered.

3,000,000 TONS FOR GERMANY.

London, July 29.

Telegrams from Bucharest state that, as the Dardanelles are closed, it is expected that about three million tons of recently gathered harvest in Rumania will go to Germany.

COUNCIL OF WAR IN CONSTANTINOPLE

ANXIETY CAUSED BY POSSIBILITY OF ITALIAN AND GREEK INTERVENTION.

Geneva, July 30.

"La Tribuna" publishes despatches from Salonica announcing that an important conference to consider the situation in the Dardanelles and the probable participation of Italy, and possibly of Greece, in the war against Turkey, has been held at Constantinople.

The conference was attended by the Grand Vizier Said Halim Pasha, the Turkish Minister at Berlin, Mukhtar Pasha, the Turkish Minister at Vienna, Hilmi Pasha, and Marshal von der Goltz.

The discussion that ensued was of a very agitated character, the Turkish Ministers betraying great anxiety as to the probable trend of events.

CONCEALED TURKISH OFFICERS

SEIZED ON BOARD GREEK SAILING SHIP.

Rome, July 30.

Despatches from Tunis report that one of the warships of the Allies captured and conveyed to Bizerta a Greek sailing ship, concealed on board of which were found five Turkish officers.

On searching the vessel munitions and arms for the rebels in Cyrenaica were discovered. Amongst the papers was found an autograph letter from the Sultan of Turkey to the Chief of the Senussi who is in arms against Italy. Other details as to what was found on board the vessel are kept secret.

ENVER'S VIEW OF THE WAR.

ABSURD MESSAGE TO TURKISH TROOPS.

Athens, July 29.

It is reported from Constantinople that before the Turks delivered their last attack in force on the Allies, Enver Pasha sent the troops the following address:—

"Soldiers! Fight with all your might. Resist to the utmost. I promise you that within a month I shall be able to send you to your homes. The existence of Serbia cannot last more than that time. The Germans are going to crush her, and will come to our aid."

FIRE IN CONSTANTINOPLE

GERMAN HOSPITAL DESTROYED

New York, August 2.

A telegram from Athens reports that a great fire in Constantinople destroyed three thousand houses, including the German hospital.

FULL OF WOUNDED MEN.

London, Aug. 2.

It is reported that the German hospital which has been burned down in the recent conflagration in Constantinople was full of wounded men at the time.

A despatch from Milan states that 90,000 wounded Turks have arrived at Constantinople and that it has been found necessary to transform all the mosques into hospitals.

ITALY'S MUNITIONS RESERVE

SUFFICIENT FOR A YEAR'S WAR.

New York, August 3.

A telegram from Rome to the "Evening Sun" announces that the Italian Munitions Minister, General Dall'Olio, has just returned from a visit of inspection of the ammunition factories. He has reported that the daily output of shells is more than sufficient for the Italian armies, and that the reserve supplies already on hand are large enough for a campaign of a year.

AFTER A YEAR OF WAR

The Situation To-day

POLITICAL AND MILITARY CONSIDERATIONS

(EXCLUSIVE TO "THE HERALD.")

The greatest war in history has now raged for a year, and there is no sign of its termination within the immediate future. There are several ways of treating of what has passed, and of anticipating what is to come, but the purpose of this survey being to arrive at an exact understanding of what the situation is to-day, it is necessary to view the history of the war dispassionately, and analyse facts almost entirely from a military point of view, touching on political, or national issues where they run side by side with military considerations.

It has been clearly established that the motives impelling the nations to war antedated the assassination of the Austrian royalties at Sarajevo. That crime was not the cause, but merely the provocation of the war. Possibly it was cause sufficient for Austria taking up arms, but it did not warrant the colossal war into which half the civilised world has plunged. From the British point of view, which is substantially justified by facts which have come to light, Germany aimed at greater power than her position entitled her to. She provoked Austria to impose terms on Serbia which would arouse Russia. Russia was aroused. Germany, desirous of meeting the test of strength which she welcomed because she was ready and eager, stood by Austria. France, allied to Russia, accepted the gage of battle. The immediate cause of Britain's entry into the war at midnight on August 4, 1914, was the violation by Germany of Belgium's neutrality. Italy and Turkey came in on "general principle," so to speak.

GERMANY ONLY WAS READY.

The first acts of war found Germany and Austria the only Powers really prepared for war on the gigantic scale on which it was to be fought. From what was then believed to be reliable data regarding the peace and war strengths of the various Powers, the following figures are taken:—

THE ALLIES.

	Peace Footing.	War.
Britain	251,000	275,000
France	546,000	1,250,000
Russia	1,500,000	2,380,000
Belgium	43,000	180,000
Italy	306,000	750,000
Serbia and Montenegro	—	250,000

GERMAN ALLIANCE.

Germany	672,000	2,250,000
Austria-Hungary	426,000	810,000
Turkey	220,000	360,000

Japan, the other Ally, is not counted for the reason that her troops have played no part in the war except in the taking of Kiao-chao.

These figures would, on paper, give the Allies a tremendous preponderance over the enemy, the war strengths being: Allies 5,085,000, as against the German Alliance 3,420,000. But the figures, like most statistics, were unreliable, because they took no heed of the great reserve strengths of the German and Austrian forces, which enabled the armies to be expanded, immediately war was declared, to twice their supposed size. For instance, it was evidently a consideration of prime importance in the French war plans, that Germany could only put in the field 27 army corps. France herself counted on 25, and that is why the British first Expeditionary Force numbered little more than two army corps. It had been agreed between the French and British strategists, that in the event of war in which Britain might decide to help France, her help should consist of two army corps, to redress the balance which would otherwise be in favour of Germany. So when people talk about Britain having done little to help France, they forget that she did all she was asked to do, and did it well.

EARLY OPERATIONS.

However, if the figures referred to were correct in any detail, they were correct only in so far as they gauged fairly accurately the force which Germany could set in motion under her speedy plans of mobilisation within a day or two. Within four days Germany's full war strength, so far as it was known, was in motion, and she was able to make the lightning-like strokes toward success on which her strategists had counted. She was able to over-run Belgium, and she almost gained Paris, before she had need to face Russia. Much has been written and said about Germany's violation of Belgium's neutrality. It was a crime, and the German Chancellor himself admitted it. It brought Britain into the war. Germany sought to excuse the violation on all grounds, save the only one which she might have put forward. She has talked of France breaking Belgium's neutrality; of Belgium plotting with Britain, but the cold fact is that from a military point of view her only way at France lay through Belgium, and she took it.

THE FRENCH STRATEGY.

Long before any of the Allies were ready for the avalanche which Germany released, seven armies were on their way into Northern France, while others were directed against the Russian front. That Paris was not captured in the first rush of early August, can only be attributed to one of two things, either the failure of German plans, or the superior strategy of Joffre. While Germany over-ran Belgium, France directed a rapid counter-offensive in Alsace. It was never intended to be, as most critics then believed, a determined effort to recapture the lost provinces. It had the valuable effect of drawing off strong forces of the enemy, and of gaining time. General Joffre is fully entitled to the credit of having brilliantly carried out the most sound, in fact, the only suitable, conception of a strategic counter to the German onward rush. Once his screen of forces along the frontier was in danger of being pierced, he withdrew the whole line, fighting actions where conditions were favourable, breaking them off in good time, even when success was possible in some positions, and impeding the advance of the enemy as much as possible. The French generalissimo knew the danger of permitting an army to hold ground when there was a risk of it being cut off from the other armies. He did not make the fatal mistake of permitting forces to anchor themselves to fortified positions, or of allowing them to coop themselves up in towns that might have stood long sieges. He avoided Sedans. And Joffre's strategy has been followed by all the allied commanders. The Austrians made a fatal mistake in garrisoning Przemyśl. The Allies have always got their armies away, and have maintained contact.

THE WESTERN FRONT.

Having withdrawn his armies in good order and without any serious losses, Joffre stood his ground at the right moment, when the enemy was far from his base and comparatively exhausted. Then by a vigorous offensive he was able to drive the Germans back beyond the Aisne, and by bringing up on his left newly mobilised armies which came out of Paris and struck the German right, he was able to lock the Germans out of Paris. We know the history of how the line was extended right to the Channel; how the Belgian army, brought safely from doomed Antwerp, fitted into the line; what a struggle there was on the part of the small British force to hold their front intact in the dark days of October, and how stubbornly the line has been defended since. That there has been a deadlock for months gives many people cause for impatience, but from a military point of view the fact that the line was established and held in the face of Germany's forces, constitutes a remarkable achievement, and is cause for real satisfaction. It requires a courageous military expert to tell the people of the Allied nations how grave was their peril up to the moment when the first assault on the line running through Flanders and Northern France to the Swiss frontier was thrown back, and the position held and consolidated.

THE RUSSIAN FRONT.

In one sense the Russian campaign has been the great disappointment of the war. It was recognised that the Russians would be slow to bring their immense masses of men into action, but hastily credited reports from Petrograd gave false impressions of success. Looking back on the cabled reports of last August we find daily reports of immense losses inflicted on Austria. Whole armies were reported to have been annihilated. So wholesale and sweeping were the reported victories that one was justified in asking whether any vestige of the Austrian army remained. One particular cable, dealing with Russia's strength, reported that there were available for the attack on Austria, something like 5,000,000 men, while another 3,000,000 were ready to "attack Berlin," from which the wealthy were reported to be fleeing. This supposed menace to Berlin was created in imagination from the invasion of Eastern Prussia by two Russian armies, whose success was only temporary, the attacks being little more than raids. The Germans experienced no great difficulty in throwing back the Russian armies, which had advanced without keeping contact, so that when von Hindenburg drove hard in between them, they were both in great peril of being surrounded, and had to retreat at heavy cost. Since then the Russians have closely followed the French strategy, and have linked up their armies along a wide front. At one time, in the dead of winter, this front on the south was pushed right into the Carpathians, and an invasion of Hungary seemed imminent. Why it did not eventuate, and why the Russians had to fall back have been attributed to various causes, principal of which is lack of ammunition. It is not the writer's intention to belittle the Russian efforts. Quite evidently Russia has never had in the field half the men she was reported last August to have had available. She has laboured under the great disadvantages of lack of strategic railways, and full supplies of munitions, and her arms have sustained no serious losses, nor any discredit by their failure to maintain a successful offensive. As was pointed out in an editorial article in "The Herald" recently, Russia is not beaten, and cannot be beaten. She has played her part, and is playing it. Her commanders are following the wisest strategy in keeping their line intact, and withdrawing it when necessary. There will come a time when Russia can resume the offensive and apply the pressure on the enemy, and her forces are always a menace to the German Alliance while they present an unbroken and solid front.

THE DARDANELLES.

The campaign at the Dardanelles was unquestionably entered upon by Britain and France to better the position of Russia. Had the need not existed for getting war supplies into Russia through the Straits, and of releasing Black Sea cargoes of Russian wheat, Turkey would have played little or no part in the war. She would have been at war, as Japan is at war, but she would have had little to do. A great deal of criticism has been voiced in the United Kingdom regarding the Dardanelles campaign, but it was essential, and justifiable, despite the stupendous nature of the task, and the known risks of heavy naval and military losses. The history of the war will present no finer achievement than that of the successful landing of the Allies on Gallipoli peninsula, and the subsequent advance. In the fighting the Australians and New Zealanders have proved their military mettle. At the Dardanelles as elsewhere, victory will rest with the side that can suffer most, repair its losses best, and hold on.

THE ITALIAN CAMPAIGN.

Italy came into the war late, but well prepared, and has accomplished a great deal in a few weeks, though in her theatre of war the fighting has now become confined to trenches and strongly held positions. The Trentine provinces have been practically regained, and a desperate struggle is going on for the road to Trieste.

SERBIA AND MONTENEGRO.

We hear very little of what is happening in Serbia, though we know that country has suffered terribly at the hands of Austria, but worse still from disease. The Montenegrins are fighting valiantly with the Serbians, and between them they present a tough problem for Austria.

THE POSITION ANALYSED.

From the superficial military standpoint of ground gained or lost, of victories won, or defeats inflicted, the position to-day is just about what it was at the end of the first week of August, 1914, except that then the Germans were menacing Paris, while to-day they are securely held at arm's length from the French capital. From a political cum military point of view, however, the advantages are distinctly with the Allies. They may not be able to march to Berlin, and dictate a peace there, but they are in a better position to force a peace on their terms than ever they were, and their position improves with every day that passes. They hold Germany secure, and the grip which cannot now be loosened by any military means on the part of Germany, must tighten as the days go by. The Allies have maintained the most cordial relations with the neutral Powers, while Germany has seriously disturbed hers. Furthermore, by reason of Germany's naval impotence, the Allies, with the exception of Russia, maintain undisturbed communication with the outer world, and the value of this is seen in their ability to make good their losses in men and munitions. Britain herself is justifying the prognostications of the best students of her national strength that she would be in a better position a year after the declaration of war than she was at the outset. She has been slow to develop her strength, but it has been developed and has by no means reached its climax. It cannot be gainsaid that Germany has put forth her maximum of effort, and so has Austria. So possibly has France, but Britain and Russia have not yet exerted all their force. They are gathering it.

Meanwhile the war will drag on tediously. The style of fighting in trenches does not lend itself to brilliant newspaper reports. There can be no bold strokes. It is a hard "slogging" match; a real tug-of-war. The supreme moment has yet to come. This will be when the resources of the Allies in men and material are developed to the utmost, and when the pressure on Germany and Austria can be applied from every front equally. Then we may expect to hear of a narrowing of the circle ringing the two Powers. There will be no onward rush to Berlin or Vienna, but we shall hear of a succession of advances and checks at new defences, until Germany and Austria can check no more. Then we may expect to hear of peace proposals, but before then Kitchener's estimate of a three-years' war will probably have proved correct.

THE CANKER AT THE HEART

Argentina's Passion for Gambling

APPALLING FIGURES FOR THE LAST DECADE

A strong indictment of Argentina's passion for gambling is contained in an article in the current issue of "El Magazin." Our contemporary says:

It is startling in the extreme to hear that about 6,000,000,000 pesos have passed through the hands of gamblers in the Argentine Republic in a space of ten years.

In the Capital alone under legal sanction has been spent the sum of 1219 millions. The appended table gives approximately the amounts spent in the Lottery and on Racing from figures officially supplied.

	Lottery	Racing
1904 . . .	30,560,000	27,474,626
1905 . . .	30,520,000	36,327,092
1906 . . .	30,980,000	47,218,602
1907 . . .	33,000,000	58,840,261
1908 . . .	33,740,000	59,649,496
1909 . . .	35,130,000	71,812,583
1910 . . .	38,175,000	103,751,057
1911 . . .	38,075,000	112,470,318
1912 . . .	38,125,000	114,012,195
1913 . . .	38,175,000	120,824,309
1914 . . .	33,675,000	86,860,493
	380,555,000	839,241,032

Notwithstanding its magnitude, this figure is quite eclipsed if compared with the amounts which have changed hands at the tables of the Jockey Club, Circulo de Armas, Club del Progreso, Club Oriental, Club Frances and Circulo Italiano, in the innumerable secret gambling hells, agencies, provincial lotteries; not to mention the large sums hazarded at the "protected" roulette tables at Avellaneda and the Tigre, which are operated under the guise of social clubs. In June when the innumerable gambling dens which infest the Province of Buenos Aires were denounced in the Congress of the Province, the attack was listened to with indifference by the Chamber, and open hostility by the representatives of the localities affected. As long ago as 813, the Council of Metz recognising in the passion of play a fruitful parent of all vices and a potent destroyer of family ties, excommunicated the keepers of gaming houses. Different and sad indeed is the state of affairs to-day when Religion and Charity seek the aid of this vice for the purpose of forwarding Benevolence (?). Progressive Political Corruption demands money, more money, money without stint. It is well known that taxes on gambling are those paid with least protest. Actual campaigns have been waged against taxes on Property, but on Play—never! This enormous sum spent in gambling has filled our jails, has retarded our development, actually restricting the work of many who hope to acquire dishonourable riches by hazard. If it be considered that the annual tax paid to the State is not equal to two dollars, per capita, it is evident that collective morality is estimated at a low figure.

There can be no really sensible and patriotic Argentine who would not gladly pay a double, nay a quadruple, tax to a thoroughly trustworthy, reliable and honest Administration, if he could see gambling in all its forms once and for all suppressed by Federal Law, and at the same time feel proud that he could have contributed to that result.

To quote "charitable benevolence" as a justification for gambling is a ridiculous and grotesque absurdity. To sacrifice the moral health of the country, fomenting the most pernicious vices, to assist a small number of morally or physically sick persons is clear evidence of lack of patriotic ideals and a fatal absence of altruism in the Government.

No other proof than the statistics of the Jockey Club is necessary that play is a progressive gangrene. Consider the amounts expended on Racing in 1909, the enormous increase of 1910, due to the festive atmosphere of the year, and the advent of new elements to the race tracks. Notwithstanding that increasing financial stringency and crisis followed, it was not till 1914 by the restriction of Bank facilities and the want of funds had reduced the means of play that the Municipality saw its receipts dwindling, with indignation, after it had openly speculated on public immorality as a legitimate source of income. In spite of the reduction in 1914 however, last year's gambling figures still exceed those of 1910, the Boom year, by 15,000,000 pesos. It would be a salutary act, if the country would follow the example of the Governor of New York State who, not only forbade gambling but banished race horses. This may well be quoted as at once an act manly and sensible, highly beneficial and worthy of a Government zealous for the people's good. Are there no men of this kind here?

Horse racing has existed for ages purely from love of sport. In the reign of James I. of England the system of trophies for winners was introduced. The public attended, became excited as was natural, but with the excitement of a football speculator; the jockey like a successful yachtsman felt the satisfaction of victory the best prize of success.

Let the situation be faced. Let, as far as may be, all the evil elements of gambling and hazard be eliminated from our lives. The very gamblers who now are daily tempted, would be fervent cooperators.

Dr. Saenz Peña gave us the free ballot, by that one act beneficially affecting all the country's institutions. If there might be one such act in early Presidential period the future President, whoever he may be, and to whatever party he may belong, should be asked to make formal promise to fight gambling, till extirpated completely. He would have attained the highest triumph obtainable. The country would hand down his name to posterity as a great historic figure. Such should be the man who shall regenerate our institutions, such achievements, under the liberty of suffrage left us by Saenz Peña, are possible to energetic, honourable and capable men.
